THE TEAMSTERS' STRIKE AT CHICAGO SPREADS TO THE DRIVERS OF LUMBER

Danger That the Building Industries Will Be Tied Up.

Governor Deneen Promises Troops In Two Hours If Needed.

Shea Says He Is Not Anxious to Spread the Strike.

Chicago, May 22.—Spreading of the teamsters' strike began promptly today. Thirty-six teamsters employed by the Rittenhouse & Embree Co., lumber dealers, and four by Edward Hines Lumber company were the first to be forced into the struggle following the refusal of the teamsters' joint council to endorse the settlement provisionally arranged with the employers by President Shea of the Teamsters' union. Through the threatened spread of the strike to all lumber dealers, every branch of the building industry in Chicago was today apparently facing paralysis. There are only 800 teamsters employed by lumber firms, but so close are the relations between them and several other unions of men engaged in hauling building material that the walk-out of the lumber teamsters it was said would doubtless lead to strikes in nearly every department of the building industry. Indirectly dependent upon the building material teamsters, it was estimated today hung the employment of nearly 100,000 men in yards, mills, factories and on construction work. It was not believed the drivers' strike would affect the wood industries or building construction work generally at first. If, however, the walk-out should go all along the line, as it threatened to do today, all the lumber yards of Chicago would be tied up.

The same program was seemingly in store for the stone and the industrial enterprises dependent upon them. The planing mills, the sash and door factories, the box factories, and kindred plants would also face soon a shortage of lumber supplies which would necessitate closing down.

Action by the teamsters today was decisive. In a few moments the first forty recruits to the strike had been increased to an even 100. Seventy of the total were employed by the Hines Lumber company, at the head of which is Former President Hines of the Lumber Dealers' association. Mr. Hines has been particularly prominent among the employers in the recent negotiations for a settlement. Aside from his firm, the Rittenhouse & Embree Lumber Co. were the first to feel the stead of the strike today. Thirty teamsters employed by Rittenhouse & Embree quit. The full force in each case struck. The cause as heretofore was an order to deliver material to firms boycotted by the teamsters in the course of the long hostilities growing out of the strike of a small number of garment workers months ago.

In the first strikes today the initiative was taken by the employers. Members of the Teamsters' union were discharged for refusing to deliver to boycotted firms. Orders by the union for others to quit where discharges had been made followed quickly. As an immediate result, the yards of two big companies were completely tied up. Edward Hines, president of the Lumbermen's association, declared that every lumber yard in the city would before long be without drivers. "It means complete stagnation of business at a time when building operations are booming to a greater extent than has been known since 1892," said Mr. Hines. The supply of lumber on hand will not last the building contractors more than forty-eight hours. The factories which depend on boxes for shipping will be crippled, because they will be without lumber.

"If this occurs," he said, "the stockyards packing industries will be especially disturbed, for they must have boxes there to do the shipping."

The express companies, whose attitude on the question of reinstating their striking drivers caused the break in the peace plans, stood firm today, refusing to take back any of their old men. The officials of the express companies declared absolutely that none of the strikers would be reinstated.

Paradoxical as it might appear, President Shea was reported today as not anxious to spread the strike. He was understood, furthermore, to take the ground that the strike would not be extended unless it were through the actions of the other side. If the team owners insisted upon delivering goods to the strike-bound houses, the teamsters directly affected would strike, but that otherwise none would be called.

An incendiary fire at the yards of the Rittenhouse & Embree Lumber company, is suspected by that firm, to have a connection with the strike. Last night fire was discovered in three parts of the yards, and before the flames were exteinguished $6,000 worth of maple flooring had been destroyed. Arrests are expected.

As the day advanced the strike gradually spread. Twenty-five teamsters employed by the T. Wilse Lumber company struck. The men had been ordered to make the deliveries which the teamsters of the Rittenhouse & Embree company had refused to make.

The lumber dealers were said to be operating under an agreement by which members undertook to make deliveries for any "struck" firm. E. E. Hooper, secretary of the Sash, Door and Blind association said today:

"We do not propose to permit a part of the Teamsters union to work and support the other part on strike. It is a case of fight now with us. Everything points to a complete tie up of every branch of building in Chicago until we can get non-union drivers to do the work. This will mean police protection for drivers, and if that is not sufficient the necessity for troops is inevitable."

To cope with the situation growing out of the spread of the strike Sheriff Barrett today began to add to his large force of deputies.

The police force also will be augmented. A call for 200 more patrolmen for special strike duty was made by Chief O'Neil today.

The recruiting of men to serve as strike breakers has been resumed by the Employers' association with increased vigor. Word was received in Chicago today that 200 men were due to reach here tonight from Buffalo and 300 more tomorrow from Kansas City, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

The arrest and prosecution of parents and children connected with school "strikes," following the use of colored non-union teamsters in delivering coal at public schools has aroused bitter feeling among members of labor unions. The Federation of Labor has adopted resolutions pledging itself to stand by these children, and "if necessary for their vindication to hold ourselves ready to withdraw all our children from the corporation controlled schools."

Mayor Dunne was in communication today with Governor Deneen by long distance telephone. Governor Deneen assured the mayor that the national guard would be available for strike protection inside of two hours after a call was made for the service of the troops. The mayor realized that a call for troops might have to be made at any time, not perhaps because of increased rioting or displays of violence, due to the spread of the strike, but because of the territory that the affected industries covered. That it would be impossible for the resources of the city police department or the sheriff's office to adequately protect traffic if the wood industries trouble involved firms all over the city, both the city's executive and Sheriff Barrett had agreed.

Negotiations between the warring interests, was overshadowed by the spreading of the strike, were not abandoned today. A call, apparently unannounced, was made by International President C. P. Shea of the Teamsters' union and A. J. Reid, business agent of the Furniture Drivers' Local union, at the office of Attorney Mayer, counsel for the Employers' association. Mr. Mayer was engaged in a court room when the labor representatives arrived and a message was dispatched to him from his office. He went into conference with the labor leaders. At about this time Business Agent Barry of the Express Drivers union, after conferences with friends in the express companies offices, gave his comrades a message of hope. "This strike will end by Wednesday," he said. Pressed for further information, he only smiled.

The mission of Messrs. Shea and Reid, it turned out, was to urge Attorney Mayer to act as mediator between the Teamsters' union and the express companies. The terms offered by the employers for a settlement of the strike, the labor leaders told Mr. Mayer were satisfactory and if the express companies could be induced to grant a like concession the strike would be declared off. Mr. Mayer gave the labor leaders little hope for any change in the express companies stand.

BOWEN SAYS MORE PAPERS ARE MISSING

Cannot Find Documentary Evidence on Exchange of Checks.

Washington, May 22.—The first of the three additional witnesses in the Bowen-Loomis case summoned by Secretary Taft reached Washington today in the person of John G. Dater, of the New York Herald, the reputed author of the newspaper publication containing the charge against Assistant Secretary Loomis, which forms the basis of the case. Mr. Dater had a conference with Secretary Taft lasting about an hour, Minister Bowen, meanwhile calling at the department and remaining in waiting. Mr. Dater was called with special reference to Mr. Loomis' counter charge, that Mr. Bowen, had supplied to the press the information upon which the publications were based. He declined to make and statement as to what took place between himself and Secretary Taft. After he left the secretary's office, he was taxed by Mr. Bowen with a betrayal of confidence in connection with the publication of the charges, an imputation which he denied. Subsequently Mr. Bowen, after talking further with Mr. Dater, admitted that he had done the latter an injustice in making such a charge. Mr. Bowen saw the secretary immediately after Mr. Dater left when he submitted a rejoinder together with a general denial of all statements affecting his official conduct. He also, it is stated, made a protest that there was an absence of documentary evidence bearing on the exchange of checks. Mr. Bowen further suggested to Secretary Taft that Minister Russell, who has not left Bogota for his new post at Caracas, be summoned to Washington to give testimony in view of the fact that as secretary of the legation while Mr. Loomis was minister in Venezula he would be fully acquainted with the details of the charges.

STAMPEDE OF SHORTS LIFTS CHICAGO CORN

May Delivery Advances Six Cents and May Wheat Goes Up Four.

Chicago, May 22.—A stampede of shorts today advanced the price of corn for May delivery precisely 6 cents a bushel. It was current gossip that the May option is practically "cornered" by a few prominent traders. A desire to avoid possibly greater loss than already incurred was the cause of the urgent demand today from those who were on the wrong side of the market. The May delivery opened at 53 cents. The price quickly jumped up to 59 cents. Realizing sales caused a reaction to 57½ cents.

A somewhat similar situation developed in the wheat pit. On an active demand from shorts, the price of wheat for May delivery was forced up 4 cents. Much of the grain was subsequently lost on profit taking. May wheat opened at 99 cents. After advancing to $1.03 the price dropped to $1.01½.

MISSISSIPPI IS HIGH AT LA CROSSE

La Crosse, Wis., May 22.—The Mississippi river has risen six inches today and two feet in the last three days and is still rising slightly. In North La Crosse, a large section is under water, people going about in boats where the land is usually dry, and a number of manufacturing plants are greatly inconvenienced and can only be operated with difficulty. Should the water rise another foot a number of factories both on the north and south sides will be closed. The country districts are hard hit, large sections both on the Minnesota and Wisconsin sides of the Mississippi being cut off from market. The bridge between Onalaska and French Island is under water, preventing communication between the two places.

IN SELF DEFENSE.

Deputy Shoots and Fatally Wounds Strike Sympathizer.

Chicago, May 22.—After a crowd of strike sympathizers had attacked Michael Fitzgerald, a special deputy sheriff, and followed him two blocks last night, he turned on his assailants and shot and probably fatally wounded Frank Voelker, 22 years old.

Fitzgerald was on his way to his residence when he was assailed by Voelker and nearly a dozen other men. It is said they taunted the deputy sheriff and struck at him. Fitzgerald tried to get away and finally fired in self defense.

Voelker was taken to the hospital. He is a union press feeder. When he fell his companions ran away. Fitzgerald was arrested.

New York, May 22.—Sentiments expressed today by officials of the five big express companies which have headquarters here in regard to the strike, appear to indicate that they will not ask their Chicago managers to recede from the position they have taken.

NEW POSTMASTER.

Washington, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joseph Kraker, Jr., has been appointed postmaster at Birch Lake, Todd county, Minn., vice W. Butala, resigned.

JAPANESE QUIETED

Militia Calms the Yellow Strikers at Hawaiian Plantation.

Japs Compelled the Koreans to Strike or Be Killed.

Honolulu, May 22.—The steamer Kinau, which yesterday carried a company of militia and force of police to LaHaina on the island of Maui, where Japanese strikers had become violent, returned this morning.

The situation at LaHaina has quieted and the soldiers and police are occupying the court house with a field piece in readiness for action. Sixty special deputies also are on duty.

The Japanese have forced the Korean laborers to strike, threatening to kill them if they continue to work.

It is stated that the Japanese objected to the head overseer, because he is a Russian. High Sheriff Henry intends to occupy the camps of the strikers and to arrest the ringleaders. The police say that the Japanese fired Saturday night, when they were attacking the Japanese contractor who refused to join with them in the strike.

The agents of the Wailuki plantation say that the strike in that section has ended.

FRICK INVESTIGATION

Of Equitable Affairs About Ready For Report.

New York May 22.—Rapid progress is being made by the Frick investigating committee of the Equitable Life Assurance society and its report probably will be completed by the end of this week, ready for submission to the directors May 31. A call will be sent out today for a meeting of directors on that date.

Numerous conferences have been held by adherents of both factions in the society but no opinion was ventured as to the probable effect of the Frick report.

TWO YOUNG WOMEN KILLED BY TRAIN.

Chicago, May 22.—Dagmar E. Turnberg and her sister, Dora, two young women stenographers, have been struck and instantly killed by a passenger train near Forest Glen. They were in a group of five young women who sought to evade a freight that was approaching on the other track. The other three escaped injury.

LIVED LIKE CRUSOE.

Crew of Lost Ship Found on Island.

Paris, May 22.—The French ship Anjou, which had been given up for lost, has been located at an island in the South Pacific ocean, remote from regular ocean travel, and there is great rejoicing amongst the families of the officers and crew. The ship had been missing for over seven months, and during this period the castaways have lived like Crusoe on such scant food as the island furnished, including berries and roots. The sailors have sent home thrilling tales of their shipwreck on Feb. 5.

BEE SWARMS

Stop All Traffic In a Kentucky Town.

Versailles, Ky., May 22.—A dense swarm of bees on Main street caused a suspension of business Saturday night. They appeared near the postoffice in such masses that driving vehicles was impossible, and pedestrians feared to pass. Finally a committee was appointed to draw the bees away by beating tin pans and ringing bells and settled them in trees near the courthouse. This is the first instance of the kind on record.

Wounds by broken glass constituted the injuries of most of the passengers. Most of those injured were residents of New York city.

ACQUITTED PRISONER AMBUSHED AND SHOT

Salisbury, N. C., May 22.—H. Clay Grubb, acquitted Saturday of the charge of murdering his brother-in-law, was ambushed with a companion in a buggy, one of his chief witnesses, today, nine miles from Salisbury. Both were badly wounded. Grubb recognized one of the party of ambushers. Posses from Salisbury and Leadington are in pursuit.

REPEATED ATTACKS BY THE RUSSIAN FORCES ARE REPULSED BY JAPS

RUSSIA HAS NO FIXED PURPOSE IN THE WAR

Jap Statesmen Say She Will Be Guided Entirely By Future.

Tokio, Thursday, April 27.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Count Okuma, former premier and minister of foreign affairs, in a recent interview on the question of intervention, said that a great change in the lines of diplomacy of different powers, being a natural outcome of the present war, it was difficult to make a prophecy. Increasingly closer relations between England and France was already one of the very significant phenomena resulting from the war. The count declared that Germany could have no other feeling than satisfaction at finding her northern rival becoming gradually weakened by the war, and would recognize the foolishness of antagonizing Japan if Germany could maintain and develop her interests in the East. Okuma saw no occasion for intervention, unless a European conference could be formed, and he could not understand who would take the initiative so long as Germany did not suffer by the war. Germany, he asserted, was reaping benefits of various kinds, and would follow the policy of "get-the-best and as-much-as-possible."

Count Kato, former minister of foreign affairs and former minister to Great Britain, discussing the same question, said: "I do not think there will arise any occasion for intervention. I doubt if Russia has a fixed purpose and aim either to fight or to conclude peace. It seems to me that the ultimate result is left to whatever the future may bring to Russia. There seems to be no prearranged plan. Should Russia be determined to hold Vladivostok it would be to her advantage to conclude peace before she loses it. But she knows no desire for peace, and her policy is devoid of any definite plan, so there can be no occasion for a third power to attempt intervention in the near future. Even the loss of Vladivostok might not prompt Russia to seek peace. She could go on retreating indefinitely, hoping thereby to exhaust us. We might take Harbin, and go further north, but Russia could continue her policy of retreat, thereby giving no occasion for a third party to intervene.

"Should Russia ask for peace we shall insist on an unconditional armistice and when the negotiations are opened, we shall require Russia to return Manchuria to China, recognize our suzerainty over Korea, cede Sakhalin to us, remove permanently the fortifications of Vladivostok and pay an indemnity of at least 2,000,000,000 yen ($1,000,000,000). Such liberal terms will afford no occasion of intervention. The scene of hostilities in Manchuria being without any special interest to the powers, none of them will be prompted to take action to stop the war. On the contrary, the war is affording a lucrative trade to some of them in supplying materials for the war. Looked at from a diplomatic standpoint, Germany, seeing her Eastern danger lessened by the war and Russia gradually weakened will naturally entertain the hope of further reduction in the strength of her formidable neighbor. England will feel satisfaction over the blows dealt by her ally to her traditional foe. The United States, much as she sympathizes with us, will not welcome excessive development of Japan's power lest it should cause future trouble, and would not view with disfavor the gradual weakening of both combatants. France alone must be sincerely desirous of seeing the war terminate, but single-handed she can do nothing to cause any change. Both the present and the future, to my mind and view, afford no sign of the possibility of intervention and I am prepared to say that the time has not yet come to talk of peace. In fact, there will be an occasion for intervention and the war will last long."

AMERICAN YACHT ATLANTIC SIGHTED 600 MILES AT SEA

New York, May 22.—The American yacht Atlantic, one of the contestants in the trans-Atlantic race for the Emperor William cup, was sighted late Saturday night 690 miles due east of Sandy Hook. She was headine east and with fair weather and fresh south winds, and was making a little better than 7½ knots per hour. The Atlantic was sighted by the steamers Cedric, Minnetonka and Nordland. Marconi wireless messages were sent from all these steamers to the Associated Press. To have reached the point at which she was sighted, the Atlantic must have averaged more than 200 miles per day, or more than 8 knots an hour.

The following telegrams were received by the Associated Press. They were transmitted from the steamers by Marconi wireless to the Marconi stations on Long Island and Nantucket and thence to New York:

"Steamship Cedric, via Nerdam and Marconi stations, Sinconset, Mass., May 22.—Associated, New York: May 20, the Atlantic sighted latitude 40, longitude 60, heading east; fresh west-southwest winds, weather fine, clear, cloudy; sea moderate to rough; average speed, 7.54 knots."

"Steamship Minnetonka, via Marconi station, Sagaponack, N. Y., May 22.—Associated, New York: Passed yacht Atlantic Saturday, latitude 40.49 north, longitude 59 west; fresh west-southwest wind, increasing."

Steamer Nordam, via Marconi station, Siasconsett, Mass., May 22.—Associated, New York: May 20, passed yacht presumed Atlantic, 9:45 p. m., latitude 40:53 north, heading east. Burned red, white, red coston light. Having fair west-southwest wind."

YACHT REPORTS COLLISION AT SEA

Boston, May 22.—Capt. Walker of the British steamer Corsemore, which arrived here today from Antwerp, states that at 2:30 p. m. on May 20, in latitde 41.8 north, and longitude 64 west, he passed close to the topsail schooner-yacht Thistle, one of the contestants in the trans-Atlantic race. A breeze from the northwest prevailed at the time and the yacht, with all sails set, was making a speed of five and a half knots an hour. Robert E. Tod, owner of the Thistle, reported to Capt. Walker that on Friday last in latitude 41.17 north, longitude 67.30 west, he passed a derelict brigantine and the spars of another large vessel nearby indicated that a collision had occurred. Mr. Tod thought that the second vessel had been sunk and that the other one had been abandoned.

HOSPITAL SHIP

Of the Russians Seized at Port Arthur.

Chefu, May 22.—Travelers who arrived here today from Port Arthur say that a Japanese armed force of 100 men boarded the Russian steamer Kazan on Saturday in Port Arthur harbor on receipt of a dispatch from Tokio announcing that the Japanese government had decided to retain her as a prize on the ground that she is a war vessel. The Russians used the Kazan as a hospital ship during the siege.

The last of the Russian wounded at Port Arthur will leave there tomorrow. Barashoff Langa, the superintendent of the Russian Red Cross at Port Arthur, will depart from there ten days hence.

The next party of Russians to leave Port Arthur for Chefu will include forty insane sailors and soldiers, who will be taken on board the British steamer Whampoa now here. The Whampoa has been fitted up especially to transport the lunatics from Chefu to Odessa. She will not take any other passengers.

DEMONSTRATION

May Be Made Against Alfonso at Paris.

Paris, May 22.—The Confederation of Labor Unions has called a meeting for Wednesday to discuss a proposition to make a demonstration against King Alfonso when he comes to Paris. The revolutionary element seeks to make an offensive manifestation against the king and inflammatory circulars are being sperad broadcast calling on the workingmen to oppose his majesty's visit in the same manner as the Italian radicals opposed the visit of Emperor Nicholas to Italy.

DR. KOCH'S THIRD TRIAL WILL BEGIN ON JULY 6

Mankato, Minn., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Cray of the district court today set July 6 next as the date for a third trial for Dr. G. R. Koch, who is charged with the murder of Dr. L. A. Gebhardt at New Ulm on the night of Nov. 1 last. Two juries have disagreed in trials of this case. Dr. Koch has been released on $20,000 bail bond

Constant Collisions Between Minor Forces Are Occurring Daily.

Russians' Artillery Bombarded Changtu But Were Driven Off.

Engagement at Tongshed Resulted In Loss of 400 Russians.

Tokio, May 22, 1 p. m.—Imperial army headquarters made the following announcement today:

In the direction of Changtu on May 20, a force of the enemy consisting of over a battalion of infantry, a regiment of cavalry and two guns, made a detour to the Eastern height at Santaokuo, eight miles east of Changtu, and from the vicinity of a coal mine, ten miles east of Changtu, at 11:30 o'clock in the morning commenced a bombardment.

"Subsequently another Russian force with four guns appeared on the northern height of Chityangao, and at 4 p. m. two battalions of the enemy advanced from the eastern side of the village but were repulsed. Another mixed force of the enemy entered Erhshihlipeto where they set fire to the village and retreated.

A body of the enemy's cavalry, dismounted, attacked Tangshed, on the right bank of the Liao river, thirteen miles southwest of Fakumen, on the morning of May 20. After an engagement lasting two hours the enemy retreated in disorder toward the southwest, abandoning 400 men killed and wounded.

Except these collisions between small forces, the situation is otherwise unchanged.

NEW NATIONAL COUNCIL

Will Control Military and Naval Affairs In Russia.

St. Petersburg, May 22.—The first step towards the institution of the long-contemplated council of national defense to co-ordinate the activities of the military and naval administrations, has been taken in an imperial manifesto creating a special preliminary commission under the presidency of Grand Duke Nicholaievitch. The manifesto is preceded by a rescript which Emperor Nicholas has addressed to the grand duke, in which his majesty says:

"In order to insure the development of the empire's fighting force in a manner corresponding to the needs and resources of the state and uniformity in the duties of the supreme naval and military administration, and also to harmonize them with those of other government institutions in questions affecting the safety of the state, I have deemed it necessary to establish a permanent state defense council. I charge the special commission, consisting of members appointed by me under the presidency of your imperial highness to draw up, according to my direct suggestion, a law relating to this institution."

The rescript concludes with the expression of the conviction that the commission will carry out the task confided to it without delay and with the care and undivided attention which the high importance of the new institution demands.

The formation of the council and the assumption by it of control of the war is expected to ensue shortly as the main details have already been worked out. The dispatch of Grand Duke Nicholaievitch, who is designated as the president of the permanent state defense council to Manchuria to assume direct command of the imperial forces there, has been several times seriously considered, and he has served repeatedly of late as representative of the emperor on commissions dealing with vital questions of the war.

The existing council of war, which has proved unsatisfactory, will be superceded by the new body. The step is an extremely important one, for which the events of the war in the Far East have shown the necessity, the two departments failing to work together to the best advantage even when actuated by the most harmonious feelings, and friction has been often manifested. Many opportunities for helpful co-operation between the two arms of the service are constantly arising and, if Admiral Rojestvensky succeeds in reaching Vladivostok and shaking the Japanese mastery of the sea, the council will play a very weighty role. At the same time the council is created, not for the present war, but as a permanent organization of the state, subordinating the war and navy departments and then overshadowing the other ministries. The formation of the new council begins the definite abandonment of the plan of sending Grand Duke Nicholaievitch to the Far East, to assume spreme command on land and sea.

Gen. Linevitch and Vice Admiral Birileff will be left unhampered except as to the grand outlines of strategy.

NO SHIPS HAVE RETURNED.

IN JURY'S HANDS

Lenich and Longer Murder Case Is Finally Submitted.

County Attorney Claims Longer Equally Guilty With Lenich.

The fate of Frank Lenich and Frank Longer, the alleged murderers of Peter Kracovitch of Eveleth is now in the hands of the twelve men who for the past several days have been listening to the testimony concerning the drinking bout and quarrel on Easter Sunday night, which finally resulted in a fatal cutting affray.

The testimony of the state and for the defenses was practically closed Friday afternoon last and a portion of the morning session of the court was occupied by County Attorney McClintock in arguing the state's case to the jury.

Mr. McClintock recited the details of the trouble as he had gathered them and as appeared from the evidence submitted up to the actual outbreak of the hostilities.

"I don't believe," said he, "that this is Kracovitch's knife. I believe it is Lenich's knife and that it was in Frank Lenich's hand when it was stuck into Kracovitch's throat to let out his life blood.

"They have brought in a lot of witnesses to vilify Kracovitch, the dead man, why have they not brought in a lot of witnesses to prove this is Kracovitch's knife?

"Lenich was a lawbreaker. He had no concern in the fight between Longer and Kracovitch. He broke away from the detaining hand of his sweetheart, against her pleadings and mixed into the fight in which he was in noway concerned. If he sought to act in the role of a peacemaker he could have called an officer. If Kracovitch had a knife, Lenich knew it and no unarmed man is going to undertake to go after and stop another man armed with a knife and who has the reputation of being a bad man with a knife. Lenich went after Kracovitch with an intent in his mind of doing him bodily injury, of killing him.

The testimony of several witnesses shows that it was the taller of the two men pursuing Kracovitch that over took and stabbed him. The testimony shows that Lenich and Longer were pursuing Kracovitch and you can see for yourselves that Lenich is the taller.

"You have heard Longer's testimony that after Lenich had struck Kracovitch down with a fatal wound in the neck, not satisfied with that he kicked the head and body of the dying man and then told Longer to come away that Pete had got enough."

County Attorney McClintock claimed that it was Lenich's guilty conscience which made him flee from Eveleth and become a fugitive from justice.

"We do not claim that Longer did the stabbing," said he, "and Longer, knowing that he did not do so was not so apprehensive as Lenich, and expected to be arrested as having been mixed up in the fight. In fact, however, Longer was there, took part in the fight and in the pursuit, and he is an accomplice of Lenich, and with him is equally guilty of murder.

"This was not a case of self-defense. Kracovitch was fleeing from Lenich and Longer, in the attempt to save his life. He was trying to get away, while the lives of Lenich and Longer were not in any jeopardy at all."

L. H. Corcoran, who is defending Lenich and Longer, began his argument shortly before the noon recess, and completed it this afternoon. During his opening remarks and recital of the preliminary details regarding the weight to be placed to the evidence, Mr. Corcoran stood close to the jury, and talked in so low a conversational tone that little of his argument was heard beyond the twelve men.

County Attorney McClintock was decidedly in earnest with his argument and frequently pointed at Lenich and Longer, who sat side by side, just inside the railing. Longer wore a slightly anxious expression, but Lenich, with hands folded in his lap, gazed straight ahead with indifference, every shot of the county attorney apparently passing over his head as though he were in no way concerned with the charge, conviction upon which will mean hanging.

SHARPER HAS NEW GAME

Flim Flams Boarding House Proprietor Out of $2.

A new game was worked on the proprietor of a lodging house at 921 West Michigan street yesterday.

A man, who stated that he was employed by a telephone company, came to the house and rented a room, for which he agreed to pay $8 a month. After completing the negotiations for the room, he stated that he was going to get his trunk. Just as he was leaving he pulled off a glittering ring from his finger, and handing it to the proprietor, stated that it was a valuable stone, and as he did not wish to lose it while handling a heavy trunk, requested the owner of the room to keep it until he returned.

Once again the man started for the door, but as he reached it began fumbling in his pockets and stopped.

"I seem to have left my purse behind me," he said. "Can you let me take enough money to pay for my trunk? It will come to about $1.75."

The proprietor with the "diamond" ring in his possession did not hesitate, but handed over a two dollar bill.

That was the last he has seen of the man or the money. The ring, needless to say, was "phoney" and worth perhaps 25 cents.

The police say the same game has recently been worked in St. Paul.

DIRECTORS DUE

Nothing Heard Yet Regarding Conference With Traction Company.

Some Report Regarding It Is Expected at Council Meeting.

Some report concerning the much desired conference with the street railway officials will doubtless be presented to the council this evening by the city attorney, who has the matter in charge.

"I am expecting some communication today telling when the directors will be in Duluth," said Mr. Fesler, "but it has not come as yet. The last I heard from them was to the effect that they would be in Duluth the first of this week. That would mean today or tomorrow, and I should have some word before night."

The meeting will be one of the most important gatherings touching the street railway service that has been held in many months.

West Duluth people want an extension of the West Third street line to Fairmount park, and better service on both West Duluth lines during the rush hours.

Woodland people want a through service to the end of the Woodland line, with double truck cars, instead of the present stub line service from Hunter's park.

Lester Park and Lakeside people are also hoping for a slightly improved service.

The conference is likely to see some concessions made by both sides. At a recent meeting of the council the city attorney gave it as his opinion that the city could undoubtedly compel the company to install double truck cars on all lines in the city, but he stated that it was a question of policy to determine whether or not it would not be a better plan to use this power as a lever to secure certain extensions from the company, which could not be forced out of the company without a nice legal fight at least, and perhaps not at all. About the only method of forcing extensions is for the city to grant a competing company a franchise to run cars on any street where the traction company refuses to build after being ordered to do so by the city.

The West Duluth people have expressed their willingness to forego the double truck service on the West Duluth Third street line for the present if the track is extended to Fairmount park.

Representatives from the city council, the West Duluth Commercial club, the Duluth Commercial club, the Lakeside club, and from Woodland, will be present at the conference, and it is hoped that concessions will be secured from the company that will satisfy all parties and render any legal proceedings unnecessary.

AN AIR OF EXPECTANCY

Prevails at Russian Admiralty Which Indicates Important News.

St. Petersburg, May 22.—There is an air of expectancy at the admiralty which indicates that news of importance regarding Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet is awaited at any moment. Officially no information regarding the admiral's whereabouts is volunterred, the officers making no concealment of the fact that they are in the secret of Rojestvensky's plans, but the majority entertain no doubt that the Russian fleet is now steaming toward its ultimate destination.

While there is no official confirmation of the Hong Kong report that Rojestvensky's fleet had passed through the Bashee channel, it is credited by those who have insisted from the start that Rojestvensky will give the island of Formosa a wide berth to the westward. The admiral, it is claimed, has had ample time to reach the Pacific since he left the waters of Indo-China.

The dispatches received from the front are meager but there are some indications that Gen. Linevitch has taken a leaf out of Field Marshal Oyama's book at the Shahke river and at Mukden and that he is about to advance himself and undertake a counter offensive, meeting the Japanese pressure against his left by advancing his right. It is too early, however, to determine whether the moves thus far are more than feints.

Gen. Linevitch in a dispatch from the front dated May 21, announced that two Russian detachments occupied the valleys of the Kaak and Khanda rivers, westward of Nanshentzi on the Mandarin road after dislodging forces of Japanese cavalry and infantry. The dispatch adds that Gen. Martinoff's detachment from Tadiu also drove back the Japanese advanced cavalry outposts.

Gen. Linevitch also reported fighting near Shahotse May 18, but did not give the result. He said a Russian detachment east of the railroad approached the village of Shahotse and was attacked by a considerable force of Japanese from the coal mines south of that place.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IN JURY'S HANDS

Lenich and Longer Murder Case Is Finally Submitted.

County Attorney Claims Longer Equally Guilty With Lenich.

The fate of Frank Lenich and Frank Longer, the alleged murderers of Peter Kracovitch of Eveleth is now in the hands of the twelve men who for the past several days have been listening to the testimony concerning the drinking bout and quarrel on Easter Sunday night, which finally resulted in a fatal cutting affray.

The testimony of the state and for the defenses was practically closed Friday afternoon last and a portion of the morning session of the court was occupied by County Attorney McClintock in arguing the state's case to the jury.

Mr. McClintock recited the details of the trouble as he had gathered them and as appeared from the evidence submitted up to the actual outbreak of the hostilities.

"I don't believe," said he, "that this is Kracovitch's knife. I believe it is Lenich's knife and that it was in Frank Lenich's hand when it was stuck into Kracovitch's throat to let out his life blood.

"They have brought in a lot of witnesses to vilify Kracovitch, the dead man, why have they not brought in a lot of witnesses to prove this is Kracovitch's knife?

"Lenich was a lawbreaker. He had no concern in the fight between Longer and Kracovitch. He broke away from the detaining hand of his sweetheart, against her pleadings and mixed into the fight in which he was in noway concerned. If he sought to act in the role of a peacemaker he could have called an officer. If Kracovitch had a knife, Lenich knew it and no unarmed man is going to undertake to go after and stop another man armed with a knife and who has the reputation of being a bad man with a knife. Lenich went after Kracovitch with an intent in his mind of doing him bodily injury, of killing him.

The testimony of several witnesses shows that it was the taller of the two men pursuing Kracovitch that over took and stabbed him. The testimony shows that Lenich and Longer were pursuing Kracovitch and you can see for yourselves that Lenich is the taller.

"You have heard Longer's testimony that after Lenich had struck Kracovitch down with a fatal wound in the neck, not satisfied with that he kicked the head and body of the dying man and then told Longer to come away that Pete had got enough."

County Attorney McClintock claimed that it was Lenich's guilty conscience which made him flee from Eveleth and become a fugitive from justice.

"We do not claim that Longer did the stabbing," said he, "and Longer, knowing that he did not do so was not so apprehensive as Lenich, and expected to be arrested as having been mixed up in the fight. In fact, however, Longer was there, took part in the fight and in the pursuit, and he is an accomplice of Lenich, and with him is equally guilty of murder.

"This was not a case of self-defense. Kracovitch was fleeing from Lenich and Longer, in the attempt to save his life. He was trying to get away, while the lives of Lenich and Longer were not in any jeopardy at all."

L. H. Corcoran, who is defending Lenich and Longer, began his argument shortly before the noon recess, and completed it this afternoon. During his opening remarks and recital of the preliminary details regarding the weight to be placed to the evidence, Mr. Corcoran stood close to the jury, and talked in so low a conversational tone that little of his argument was heard beyond the twelve men.

County Attorney McClintock was decidedly in earnest with his argument and frequently pointed at Lenich and Longer, who sat side by side, just inside the railing. Longer wore a slightly anxious expression, but Lenich, with hands folded in his lap, gazed straight ahead with indifference, every shot of the county attorney apparently passing over his head as though he were in no way concerned with the charge, conviction upon which will mean hanging.

SHARPER HAS NEW GAME

Flim Flams Boarding House Proprietor Out of $2.

A new game was worked on the proprietor of a lodging house at 921 West Michigan street yesterday.

A man, who stated that he was employed by a telephone company, came to the house and rented a room, for which he agreed to pay $8 a month. After completing the negotiations for the room, he stated that he was going to get his trunk. Just as he was leaving he pulled off a glittering ring from his finger, and handing it to the proprietor, stated that it was a valuable stone, and as he did not wish to lose it while handling a heavy trunk, requested the owner of the room to keep it until he returned.

Once again the man started for the door, but as he reached it began fumbling in his pockets and stopped.

"I seem to have left my purse behind me," he said. "Can you let me take enough money to pay for my trunk? It will come to about $1.75."

The proprietor with the "diamond" ring in his possession did not hesitate, but handed over a two dollar bill.

That was the last he has seen of the man or the money. The ring, needless to say, was "phoney" and worth perhaps 25 cents.

The police say the same game has recently been worked in St. Paul.

DIRECTORS DUE

Nothing Heard Yet Regarding Conference With Traction Company.

Some Report Regarding It Is Expected at Council Meeting.

Some report concerning the much desired conference with the street railway officials will doubtless be presented to the council this evening by the city attorney, who has the matter in charge.

"I am expecting some communication today telling when the directors will be in Duluth," said Mr. Fesler, "but it has not come as yet. The last I heard from them was to the effect that they would be in Duluth the first of this week. That would mean today or tomorrow, and I should have some word before night."

The meeting will be one of the most important gatherings touching the street railway service that has been held in many months.

West Duluth people want an extension of the West Third street line to Fairmount park, and better service on both West Duluth lines during the rush hours.

Woodland people want a through service to the end of the Woodland line, with double truck cars, instead of the present stub line service from Hunter's park.

Lester Park and Lakeside people are also hoping for a slightly improved service.

The conference is likely to see some concessions made by both sides. At a recent meeting of the council the city attorney gave it as his opinion that the city could undoubtedly compel the company to install double truck cars on all lines in the city, but he stated that it was a question of policy to determine whether or not it would not be a better plan to use this power as a lever to secure certain extensions from the company, which could not be forced out of the company without a nice legal fight at least, and perhaps not at all. About the only method of forcing extensions is for the city to grant a competing company a franchise to run cars on any street where the traction company refuses to build after being ordered to do so by the city.

The West Duluth people have expressed their willingness to forego the double truck service on the West Duluth Third street line for the present if the track is extended to Fairmount park.

Representatives from the city council, the West Duluth Commercial club, the Duluth Commercial club, the Lakeside club, and from Woodland, will be present at the conference, and it is hoped that concessions will be secured from the company that will satisfy all parties and render any legal proceedings unnecessary.

AN AIR OF EXPECTANCY

Prevails at Russian Admiralty Which Indicates Important News.

St. Petersburg, May 22.—There is an air of expectancy at the admiralty which indicates that news of importance regarding Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet is awaited at any moment. Officially no information regarding the admiral's whereabouts is volunterred, the officers making no concealment of the fact that they are in the secret of Rojestvensky's plans, but the majority entertain no doubt that the Russian fleet is now steaming toward its ultimate destination.

While there is no official confirmation of the Hong Kong report that Rojestvensky's fleet had passed through the Bashee channel, it is credited by those who have insisted from the start that Rojestvensky will give the island of Formosa a wide berth to the westward. The admiral, it is claimed, has had ample time to reach the Pacific since he left the waters of Indo-China.

The dispatches received from the front are meager but there are some indications that Gen. Linevitch has taken a leaf out of Field Marshal Oyama's book at the Shahke river and at Mukden and that he is about to advance himself and undertake a counter offensive, meeting the Japanese pressure against his left by advancing his right. It is too early, however, to determine whether the moves thus far are more than feints.

Gen. Linevitch in a dispatch from the front dated May 21, announced that two Russian detachments occupied the valleys of the Kaak and Khanda rivers, westward of Nanshentzi on the Mandarin road after dislodging forces of Japanese cavalry and infantry. The dispatch adds that Gen. Martinoff's detachment from Tadlu also drove back the Japanese advanced cavalry outposts.

Gen. Linevitch also reported fighting near Shahotse May 18, but did not give the result. He said a Russian detachment east of the railroad approached the village of Shahotse and was attacked by a considerable force of Japanese from the coal mines south of that place.

FOR STOUT WOMEN.

How Worth Insisted on Dressing Them.

For the stout woman the great Worth insisted on long and flowing lines and quite regardless of the prevailing fashions—absolutely refused to trim their gowns with horizontal effects. The stout woman will therefore be wise if she accepts as cardinal points in the study of her wardrobe these two essentials, says an exchange.

It is wonderful, too, what a straight line will do for the stout figure, while curves merely accentuate its embonpoint and becomes unsightly instead of beautiful. All gowns should be of some soft material that can be put on extremely full over a closely fitted lining of silk. This lining clings to the figure and adds nothing to its bulk, while the voluminous skirt, draped upon it, is too soft to take up space over the hips and yet it is full enough to give broad, sweeping lines.

Many stout women are appalled at the suggestion of a full skirt. But if they will try on a skirt that lies snugly around the hips and flares down, they will see how slender their figures will appear in contrast to the fullness of the skirt. The fullness should appear to spring from the belt, and the outline of the hips should never be accentuated by having the skirt fitted to them. The fitted yoke, with a gauged or fitted skirt springing from the yoke, is also an error of judgment.

There is no fashion worse suited to the stout woman, as such a skirt cuts the figure and gives a short, dumpy appearance. The top of the skirt should have the fullness laid in pleats and tucks, just as one pleases. Of course, the extensively gauged skirts should never be worn except by tall women, and even by them with discretion.

In the matter of trimming great care should be taken. Long panels sometimes appear to reduce the size of the figure, but the horizontal trimmings, whether put on in wavy lines or scallops, always reduce the height and appear to increase the breadth of the woman who wears them. Trimming on the hems gives breadth to the bottom of the skirt and seems to give a becoming length to the wearer.

The stout woman who dresses to her figure rather than to fashionabe models is always more smartly dressed than she who wears what is fashionable in itself rather than what is suitable.

Don't use frills of any kind on a gown if you are stout. Use flat trimmings.

Don't wear wide belts.

Don't trim a skirt except at the bottom.

Don't wear a sleeve that is ful below the elbow.

Don't wear an Eton coat. Always have the coat line extend as far below the waist line as possible.

Don't wear a tight fitting coat.

Don't wear bow ties. Wear something small and narrow if a tie is required.

Don't wear fluffy things around the neck. Let the neck finishing be as flat as possible.

Don't wear a high cut decollette. Have the low bodice cut to an extremity of decollette, and build up the top with patchy effects to the required height.

Keep Individuality.

When you have discovered the individuality of your gown, or hat, keep it through all the changing fashions, but you need not be dowdy or behind the times—there are skillful moderations of the possible and impossible in fashion, says an exchange.

If your eyes are blue, never fail to have a hint of blue somewhere in your dress—it has a marvelously becoming effect. You need not always and ever appear in blue and dark blue. A scrap of blouse, blue ribbon in your hat, all will serve.

On the other hand, will you ever see a brown-eyed, brown-haired girl look prettier than when wearing the color that tones with hair and eyes? The effect is enriching, and makes of the glossy brown locks quite a picture, and induces beholders who know not the secret to ponder on the beauty of those quiet eyes!

There is the girl whom only the picturesque suits. Let her by all means cultivate to the best of her ability and extent of her purse all the loveliest designs and materials. The be-plumed hat tied with fluffy chiffon strings, softening the outlines of her face, and making even the plain girl—of this particular style—very pretty to look upon. Hers may be the floating filmy veil, the befrilled and belaced frocks, the Victorian stoles, and the dozen and one old absurdities on her tailor-made sister. Her hair must be softly and loosely dressed, for her no tight braids and smooth coils; in fact, she may be as Early Victorian as she likes.

Finally, and in conclusion, we do well to understand that the girl or woman who does not make some little study of her appearance, or who neglects the little niceties of dress, even though she is no fashion devotee, is not doing her duty in that state of life to which it has pleased Providence to call her.

THE SCORNING OF SAMANTHA

By Grace Stewart Hinote.

(Copyright, 1905, Daily Story Pub. Co.)

They had been sweethearts for several years, and were waiting for the time when the little log cabin in the hollow should be complete and the money for the simple furniture be saved. Many days had Samantha toiled over the simple white dress with hands that were more used to the hoe handle than the needle, but she sang happily over her task, and at last every piece of her modest outfit was finished and laid away for that day in early fall that was drawing so near, when Seth would come for her and life would be so happy.

Seth was tall, awkward and uncouth, but considered very "forhanded" in the community. He was the largest interest in the large still down in Becks Swamp. It was an illicit still, one that the government would have given much to have traced. Moonshine brought a ready sale, and Seth was saving and Samantha was looked upon with envy by many a Sinksville belle.

Samantha was so busy helping her small brothers gather the crop that she was too absorbed to note that Seth came less and less frequent to the little cabin on the knoll. "Seth was busy," she would say if any one remarked at his long absence, and so she sang and worked in blissful unconsciousness of the shock in store for her.

The evening before the day arrived and Samantha had seen the last load of fodder and cotton disappear into the sheds with a sigh of satisfaction. "Now mother and the kids can manage," she observed to herself, as she cooled her heated face in the cool spring and threw herself on the soft pine-straw carpeted bank to rest.

Footsteps interrupted her and a boy appeared with a piece of paper crumpled tight in his dirty fist.

"Hyars a writ what Seth Larkins sent yu'uns," he said with a bashful grin, handing her the note gingerly.

Samantha opened it eagerly.

"Dear Samie," the message read, "I am powerful sorry to hev ter tell yer thet we'uns carn't marry termorrer, cause I am ter marry Jane Gibbs. I—" The note dropped from her nerveless fingers and a dazed, hopeless expression came into her eyes; her face suddenly looked old and worn, the form robbed of its elastic spring seemed to shrink and shudder into lines of care and suffering, as she buried her face in the soft leaves and lay until the shadows of the setting sun warned her that darkness was aproaching. Mechanically she performed her evening tasks, then taking her bonnet she started down the mountain to the hollow, where since childhood she had loved to go with all her joys and griefs. She did not weep. The blow had come too quickly, stunning her, and drying up the sources of her tears. Into the cave she dragged her weary footsteps and flinging herself on a pile of drying skins she lay and gazed with feverish eyes at the gleams of moonshine that penetrated the shrubbery in front of the cave. All night she lay there, a fierce light gradually crept into her eyes and the lips set in a tense, determined line.

When morning dawned she stole cautiously to the house; no one stirred and taking her shoes in her hand she started at a run down the sandy road towards Sinksville, the nearest town. She made her way rapidly and without a pause through the town to a certain house where she knocked softly.

In a few moments the door opened and a keen eyed man appeared, who stared in surprise at the white, tense face before him.

"Be yu Bently Carstens?" came from her in eager, strained tones.

Yes, my girl; I am he. Can I do anything for you?" his tones were kind, but his hand stole furtively to his hip. His life was in hourly danger from these mountain people, and the revenue officer was cautious. "I ain't got nuthin' agin yer, and yer needn't git no pistol," she said with a grim smile as she noted the action.

"Come in then, and warm," he answered, as he saw her cower in the raw morning air.

With quick, bitter words she told him her wants, and as he laid his hands for a second pityingly on her bowed head she broke into sobs, quivering with the bitter sense of her utter wrethchedness.

She quivered as she clutched the bag of money he brought from an inner room. "Hit air what he brought on himself!" she said in a low, strained voice, as she passed out into the cold, gloomy dawn.

"Seth, jest look what we found on the doorstep this morning!" cried pretty Jane Gibbs to her lover, the morning of their wedding day, as she thrust a bag of glistening silver into her hand. "Hyar is a writ that war in hit."

Seth, resplendent in new jeans and a boughten shirt, stared at the money and then at his intended bride, with a dawning suspicion that he had taken one too many glasses with the boys the night before.

"Ye luny, why don't yu read the note and quit staring at me!" Jane said impatiently.

Mechanically he obeyed.

"Seth Larkin and bride," he read, "you will find enclosed the sum of two hundred dollars as a wedding gift. From a friend."

"Seth, yu can buy the still now. Yu said they war willin' to gin hit up fur the cash, which war jes thet amount," Jane whispered eagerly.

His eyes snapped brightly.

"Shore little gal, and then we'll make the money, won't we, honey?" he answered, as he caught his sweetheart around the waist with a bear-like hug. "I am agwine right off neow and see about hit; shall I, Jane?"

In a few moments his form was out of sight across the mountain, and Jane went back to her preparation for the evening with a light heart and full of the thought of the unknown sender of the money.

Across the ridge to each of his partner's houses, Seth made his way, and just as the shades of evening began to fall, he found himself within a few rods of the still.

"I air the sole owner uv his neow, and I allow I hev time to go and take a look at hit foah the time ter git spliced," he muttered as he looked cautiously around to see if any one was in sight before he made a dash and disappeared in the undergrowth.

In a moment the bushes were alive with moving figures and the glisten of many guns. In a trice a flame leaped high into the darkening sky and a shout of anger and despair rose above the crackling of the flames. Suddenly a form hurled itself into the light from behind the flames and instantly a dozen guns covered his retreat.

"Betrayed! I might a known thet some one hed gin us thet money for no good!" snarled Seth as he stood sullenly by and saw his still destroyed.

As they crossed the hollow a form darted into the path and faced Seth.

"Ye air sorry ye can't marry me, air ye?" a voice taunted. "Air ye gwine marry Jane Gibbs neow?"

With a wild, disagreeable laugh the white form suddenly disappeared into the darkness, and Seth saw into the mystery of the money, and the capture of himself and still.

Two years passed. Seth had worked out his sentence and was home again. Broken in health and penniless, he sat one cold December night alone by his desolate fireside. Jane had married while he had been away, and no one in the neighborhood seemed to have any interest in him, passing him with merely a cool nod, or perhaps worse, with averted faces. Life was becoming almost intolerable to him. Surely he had been sufficiently punished for his cruel desertion of his first love. "Samantha," he groaned, "yu ort ter be satisfied neow, fur my life am plumb rusted. I wouldn't ever hev treated yer so, but thet Jane never give me a night uv rest till I courted her. I shore treated yer wrong, Samantha, and that war a right smart trick yer served me, but I shore did earn hit by my treatment uv ye," he muttered to himself in audible tones.

Two soft arms stole around his neck, and half crying, Samantha ejaculated, "Poah Seth, I air sorry I done treated yu so; but, Seth, I shore didn't aim fer ter hev ye. Yu wuz mine!"

"And air yet, Samantha, if yu will hev me back," he exclaimed as he drew her towards him, until their lips met.

A whip-poor-will in the hollow suddenly changed his song into a jubilent "It ended well! It ended well! and the two tired hearts in the cabin above echoed his song.

GREAT MUSICAL FEAST.

Pittsburg Orchestra and Madame Gadski at Lyceum.

This evening at the Lyceum the Pittsburg orchestra under the leadership of Emil Paur and Madame Gadski, the famous operatic prima donna, will appear. It will be a musical feast such as Duluth has rarely had for both the orchestra and solist are among the first in the land and have attained fame that is world wide. In the Twin Cities and Winnipeg where they have been appearing the past few days enthusiasm ran very high and the musicians pronounced the work of the orchestra as not to be surpassed. As for Madame Gadski her ability is so well known that to hear her wonderful voice did not bring surprise but rather confirmation of something already suspected. Madame Gadski on this tour, too, is not doing as many operatic singers do—singing easy numbers and those not trying to the voice—but she is giving the best she has and exhibits the magnificence of her voice and technique in full measure.

JOHN D'S COUSIN

Is Not Afraid of Taking "Tainted Money."

Binghampton, N. Y., May 22.—"No, sir, if my cousin, John D. Rockefeller, was to offer me $30,000 on condition that I should go to the city to live, I wouldn't take it."

So emphatically declared Mrs. William Rockefeller Gage, a cousin of the Standard oil millionaire, who lives in a little old farm house on the Hance road just off the Hawleyton turnpike, about eight miles from this city.

Mrs. Gage's father was an uncle of John and William Rockefeller. She has never seen her wealthy cousins. She is 70 years old. She has spent most of her life on the little farm where she now lives with her husband and son.

"What do you think of Mr. Rockefeller's money? Do you think it is tainted?" Mrs. Gage was asked. "Would you take any if it was offered to you?"

"Well, in the first place, there is no danger of his offerinug me or my family any money. But if he did I wouldn't stop to think anything about its being tainted. If he should be kind enough to bestow any amount on me I should take it and place it in the hands of the Lord and ask him to guide me in the use of it.

"Then I am sure it would be all right. I wouldn't stop to ask how he got it. I am a church member and a firm believer, but look at the churches that are talking about refusing to take his money when he offers it to them. Go into them churches any Sunday and when the collection box is passed and folks drop in a penny or a dime or a quarter, who bothers how they came?

"Does the preacher try to find out how the people that helps support the church came by it? Why, the saloonkeepers and hotelkeepers help support the churches and no questions asked. Why don't the churches refuse to take their money? I never knew of any of them doing it. I think that if the church people and officers and preachers who are so careful to talk about not accepting money from John D. Rockefeller would stop and consider about it for a minute they would think different about it."

Disclosed By Rat and Zealous Fox Terrier.

New Qork, May 22.—The prevailing style in feminine hosiery this season is black with an area of lace fretwork on the forward part extending upward about a third of the way to the garter zone.

It was a maverick rat and a zealous fox terrier that combined to disclose this fashionable fact. The rat was a stowaway on a southbound Sixth avenue car Saturday. When the car pulled up at Eleventh street his ratship disembarked.

All would have been well, probably, if it had not been for the presence of a fox terrier. He was out with a tall girl for his morning trot, and the instant the rat hopped over the asphalt the pup caught sight of it. The rat made for cover with the terrier close in his wake. The motorman on the car let out a yell of "rats" and produced an effect that he had not anticipated.

Within about fifty feet of the spot there were probably a score of women out shopping and marketing. The motorman's yell directed their attention to the chase between the dog and rat and that was all that was needed to start a disorderly retreat.

There was a chorus of shrill screeches and a mad gathering up of skirts and petticoats and frills and furbelows, and at once the details of the latest fashion in hosiery became a mater of public knowledge.

The terrier, in the meantime, pursued the rat and finally caught and killed it.

FOR STOUT WOMEN.

How Worth Insisted on Dressing Them.

For the stout woman the great Worth insisted on long and flowing lines and quite regardless of the prevailing fashions—absolutely refused to trim their gowns with horizontal effects. The stout woman will therefore be wise if she accepts as cardinal points in the study of her wardrobe these two essentials, says an exchange.

It is wonderful, too, what a straight line will do for the stout figure, while curves merely accentuate its embonpoint and becomes unsightly instead of beautiful. All gowns should be of some soft material that can be put on extremely full over a closely fitted lining of silk. This lining clings to the figure and adds nothing to its bulk, while the voluminous skirt, draped upon it, is too soft to take up space over the hips and yet it is full enough to give broad, sweeping lines.

Many stout women are appalled at the suggestion of a full skirt. But if they will try on a skirt that lies snugly around the hips and flares down, they will see how slender their figures will appear in contrast to the fullness of the skirt. The fullness should appear to spring from the belt, and the outline of the hips should never be accentuated by having the skirt fitted to them. The fitted yoke, with a gauged or fitted skirt springing from the yoke, is also an error of judgment.

There is no fashion worse suited to the stout woman, as such a skirt cuts the figure and gives a short, dumpy appearance. The top of the skirt should have the fullness laid in pleats and tucks, just as one pleases. Of course, the extensively gauged skirts should never be worn except by tall women, and even by them with discretion.

In the matter of trimming great care should be taken. Long panels sometimes appear to reduce the size of the figure, but the horizontal trimmings, whether put on in wavy lines or scallops, always reduce the height and appear to increase the breadth of the woman who wears them. Trimming on the hems gives breadth to the bottom of the skirt and seems to give a becoming length to the wearer.

The stout woman who dresses to her figure rather than to fashionable models is always more smartly dressed than she who wears what is fashionable in itself rather than what is suitable.

Don't use frills of any kind on a gown if you are stout. Use flat trimmings.

Don't wear wide belts.

Don't trim a skirt except at the bottom.

Don't wear a sleeve that is ful below the elbow.

Don't wear an Eton coat. Always have the coat line extend as far below the waist line as possible.

Don't wear a tight fitting coat.

Don't wear bow ties. Wear something small and narrow if a tie is required.

Don't wear fluffy things around the neck. Let the neck finishing be as flat as possible.

Don't wear a high cut decollette. Have the low bodice cut to an extremity of decollette, and build up the top with patchy effects to the required height.

Keep Individuality.

When you have discovered the individuality of your gown, or hat, keep it through all the changing fashions, but you need not be dowdy or behind the times—there are skillful moderations of the possible and impossible in fashion, says an exchange.

If your eyes, are blue, never fail to have a hint of blue somewhere in your dress—it has a marvelously becoming effect. You need not always and ever appear in blue and dark blue. A scrap of blouse, blue ribbon in your hat, all will serve.

On the other hand, will you ever see a brown-eyed, brown-haired girl look prettier than when wearing the color that tones with hair and eyes? The effect is enriching, and makes of the glossy brown locks quite a picture, and induces beholders who know not the secret to ponder on the beauty of those quiet eyes!

There is the girl whom only the picturesque suits. Let her by all means cultivate to the best of her ability and extent of her purse all the loveliest designs and materials. The be-plumed hat tied with fluffy chiffon strings, softening the outlines of her face, and making even the plain girl—of this particular style—very pretty to look upon. Hers may be the floating filmy veil, the befrilled and belaced frocks, the Victorian stoles, and the dozen and one old absurdities on her tailor-made sister. Her hair must be softly and loosely dressed, for her no tight braids and smooth coils; in fact, she may be as Early Victorian as she likes.

Finally, and in conclusion, we do well to understand that the girl or woman who does not make some little study of her appearance, or who neglects the little niceties of dress, even though she is no fashion devotee, is not doing her duty in that state of life to which it has pleased Providence to call her.

THE SCORNING OF SAMANTHA

By Grace Stewart Hinote.

(Copyright, 1905, Daily Story Pub. Co.)

They had been sweethearts for several years, and were waiting for the time when the little log cabin in the hollow should be complete and the money for the simple furniture be saved. Many days had Samantha toiled over the simple white dress with hands that were more used to the hoe handle than the needle, but she sang happily over her task, and at last every piece of her modest outfit was finished and laid away for that day in early fall that was driving so near, when Seth would come for her and life would be so happy.

Seth was tall, awkward and uncouth, but considered very "forhanded" in the community. His was the largest interest in the large still down in Becks Swamp. It was an illicit still, one that the government would have given much to have traced. Moonshine brought a ready sale, and Seth was saving and Samantha was looked upon with envy by many a Sinksville belle.

Samantha was so busy helping her small brothers gather the crop that she was too absorbed to note that Seth came less and less frequent to the little cabin on the knoll. "Seth was busy," she would say if any one remarked at his long absence, and so she sang and worked in blissful unconsciousness of the shock in store for her.

The evening before the day arrived and Samantha had seen the last load of fodder and cotton disappear into the sheds with a sigh of satisfaction. "Now mother and the kids can manage," she observed to herself, as she cooled her heated face in the cool spring and threw herself on the soft pine-straw carpeted bank to rest.

Footsteps interrupted her and a boy appeared with a piece of paper crumpled tight in his dirty fist.

"Hyars a writ what Seth Larkins sent yu'uns," he said with a bashful grin, handing her the note gingerly.

Samantha opened it eagerly.

"Dear Samie," the message read, "I am powerful sorry to hev ter tell yer thet we'uns can't marry termorrer, cause I am ter marry Jane Gibbs. I—" The note dropped from her nerveless fingers and a dazed, hopeless expression came into her eyes; her face suddenly looked old and worn, the form robbed of its elastic spring seemed to shrink and shudder into lines of care and suffering, as she buried her face in the soft leaves and lay until the shadows of the setting sun warned her that darkness was approaching. Mechanically she performed her evening tasks, then taking her bonnet she started down the mountain to the hollow, where since childhood she had loved to go with all her joys and griefs. She did not weep. The blow had come too quickly, stunning her, and drying up the sources of her tears. Into the cave she dragged her weary footsteps and flinging herself on a pile of drying skins she lay and gazed with feverish eyes at the gleams of moonshine that penetrated the shrubbery in front of the cave. All night she lay there, a fierce light gradually crept into her eyes and the lips set in a tense, determined line.

When morning dawned she stole cautiously to the house; no one stirred and taking her shoes in her hand she started at a run down the sandy road towards Sinksville, the nearest town. She made her way rapidly and without a pause through the town to a certain house where she knocked softly.

In a few moments the door opened and a keen eyed man appeared, who stared in surprise at the white, tense face before him.

"Be yu Bently Carstens?" came from her in eager, strained tones.

"Yes, my girl; I am he. Can I do anything for you?" his tones were kind, but his hand stole furtively to his hip. His life was in hourly danger from these mountain people, and the revenue officer was cautious. "I ain't got nuthin' agin yer, and yer needn't git no pistol," she said with a grim smile as she noted the action.

"Come in then, and warm," he answered, as he saw her cower in the raw morning air.

With quick, bitter words she told him her wants, and as he laid his hands for a second pityingly on her bowed head she broke into sobs, quivering with the bitter sense of her utter wretchedness.

She quivered as she clutched the bag of money he brought from an inner room. "Fit air what he brought on himself!" she said in a low, strained voice, as she passed out into the cold, gloomy dawn.

"Seth, jest look what we found on the doorstep this mornin'!" cried pretty Jane Gibbs to her lover, the morning of their wedding day, as she thrust a bag of glistening silver into her hand. "Hyar is a writ that war in hit."

Seth, resplendent in new jeans and a boughten shirt, stared at the money and then at his intended bride, with a dawning suspicion that he had taken one too many glasses with the boys the night before.

"Ye luny, why don't yu read the note and quit staring at me!" Jane said impatiently.

Mechanically he obeyed.

"Seth Larkin and bride," he read, "you will find enclosed the sum of two hundred dollars as a wedding gift. From a friend."

"Seth, yu can buy the still now. Yu said they war willin' to gin hit up fur the cash, which war jes thet amount," Jane whispered eagerly.

His eyes snapped brightly.

"Shore little gal, and then we'll make the money, won't we, honey?" he answered, as he caught his sweetheart around the waist with a bear-like hug. "I am agwine right off neow and see about hit; shall I, Jane?"

In a few moments his form was out of sight across the mountain, and Jane went back to her preparation for the evening with a light heart and full of the thought of the unknown sender of the money.

Across the ridge to each of his partner's houses, Seth made his way, and just as the shades of evening began to fall, he found himself within a few rods of the still.

"I air the sole owner uv his neow, and I allow I hev time to go and take a look at hit foah the time ter git spliced," he muttered as he looked cautiously around to see if any one was in sight before he made a dash and disappeared in the undergrowth.

In a moment the bushes were alive with moving figures and the glisten of many guns. In a trice a flame leaped high into the darkening sky and a shout of anger and despair rose above the crackling of the flames. Suddenly a form hurled itself into the light from behind the flames and instantly a dozen guns covered his retreat.

"Betrayed! I might a known thet some on hed gin us thet money for no good!" snarled Seth as he stood sullenly by and saw his still destroyed.

As they crossed the hollow, a form darted into the path and faced Seth.

"Ye air sorry ye can't marry me, air ye?" a voice taunted. "Air ye gwine marry Jane Gibbs neow?"

With a wild, disagreeable laugh the white form suddenly disappeared into the darkness, and Seth saw into the mystery of the money, and the capture of himself and still.

Two years passed. Seth had worked out his sentence and was home again. Broken in health and penniless, he sat one cold December night alone by his desolate fireside. Jane had married while he had been away, and no one in the neighborhood seemed to have any interest in him, passing him with merely a cool nod, or perhaps worse, with averted faces. Life was becoming almost intolerable to him. Surely he had been sufficiently punished for his cruel desertion of his first love. "Samantha," he groaned, "yu ort ter be satisfied neow, fur my life am plumb ruined. I wouldn't ever hev treated yer so, but thet Jane never give me a night uv rest till I courted her. I shore treated yer wrong, Samantha, and that war a right smart trick yer served me, but I shore did earn hit by my treatment uv ye," he muttered to himself in audible tones.

Two soft arms stole around his neck, and half crying, Samantha ejaculated, "Pesh Seth, I air sorry I done treated yu so; but, Seth, I shore didn't aim fer ter hev ye. Yu wuz mine!"

"And air yet, Samantha, if yu will hev me back," he exclaimed as he drew her towards him, until their lips met.

A whip-poor-will in the hollow suddenly changed his song into a jubilent "It ended well!" It ended well! and the two tired hearts in the cabin above echoed his song.

GREAT MUSICAL FEAST.

Pittsburg Orchestra and Madame Gadski at Lyceum.

This evening at the Lyceum the Pittsburg orchestra under the leadership of Emil Paur and Madame Gadski, the famous operatic prima donna, will appear. It will be a musical feast such as Duluth has rarely had for both the orchestra and solist are among the first in the land and have attained fame that is world wide. In the Twin Cities and Winnipeg where they have been appearing the past few days enthusiasm ran very high and the musicians pronounced the work of the orchestra as not to be surpassed. As for Madame Gadski her ability is so well known that to hear her wonderful voice did not bring surprise but rather confirmation of something already suspected. Madame Gadski on this tour, too, is not doing as many operatic singers do—singing easy numbers and those not trying to the voice—but she is giving the best she has and exhibits the magnificence of her voice and technique in full measure.

JOHN D'S COUSIN

Is Not Afraid of Taking "Tainted Money."

Binghampton, N. Y., May 22.—"No, sir, if my cousin, John D. Rockefeller, was to offer me $30,000 on condition that I should go to the city to live, I wouldn't take it."

So emphatically declared Mrs. William Rockefeller Gage, a cousin of the Standard oil millionaire, who lives in a little old farm house on the Hance road just off the Hawleyton turnpike, about eight miles from this city.

Mrs. Gage's father was an uncle of John and William Rockefeller. She has never seen her wealthy cousins. She is 70 years old. She has spent most of her life on the little farm where she now lives with her husband and son.

"What do you think of Mr. Rockefeller's money? Do you think it is tainted?" Mrs. Gage was asked. "Would you take any if it was offered to you?"

"Well, in the first place, there is no danger of his offerinug me or my family any money. But if he did I wouldn't stop to think anything about its being tainted. If he should be kind enough to bestow any amount on me I should take it and place it in the hands of the Lord and ask him to guide me in the use of it.

"Then I am sure it would be all right. I wouldn't stop to ask how he got it. I am a church member and a firm believer, but look at the churches that are talking about refusing to take his money when he offers it to them. Go into them churches any Sunday and when the collection box is passed and folks drop in a penny or a dime or a quarter, who bothers how they came?

"Does the preacher try to find out how the people that helps support the church came by it? Why, the saloonkeepers and hotelkeepers help support the churches and no questions asked. Why don't the churches refuse to take their money? I never knew of any of them doing it. I think that if the church people and officers and preachers who are so careful to talk about not accepting money from John D. Rockefeller would stop and consider about it for a minute they would think different about it."

DOG VALUES TAKE SLUMP

A. T. Seyler Loses His Suit For $125 Damages.

The price of Fourth street dogs took a big slump this morning when the verdict of the jury in the case of A. T. Seyler against the street railway company was opened in court. The verdict was in favor of the company.

The action, which was tried last week and on which the jury reached a verdict at midnight Friday, was one in which Mr. Seyler claimed his dog had been run over and killed by a West Fourth street car at First avenue west and Fourth street and that the accident was caused because the car was exceeding the limit of speed fixed by ordinance. He sued the company for $125, the claim being made that the dog had an aristocratic lineage and that it had an established record for chasing cats.

KNEW MAMMA'S SONG

And Mrs. Horne Got Back Her Children.

Waterbury, Conn., May 22.—A little more than a year ago Jacob Horne, a prosperous Hebrew merchant of Braddock, Pa., decided that he could no longer live with his wife. He took his two children, girls aged 6 and 8, and sailed for Europe.

"Your mother is dead," he told the children. "You will never see her again."

The children grieved until the novelty of the voyage won their attention and then forgot.

After a few months of travel Horne returned to this country, placing his daughters under the care of friends in this city.

His wife, who has been searching for the children everywhere, discovered them Saturday with the aid of the police, living happily with a family on Elm street. Mrs. Horne rushed toward her daughters with outstretched arms, calling them by name.

But the little ones only shrunk away, staring apprehensively at the strange woman who acted so wildly.

"Our mamma is dead," protested the eldest. "We don't belong to you."

Broken hearted, Mrs. Horne sank upon a chair sobbing bitterly.

Then Police Sargent Fagan, who accompanied her, had an inspiration.

"Perhaps if you could just sing them something like you used to when they were babies they would remember you," he suggested.

With streaming eyes Mrs. Horne began to quiver an old Yiddish cradle song. It was filled with sad little minor notes and the mother's voice broke pitifully.

"It is mamma!" cried the younger girl. "It is momma come back," and she cuddled delightedly in the strange woman's arms.

Mrs. Horne returned to her room in Braddock Saturday night. The two little girls went with her. Horne is said to be in New York.

The delegates, on Wednesday afternoon, will be shown the city, visiting mills, ships, the blast furnace, coke ovens, coal and ore docks, aerial bridge, etc., and will be otherwise entertained. On Wednesday the ladies of Plymouth Congregational church will serve dinner and supper at the church.

The conference will open at 7:30 tomorrow evening with a praise and prayer service and fifteen minutes later an address will be given by Rev. George R. Merrill, superintendent of the Congregational Home Missionary society for Minnesota. This will be followed by an address by Rev. H. O. Hannum of Superior on "The Dynamic of Christianity," and following this the annual sermon will be preached by Rev. Alexander Milne of the Pilgrim Congregational church of Duluth. The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered by Rev. Henry H. Stutson. The offering and benediction will close the session of that evening.

PERSONAL DISPUTE

Now Exists in Deatherage Painters' Strike.

The Deatherage strike situation at West Duluth is unchanged. It has now reached a stage of words between T. G. Freshney, business agent of the Painters' union, and M. N. Gaspard, the man employed by Deatherage, over whom the strike started. The business agent claims that Gaspard was a strike-breaker at the Clyde Iron works when the strike was on there. Gaspard, in rebuttal, offers to prove by Mr. Luster of the Clyde Iron works that he did not enter the employ of the works until the strike was a thing of the past. And that is the situation.

There may be some effort made to bring Mr. Luster and one of the union pickets, who was at the works and who is at the bottom of the charges against Gaspard together and settle the dispute.

Mrs. Eklund Dead.

Mrs. Amelia Eklund, the wife of Alexander Eklund of 5303 Wadena street, died last evening at her home. Pulmonary tuberculosis was the cause of death, and has held Mrs. Eklund in its grasp for about two years. Her husband and two children survive her. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, and interment will be in Oneota cemetery. Mr. Eklund is a well-known business man of Central avenue.

ROBERT COCHRANE HERE.

Mr. Cochrane is here on business, and will return to his present home in a few days. He is well known in West Duluth, and was formerly president of the Duluth city council while alderman from the Eighth ward.

KICKING ON TAX

Assessment of Mortgages Arousing Protests From Entire State.

Attorney General and City Attorney Considering the Matter.

The possibility of every mortgage-owner in the State of Minnesota being compelled to pay a 3 per cent personal property tax on mortgages which draw from 5 to 7 per cent interest, has aroused a storm of protest from every corner of the state, and efforts are now being made to arrive at some satisfactory solution of the question which will stop short of a practical confiscation of the mortgages held in Minnesota.

The question was raised by the law passed at the last session of the legislature, which compelled the register of deeds in each county to furnish the auditor with a list of mortgages held in the county. Copies of this list are in the hands of the assessors in most of the cities and villages in the state, and there is no chance of a mortgage-owner evading the assessor this year.

The assessment of mortgages is claimed to mean double taxation, as the property is also assessed, and the owners complain that it will in the end fall on them, as the men who lend the money will allow for the tax in fixing their rates of interest.

The matter has caused so much comment that it has been taken up with the attorney general of the state, and the law may be tested as to its constitutionality.

In Duluth City Assessor Jackson has referred the question to the city attorney, for an opinion as to whether or not he would be warranted in assessing mortgages at one-third of their face value. This would involve a tax of one per cent in place of 3 per cent.

Mr. Jackson has received a list of 1,699 names of mortgage-owners, who will all be affected by the enforcement of the law, and already he is in receipt of numerous protests from all sides. The deputy assessors are going ahead with the work of checking up the list of mortgage owners, pending the receipt of an opinion from the city attorney on the legality of listing the mortgages at one-third of their face value.

SAVED BY DYNAMITE.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her. Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and La Grippe. At all druggists, price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

TOO MUCH MEDICINE.

THE excessive and indiscriminate use of medicines, in these days, cannot be too strongly condemned. The food you eat, if properly digested, is all the tonic you need.

The system is continually wronged by over-eating and over-drinking, and the debilitated condition aggravated by dosing with harsh, nauseous drugs and medicines.

Only common sense is needed. The food MUST be digested and the bowels MUST NOT BE allowed to clog. Preserve your health by preventing these conditions.

Constipation surely leads to Indigestion, Biliousness, etc., and these conditions when neglected affect the condition of the blood, debilitate the system, rendering it susceptible to more serious ailments, and less able to resist such attacks.

CALIFORNIA PRUNE WAFERS if taken as directed, will positively cure the most obstinate case of Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Biliousness, etc., so as to stay cured. 100 Wafers, 25 cents. Sold by

HIS MOTHER IS WORRIED

Queen of Spain Anxious About the Young King.

New York, May 22.—The queen of Spain is anxious for her boy and Bon Papa Loubet has written her a kindly note promising to keep a paternal eye on young Alfonso in Paris.

It is not socialists that terrify the anxious mother, who wrote President Loubet: "His majesty is still only a child, and at his age it is easy to be carried away and get adrift. Alfonso has so little experience."

It is to be feared that Alfonso will have more reason than even Edward to complain of constant supervision. The young king is credited with possessing a fierce will of his own and it is known he is determined to play without reserve in the intervals of state functions the fashionable role of an entirely Parisian monarch.

An amusing indication of the royal will has already become known through the careless bonhomme of M. Galdard, director of the opera, who good naturedly told the astonished newspaper men he had received authoritative instructions, based no doubt on a sign from the Spanish embassy, to put on the stage at the gal representations as few as possible of the venerable contatrices generally drawn out for state occasions, whose reputation and accomplished art would scarcely atone in the eyes of the young king for their lack of springtime charm. It was an awkward coincidence that brought before the French courts just at this moment the case of two sons of the late king of Spain, who are living unknown in Paris. The sum of $100,000 was deposited with a Paris banker for the maintenance of the children born of the morganatic union of the king with the famous singer, Elena Sanza.

The two young men are pledged never to reveal their origin and they kept their faith until the Spanish court, evidently thinking it could escape from the heavy payment to the banker, suddenly refused to pay six months' revenues.

Fernand and Henry Sanza promptly brought suit. The case was tried behind closed doors, and the young men won, but the secret is out and everyone is wondering what folly ever brought its publicity and revived a dead scandal at a most inopportune moment.

A LIVE CURIOSITY.

Bloodsuckers Feast on Body of a Turtle.

Arthur Hanford and R. W. Nichols, Duluth civil engineers, found a curiosity yesterday in Evergreen Park at Lake Nebagamon, Wis. It was a large mud turtle of the snapping variety lying in the road a short distance from the lake. About the body of turtle there were four different bunches of squirming bloodsuckers, all of them great big fellows. They fastened themselves onto the poor creature where the body was left unprotected by the shell.

According to Mr. Hanford there were twenty or twenty-five of the bloodsuckers in each bunch, and he is of the opinion that the animal had left the water to get rid of them. The entire length of the turtle, from stem to stern, was exactly three feet. The shell measured fifteen inches long and thirteen inches broad, the body inside occupying a space five and one-fourth inches deep. The whole weighed twenty-five pounds. The animal was killed and the skin and shell brought to Duluth.

BAD WRITING

Of Governor Higgins Almost Causes Party Break.

New York, May 22.—Because Governor Higgins does not always make his signature as legible as it might be a misunderstanding between him and Senator Platt that might have wrecked the Republican organization was narrowly averted Saturday. Governor Higgins came from Albany on personal business and went, as usual, to the Albermarle hotel. Senator Platt was in the Fifth Avenue on the other side of the street, having stopped there on his way to Highland Mills.

Governor Higgins went over a little before 3 o'clock to have a talk with Senator Platt regarding matters of much political importance. Senator Platt was waiting for him. The governor wrote his name on a card and a small boy carried it up to Senator Platt's room.

"Come in," Senator Platt said in response to the boy's timid knock. "What is it?"

"There's a gentleman wants to see you," the boy replied.

"Who is it?" Senator Platt asked, not desiring to have his intended interview with the governor interrupted.

"His name is either McGuire or McGinnis, I don't know which," the boy said, trying to decipher the name on the card.

An amusing indication of the royal will has already become known through the careless bonhomme of M. Galdard, director of the opera, who good naturedly told the astonished newspaper men he had received authoritative instructions, based no doubt on a sign from the Spanish embassy, to put on the stage at the gal representations as few as possible of the venerable contatrices generally drawn out for state occasions, whose reputation and accomplished art would scarcely atone in the eyes of the young king for their lack of springtime charm. It was an awkward coincidence that brought before the French courts just at this moment the case of two sons of the late king of Spain, who are living unknown in Paris. The sum of $100,000 was deposited with a Paris banker for the maintenance of the children born of the morganatic union of the king with the famous singer, Elena Sanza.

The two young men are pledged never to reveal their origin and they kept their faith until the Spanish court, evidently thinking it could escape from the heavy payment to the banker, suddenly refused to pay six months' revenues.

Fernand and Henry Sanza promptly brought suit. The case was tried behind closed doors, and the young men won, but the secret is out and everyone is wondering what folly ever brought its publicity and revived a dead scandal at a most inopportune moment.

"Tell him I can't see him," Senator Platt directed. "Say I'm busy."

Governor Higgins was standing at the desk waiting for the summons to Senator Platt's room when the boy returned.

"Senator Platt says he cannot see the gentleman," the page informed the clerk.

Governor Higgins overheard the boy and an expression of intense surprise overspread his face.

"What's that?" the clerk said, knowing there must have been some mistake.

"He wanted to know what the name was," the boy said, "and I told him it was either McGuire or McGinnis, and he said it didn't make any difference anyway, as he was too busy to see him."

At this the governor smiled and the clerk called another boy. In a few minutes the boy came down and said the governor was to be shown to Senator Platt's rooms, and the danger of a political cataclysm was averted.

PULLED IN CHICAGO

Duluth Man Suspected of Having Designs on Roosevelt.

Police Thought Black Satchel He Carried Contained Bomb.

Suspected of being a bloodthirsty anarchist with designs on the life of "Teddy" Roosevelt, a certain Duluth surveyor, who happened to be in Chicago during the celebrations attendant on the visit of the president, had an amusing but rather annoying experience with the Chicago police.

The Duluth man was standing on one of the main streets of the Windy City watching the presidential procession pass. In his hand he carried a small, black hand satchel full of crushed rock which he was using in connection with certain business that took him to Chicago.

Beside him stood a blue coated member of Chicago's fearful and wonderful force. The black satchel caught the copper's eye. If it had been any color but black it would have escaped unnoticed, for the genuine anarchist never carries his bombs in anything but a black satchel.

The copper immediately began to see visions of his sergeant's stripes, and his name emblazoned as the saver of the nation's president.

Clapping his hand on the Duluth man's arm he sternly commanded him to "come along."

The grasp made the pieces of crushed rock rattle in the satchel, and the policeman's worst suspicions were confirmed. It was a deadly machine that was to be hurled beneath the presidential carriage and that would cause an explosion that would shake the nation to its foundations.

"What have you got in there?" asked the policeman, pointing tragically to the satchel.

The Duluthian was beginning to get a little heated at this line of conduct, and he was just preparing to tell the guardian of the peace to take a short vacation in a still more undesirable place of abode than Chicago, when he grasped the situation.

"For freedom's sake," he whispered into the copper's ear. "Hist. Hush. Gadzooks. Nickelovitch Buttinsky Romanoff."

"You'de better come along with me," said the copper, eyeing him with distrust.

"Not on your lifesky."

"Yes, you will, my bucko."

At the police station the pieces of crushed rock were carefully examined under a microscope.

"They are pieces of the rock which form the foundation of Duluth," said the one time anarchist presenting his ear, and the officers immediately released him with profuse apologies.

MEMORIAL DAY

Judge Page Morris Will Deliver Address at the Armory.

Special Memorial day services for local members of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held next Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Pilgrim Congregational church, corner of Lake avenue and Second street. Rev. Alexander Milne will deliver the sermon. The services will be attended by members of the Culver and Gorman posts in a body.

The program for Memorial day is now practically completed, although a few details of the exercises to be held at the Armory on the afternoon of May 31, such as the music, have not been decided upon as yet. There will be the usual ritual services at Forest Hill cemetery at 10 o'clock in the morning, as well as at other cemeteries located in Duluth and on the ranges. There are ninety old soldiers buried at Forest Hill, and several are interred in other burying grounds in the vicinity of the city. These latter will be visited by special details of G. A. R. men and members of affiliated orders. Each grave is marked by a granite headstone furnished by the government through the efforts of Capt. Asa Dalley.

There will be no parade in the morning. Those who visit the cemeteries will ride on any street car they may happen to select. The usual firing squads will be furnished by the national guard and the naval reserves. After the flags and flowers have been placed, and the usual ritual service gone through with, the soldiers and their assistants will return to the city and dinner will be served. Each post will dine at its own headquarters. The ladies of the Garfield Circle of the G. A. R. will serve dinner to Gorman post members, while ladies of the Women's Relief corps will prepare the meal for the Culver post members.

Memorial day exercises will be held at the Armory at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. At 2 o'clock the old soldiers, the sons of veterans and the two militia companies, with the naval serves, will form in line at the corner of First street and Fifth avenue west, in front of the Federal building, and from there will march to the Armory, probably going down Fourth or Fifth avenues west to Superior street and thence east.

These exercises are to be in charge of the Gorman post, of which Capt. J. R. Randall is commander. S. W. Clark of the Culver post has been appointed marshal of the day. The address of the day will be delivered at the Armory by Judge Page Morris, and in addition to this there will be an appropriate program of music, with possibly other numbers. The fife and drum corps will furnish music for both the church and the Armory services.

The schools of the city will observe the day next Saturday afternoon. The teachers are displaying a good deal of interest in the matter and it is believed that the school exercises will be even more than usually successful.

WATER IN DISPUTE

Canada Ready to Negotiate In Differences With America.

Declines to Confine Dealings to Milk River Case.

Ottawa, Can., May 22.—The dispatches from Washington do not correctly represent Canada's position in the dispute with the United States over the taking of water from Milk river for irrigation purposes. The Dominion government has not refused to negotiate in the matter, but what it says is that the condition of the other waters on the international boundary should be considered, and not simply the Milk river question.

There are a half-dozen or more points along the boundary line where citizens of the United States are alleged to be improperly diverting waters, and when the Canadian government consented to appoint representatives to an international commission on water ways the idea was that all these questions should be taken up and dealt with on their merits, but the Washington authorities held that the scope of the commission was limited to the waters of the St. Lawrence. There the matter stands.

Canada has few divorce cases, and those seeking separation from the matrimonial bonds by appealing to the Dominion parliament, as is necessary, do not, as a rule, furnish much to excite public interest or sympathy. The Pitblado divorce case, however, which has just been heard by the judicial committee of the senate, and in which the Canadian husband seeks to divorce his young American wife, broke the usual monotony. Owing to the social position of the parties by the prosecution, much interest has been evinced here.

The application for divorce was made by Isaac Pitblado, a lawyer of Winnipeg, Man., from his wife, who came from Portland, Ore. The couple were married a few years ago and have two children. Mrs. Pitblado is a young and beautiful woman of distinguished presence, and the dramatic ending of the trial evoked many expressions of sympathy for her in the senate lobbies. There were two charges of unfaithfulness brought against her, and in one case the co-respondent admitted the charge, but subsequently withdrew his statement. Mrs. Pitblado, who had throughout vehemently protested her innocence, at the final session of the trial committee fell into a swoom when it became evident that the committee report to parliament would be in favor of the petition for divorce.

Since 1867 there have only been 337 divorces granted in the whole of the Dominion.

It would seem to be the intention of the Canadian authorities to pursue a policy of slowly and systematically adding to the military defenses of the country. With this end in view it is now said extensive fortifications at the City of Quebec and along the St. Lawrence are planned and will soon be in course of canstruction.

When Inspector of Artillery Colonel Stone came from England about three years ago to make a tour of inspection with the defense committee of Canada he made an exhaustive report to the imperial government in which, among other matters, he recommended the construction of fortifications along the south shore of the St. Lawrence to bar the way against war ships approaching Quebec. Since that time the imperial and Dominion governments have been working in the matter and it is said that recently an arrangement has been arrived at, of which the strengthbuilding of new forts and equipping them with long-distance firing guns is presumed to be part of the general scheme. The most important work will be the erection of two forts at Beaumont, nine miles east of Quebec, on the south shore.

WITH GUN AND KNIFE

Accused of attempting to assault Capt. Lovdahl of the Duluth-Superior ferry with a knife and a revolver, August Kolsibakka, a Finn, was arrested shortly after noon today and locked up on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

The man was too much intoxicated to be dangerous, but he is claimed to have drawn the knife and the gun, and to have threatened the life of the captain.

He will be arraigned in the municipal court tomorrow morning, or as soon as he becomes sufficiently sober to plead to the charge against him.

VOTES TO UNITE

General Assembly of Presbyterians to Join With Cumberland.

Condition of Negroes, Principal Subject of Monday's Meeting.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 22.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church has voted to unite with the Cumberland Presbyterians.

The general assembly voted to select a special committee to arrange for a celebration during May next year of the 200th anniversary of the formation of the first Presbytery in Philadelphia. It is understood it will be held in Philadelphia. The proposition to allow separate presbyteries in the boundaries of old presbyteries was adopted with but one dissenting voice. This is to allow separate presbyteries for negroes and foreigners. The board of missions for freedmen submitted its report through Dr. E. J. Inglis of Newark, N. J.

Speaking to the report of the freedmen Dr. R. D. Breed of Philadelphia said the peril before the negro is that he will not rise to his racial rights, but will be content to be an appendage to the white race. It is possible, he said, for the negro to rise in attainment until the race will be the peer of the white.

The Rev. Alexander, colored, of Brooklyn, spoke on the alleged criminal tendency of the negro. He said when disturbances arise in the South, the negroes who have no local attachments to a community begin to move. It is largely this class which goes into the North. Much of the criminality among negroes, he said, is due to taking them into police courts and prisons for trivial offenses. The negro race is growing in its power to deliberate. He said the negroes are against such presbyteries.

Justice John M. Harlan said it is the glib talk about growing criminality among negroes which comes from people who want to keep up race prejudice. In proportion to numbers, he said, there are no more negro criminals than white. "Let us find now here in the reports or deliberations of the general assembly anything of the criminality of the negro," he said. The resolutions of the committee were adopted with no reference to the negro criminality.

TALK OF PEACE AGAIN HEARD

Leading Labor Men Call Upon Employers' Attorney Mayer.

Chicago, May 22.—Following a spread of the teamsters' strike today to the lumber drivers, an attempt to resume peace negotiations formed the chief developments today in the long-drawn-out labor trouble.

President Shea and A. J. Reed, secretary of the teamsters' council, met Levi Mayer, the employers' legal representative, and sought to revive the peace negotiations that were given a setback by the action of the teamsters' joint council Saturday night. It was stated that they were attempting to find something on which another proposition for the adjustment of the trouble could be based. Robert Thorne of Montgomery, Ward & Co., joined the conference, and it was said that representatives of the seven express companies were expected to enter it later.

In the presence of the strikers representatives, Attorney Mayer this afternoon said that this conference with Messrs. Shea and Reed had resulted in a decision that a new committee of five members of the teamsters joint council, be increased to seven by the addition of Shea and Reed would meet Mr. Mayer at the Auditorium Annex tonight. Attorney Mayer said he would not discuss whether any new proposition had been considered. Mr. Reed said: "I think the prospect for peace is very good."

"Arrest every man, white or black, who is found carrying a concealed weapon," was the order given today to all members of the police force. A systematic search was immediately commenced for negroes and white men armed with revolvers or other weapons. One of the first arrests was that of Matthew White, colored, who is said to be a strike breaker. He was fined $150, the maximum permitted by law. The magistrate announced an intention to inflinct the maximum fine on every offender arrested.

CHINESE TRADE

With the United States In 1904 Largest on Record.

General Commercial Conditions In China During Past Year.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The foreign trade of China during the calendar year 1904 aggregated 583,000,000 haikwan taels, as against 541,000,000 for the year 1903, according to the annual publication of the Chinese customs authorities, just received by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics.

China's commerce with the United States during the past year was the largest on record, being 56,250,000 haikwan taels, as compared with 55,000,000 in 1902, the previous high record of trade with the United States.

The principal countries participating in the commerce of China are Hongkong, 228,000,000 (this sum representing largely merchandise originating in Great Britain, Europe, America, Japan, Australia, India, the Straits Settlements, and certain coast ports of China, or shipments out of Hongkong to those countries); Japan and Formosa, 88,000,000; Great Britain, 72,500,000; other Europe, except Russia, 65,000,000; the United States, 56,250,000; India, 34,666,000; and Russia, about 9,500,000.

Commenting upon general commercial conditions in China during the past year, H. B. Morse, statistical secretary of the inspectorate general of Chinese customs, in the report above referred to, writes as follows:

"The war appears to have been of minor importance among the conditions affecting the trade of China during the year. A large area of production and consumption was cut off, and trade was hampered to some extent by the precaution taken by the Chinese authorities in restraint of those who would have made of the Chinese ports bases of supply for one or other of the belligerents; otherwise, and at a distance from the seat of war, the direct effect was not clearly perceptible. Indirectly, of course, some effect was produced. The monetary stringency, existing since 1900, and well marked at the end of 1903, became more pronounced as the war went on, and must be held accountable for some, at least, of the stagnation prevalent during 1904; it is probable that it was a potent agency in restricting the import of Chinese procedure, and thereby increasing the so-called 'adverse balance of trade.'

"Among imports we find that textiles, a third of the whole, alone show no expansion, a fact due directly to the inflated cost of the raw material. These various causes have had their influence in producing the depression which characterized certainly the first nine months of the year, but among all other causes the fluctuations in exchange must not be lost sight of.

"The total value of net imports was 344,060,608 haikwan taels, an increase of 5 per cent. Up to a few years ago the recorded values were based on market price, but for 1904 the value of each article of trade is the value at moment of landing (the cost including freight).

"Cotton manufactures were imported in smaller quantities than in 1903. Plain fabrics (shirtings, sheetings, T cloths, drills and jeans) declined from 19,015,360 pieces in 1902 to 13,835,506 pieces in 1903 and 12,949,964 pieces in 1904. The price of cotton on the Western markets, rising early in 1903 and keeping a high level during that year, was maintained well on into 1904, and was reduced to a reasonable rate in time to give full work to the mills, but not in time to bring the woven product to the consuming market.

"Of the plain fabrics named above, American mills supplied 4,782,141 pieces in 1903 and 3,703,548 pieces in 1904, a reduction explainable partly by the necessity of first supplying the American market, partly by the distance from this overflow market, and partly because the American mills are most affected by any reduction in demand from Manchuria; the English mills supplied 7,841,665 pieces in 1903 and 8,169,620 in 1904; the Japanese mills supplied 730,723 pieces in 1903 and 607,312 pieces in 1904, a reduction attributable to the effects of the war and the resulting high cost of credits. Since the resumption of business after the fall in the price of cotton it is reported that orders have already been placed for nearly all requirements a year or more ahead. Fancy makes of cotton goods, articles of luxury, the demand for which increases in times of prosperous trade and in the price of which the raw material counts for a smaller proportion, increased in value from 19,320,246 haikwan taels in 1903 to 24,162,202 haikwan taels in 1904. Chintzes, prints and Turkey reds were markedly less in quantity and value, but there was a considerable development in cotton imitations of superior fabrics, such as Italians, lastings, Spanish stripes, flannels, etc. Cotton yarn fell from 2,738,448 piculs (one picul equals 133 1-3 pounds) in 1903 to 2,280,878 piculs in 1904, the proportion to the total value of all cotton manufactures of this semi-finished product having fallen from 52 per cent in 1903 to 48 per cent in 1904.

"Yarn reached record prices during the year, and the best makes of the Japanese mills realized 10 per cent higher prices than Indian spinnings; Indian yarn was 252,128 piculs less, and Japanese 192,677 piculs less, than in 1903. Taking the average of the three years, 1902, 1903 and 1904, we have a consumption of 2,489,099 piculs; the output of the mills in China is estimated at 750,000 piculs, of which about two-thirds come from those at Shanghai; and this gives a total of about 2,240,000 piculs of machine-spun cotton yarn consumed by the people of China.

"Flour comes to us, for the most part, from Hongkong, but in bags with the imprint of American flouring mills; the quantity increased from 766,324 to 937,946 piculs.

"Kerosene oil continues its onward march, the total import having risen from 84,998,335 galons in 1903 to the enormous figure of 156,891,235 gallons in 1904. To the total import of the two years, 1903 and 1904, American oil contributed 37 and 43 per cent, Russian 16 and 21 per cent, and Sumatra 47 and 35 per cent, respectively. Borneo oil, under that name, is much reduced, and California oil has made its first appearance."

The total values of exports in 1904 was 239,486,683 haikwan taels, an increase of about 12 per cent over 1903. The figures of 1904 represent, however, the value "free on board," whereas those of 1903 were based on the market price and did not include charges for packing or shipping or duty, all of which are necessary ingredients in the value. The imports from the United States in 1904 were valued at 29, 180, 946 haikwan taels, as against 25,871,278 haikwan taels in 1903, and 16,724,493 haikwan taels in 1900.

The following tables shows the total ret imports into China and the imports from the United States in each year from 1900 to 1904, as reported by Mr. Morse in the official publication above referred to:

Year.	Total net Imports from imports into China. Haikwan taels.	the United States. Haikwan taels.
1900.....	211,070,422	16,724,493
1901.....	268,302,918	23,529,606
1902.....	315,363,905	30,138,713
1903.....	326,739,133	25,871,278
1904.....	344,060,608	29,180,946

Note.—The value of the haikwan tael, as computed by the director of the mint on Jan. 1 of each year, has been as follows: 1900, 70.3 cents; 1901, 77.1 cents; 1902, 68 cents; 1903, 59.4 cents; 190. 69.8 cents.

SEA OF BEER GIFT FOR FAVOR

Pittsburg, May 22.—Constable John Bertges almost wept as he pondered on the briefness of man's allotted span of life. The near-tears were no laughing matter, for John has only a score or more of years in which to dispose of a rare gift—one million glasses of beer.

Constable Bertges is connected with the office of Alderman Stark. Recently he performed a favor for Anton Lutz, the millionaire brewer. Saturday Mr. Lutz met the constable on the street and became effusive in his thanks for the service, asking what the payment would be. Bertges waved the proposition aside.

"But I must pay you," said Lutz. "It was a great favor. It was worth—it was worth"—and the brewer paused to consider what might be the most precious thing in the world. "Why," he said, "it is worth more than 1,000,000 glasses of beer to me."

"All right," said Bertges, "I'll stand for the million glasses."

Lutz seized him by the arm, marched him to the office of the brewery and drew up a contract whereby he bound himself to deliver, on retail plan, 1,000,000 glasses of beer to Constable Bertges.

Bertges stuck the contract in his pocket and started out to test it. He galloped for the nearest saloon where the Lutz brand of beer was sold.

"One beer," said the constable, with a flourish. The glass was emptied, and when the bartender began to mop the bar suggestively with a damp towel, Bertges threw down the contract. The bartender scanned it carefully.

"I don't understand the dope on it," he said, "but that's Lutz mitt, all right," and he rang up "No Sale" on the cash register.

"Pretty soft, pretty soft," murmured Bertges, and he started the rounds. At midnight he was seen back in the first saloon. He had grown visibly in circumference, his feet somewhat interfered and there was a settled air of melancholy about him.

This sadness, Bertges talk disclosed, was due to his realization of the full extent of his embarrassment of riches. A bookkeeper friend had told him, he said, that if he drank fourteen glasses a day he would be more than 200 years old before he had consumed the last of his amber treasure.

At this juncture some one whispered that he might call on his friends for aid in the distressing dilemma.

AN UNFAIR TAX.

The Herald must confess its inability to follow the logic of City Assessor Jackson, who says that he will assess all real estate mortgages owned in this city at one-third their value, because the law requires that they be taxed and he cannot evade the law.

The law does say they shall be taxed, and to fail to tax them is an evasion of the law. But when it comes to a strict compliance with the tax law, if Mr. Jackson is going to start out upon a career of that sort he has entered upon a way that is full of trouble.

For instance, it is just as much the law that all property shall be assessed at its full value. Is it not, therefore, just as much an evasion to assess mortgages at one-third their value as it is to abstain from assessing them at all?

It seems, therefore, that Mr. Jackson has no alternative but to disobey the law in some particular. In the opinion of The Herald, he should therefore do what his inclination tells him to do, and pass over the mortgages altogether. There are several strong reasons for this opinion.

In the first place, as Mr. Jackson says, taxation of mortgages is double taxation, because the owner of the land has already paid his taxes, and when a further tax is paid upon the mortgage it becomes a double tax on the same piece of land, only the mortgagee pays it.

In the second place, he does not really pay it. Everybody realizes that if a policy of taxing mortgages were pursued, interest charges would be increased proportionately, so that the borrower would in the end pay the tax. As he has already paid his tax on the land, he has to pay the second tax, too.

In the third place, Mr. Jackson's plan would be a discrimination against local holders of mortgages and in favor of non-residence mortgage-owners. He has a list of St. Louis county people that own mortgages. He has no list of the many owners of mortgages on property in the county that live outside its boundaries. He is going to tax the mortgage-owner who is unfortunate enough to live in Duluth, while the fellow that lives outside is to escape.

In the fourth place, an ad valorem tax upon mortgages is a preposterously unfair thing anyway, and shouldn't be attempted. The proper tax is a tax upon the income from mortgages, but that is impossible under the present state constitution.

It is not often that The Herald will be found counciling an officer to disobey the law, but it is compelled to take that attitude in this case, in the interests of fair play. Mr. Jackson should not attempt to make the law less unfair by tampering with it, but he can safely do as his predecessors have done, and close his eyes to the existence of mortgages until the day comes when they can be properly and fairly taxd.

HELLO, CLOQUET!

The Northern Pacific railroad is entitled to the thanks of Duluth for its recent action in opening a through train service between Duluth and Cloquet, and The Herald takes pleasure in doing the honors.

The development of communication facilities between Duluth and its neighbor cities is one of the most important services that can be rendered the city, not to speak of the benefit there may be in the service to the neighbors themselves. Freer facilities for doing business mean that more business will be done, and that both Duluth and the neighbor cities will profit.

Cloquet is a busy, active, thriving community, located near Duluth, but placed nearer still by the new train service. The town is crowded full of industries that employ large numbers of men, and it is a conspicuous example of a live town founded upon the certain foundation of large pay-rolls, the best foundation in the world for a city. A free, neighborly communication between Cloquet and Duluth is valuable to both, and the Northern Pacific has done both a service in starting the new trains.

YANKEE DOODLE.

While the tune of "Yankee Doodle" is neither grave, dignified nor classic, its association with the days of our first struggle for freedom has endeared it to the patriotic, and though it may possibly be going out of fashion to some extent in the competition with rag time, it still strikes a responsive chord in the hearts of Americans. They will not be inclined, therefore, to take pleasure in the statement of a Hessian that the tune belongs to his people.

Youthful readers of revolutionary history would probably prefer to hear of such a claim from almost any people rather than from the Hessians, whom they still look upon as a hireling race fighting for King George against liberty-loving patriots, for filthy pay. They do not remember that it was the Hessian ruler that got most of the pay, that the Hessian soldiers came because they had to come when their ruler told them to, and in spite of their unpleasant associations with the dawn of the Republic, the Hessian are a very decent, industrious and pleasant people.

A patriotic Hessian, Johann Lewalter by name, says in the publication Hessenland that "Yankee Doodle" was originally a country dance in a district of the former province of Kur-Hesse known as the Schwalm. Last year, at a kirmess in one of the villages, when "Yankee Doodle" was played the young folks swung out into one of the real Schwalmer dances as though the music had been composed for it. Mr. Lewalter claims that the chief recruiting office for the enlistment of Hessian soldiers during the American revolution was in Kur-Hesse, and that the soldiers from that place carried the tune over to America.

Very likely this enterprising Hessian is mistaken, because the American patriots would hardly have taken inspiration from the Hessian bands, but his speculations are ingenious and harmless.

A GOOD PLAN.

The Duluth Commercial club and its public affairs committee are entitled to the thanks and hearty support of the people of this vicinity for their latest move toward making Duluth and its constituent empire busier and better.

The public affairs committee of the club has authorized Secretary Eva to take preliminary steps toward getting all who may be interested together to start an energetic campaign to advertise the agricultural advantages of St. Louis, Lake, Cook, Carlton and other nearby counties that may wish to participate. The club will concern itself principally with the formation of the organization, which should be able to keep itself going once it is started.

Ultimately, when the organization starts out in business for itself, it will probably send out an advertising car through older farming districts, to show the farmers of those places what chances there are in Northern Minnesota. The car will be filled with agricultural exhibits and advertising matter, and it will be accompanied by a competent attendant who can do what talking the exhibits cannot do for themselves.

This is but one of the many ways in which such an organization can make itself useful. It is an excellent plan, and it is entitled to the heartiest support of everybody concerned.

WRITE TO THE PAPER.

A good many people seem to think they need to apologize when they write to the paper about something that interests them or that they think will interest the paper or the public. They never made a greater mistake in their lives. The Herald is always glad to hear from its patrons, and always glad to give them reasonable space when they have something to offer in which the public will be interested.

For instance, Saturday The Herald published a communication from a clerk who wanted to know how he was going to support three people and save money on a salary of $50 a month. Now The Herald was probably unable to give him much help in this respect, but it did the best it could with his difficult problem, and published his letter so that others might read it, and if they had any suggestions to offer that they might send them in. The Herald was glad to hear from that clerk, because he talked about something that thousands are interested in, and it will be glad to hear from anybody that has as interesting problems to present or theories to propound.

Again, The Herald is constantly endeavoring to interest you in the various things it prints. It is making a direct appeal to you every day. As there are many of you, it makes many different appeals, and in some of them some of you will not be interested. In some others some of you will be, and if you are, and you have ideas on the subject, it is a good thing to let them be known. In other words, The Herald is writing you letters every day, and it is only fair if you answer back once in a while. By all means, write to the editor, and the only conditions The Herald will attach are these: Be as brief as possible; write as plainly as possible—Mr. Clerk wrote his with a typewriter in a manner that shows he will soon be getting more than $50 a month; write on one side of the paper only; and be sure to accompany the communication with your real name and address, which will not be used unless you wish it.

Hotel Gossip.

"I am now on my way to the Mississippi Chippewa Indian reservation," said Major George Scott of the Leech Lake agency at the St. Louis." The purpose of my trip is to pay $8 per capita to the red men, in the shape of reimbursement. A good many years ago the government was to pay the Indians on the Chippewa reserve a certain large sum of money in gold, but the money as paid was in the form of greenbacks, and as the paper currency at the time was not equal to the gold in value the red men have long had something coming. Congress has at last made a provision for reimbursing them.

"I do not know just what significance the recent decision of the United States court, which holds that Indians who have received their allotments are citizens of the state in which they reside, and that whites may sell intoxicating liquors to them, may be, but on the face of it I would think that it is far-reaching. If there are not provisions, which there possibly may be, that confine the decision regarding the sale of liquors to Indians to that particular question, I cannot see by what right, for example, I am handling the funds derived from the sale of timber for many of the Indians in my jurisdiction.

"With the exception of the Red Lake band, all of the Indians I have anything to do with are allotted. Allotted Indians are citizens of the United States, under the decision of the United States supreme court, and if they are citizens of the state it would seem that they are no longer wards of the government and no longer subject to the Indian department.

"According to that decision it appears to me that I ought to have the consent of the allotted Indians or their power of attorney, to sell their pine and perform other business for them. The decision regarding the sale of liquor was important, but the questions that arise as a result of it are of still greater importance. There may be some saving clause, however, which prevents the decision having such sweeping import as would appear on its face.

"I should say that the Chippewas will probably receive between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 for their pine, but do not know just how the Indian account of these lands stands with the government. Some say the Indians may owe the government, while others assert that the government owes the Indians. The ceded lands will bring a large sum of money, and the Indians will be sure to receive in the aggregate a substantial amount. There were 10,000 Chippewas of the Mississippi at the last census."

"There are two things that will prevent the exportation of flour in quantities to Europe until another crop is harvested in the Northwest," said David Thomson of Glasgow, Scotland, a flour buyer, at the Spalding. "In the first place the flour being made by the millers of the Northwest and others who grind the spring wheat is deficient in gluten. In the second place the price is high. This combination will prevent the purchase of much flour for export until there is a new crop in the Northwest.

"Business will be made quite impossible by high prices for an inferior product as far as the export demand is concerned. There has been much complaint on account of the quality of the flour imported from the United States. The deficiency in gluten was due to the rust that affected the growing grain last summer."

SOME QUEER ORDERS.

"Send 500 rats."

This was the telegram received today by a well-known correspondent of Western newspapers, says the Washington Star. He was somewhat nonplussed for a few minutes until he recalled the fact that his assistant, in making out the morning schedule of the matter in hand for the day, had included a sory about ridding government buildings of rats. This newspaper, therefore, had found it convenient to take by telegraph "500 rats." But for a few moments the correspondent did not know "whether he had 'em or the other fellow."

Telling his experience to a group on "The Row" elicited other stories of like import.

"That's nothin'," said one correspondent. "The other day I got a telegram from my managing editor, evidently just at the club, on a 'morning after,' saying: 'Your story does not agree with our headline. Please explain.'"

"I can beat that," said another. "Along about March 1 I got a telegram from my paper saying, 'Get interviews and make special story on when congress will adjourn.' Well, feeling a little spiteful that evening, I replied:

"'Unless congress violates the constitution it will adjourn at noon, March 4,' and let it go at that."

"Of course," remarked the veteran in the group, "this brings us back to the prize story of 'The Row,' namely, the New York editor who telegraphed his Washington correspondent one night, 'There is something in the air; send 2,000 words.'"

Whereupon adjournment was taken.

TIP FOR BARBERS.

Parting the hair has so long been a matter of individual taste among men that barbers rarely suggest a change, and when they do it is at the peril of being called down, says the Philadelphia Telegraph. Lately fashionable haberdashers have been instructing their customers in little matters of this kind. The correct thing is change the part at frequent intervals. This induces the vigorous use of a brush and brings out the oil. Besides, it has been observed baldness usually begins at the part, particularly when it is constantly made in the same place.

OPULENT ORGAN-GRINDER.

The grinding of hand-organs must pay pretty well in New York, says the Philadelphia Telegraph. Recently a man who had been twisting the handle of a wheezer for twenty-five years, bought a tenement house in Mulberry Bend for $80,000. He was an Italian and had lived in Baxter street all that time. He goes out with the organ no more, devoting himself to the more congenial task of collecting rents. Most of the hand-organ grinders in New York live in Baxter street, and they are largely Genoese, particularly the women. There are generally two persons to each organ, occasionally one or three. Every organ, big or little, costs $2 a day to rent. The smallest organs, those carried on the back, cost not less than $200; the larger ones, which are far more numerous, cost more in proportion. Therefore one may set it down that every organ he sees is earning $2 a day, or the interest on an invested capital of $200, sometimes $400 or $500.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

LeSueur News: Your notice that you still have the passes in use on the railroads by your sheriffs, your judges, your legislators and many who receive a salary from a direct tax of the people, but you pay to ride. You notice that you did not get the benefit of reciprocal demurrage. You notice that you got little. Just remember this when the next election comes and use your ballots as a club to kill those who forgot your interest. Don't mind their politics at all. Just hit it.

St. James Gazette: The Republican office holders who bolted the Republican nominee and elected a Democrat because they could not name the candidate, are now howling for harmony. When those pap suckers ask for harmony they mean offices, and if they get the offices they will be Republicans, otherwise you can count upon them bolting. There are many good Republicans who doubt the wisdom of again turning the party in this state over to the former office holder's trust.

Princeton Union: Hoop skirts and whiskers. Lord, what a combination! The edict has gone forth that they must both become stylish again.

Eveleth Star: Dirty back yards and unswept sidewalks never advertised a town or induced the locating of a worthy citizen.

Pillage Leader: We note that many of our exchanges contain letters from people who have left Minnesota for, as they thought, a better country, but all wish they were back home, as many put it. They all conclude that Minnesota is a pretty good country after all.

Virginia Enterprise: Good roads to the rich agricultural sections to the north are not only demanded by the citizens of Virginia, but are deserved by the hundreds of honest settlers who are engaged in making the wilderness a wealth-producing area.

Paynesville Press: Adam could not have become a millionaire, yet he had a finer collection of wild animals than had Barnum.

Crookston Journal: One of the exchanges from Rome tmblushingly says that the stork will soon pay a visit to the king and queen of Italy. If the Journal should show this same degree of enterprise in recording the local news we'd soon be in trouble all over town.

MY OLD CLOTHES.

I used to have a suit of clothes
All rags and paint and dirt;
What luxury it was to wear
A suit I couldn't hurt!
Secure within that wreck of cloth
I grovelled on the ground;
In garret, stable, garden, yard,
Primeval bliss I found.
It waxed familiar with the woods,
The thickets, marshes, brooks.

It carried rents and burrs and mud
From all the forest nooks,
I got down close to Mother Earth,
My spirit seemed to root
And spread its filaments and grow
Within that mouldy suit.
But ah, my wife, in vandal mood,
One hapless fit of cleaning day,
In valiant fit of tidiness,
Gave my old suit away!

And now I weed the garden walks
At length of formal hoe,
And keep within the proper paths
When to the woods I go.
I've lost the sense of sweet, warm dirt,
The kinship with the ground;
I must be careful of my clothes
Whene'er I tinker 'round.

I do not own a single suit
But claims my constant care;
No shred of blessed cloth that I
Obliviously wear.
Before my oldest suit is fit
For either work or fun,
A solemn year—at least a year—
Must circumspectly run.

O, woman, woman! prim and neat,
The flower of human kind,
I'd not abate your daintiness
And purity of mind;
But, oh, with heavenly perfectness,
Your graces will be girt
If you will let a happy man
Just wallow in the dirt.
—Puck.

Knew Where Safety Lay.

New York Times: On a recent visit to Alexandria, Va., the late Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was approached by an old darky who respectfully introduced himself as a Confederate veteran. To test the accuracy of the old fellow's statement, Gen. Lee put to him several searching questions, all of which the negro answered promptly and truthfully. Then the general asked his new friend where he had seen the best time, in the old days.

"At Chickamauga, sah," glibly replied the darky. "'cause I run jest as soon as de firin' begin."

"But in such a hot battle as Chickamagua," asked the general, "how did you know which way to run?"

"Oh, gin'ral," answered the old man, "dat's easy to tell. I runs to de safest place, o' co'se; de place where de gin'rals was."

Delighted.

"Delighted," says the blossom as it gazes
on the sun;
Which brings the kind assurance that the chilly days are done;
"Delighted," says the fish that's gaily
leaping in the stream;
"Delighted," says the butterfly, with iridescent gleam.
There's a gentle optimism that has crept into the time,
In the city's busy street and where the honeysuckles climb,
With welcoming approval you will hear its hearty chime—
"Dee-lighted!"

Despite the various cares that keep men sitting on the lid,
Despite the enemies to public welfare who lie hid,
We're building schools and colleges, and,
what is better yet,
We're rearing boys well worthy of the knowledge they will get.
The nation's in its May day, and its future's fair and free,
And its faults are slight when measured
'gainst the benefits we see,
And Uncle Sam is justified in feeling he should be
"Dee-lighted!"
—Washington Star.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Generally you can tell when a girl's hair is red by the way her family calls it golden.

Suburban life is an awful good training for the next world in case you go to the wrong place.

Either people think you get on because you have brains or because you get on you have brains.

When a man gets old enough to think he doesn't know it all he has a son young enough to think he does.

When a man has paid all his family bills and has a dollar and a quarter left over he feels as if he had inherited a gold mine.

Schillerisms.

God helps the brave.
The heart's impulse is the voice of fate.
The lamp of genius burns quicker than the lamp of life.
That nation is worthless which does not joyfully stake everything on her honor.
The game of life looks cheerful when one carries a treasure safe in his heart.
Misery travels free through the whole world.
Satisfy a few; to please many is bad.
Wine tells nothing, it only tattles.

Deserved It, Anyway.

New York Tribune: The following letter asking for an increase of salary was received by a firm in Shanghai from two Chinese clerks in its employment:

"Dear Sirs: Being respectfully to ask you the pardon for allow us to request you the favor however we understand that you are an intelligent and patronaged us this so long while. Therefore we venture dare not to solicit your assistance for increase a little of our salaries that we can enough to support this family. Recently at Shanghai the house rent and provisions, etc., are double dear between since for few years which compel us to ask you for the favor. Hoping you will kindly enough to grant us this requesting and keep attention for us of this affair."

Denver Times: "The Americans are great sportsmen," said Sir Thomas Dewar, in recounting his impressions of America. "From their earliest years they take a consuming interest in all sorts of contests and races.

"I remember, one cold afternoon in New York, seeing a poor little ragged lad with his nose glued against the window of a toy shop. I stopped beside him and looked down. But he paid no heed to me. His clear young eyes were intent on the window's bright and inviting contents.

"Without a word I slipped a penny into his cold little hand. He looked at the penny, and then he looked at me.

"'Well, if this ain't luck,' he said. I've been wishin' for a cent, and here's one dropped right in me fist.'

"'What did you want the cent for, my lad?' said I.

"The urchin answered:

"'I wanted to get a night extry to see wot's won. I've got a dollar on Swallow in the third race.'"

Lowest Temperature with Bohn Refrigerators.

The Syphon principle of ventilation of Bohn Refrigerators uses all the cold air with constant circulation, and makes temperature 38 to 42 degrees, nearly ten degrees lower than the average refrigerator.

This, of course, keeps butter, eggs, milk, fruit and the like, much longer than other refrigerators can. These fine results are secured while ice is being saved.

The Pullman Company and all the great railroads use the Bohn system, because it proved superior to all others in every official test.

Call and see these beautiful refrigerators, and remember we sell them exclusively.

B'NAE B'RITH CONVENTION

Thirty-Seventh Annual Meeting of District Grand Lodge Opens.

Milwaukee, May 22.—The thirty-seventh annual convention of the district grand lodge, No. 6, Independent Order of B'Nae B'Rith embracing eight states opened a two days' session at the Plankinton house in Milwaukee yesterday. Officers were elected as follows: President, Isaac Goldberg, Kalamazoo, Mich.; first vice president, Julius H. Meyer, Milwaukee; second vice president, Gustav M. Greenbaum, Danville, Ill.; secretary A. B. Soelenfreund, Chicago; treasurer, David Fisch, Chicago; sergeant-at-arms, Henry Swimmer, Quincy, Ill.; general committee: Philip Stein, Chicago; Abram Hirschberg, Chicago; Arnold Wolff, Chicago; Henry Greenbaum, Chicago. Court of appeals, Jonas Wiel, Minneapolis; W. L. Sugarman, Omaha; Simon Bloom, Omaha; William S. Newberger, Chicago; Leo Hammel, Milwaukee. Endowment trustees, M. M. Mirsch, Chicago, chairman; H. Swimmer, Quincy, Ill.; S. Folz, Kalamazoo, Mich.

President Adolf Kraus, in his annual message reported a gain in membership during the year of 670, making the total membership on April 1, last of 2,957. Among the recommendations advocated by President Kraus were for the consolidation of lodges in large cities, instead of increasing the number; the discontinuance of endowment memberships; and protection against the persecution of immigrants in large cities. He closed with an appeal to the members "to go forward full of hope and vigor, all aviating, uplifting, and preparing our people for an honored place in the membership of the great human family."

Cincinnati, O., May 22.—The fifty-third grand lodge convention of the second district of B'Nai B'Rith, opened yesterday. Grand Master Bloch read his annual message, the chief feature of which was the recommendation that inasmuch as the orphan asylum supported by the order at Cleveland, was overcrowded and stipends were being given to worthy persons who are unable to obtain admission, a new asylum be instituted at Kansas City.

WILLIAMS IS CAUSTIC.

Democratic Leader Comments on Canal Order.

New York, May 22.—John Sharp Williams, leader of the Democratic side of the house of representatives, has written a letter to the Herald in which he says: "It is not at all unnatural that the federal cabinet or the secretary of war should object to being robbed by the great trusts of the country, operating under the shelter of the tariff, and selling at one price—a reasonable one—to foreigners, and at another price—an extortionate one—to home consumers, including the government of the United States—their great benefacotr—which has freely conferred upon them the privilege of robbing.

"The only thing curious to my mind is that these men who can see so clearly the iniquity when it comes to bear as hardship upon the government itself, cannot see it and will not remedy it when bearing hardship upon the people, many of whom are so much poorer and less able to withstand extortion than the government is.

"A startling public object lesson of the iniquity and wrong was needed. The attempt upon the part of the tariff bred and tariff fed trusts to perpetuate the old, old wrong upon a new customer, to-wit, the government itself, has furnished this object lesson, and even a Republican cabinet is seen to revolt.

TERRIFIC RACE WITH DEATH.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

BIG ROBBERY FRUSTRATED.

San Francisco, Mayy 22.—A daring attempt to rob the stamp safe at the postoffice yesterday was frustrated by Watchman O'Connell, who spied one of the burglars in the act of drilling the safe. The burglars took alarm and escaped with only $1,400 worth of stamps found outside the safe. The safe contained $14,000 in stamps and much money, while in the cashier's room adjoining the stamp department was a large safe which contained half a million dollars.

FROM DARKEST TURKEY.

Geo. Azoo Speaks of Religious Conditions There.

George Azoo, a native Chaldean, preached yesterday morning at Bethany Lutheran church at Twenty-third avenue west and Third street, and last evening at the First Swedish Evangelical church. He is a student at the Augustana college at Rock Island, Ill., preparing himself for missionary work among his brethren in Turkey.

Mr. Azoo first heard the Christian religion taught in Persia, where his father took him when quite young. This aroused the desire to teach his fellows among the Turks and he therefore came to America to receive more light in the new religion that he might the better prepared to communicate it to others. His discourses yesterday on the darkness of the place of his birth were interesting and instructive.

He says that the women over there are treated much the same as cattle. They are regarded as having no souls and cannot even speak the name of Allah. Nothing is thought of taking a woman's life and the birth of a female child is regarded with shame while the birth of a man-child is the signal for rejoicing.

CONFIRMATION AT ST. LUKES

Bishop's Official Visit to West End Church.

Last evening, Bishop Morrison of the Duluth diocese made his official visit to St. Luke's church at Nineteenth avenue west and First street, and confirmed nine applicants for membership. The church was crowded to the doors and the bishop's sermon as well as the confirmation ceremonies were listened to with close attention. During the evening Miss Allie Piper sang the offertory and the choir under Prof. A. H. Deeks' direction, gave a very pretty program.

The text of the Bishop's sermon was on Christ's promise to his disciples on leaving them, to send them the comforter, the Holk Ghost, in his stead. In his sermon the bishop spoke of the sacredness of the vow of confirmation and reminded the applicants that they should endeavor to obtain the grace of heaven and righteous living which they will need in order to observe their vows.

Cracks His Knee Cap.

Clell D. Hibbard, clerk in the local office of the United States engineer, Maj. Charles L. Mr. Hibbard was attempting to get out of the way of an automobile and some teams when the wheel of his bicycle struck the rail of the street car tracks and he was thrown to the pavement with such force as to crack the knee-cap of his left leg. The accident is likely to confine him to the house for several weeks.

IN LOOMIS' FAVOR

Is Decision of President In Loomis-Bowen Controversy.

Assistant Secretary of State to Get Diplomatic Post.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is a well-authenticated report in Washington to the effect that the president has already decided the controversy between Assistant Secretary Frank B. Loomis of the department of state and Herbert W. Bowen, late United States minister to Venezuela. The verdict of the highest court to which such a case can possibly be referred is in favor of the assistant secretary. Possibly Minister Bowen did nothing more than report rumors which he had heard, but it appears that Mr. Bowen was indiscreet enough to impart the substance of the rumors which he had gathered to a newspaper correspondent. Indiscretion in a diplomat is practically high treason and Mr. Bowen has virtually severed his diplomatic relations with the United States by his action. Mr. Loomis, on the other hand, has the entire support not only of Secretary Taft, but of the president as wel .

There will be several changes of the utmost importance in connection with the state department within a brief period. Mr. Loomis will, in all probtion to accept the very important post to accept the very important post of ambassador to Mexico, and in his place will come Mr. Giscom, at present United States minister to Japan. This change would be made at once were it not for the fact that the administration is preparing to use its good offices towards a settlement of the Russo-Japanese war. Mr. Griscom is thoroughly posted as to the situation of affairs in Japan and is in entire harmony with the mikado's government. Under the circumstances the president thinks it would be unwise to recall Mr. Griscom from Tokio at the present time. Should the coming naval contest between Togo and Rojestvensky result in bringing about early negotiations for peace, Mr. Griscom will prove an invaluable aid to the president in his role as arbitrator. But just as soon as the dove of peace settles down upon the nations of the Far East, the present minister to Japan will be transferred to the state department and Mr. Loomis, who has steadily risen in the diplomatic service from a minor consulate to an assistant secretaryship, will be elevated one more notch and will be made an ambassador, which is recognized as the highest grade to which a diplomat can rise.

The committee on interstate and foreign commerce of the senate shows more industry thany any other similar body which ever sat for hearings during a recess of congress. Senator Elkins and some of his colleagues are in their seats every morning at 10 o'clock and they seldom leave before 6. They are evidently determined to obtain all possible information upon the subject of railroad rate regulations an dthe use of private cars. But there is one decided gap in the testimony at the present time. Presidents of railroads, officials of the car lines and heavy shippers have been called upon to give their testimony and their ideas, but so far nothing has been heard from the growers of fruits and vegetables, who are said to be greatly benefited by the introduction of refrigerator cars into the railroad situation. Many shippers, however, have declared under examination by members of the committee that the car lines have added a thousandfold to the lands in the South and West through affording safe means of transportation on the one hand and the markets on the other.

President Roosevelt has declared that his desire for a fair deal to all concerned equals his desire for a regulation of railroad rates, and following out this line the interstate commerce committee of the senate seems disposed to acquire all possible information upon the subjects in controversy and that committee will make no report until it satisfies its members at least that all sides to the controversy have been afforded " a fair deal."

The first annual meeting of the Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, has closed its sessions. This association is composed of a large number of the most eminent members of the medical profession. One of the important subjects selected for discussion was "Infection in Transportation," and to Dr. H. M. Bracken of Minneapolis was assigned the task of preparing a paper on the subject. The paper is an exhaustive treatise on the whole question. Before preparing his paper, Dr. Bracken corresponded with the health departments of all the states, and of many of the larger cities, and also with railroad surgeons and managers, from which correspondence he quoted liberally. In his opening statement, Dr. Bracken says:

"The danger of tubercular infection during travel may be intensified by the lack of proper ventilation, for when an individual is confined in close, stuffy quarters, the irritation of the respiratory tract may be sufficient to increase his susceptibility; or an already infected individual may have an inflamatory condition of the lungs, intensified by foul air or draughts, thus changing a latent to an active infection. Admitting that tubercular infection is not apt to occur during any single trip in a day coach, we must still appreciate the fact that exposure in such coaches is possible, for many people spend a considerable amount of time each day in city and suburban cars on their way to and from business. The important question then is: Are cars properly cleaned and ventilated? Some one in authority should be able to answer this question."

The doctor then quotes from a number of health officers, the following extract covering the expression of all:

"The ventilation of steam cars and of trolley cars is notoriously imperfect, and the discharge upon the floor of infected oral excrement is constantly occurring. These conditions are causative of tuberculosis and other affections of the respiratory tract. One frequently hears people say: 'I have been traveling for one or two days, shut up in a hot, unventilated car, and have lalty has observed the ill-effects upon health incident to travel. For myself, I have observed that if I pass two nights in succession in sleeping cars I caught a cold. This proves that the almost invariably have an attack of rhinitis, and several times I have had attacks of influenza.

"With 10,000 people in this state suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, the large majority of these being out of employment and traveling from one relative to another, from one friend to another, from one physician to another, in search of health, the germs of this disease are scattered broadcast. This is especially true in the transportation coaches, where crowding, lack of ventilation and light make the danger of infection greater than is ordinarily realized."

"I can imagine no better place in which to become infected with tuberculosis than in a poorly ventilated car. All cars can and should be so built as to permit of proper ventilation without freezing passengers or blinding them with dust."

The doctor concludes as follows:

"Car ventilation is a difficult problem, for the temperature and the motion of the car, as well as the creation of disagreeable draughts have to be taken into consideration. It is estimated that for good ventilation in a closed space 3,000 cubic feet are required per hour for each individual. The ordinary passenger coach and sleeping car furnishes from one-tenth to one-sixth as much fresh air per hour as is required according to the above estimate.

"From a sanitary point of view, the effects of foul air as a means of causing disease must be overestimated. The fact must be recognized, however, that a person in a badly ventilated car is more susceptible to tubercular infection than he would be in a well-ventilated car. The great offenders in car ventilation are the street car companies."

HAS POWER TO FIX RATES

Senate Committee Unanimous as to Authority of Congress.

Washington, May 22.—E. M. Ferguson, the Duluth commission man who made the fight against the Armour Car line company last winter, will not request to be heard again before the senate committee on interstate commerce. Mr. Ferguson said Saturday:

"I came to Washington in company with my attorney, Mr. Powell, upon invitation from the senate committee. But after reading the evidence of Mr. Robbins, of the Armour company, I am well satisfied to let the matter rest, unless the committee wants to hear further from me."

Mr. Ferguson is of the opinion that Vice President Robbins, as a representative of the private car line interests, virtually admitted practically all that has been charged against him. Senator Clapp subjected Robbins to a searching examination, and got from his the frank admission that private car lines virtually made their rates to suit themselves and enjoyed a monopoly.

Friday afternoon Senator Clapp moved that the committee go into executive session, and it is understood that the hearings will close early next week.

The railroad people admit that there will be a unanimous report by the committee that congress has the power to fix rates, but they will undertake to have the provisions of the bill made as favorable as possible to their interests. On the details of the bill reported it is quite likely that there will be at least three reports, two from the Republican members and one from the Democrats.

Senators Clapp and Dolliver have about agreed to sign a report embodying a proposition to give the interstate commerce commission full plenary power to establish and adjust rates. Of course any bill passed will be subject to judicial review and the supreme court of the United States will ultimately be invoked to pass upon the basic principles of rate legislation.

GIRL KILLS BABY.

Murdered Him and Threw Body In Sewer.

Toronto, Ont., May 22.—Josephine Carr, a 13-year-old girl, has confessed to the murder of William Murray a 9-months-old infant. It is claimed of the Carr girl that she has been in the habit of stealing baby carriages from the front of a department store while the parents were inside shopping. The police have recovered several of these carriages, which had been sold to neighbors. Last Friday the girl went to a department store and found a baby in each carriage in front of the store. So she picked out the best looking baby carriage of the lot, which contained the Murray child and made off with it. She took the child to the woods near her home at the east end of the city and stripping it of its clothing, threw it over an embankment and caused its death. Later she placed the body in a culvert. Suspicion immediately fell upon the girl, and when accused of the crime, she made a confession. The girl claimed that she got the plan of killing the child from seeing a play at a local theater.

BUYS ITS STOCK

Union Match Company Purchases 3,000,000 Feet of Idaho Pine.

Weather Not Favorable For Drying Out New Lumber.

While there has been little or no selling of lumber in this market during the past few days, one of the large Duluth corporations has been quite a large purchaser in the Western timber market .

The Union Match company of this city has recently closed a deal for the purchase of 3,000,000 feet of Western pine lumber, suitable for match manufacturing, the purchase being the entire season's cut of one of the mills in Northern Idaho.

The weather thus far this month has not been favorable for the drying out of new lumber and shipments have been confined to the forwarding of the last fall and winter cuts. Shippers claim that the amount of lumber shipped to the present date this season is almost up to the usual mark, though the movement is not yet equal to what it was to the middle of May last year. Eastern buyers who have purchased in advance lumber to be sawed this season are anxious to get their stocks and continued fair weather would be very desirable to them.

There is practically nothing new in the mill situation. Most of the plants are running at their maximum rate for the summer and a few are down for one cause or another. Among the interior mills, that of the Virginia Lumber company has been closed down for a few weeks for overhauling and repairs and a rebuilding of the brick work in the tramer. The mill has been operating continuously for about twelve months. The mills at Tower and Winton are now running heavily and turning out a large production.

Among the large lumber manufacturing concerns of this district which will increase their shipments this year is the Brooks-Scanlon company, which will forward through this port to the Eastern markets about 75,00,000 feet of lumber as against about 30,000,000 feet last season. This mill illustrates the change in policy of the interior mills and will mean decreased shipments by car to the Southwest and the South. The Brooks-Scanlon mill is expected to cut about 100,000,000 feet this year and the sending of 75 per cent of its cut through a new channel is of more than passing interest to those in the trade.

Estimates place the Eastern shipments this year from Duluth, Two Harbors and mills on deep water and interior points subordinate to this port, at about 600,000,000 feet. It is claimed that Ashland will ship something like 200,000 feet; Grand Marais, 50,000,000; Ontonagon, Bay Mills, Houghton, Baraga the Soo, and other points about 250,000,000 feet more.

It has been decided not to move the Vermilion Lumber company's plant, on the west side of the lake to a point on the east side. The company will raft its product across the lake or sell to settlers in the region north of Ashawa, on the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road.

Owing to the rains of late the ground in the woods is said to be so very much soaked that woods work is difficult and in some places has been discontinued. Alger, Smith & Co. have been shipping logs only part of the time during the past week or more and others working along the line of the Duluth & Iron Range road have stopped entirely. John McAlpine has practically finished loading at Mile 47, and William Webber has only a few loads left at Webber's siding.

Plans are now under way for summer logging.

Rumors have been current for some time past that the Edward Hines Lumber company is negotiating for the purchase of the White River Lumber company's mill at Mason Wis., the deal to include all the company's standing pine, which is estimated to be in quantity enough to keep the mill supplied for the next six years. It has also been rumored that the Hines company was about to purchase the Nebagamon Lumber company's mill at Nebagamon, Wis., while still another report says it is the Alexander-Edgar mill at Iron River that the Chicago company is after. Not one of the rumors have been confirmed and by local lumber interests it is regarded as hardly likely that any one of the deals have been consummated, though it is possible and probable that Mr. Hines has had negotiations with the corporations owning these plants.

TARKINGTON RESPONSIBLE

For the Crusade Against Cigarettes In Hoosier State.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 22.—"Do you know that it was Booth Tarkington who caused the Indiana cigarette crusade? Well, he is responsible for the prohibitory law passed by the last session of the state legislature in Indianapolis, and the funny part of it is that he is an inveterate cigarette smoker himself."

Thus spoke a former Hoosier to a companion at dinner in a local club the other night. The speaker is a close friend of Tarkington.

"I just want to remark in passing," said he, "that Jim Riley does not smoke cigarettes regularly. He has been accused of this, but he is innocent. Riley's intemperance is in pie. When he wants to catch the proper jingle for his dialect verses he just eats a big slice of apple pie, and the inspiration comes. The old time poets referred to this as the muse. But there is no muse in Indiana unless it is apple pie with a good thick Gentryville crust."

"What has that got to do with the cigarette crusade?" interrupted one of the listeners.

"I am getting down to that," said the Hoosier. One evening Riley and Tarkington were at diner. The 'Gentleman from Indiana' remarked that he always opened a fresh box of cigarettes after enjoying a good meal. Jim said he always took another piece of pie. Well, you can imagine how faithfully Tarkington prosecuted his habit. He got into politics and was elected to the legislature. He then smoked more than ever.

"It happens that the majority of the lawmakers of Indiana come from the backwoods. When the legislature meets Indianapolis looks as if it had been invaded by an army of carpetbaggers. In the city no attempt is made to hide bucolic manners and dress.

Tarkington at once became the idol of all the country members, and they unconsciously fell into his peculiar ways.

It was not long before the Indianapolitans were horrified to see a long, lank be whiskered legislator from Posey county walking down Pennsylvania street puffing an imported cigarette, which he strutted arm in arm with his literary co-member. A few days later others took up the fad. Before the end of the term there was scarcely a solon at the capital who had not acquired the habit, and they learned to handle their cigarettes like old hands. When adjournment came Tarkington chuckled and sent his fellow smokers up state while he retired to his den to write another novel. He told the joke to all his friends.

"The tables soon turned. Bill Blodgett was making a tour of the state soon afterward and he sent back word to Indianapolis that persons in the rural districts were working up sentiment against cigarette smoking. He said that the women's clubs had taken up the matter and that the churches were working toward the same end.

"The crusade had been started by the wives of the legislators. Everybody knows the result.

"When the legislators came back (a few of the old members did return) they had gone back to cigars and pipes, and all were pledged to crush out the deadly cigarette. A bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes in the state was presented to the legislature—and it passed.

"It was a hard blow to Tarkington, and that night when the bill became a law Jim Riley went to the telephone and shouted over the wire to his cigarette smoking neighbor: 'Tark, if you want to change off to pie tonight I have an extra slice in my pantry.'"

WIDOW RIVAL TO CHADWICK

Wisconsin Woman Who Tried Peculiar Methods of Finance.

Cumberland, Wis., May 22.—Mrs. Elizabeth Mohr, a widow, residing on a small farm a few miles south of Rice Lake, in this county, is rapidly attaining a reputation that bodes well to out-Chadwick the notorious Cassie L. Chadwick.

Mrs. Mohr is in the toils of the law for the third time, charged with obtaining money on imaginary collateral.

A few days ago Mrs. Mohr was arrested upon the complaint of M. Fish of Rice Lake, who charged her with obtaining a horse and buggy from him under false pretenses. She was released on bail and appeared at her preliminary hearing at Rice Lake yesterday.

She obtained a change of venue to Judge Kinsley's court at Barron and a continuance until May 26. Fish alleges in his complaint that Mrs. Mohr got the horse and buggy, valued at $200, upon the representation that she had $5,000 deposited in a Barron bank and that she owned three large farms in Barron county. Upon learning the true character of the woman, he went to her farm, replevened the horse and buggy and swore out a warrant for the clever woman's arrest.

A short time ago Mrs. Mohr went over to Wood Lake, Minn., bought a carload of registered blooded cattle, valued at $2,300, from farmers living in that vicinity. The farmers let her have the stock upon the representation that she had lots of money and would send them checks as soon as she returned home, and that she forgot her checkbook, else she would pay them upon delivery of the stock. She shipped the stock to Rice Lake and put the entire bunch upon her little farm. Failing to hear from the fair stocklady, the Wood Lake farmers became uneasy as to the proceeds of their stock.

An investigation revealed the woman's true financial condition, and the farmers came to Mrs. Mohr's Barron county farm, got their cattle and shipped them home at their own expense. While in Wood Lake Mrs. Mohr, it is claimed, borrowed $100 from the Bank of Wood Lake, promising to send sufficient collateral to cover the loan immediately upon her return home. It is reported that the bank is still waiting, not only for the collateral, but for the payment of the note, which is past due.

Her next financial venture to come to light was her successful effort in procuring a loan of another $100 from a Rice Lake bank upon representations that she had unlimited wealth and wanted the money only for a couple of days. The banker, after ascertaining that he had been duped, had Mrs. Mohr arrested, but for some unknown reason the case was dropped and the woman was released. It is authoritatively stated that other banks have been similarly duped, but made no effort to prosecute the woman, owing to the unwelcome publicity such a case would give them and their banking methods.

District Attorney J. W. Soderberg is gathering every particle of evidence he can in order to effect the woman's conviction and stop her promiscuous practice of the Cassie L. Chadwick method of finance.

Always the Same Good Old "Blatz"

FOR YOU.

Here are some facts for dyspeptics.

Are you one?

Probably; because most people are, though they ignore it.

First, please bear in mind that Dyspesia, or Indigestion, is more than ailment.

It is a disease.

It is a disease, with ramifications into the uttermost, innermost part, of your body.

It does not always begin in your stomach.

No, indeed. It may begin in your mouth.

Your saliva may be of the wrong chemical formula to begin the work of digestion, and so the whole process may go wrong from the very beginning.

Or, everything may be all right, but your liver.

Or, maybe it seems to be in your heart.

Or, you may have a deep-chested lung cough.

Ten times out of eleven, those symptoms point to the plain, everyday common or garden variety of indigestion.

This may seem hard to believe, but if so, it is only because for many years, even after the discovery of the circulation of the blood by Harvey, doctors remained in the densest ignorance concerning the workings of the processes of digestion.

So, of course, of IN-digestion, they knew less.

And of a cuer today, they have no knowledeg at all—any of the 140,000 that are "practicing" in the United States.

Except—about 40,000, who use and recommend Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Here we have a medicine which attacks the trouble with all of the most modern engines of medical warfare, which are indeed needed to conquer such a malignant, pestiferous, all-pervading disease.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets drive INdigestion OUT.

They contain ingredients which act curatively, not merely upon the stomach, but upon every vessel, organ or gland, throughout the entire body, which is in any way concerned in the great and important work of digesting your food.

In this way, they throughly purge your entire system of any possible disease-taint, and thereby restore you to a condition of perfect and natural health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are unique in the entire history of medicine.

They are a specific remedy for just one disease and this disease they positively and never-fallingly cure.

Try them.

FARMERS TO ORGANIZE

New Association Will Advertise Advantages of Northern Minnesota.

Northern Minnesota will soon have an organization of farmers and others interested in farming lands similar to the one now existing in Northern Wisconsin if plans as laid out by the public affairs committee of the Duluth Commercial club materialize. Secretary H. V. Eva has been authorized to take preliminary steps toward the forming of such an association, with a view to advertising the agricultural advantages and promoting the interests of St. Louis and other Northern Minnesota counties.

The advertising car employed by the Wisconsin organization has been a great success and a similar feature will be pressed into service by Minnesota. It will work on the same principal as the other, moving from place to place with exhibits of the grains, grasses and vegetables raised in the districts represented. There will be a man regularly employed on the car to answer questions and give all necessary information.

WESTERN FEDERATION

Of Miners Hold Convention at Salt Lake City.

Salt Lake, Utah, May 22.—The national convention of the Western Federation of Miners began its first session here at 9 o'clock this morning. President Charles H. Moyer was in the chair and W. D. Haywood at the secretary's desk. About 300 delegates are in attendance. The plan of establishing co-operative mining and smelting enterprises is one of the important matters to come before the convention. The executive board, which has been in session for several days, has completed its work of auditing the accounts of the treasurer and financial secretary, finding the federation to be in a satisfactory financial condition.

PORTLAND, OR., RAILROADS

Said to Have Been Bought By Syndicate.

Portland, Or., May 22.—A deal is said to have been practically consummated by which the Portland Consolidated Street Railroad company, operating nearly all the street car lines in Portland has been sold to a syndicate of Pennsylvania capitalists for $5,000,000. The sale, it is said, is being engineered by Frank J. Brown of San Francisco, who represents the Crocker and the D. O. Mills interests in the street car system. Mr. Brown and the party of capitalists who are said to be the purchasers, are now in this city, where they will remain for a week. The Portland Consolidated operates 120 miles of trackage in and about Portland and is capitalized at $5,000,000. It was formed last year by the merging of the two principal street railroad companies of Portland, the City and Suburban company and the Portland Railroad company. When the merger was formed it was rumored that a sale of the combined property was likely to occur with a few months.

Brainerd, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Duluth White Sox made it four straight from the St. Cloud-Brainerd team by winnig the two games played Saturday and yesterday.

Saturday's contest was a weird nightmare of baseball. Both teams were off color on their fielding, but hammered the pitchers unmercifully. Harris, the Duluth man, got his bumps in the third. Meneice, Weiler and McShane were also tried, and they were slammed with pleasing regularity.

Meanwhile the White Sox had been connecting with Gilchrist pretty regularly, but in the seventh something dropped and they fell upon his mild curves viciously, driving the ball to every corner of the lot. Eastman placed him in the box, but not until after the damage had been done, and nine runs had been chased across the plate. The score:

Yesterday's game was a much better contest. The Duluth team started after Howell in the first three innings and before they drove him out of the box had nine runs to their credit. Then Kelley, a new twirler, replaced Howell, and he had the White Sox at his mercy for the remainder of the game.

Potts pitched good ball for Duluth and was an enigma until the eighth when the home team commenced to find him. In the ninth the fans were brought to their feet with a determined batting rally which netted the home team four runs, and came within two of tying the score. The score:

EACH TAKES ONE.

Crookston Wins Saturday and Fargo on Sunday.

Fargo, N. D., May 22.—Pitcher Dorn of the Crookston team wanted revenge Saturday afternoon and got it by shutting Fargo out, while his teammates rounded up a pair of scores. In the Thursday contest Fargo fell onto Dorn most cruelly, and he resented the familiarity taken with his curves. He asked for an opportunity to get even, and held the locals down to a trio of singles, two of which were made by French and the other by Billy Mehl.

Berrigan was up for Fargo. He is an ex-university twister from Wisconsin. He was hit for nine safe ones and contributed a quintet of passes for good measure. His pitching gives promise, however, of better things after his nervousness wears off.

Troh, a Wisconsin university catcher, was behind the wind pad, and his first appearance did not make much of a hit with the fans. He seems to lack experience and apparently stands little show of forcing either Alberts or Jarvie off the regular bunch.

Hisey, the local center fielder, did not appear in the line-up and Tufts started. Two strike-outs was his rather unfortunate record, and in the seventh, with two men on bases, "Lefty" Hanson was sent in to take his place. With the center field problem solved for the locals, the team will be in fair shape.

Crookston had men on bases in every inning, but did not get a man over the plate till the sixth. Schlatter singled and reached second on a wild pitch. Kaltenbach flied out to Traeger and Schlatter went to third on Ludwig's out from the pitcher to first. Sperry hit safe and Schlatter scored. Reeves retired the side with a dinky one to Berrigan to French.

The second score came in the eighth. With one down, Ludwig hit safe, going to second on a passed ball, Sperry was out to left and Hanson booted Reeves' single long enough for Ludwig to get over the plate.

Each team had the same number of assists and each first baseman the unlucky number of thirteen put-outs.

Aside from Dorn's fast pitching the feature of the game was a sensational running catch by Rose on the last man in the ninth.

Fargo made it three out of four by defeating Crookston in a shut-out league game yesterday afternoon. It was again demonstrated that Sunday baseball is popular in Fargo as the contest was witnessed by the largest crowd of the series and the best of order prevailed.

Smith, the colt pitcher of the locals, was put in to do the twirling. He more than made good. He not only shut the visitors out, but held them to three lonesome hits for the first eight innings. Schlatter, the first man up in the ninth, slammed a terrible drive into Smith, which the little twirler beat down and threw the runner out. This seemed to rattle him a trifle and the next three men up hit safely. Poor coaching by Burke at third held Kaltenbach and not only prevented Crookston from scoring, but made a double possible when Reeves hit a little one to Smith, who nailed Kaltenbach at home and the batsman at first in a neat double, making a sensational ending to a brilliant game.

Fargo did nothing to Lent in the first two innings, but in the third, a hit, a sacrifice, followed by two more hits made the first earned run of the season. The hits were all short singles and only one score was realized.

In the fifth, four singles netted two more runs. A fast double prevented more scoring. This was the undoing of Lent and he was sent to the rockpile.

Dunn, released by Fargo to Crookston, was sent in and stopped the hitting.

Fast fielding by the members of both teams, especially Livingston of the visitors and Smith and Alberts of Fargo were the features. Smith had ten assists and fielded his position like a veteran.

Alberts did a sensational stunt in the sixth by hot-footing down the third baseline and tagging Schlatter after the big first baseman had gotten past Donovan. The tow headed catcher has made a great hit with the fans and has been dubbed Topsy—probably because he looks less like one than anything else.

President Kent was in the grand stand and enjoyed the game. The umpiring of Anderson made a hit with the head of the league.

Winnipeg, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Winnipeg took the third game of the series from the Grand Forks team Saturday, after a ragged exhibition of baseball.

Both pitchers were in good form, but were given wretched support. Green held the visitors to two hits, but the eight errors by the Winnipeg team let in five runs in the first and eighth innings.

Houck was wild at times and the poor support allowed Winnipeg to score seven runs.

The game was witnessed by a crowd of 2,800 fans. The score:

TWO DIE ON THE DIAMOND

One From Heart Disease Another Has His Skull Fractured.

Chicago, May 22.—The sudden death of Edward W. Johnston put an end to a ball game in which he was a player.

Johnston was at bat just before his death. He hit the ball and ran to first base. He was put out. When he reached the base he turned to run back to where other players were. He had gone but a few feet when he fell forward and died almost instantly. It is believed Johnston died of heart failure, due to over-exertion. He was 28 years old.

New York, May 22.—While catching in a game of baseball in Brooklyn, James Miles, a youth, has been almost instantly killed by a pitched ball. Miles wore no mask while behind the bat. A very fast ball, which he failed to stop, struck him between the eyes. He was carried home, where it was found the skull had been fractured. Death ensued in a few minutes.

EXCITING RACE

Washington and Jefferson Schools Have an Interesting Contest.

Field Meet of Public Schools Proves Unqualified Success.

By the narrow margin of seven points, the Washington school won first place in the interscholastic field meet held Saturday afternoon, while A. C. Cannon of the Washington school won the medal for the boy scoring the highest number of points in the meet.

It was decidedly a Washington day and the supporters of the blue and gold yelled themselves hoarse as their representatives piled up the points that entitled their school to the championship of the city.

The meet early developed in a race between the Jefferson and Washington, with Franklin and Lincoln fighting it out for third place.

Gerard Tonning of the Jefferson school was a close second for the individual prize. Cannon had three first and two seconds to his credit, while Tonning had three firsts and one second.

While the Washington school boy scored the greater number of points, the honors are about even as the Jefferson school boy defeated Cannon in both events in which the two came together, the 120-yard hurdles and the three standing jumps.

The meet was pulled off under the auspices of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. and it proved an unqualified success. Over 1,000 supporters of the different schools turned out with colors, canes and flags, and enthusiasm was at a high pitch. Thirteen schools were represented, but some of them did not succeed in scoring any points.

The prizes will be presented at a banquet to be held on Friday evening, June 9, in the association rooms. The following officials had charge of the sports: Starter, Dan Cole; announcer, John Oldham; reference, Bert Wheeler; clerk of courses, Frank Maxwell; scorers, Harwood Sturtevant and Arthur Dunning; field judges, Dr. Olson, Dr. Wilson and Frank Downing; track judges, Dr. Bowden, Robert Smith and Allen Nelson; time keepers, J. DE ORO IS CHAMPION.

Wins Back the Title From Jerome Keogh.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 22.—Alfredo de Oro of St. Louis, Saturday night, won back the title of pool champion from Jerome Keogh of Buffalo. The final score was:

Keogh, 568; De Oro, 600.

Keogh began last night's play with a margin of twelve balls to the good on the scores of the two previous nights. The work of both men was superb, the score varying only a few points in favor of either man until the last five frames.

RECORD BROKEN.

New York, May 22.—Barney Oldfield's world's record of a flying mile on a circular track in 53 seconds was broken Saturday at Morris Park by Louis Cheveyolet, a young Frenchman, who drove a 90-horse power car in 52 4-5 seconds. One of the remarkable things about this record mile is that Cheveyolet had never handled a car on a racing track until he came to this country, a short time ago. He had a reputation in France as an expert road driver, and it was freely predicted that he would prove a find.

OLD SETTLER PASSES AWAY

Mother of First White Child Born In Duluth, Dies.

Mrs. Peter J. Peterson, 82 years of age and a resident of Duluth for the last forty-eight years, died yesterday at her home in Fond du Lac.

Mrs. Peterson is said to have been the mother of the first white child born in Duluth. She came to the Head of the Lakes in 1857, from Chicago, and her son, Charles A. Peterson, a lumberman, was the first white child to be born in the new settlement.

One other son, Emil Peterson, the druggist, and two daughters, Mrs. F. F. Porter of Oakland, Cal., and Miss Hilma Peterson, survive her.

The funeral will be held at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning and interment will be made at Forest Hill cemetery.

ARRESTED FOR FORGERY.

Hibbing, Minn., May 22.—Matt Nyberg, a Finn, 21 years old, who has been under police surveillance for several weeks, was arrested on Saturday night by Chief of Police Wring on the charge of forgery. Nyberg is the man who worked at the Webb mine and through a mistake in identity on the part of the clerk drew another man's pay check which was much larger than his own. He cashed it at M. E. Osherman's store. Nyberg's time amounted to $35, while the check he cashed was for $65.

FACTS not THEORIES TRUTH not FICTION.

The truth is what the American public wants in these days. The way of truth is also the way of health now that trying weather is here. We hear a tale of hard colds, bad coughs, "threatened with pneumonia" and almost bronchitis. Maybe it is talk of "spring" fever, backache, cold feet and perhaps the early symptoms of grip. Take the ounce of prevention that is worth the pound of cure that will carry you through the bad spring weather. "A safe and sane" tonic to use at this time is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Why? because it is an honest medicine! Made from medicinal plants that put new blood in your veins, new vigor in the worn-out body, fresh strength in the muscles, heart and brain.

Truth Speaks.

Fraud is a bubble that soon bursts. Truth is a foundation of rock that cannot be moved! In order to separate the false from the true—Dr. Pierce has decided to let the public know just what is contained in his "Golden Medical Discovery."

This valuable tonic and blood purifier has been sold in ever increasing quantities for nearly forty years—its success seemed phenominal to those not familiar with its ingredients but the secret is out now and you know why it is that Dr. Pierce found it so uniformly successful in treating chronic cases—those who were run-down whose blood was bad owing to imperfect digestion—perhaps the skin showing scrofulous tendency due to impure blood—and the heart and arteries left in a weak

For Liquozone, Yet We Give You a 50c Bottle Free.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone; the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. We cured all kinds of germ diseases with it—thousands of the most difficult cases obtainable. We proved that in germ troubles it always accomplishes what medicine cannot do. Now we ask you to try it—try it at our expense. Test it as we did; see what it does. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do. You will use it, not only to get well, but to keep well. And it will save nearly all of your sickness.

Kills Inside Germs

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs, is a poison, and it cannot be taken inwardly. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ diseases. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that we have spent over one million dollars to supply the first bottle free to each sick one we learned of.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

A STRANGE CASE

Which Occupies Attention of San Francisco's Grand Jury.

Family Skeleton Unearthed Following Big-amous Marriage.

San Francisco, May 22.—A matrimonial mixup, the strange features of which rival those of any romance ever written, occupies the attention of the grand jury in San Francisco.

That body is called upon to decide which one of the Newman sisters George D. Collins, one of the most eminent attorneys in the state, married in 1889.

Collins says he married Agnes, who died about four years ago, but the whole Newman family and the best man at the wedding declare that it was Charlotte who became his bride.

Meanwhile the maternity of Collins' three children is in doubt, as is also the wifehood of the beautiful young college-bred girl whom he married last weeks in Chicago.

Collins has always been a picturesque figure at the bar in San Francisco. So when San Francisco awoke one morning last week and was told that George D. Collins had become the husband of beautiful Clarice McCurdy, it held up its hands in astonishment and asked "What next?"

It was only after the news came from Chicago verifying the report of his marriage to Miss McCurdy that he came boldly out and repudiated the woman who claims to have been his wife for sixteen years.

"I was never married to Charlotta Newman," he declared. "It was Agnes Newman whom I married in 1889. I have allowed this woman—this person—who now falsely claims to be my wife, to be in charge of my children, and to contribute to her support because it was the deathbed request of my wife."

Records were searched, and they showed that Collins married Charlotta Newman on May 15, 1889.

A search of the birth records reveals a most extraordinary state of affairs existing in the Collins household prior to the death of Agnes. Certain it is that both Agnes and Charlotta bore children to Collins while living under the same roof.

Charlotta, when asked to explain this mysterious feature of the case, finally gave to the public the revolting story of her domestic life.

It appears that she became aware shortly after her marriage of the infatuation of her sister for her husband. Of a mild, timid character, she found herself unable to cope with the headstrong, tyrannical disposition of Agnes, who threatened time and again to commit suicide when spoken to about her relations with Collins.

Agnes frequently posed as Mrs. Collins in public, declaring to her brother and sisters that she and not Charlotta should have been the wife of Collins. When her child was born it was taken by Charlotta and raised as her own, Charlotta's children looking upon it as their sister.

And all through this Charlotta kept silence—a silence induced, she claims, by the great love she bore for her husband, her children and even for her erring sister.

Then, after ten years, came the death of little Susan, Agnes' child. Diphtheria was the cause. Agnes, who was again about to become a mother, caught the disease from Susan and died in childbirth.

It was at this time that the most complex features of the whole case came into prominence.

The Newman family now aver that Collins laid the foundation at this time of the scheme to rid himself of his connection with their family.

Attending himself to all the details connected with the recording of Agnes' death, he took the preliminary step toward disclaiming Charlotta as his wife.

As "Agnes M. Collins, wife of George D. Collins," he entered the record of the woman's death. The cause of death was given as diphtheria and exhaustion following premature childbirth.

Collins acted as chief mourner at the funeral, and wearing crepe on his hat, sought the condolence of all whom he met. There was much talk and speculation at the time as to his peculiar actions.

For four years after Agnes' death he continued to live with Charlotta, although spending the greater part of his evenings away from home.

Then, about two weeks ago, he went to Chicago—on business, he explained. It was during this trip that he married Clarice McCurdy.

And now the grand jury must step in and decide the question: Which of the Newman sisters did Collins marry sixteen years ago?

Mrs. Collins No. 2 says she has absolute faith in her husband, and declares that the whole matter is simply a blackmailing scheme. Mrs. Collins No. 1 is prostrated with grief, but even in the face of the public repudiation of her claims by Collins, cries out for his return, promising to forgive him and take him back. The three children, whose maternity must be decided, cling to Charlotta and try to console "Mamma" in her terrible grief.

Dear Gus—I have solved the mother-in-law problem, just give her regularly Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. It will make her healthy, happy and docile as a lamb. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

JOURNEY TO GREENLAND

For Patients Suffering From Consumption, Is Doctor's Idea.

Washington, May 22.—An experiment of great interest to those who are now giving so much attention to tuberculosis and the spread of consumption is to be made by Dr. Frederick Sohon of this city, who was in the Arctic regions twice with Peary. This experiment consists of a medical application of the outdoor treatment for consumptives in an ideal climate and atmosphere secured through the agency of a steamer especially fitted as a sea-going sanitarium, in which three summer months will be spent in Greenland above the Arctic circle. The steamer Havana has been fitted up for this purpose, and will sail for Halifax June 13, returning Sept. 30. Discussing his novel idea, and how he happened to put it into effect, Dr. Sohon said:

"The plan I have proposed, and which, through the aid of a number of business men, will be put into operation, is the result of my own experience. I went west Peary in 1897, and was at the time somewhat affected with tuberculosis. I proved rapidly, despite our hardships, that I was struck with wonder at what the Arctic region contained for persons similarly affected. In 1902, when I accompanied the party that rescued Peary, I made this subject a special study.

"There is much misinformation among us as to the climatic conditions existing in Greenland above the Arctic circle. The conditions are ideal. Even at our best consumptive resorts in this country, the patient has his good days and bad nights. He cannot go out in the damp air, and ordinarily the tuberculosis patient loses at night what he has gained during the day. The secret of the outdoor treatment for this disease is abundant sunlight and a dry, cold, bracing atmosphere. In the Arctic region in summer there is a period of three months of never-ceasing sunlight every hour in the twenty-four."

DESTRUCTIVE WAR ENGINE

Aerial Torpedo Will Shower Death In Rocket-Like Flight.

New York, May 22.—Joseph J. McIntyre, president of the American Projectile Manufacturing company, has demonstrated the power and efficiency of a new weapon of his own invention, which he declares may revolutionize the modern methods of warfare.

The new projectile is an aerial torpedo shaped like and operated in the manner of a huge rocket. The shells are fired at any angle or trajectory, rapidly sailing a distance of from 1,000 yards to a mile. Immediately on striking any object they explode with terrific force, scattering a hail of shrapnel steel pellets over an area 400 or 500 feet in circumference.

It is asserted by the company that the aerial torpedoes can be easily carried about, fifty rockets being a light load for a pack mule over rough country, and in case of accident all possibility of premature explosion has been guarded against.

The shells are brass cylinders, three inches in diameter and about twenty inches long. The lower half of the cylinder contains a heavy charge of gunpowder, the lifting power of the rocket, with time fuses attached. The upper half in the center is filled with dynamite or other high explosives. Around this is a layer of plaster of Paris, in which is embedded hundreds of shrapnel steel bullets. The whole is topped with a brass cone, at the apex of which is a highly sensitive detonator, so delicate that the smallest impact causes the same effect as striking the ground.

A three-minute fuse was used in the experiments today to give those near a chance to scamper to a respectful distance. When the fuse had burned to the end with a great rushing sound the rocket rose majestically in the air to an altitude of probably a thousand feet. Then it fell. As it struck the earth the air vibrated with the shock of a mighty explosion.

William C. McMillan Enters Field For Michigan Senatorship.

Lansing, Mich., May 22.—Probably the most talked of man in Michigan during the past week was William C. McMillan of Detroit, whose purchase of a controlling interest in one of the leading daily papers of the state has brought him into public notice again.

William C. McMillan is a son of the late Senator McMillan and he desires to become United States senator to succeed Gen. Alger. As president of the Michigan Telephone company he has this week made a tour of the state, visiting fifteen cities and making a number of important public utterances. While declaring himself a candidate for the United States senatorship he does not say that he will contest with Gen. Alger for the honor. Senator Alger's term of office does not expire until March, 1907, and in Mr. McMillan's declaration there is an assumption that the senator will not seek re-election.

Senator Alger declines to discuss the prospect of his retirement. He declares that McMillan has never informed him of his desire to succeed to his toga, and intimates that he intends to remain in the senate. In view of this fact it is not deemed probable that McMillan or anyone else will contest with Gen. Alger for the position, but the present senator is well advanced in years and in uncertain health and when the end of his present term is reached he may not wish to re-enter the senate. With a clear field the McMillan name and the family wealth and influence, it is unlikely that any other candidate could successfully cope with William C. McMillan for the senatorship.

The name of Railroad Commissioner T. W. Atwood has been mentioned as a possible candidate, and it is undeniable that he cherishes an ambition to reach a higher altitude in political life, but he does not possess the wealth nor the political prestige to enable him to cope with William C. McMillan for the honor. Nor is there any great probability that Congressman William Alden Smith of Grand Rapids, in whose political bonnet the senatorial bee has been nesting for some years, could hope to be chosen as Gen. Alger's successor, since for many years one senator has been chosen from the eastern district of the state and the other from the west.

KISSED A TRAMP.

Stopped Runaway Horse and Saved Society Girl.

Philadelphia, May 22.—A kiss was the reward demanded by a tramp who rescued Miss Blanche Farley, a pretty young member of the Balfield Country club, one of Philadelphia's most exclusive suburban organizations, when her horse became unmanageable on the way to her home in Rockland street, near Twentieth.

She was just preparing to jump when a man, shabbily dressed, a typical hobo, stepped out of the woods on one side of the road.

He grasped the bridle and brought the animal to a sudden stand-still. Miss Farley was profuse in her thanks and, noticing the man's condition, produced her purse.

To her surprise, the hobo appeared offended.

"No, thanks, lady, I don't want money. Your's is the first woman's face I've seen in two weeks, I've been freighting from the West. You remind me of some one I know out there. May I kiss you?"

Miss Farley was surprised and hesitated. Finally she acquiesced and held up her lips.

PARENTS SEPARATE.

Daughter's Elopement Causes Estrangement and Divorce.

Marshalltown, Iowa, May 22.—As a sequel to the sensational elopement of Miss Kate Downing and A. J. Bailey from this city last Monday night, Miss Downing's parents have separated. Mr. Downing believes his wife aided in the elopment, and has discovered that a considerable sum was spent for a wedding trousseau. The couple divided their property interests and will apply for a divorce. They have been very prominent here.

IOWA PROFESSOR

Says He Believes That Paderewski Is Insane.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 22.—Prof. Frank J. Fitzgerald, dean of the music department of the Iowa industrial school for girls, declares that all professional musicians are cranks and that Paderewski is insane. Prof. Fitzgerald made this statement in addressing the graduating class of the Enna Conservatory of Music Friday afternoon.

"Take away the musician's musical ability," continued Mr. Fitzgerald, "and the great musicians of the world are all abnormal men.

"I do not believe there are a group of physicians in the country who would not declare Paderewski insane if he were sent to them for examination and did not possess his extraordinary musical ability."

EMPRESS GETS A FALL.

Wiesbaden, May 22.—Empress Augusta Victoria fell down stairs yesterday and was slightly injured on the forehead. Though the hurt is not serious, the incident has caused the postponement of the departure of the emperor and empress for Berlin.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Filbridge, West Cornwell, Conn.

THE RICE ESTATE

Heir to Millions Is Probably Poor Wisconsin Farmer.

Future Looks Bright to a Poverty-Stricken Homesteader.

Menomonie, Wis., May 22.—Public interest in the Joseph Rice legacy matter has reached a high point. The great fortune to which he is now believed to be the rightful heir and the life of poverty and privation which he has led for half a century make a rare and unique theme for speculation. Many people of prominence have visited the humble home, four miles southwest of this city, during the week, and his prospects for securing several millions of dollars, left by his murdered borther, William, in New York city, furnished an interesting topic of conversation everywhere.

The theory is that the late William Rice, the New York millionaire, was murdered by one Patrick, his attorney, who hired two boys to poison him in order that he, Patrick, might secure the fortune, amounting to more than $8,000,000. The circumstances were suspicious and Patrick was arrested, tried for murder, convicted tnd sentenced to be hanged. Through powerful influence he secured an appeal to the supreme court and now rests in prison with the sentence of death pronounced by the lower court hanging over him. He awaits his trial at a higher tribunal. The will which he drew, bequeathing the vast Rice fortune to himself, has been set aside.

The attention of Joseph Rice of this township was first called to this case by a notice in the newspapers that his sister, Mrs. Maria E. Schuler of Des Moines, Iowa, had put in a claim against the William Rice estate on the ground that she was a sister of the murdered man. This was the first intimation Joseph had that his sister, Marie, was living, he having lost track of her more than forty years ago. Mr. Rice immediately placed his case in the hands of J. R. Mathews of this city, an attorney of large and successful experience. He also wrote his sister in Des Moines and has just received a reply in which Mrs. Schuler acknowledges that she is his sister and states that one other sister is living at Grinnell, Iowa. Her name is Mrs. Fanny Partlow. These two sisters, with their brother, Joseph Rice, are the only surviving members of the Peter Rice family, as far as is known. Mrs. Schuler says she is 79 years of age and her husband is 82. They have a family of four daughters and two sons, the youngest 37 years old.

It has just been learned that Mrs. Patrick, wife of the late millionaire lawyer, and two prominent lawyers of New York city have lately visited Mrs. Schuler in Des Moines, but what their mission was has not been made public. It is believed, however, that their visit is a virtual admission that there is merit in her claim to the Rice estate. Mr. Mathews, counsel for Mr. Rice, has placed himself in correspondence with the attorneys for Mrs. Schuler and also with New York attorneys and is much encouraged with recent developments.

A visit to the Joseph Rice homestead, four miles southwest of Menomonie, reveals many interesting facts concerning the history of the Rice family. Mr. Rice owns forty acres of land, partly cleared and still somewhat encumbered, and, apparently, lives happily with his wife and family in a small house. He has a good team of horses and some other stock. He is a peaceable, honest and hard working farmer, who bears an excellent reputation for probity in the neighborhood. Mr. Rice says he was born in Clayton county, Iowa, where his father settled in the early days. There were nine children in his father's family—four girls and five boys, of whom he is the youngest. Their names are Aleck, Peter, William, Frank, Joseph, Fanny, Caroline, Sarah and Marie. Aleck died seven years ago in Iowa. Peter died in the civil war. William was the millionaire, who is believed to have been murdered for his money. Frank was in the Civil war and is supposed to have died soon after the war closed. Caroline died in youth and Sarah married a man named Slaughter in Iowa and died some years ago, leaving no children. Joseph, Fanny and Marie are the known survivors.

Peter Rice, the father of the Rice family, was born on the ocean three days out from Quebec and was a full-blood Frenchman. He became a sailor and was famous as a fighter when a young man. Mr. Rice came to the United States in the early part of the century and settled in Pennsylvania, where he was married. Thence he moved to Clayton county, Iowa, where most of the children were born. Joseph Rice does not remember his brother William, as the latter had some trouble with his father before Joseph was born and left home. He went to Texas and was not heard from afterward. Mrs. Rice died when Joseph was a small boy and the family scattered, leaving only the father (Peter) and son Joseph, aged 9, who joined a colony in 1863 and came to Wisconsin, settling in Knight's creek, about ten miles from this city, where Mr. Rice bought a farm.

Joseph worked out and earned his living after he was 9 years old. He found time to attend school only three weeks in his life and was unable to buy books, therefore he cannot read or write, but he possesses a bright intellect and a good fund of common sense. He was first married at the age of 21, but was soon after divorced. He was married again the following year to Elizabeth Turner, and to them were born three daughters, Cynthia, Minnie and Cora. All are now married. Ten years ago, before Minnie was married a quarrel arose over her between Eli Burns, an old soldier at whose home she lived, and A. Turner, one of Minnie's admirers, and Burns shot Turner, killing him instantly. Burns was arrested, tried for murder and acquitted.

After the death of his second wife Mr. Rice married Susan Cornelcan in 1894. To them have been born five children —Pleasant, Pearl, Elva, Alga and Goldie. Blanche, aged 15, a daughter of Mrs. Rice is also a member of the Rice household.

Peter Rice, father of the Rice family, accidentally fell down stairs one night while confined in the county jail awaittrial for some minor offense and broke his neck, killing him instantly. This occurred twenty-seven years ago. In an interview Joseph Rice said:

"I have lived in Dunn county forty-two years, but I was so young when I came here that I remember little distinctly. My father lived on a farm on Knight's creek fifty years. He died twenty-seven years ago from a fall. I have supported myself since I was 9 years old and have seen some hard times and many privations, but I have nearly always had enough to eat and wear, such as it was, and I never cheated a man out of a cent that I know of. I would rather starve than take money that did not belong to me. I was fairly well fixed a few years ago, but a sharper cleaned me out of everything and I had to start over again. I bought this piece of land five years ago and have it partly paid for.

"I first heard of my brother, William Rice, from my neighbors, who had read about him in the papers. I learned that he made his money in New York and Texas real estate. I have been satisfied from the first that he was my brother. The names and ages of everyone in the family correspond exactly and I think we shall have little trouble in establishing my claim to the estate. I want my share of the money if it belongs to me, but I don't want a cent of it if it doesn't, and I won't allow any questionable testimony to be introduced. If I get the money I will put it into land and government bonds, where thieves cannot get it, even by taking my life. I shall live right here, where I can enjoy myself. It may not do me much good, but it will help my children if properly handled. I can't read, but I intend that all my children shall have at least a common school education."

EVANGELIST TO WED.

Miss Anna Smith to Marry Next Christmas.

Crookston, Minn., May 22.—Miss Anna E. Smith, the talented Denver evangelist, who has toured the entire country during recent years in the cause of Christianity, is to retire from the work to wed James Wilson, ex-dairy and food inspector in Northern Minnesota. The engagement of Miss Smith was announced here Saturday, and created considerable surprise among church people, with whom Miss Smith has become intimately acquainted during her many visits to the city. The wedding will not take place until Christmas, as Miss Smith has many engagements in her work to complete before being at liberty. The intended bride of Mr. Wilson is known throughout the entire country as an active evangelistic worker, and the announcement of her marriage will come as a surprise to her host of friends. Miss Smith has done much good work in the Twin Cities and Duluth for the cause of Christianity, and during the past year has been accompanied in her labors by Miss Reed.

The meeting of Miss Smith and her intended husband is said to have occurred at Thief River Falls last fall, during an engagement of Miss Smith at a church there. Mr. Wilson was among the attenders of the after-meeting, and it was while listening to Miss Smith's urgent discourse upon religious topics that he became infatuated.

After the marriage of the young people they will enjoy a short honeymoon and will settle down in this city to reside.

BLOOD POISON MAN'S GREATEST ENEMY

The disease that has done more than any other to wreck, ruin and humiliate life, is Contagious Blood Poison. Sorrow, shame and suffering go hand in hand with this great enemy, and man has always hated and fought it as he has no other disease. It is the most powerful of all poisons; no matter how pure the blood may be, when its virus enters, the entire circulation becomes poisoned and its chain of horrible symptoms begin to show. Usually the first sign is a small sore or ulcer, not at all alarming in appearance, but the blood is being saturated with the deadly poison, and soon the mouth and throat begin to ulcerate, the hair and eyebrows drop out, a red eruption breaks out on the body, copper-colored splotches and sores make their appearance and the poison even works down into the bones and attacks the nerves. Not only is the disease hereditary, being transmitted from parent to child, in the form of scrofula, weak eyes, soft bones, weak, puny constitutions, etc., but is also so highly contagious that many a life has been ruined by a friendly hand shake, or from using the toilet articles of one infected with the poison. To cure this blighting, deadly curse the blood must be purified, and nothing will do it so quickly and surely as S. S. S. It goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, drives out every particle of the poison and makes the blood clean and strong. It does not hide or cover up anything, but from the first begins to expel the poison and build up and strengthen the system. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that it contains a particle of mineral of any kind. Book on the disease, with instructions for home treatment, and any advice desired, without charge.

THE HISTORY OF CHAMPAGNE—No. 4.

IT WAS DOM PERIGNON, the Monk who discovered Champagne, who also found the secret of imparting further delicacy by the addition of just the right proportion of very old, rare wine and a bit of liquer. His secret is known to the makers of

Great Western

Extra Dry

Not only have we the perfect art of making Champagne, but also conditions of soil to produce fruit of certain peculiar, spicy, yet mellow qualities. The soil is the first requisite. Rheims, of New York, (the scene of America's oldest and most carefully cultivated vineyards) produces grapes equal to the famous Rheims of France—hence, Great Western, the only American Champagne acknowledged by experts to equal the foreign product—at half the price. The cost of the wines is the same—the duty makes the difference in the price you pay.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

Shorts Again Go After Grain and Cause an Advance.

World's Shipments Heavy —Jones Issues Report on Wheat Prospects.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 22.—Shorts again forced the price of wheat up this morning and in all markets strength was evident. Weather conditions in the Northwest and Southwest were not encouraging, too much rain being the complaint. World's shipments were not such, however, as to provide any material for bulls for they aggregated 11,056,000 bushels, last week, against 9,184,000 bushels in the previous week, and 10,296,000 bushels last year. The amount of wheat on passage increased 304,000 bushels. The visible supply of wheat decreased about as was expected.

The May option in Chicago closed 3c higher after being up 5c. In Duluth it gained 1¼c, in Minneapolis 2c, in St. Louis 3¾c, in Kansas City 3c and in New York it was unchanged. The July option gained 1⅝c in Duluth, 1¾-⅞c in Minneapolis, ⅝-¾c in Chicago, ⅞c in New York, 1⅝c in St. Louis and 1c in Minneapolis. The September option closed practically unchanged in Duluth and Mineapolis, ¼-⅜c higher in Chicago, ½c higher in Kansas City, 5c in St. Louis, and ½c higher in New York.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d higher, Paris ½c higher, and London unchanged.

H. V. Jones gave a report out this morning that attracted muct attention. He said:

"Unfavorable reports have been reaching Chicago from Southwest wheat states, to the effect that the wheat crop is deteriorating. These statements should be received with some allowance. In relation to the government condition figures of May 10, the wheat crop is deteriorating, but it will be recalled that as early as April 1 we disputed the April figures of condition. The present reports are simply bearing out the real condition as it was in April. In other words, the high government figures for the Southwest were not warranted in either April or May. The country is now on the basis of a fairly good crop, but not a big one. The characteristic of the Southwest is a standoff; seed is thin and small head. There is only one important section of Kansas where this is not true, and it is practically true of the whole area of Oklahoma and Texas, with minor local exceptions. There has been no deterioration as regards thinness. The plant had not stooled when it came out of winter, and it did not stool properly in April or May, hence to tslat extent this defect was apparent April 1 as it is now. It is now wholly a question of filling as to whether we come out with a crop that will run only 575,000,000 bus or go up to 625,000,000 bus, allowing 200,000,000 bus for the Northwest.

"Figures on winter fields cannot be given for three weeks, but Texas and Oklahoma can be forecasted with reasonable accuracy, about 33,000,000 bus for the two, as against 25,000,000 last year. With continuation of storms these two districts can run off to last year's yield. Kansas will make a gain over last year of 10,000,000 to 20,000,000, if weather conditions are favorable. The Southwest does not promise now over 30,000,000 bus gain over last year, including Missouri."

Car receipts at Duluth were 3, against 1 last year, and at Minneapolis 239, against 233 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 342, against 234 last year. Chicago received 0, against 2 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 457,392 bus., last year 337,047 bus. Shipments 189,696 bus., last year 315,545 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 40,695 bus.

The visible supply last week decreased 1,741,000 bus., and is now 22,429,000 bus., against 24,711,000 bus. last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged to ½d lower. July corn in the Chicago closed ½c higher. July oats closed unchanged. Primary receipts of corn were 349,700 bus., last year 419,076 bus. Shipments 189,696 bus., last year 387,641 bus. Clearances were 264,386 bus. The visible supply of corn last week decreased 1,781,000 bus., and is now 4,322,000 bus., against 5,164,000 bus. last year. World's shipments of corn last week were 3,448,000 bus., against 3,416,000 bus. the previous week and 2,916,000 bus. last year. The amount on passage increased 1,264,000 bus.

This was the deadest day the Duluth market has seen in the long period of dullness. One trade in the July option and a couple or so in September was the whole record for the day. The July option opened 1c higher at $1.06½ bid, advanced to $1.08½ at 10:55, and fell back, closing at $1.07¾, a gain for the day of 1⅜c. The September option advanced 1⅛c to 85¼c, fell back to 83¾c and closed at 84¾c, unchanged from Saturday. The May option advanced 1½c to $1.08 and its high point was ½c higher than that.

Offerings of cash wheat were practically nothing and prices were on the basis of May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was very dull. July and May closed ½c lower at $1.43½. September advanced ¼c to $1.29¾ and October closed ¾c higher at $1.25½.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.08; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.08; No. 2 northern, $1.03¾; durum No. 1, 88c; No. 2, 87c; May, $1.08; July, $1.07¾; September, 84¾c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Urgent Buying Sends Grain Rapidly Upward.

Chicago, May 22.—Continued wet weather created bullish sentiment in the wheat pit here today. Additional rains were reported in Kansas and other sections of the Southwest. Reports from the Red River valley in the Northwest told of considerable damage by excessive moisture. In addition prices at Liverpool showed good gains. A feature of trading was the strength of the May delivery. At the start that option was up 1c at 99c. Buying by shorts soon forced the price up to $1.03. A reaction to $1.01½ followed. July opened a shade lower to ¾@⅞c higher at 88c to 88½c, and in sympathy with May advanced to 89¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 344 cars, against 163 cars last week and 235 cars a year ago.

Less bullishness was manifested the last half of the day. Reports from the winter wheat territory were conflicting, a report of a Minneapolis crop expert who is now on a tour of the Southwest being quite bearish. Under general selling July sold off to 88¾c, where it closed with a gain for the day of ¼c. May closed at $1.01, a gain of 3c.

Urgent buying by shorts of corn for May delivery resulting in an advance of an even 3c a bushel was the feature of trading in the corn market. Offerings were extremely meager and the price jumped up in bounds of ½c to 1c at a leap. A threatened "corner" of all corn for May delivery was the cause of the sensational advance. At the opening May was up ¼c, at 53c. Before half an hour had elapsed the price had touched 69c. Later, on moderate realizing, the price dropped to 57½c. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower, at 47⅝c to 47¾c, and sold up to 48¼c. Local receipts were 133 cars, with 15 of contract grade.

An estimate of official receipts for tomorrow had a depressing effect. May selling off to 56⅛c. After touching 48¾@½c July sold off to 48c where it closed with a gain of ¼c. Final quotations on May were up 4⅞c at 56⅞c.

Influenced by extreme strength of wheat and corn, the oats market had a firm undertone. Trading was very light. July opened unchanged at 29½c and sold up to 29⅝@⅜c. Local receipts were 122 cars.

Provisions were firm as a result of a moderate advance in the price of live hogs. Packers were fair buyers of ribs, July pork opened up 2½c at $12.70. Lard was unchanged at $7.37½. Ribs were up a shade at $7.27½@7.30.

Closing Wheat—May, $1.01; July, 88¾c; September, 83@⅞c; December, 81⅞c. Corn—May, 56⅞c; July, 48c; old, 48⅛@48¼c; September, 47½c; old, 47⅝c; December, 44⅜c; old, 44⅜c. Oats—May, 36@36c; July, 29⅜c; September, 28¾c. Pork—May, $14.90; July, $12.62½; September, $12.85@12.87½. Lard—May, $7.20@7.22½; July, $7.35; September, $7.52½. Ribs—May, $7.50; July, $7.25@7.27½; September, $7.50@7.52½. Rye—May, 77½@78c; July, 60c; September, 59@60c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.42; southwestern, $1.26; May, $1.26. Timothy—May, $2.90; September, $3.15. Clover—May, $11.75@12.25.

Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Cash, wheat—No. 2 red, $1.04@1.06; No. 3 red, $1.00½@1.03; No. 2 hard, $1.06@1.01; No. 3 hard, 94@1.00; No. 1 northern $1.06@1.11; No. 2 northern, $1.07@1.07; No. 3 spring, $1.00@1.07. Oats—No 2, 30½@31c; No 3, 30@¼c Corn—No 2, 56@57¾c; No 3, 52@55c

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—This has been a strong market. Trade is paying close attention to crop damage reports and from sections of the Southwest and news of this character causes the shorts uneasiness and the cash situation continues good. The question for July shorts to decide is the amount of wheat available for July contracts. We think the amount will be far from sufficient to go around. The situation to us still looks strong. It is a healthy market in every sense of the word. Some little setback from these prices would not be surprising, but on any such declines we favor the purchase of the deferred futures, especially July.

Corn—The opening of this market was steady with very light trade, but a little aggressiveness on the part of the bull leaders caused some short covering in the May, which at times was extremely urgent. The deferred futures sympathized with the sharp advance, but the action of the market seems to suggest that July and September were in plentiful supply. On any sharp advance we still feel the deferred futures should be sold. Receipts are far larger than the primary shipments and acceptances are reported more liberal to the bids sent out by the cash people.

Oats—Trade still on a very limited scale. We see very little change in conditions, and in view of the slow action of the market, think the far off futures should be sold on the bulges. The cash market is extremely limited.

Provisions—This market started out firm on the better prices paid for hogs at the yards and influenced somewhat by the strength in the other markets. The advance caused some little profit-taking. It is a slow trading market, but on the whole quite a firm one. On the setbacks we are rather inclined to favor purchases for a turn.

* * *

E. W. Dennis, Chicago: Looks to me as though the Southwest and Northwest had got the wheat bought and were going to flood us with damage reports.

* * *

"The Canadian wheat crop prospect could not be better," wired a Winnipeg elevator man, "and the increase in acreage would give us the largest crop ever raised."

PUP TIES UP A RAILROAD

Rock Island Official's Dog Lost on Kansas Prairie.

Topeka, Kan., May 22.—Because a dog belonging to one of the Moore brothers, owners of the Rock Island railway system, decided to make an investigation of Western prairies on his own account, the business of the system was tied up for fifty minutes Friday and the owner of the dog was compelled to pay $50 for its recapture.

W. H. Moore, owner of the water spaniel which caused all the trouble, and his brother, J. H. Moore, were traveling over the Rock Island in a special train. While the engineer was taking on water at Bethune, a small station in Sherman county, the spaniel escaped from the car and started toward the Nebraska line.

Porters, chefs and the rear brakeman started in pursuit. Then J. H. Moore decided that by a combination of whistles and dog calls he might accomplish more than the men in the hunt. The dog scampered the dog; after him were the chasers, kicking up a cloud of dust as they went. The spaniel was having the best time of his life. He circled and dodged and doubled.

"Fifty dollars to whoever catches the pup," the owner shouted.

The pump man at the water tank heard the words and away he started. He had lived on those prairies for many years, and knew a thing or two about coursing. The pump man was soon in the lead, but, with all his knowledge, he might still be running had not the dog's curiosity got the better of his judgment.

The dog was born in New York, and, like some residents of Manhattan Island, he thought he had seen everything worth seeing in this country. But he had never seen a prairie dog before. There was one of these animals fifty yards in front of him sitting on its haunches.

The New York canine made a dash for the prairie dog, which waited until the spaniel was only a few feet away, and then disappeared as if by magic in a hole that was waiting for it. The spaniel stopped at the hole to see what had happened to his small brother. This was the pump man's opportunity. He caught the spaniel by his abbreviated tail and carried him back to his master.

"Here's your fifty," said W. H. Moore. "I have seen poorer shows for more money many a time.

The conductor gave the engineer the "high sign," and the special sped on its way. The dog had had fifty minutes' worth of fun. W. H. More seemed satisfied to pay $50 for it.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Opening Was Strong But Bear Pressure Forced Liquidation.

Some Recovering Near Close Which Was Active and Easy.

New York, May 22.—Higher prices for Americans in London gave an upward start to prices here. There were a few exceptions, but amongst the less important stocks. Illinois Central rose 1½ and St. Paul a point, and Atchison, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and United States Steel large fractions. There was a decline of 1 in Virginia-Carolina Chemical.

After absorbing the profit-taking sales invited by the opening rise, the market again moved aggressively upward. St. Paul had, however, been lowered to Saturday's closing level and some of the metal and car equipment stocks sold below. The rebound was quite pronounced in a number of favorites including Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Copper and St. Paul, and of which sold a point or more above last week's close. Other gains reached 4½ in Westinghouse Electric, and a point or more in General Electric, Tennessee Coal, United States Steel, People's Gas, Atlantic Coast Line, Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central and Colorado Fuel. Some of the junior Vanderbilts were notably weak, Canadian Southern losing a point and Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis 2. St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred also dropped 1 and St. Louis Southwestern 1½.

Prices of prominent stocks made further upward progress. The gain in Illinois Central reached 2¼. St. Paul and Deleware & Hudson 2, St. Louis Southwestern preferred 1½, Atchison, Ontario & Western and Metropolitan Securities 1½ and Rock Island preferred, United States Steel preferred and Car preferred 1. Westinghouse Electric recovered 2 points of Saturday's decline. There were declines in Des Momes & Fort Dodge of 6¼, New York Air Brake 5, Virginia Iron 3, Sloss-Sheffield Steel 2 and the Smelting stocks and Pressed Steel Car preferred 1 to 1¼. The demand at the higher level dropped to nothing and prices slipped back. Union Pacific and St. Paul reacted 1. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Stocks values crumbled rapidly under violent selling movement which gave a semi-demoralized appearance to the trading. Wide losses were made in the Northern Securities group and a host of metal and equipment stocks. The chief declines were Northern Pacific and American Express 5; Sloss-Sheffield Steel 3; Colorado Fuel, Smelting, Locomotive, Pressed Steel Car, United States Steel preferred, Sugar, Canadian Pacific and Wisconsin Central 1¾ to 2½ and St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Northwestern, Louisville & Nashville and Copper 1 to 1½.

Liquidation was continued in great volume and occasional recoveries were followed by outbreaks of weakness at new points. Copper broke heavily to 3 points under Saturday and United States Steel preferred lost 2. St. Paul and Union Pacific fell abruptly to 2 points under Saturday. Northern Pacific fell 7½, Great Northern preferred 7, Smelting 4¾, Colorado Fuel 3¾, Sugar 2¾, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred 3¼, Tennessee Coal 2½, and active stocks pretty generally 1 to 1¾.

Prices in some cases receded further in the final hour. Great Northern preferred was forced down 15 points and Northwestern 4, and there were some additions to the list of losses running 10 2 points or over. The room shorts then took their profits and their buying to cover worked some recovery, running from 1 to 1½ in some of the leaders. Pressure was renewed in the final dealings. The close was active and easy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Influenced by higher London prices, the New York list opened strong and very firm. Bear pressure was early resumed, forcing liquidation all through the list. The market through most of the session gave evidence of much liquidation and much activity by very strong bear interest, presumably located in Boston. The feeling in general is very bearish. About the only buying pressure came from short covering. The market all through shows very little recovery from the low point, but still is sharply lower than on close on Saturday. A renewal of activity by the bears will undoubtedly bring some lower prices, followed by short covering, causing a reasonable rally. On any such rally we believe stocks should be sold.

* * *

Paine, Webber & Co., New York: The action of the Steel stocks will do more than anything to determine the immediate course of the market. The short interest is large, but I do not think we shall get anything more than a rally at present.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed more genuine liquidation than for a long time past. This added to the bearish tactics of Lawson brokers and caused lower prices all through the list. The market on range was broad and active at slowly receding prices. Mohawk was in good demand around 48 and held firm. Utah is still pegged at 42½, one house buying all the stock offered. The most encouraging feature in the day's market was the scarcity of stocks offered. As soon as this flurry in the New York market is over we expect a sharp rally in the local coppers.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, May 22.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $129,961,749; gold, $71,166,770; silver, $26,190,881.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 22.—The cotton market opened strong at an advance of 10@15 points on active covering and fresh buying for long account following much firmer cables than expected both as to spots and futures and reports of further rains in portions of the belt which have recently complained of too much moisture. There was active realizing by the bull leaders, tending to check the advance around the initial figures, but the market continued very feverish during the early session with prices holding well up to a little over the opening figures and trading continued active.

Cotton, spot closed quiet; 15 points higher; mid uns, 8.45; do gulf, 8.70. Sales, 4,700 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 8.04; June, 7.77; July, 7.88; August, 7.86; September, 7.93; October, 7.97; November, 7.99; December, 8.03; January, 8.07; February, 8.10; March, 8.16.

BUNCH OF COAL

Eleven Carriers Carrying That Commodity Arrive From Lower Lakes.

No Departures Since Midnight—Huronic Makes Short Visit.

Eleven coal carriers came up loaded yesterday and today and a good many boats came up light for ore. There was not a single departure from this harbor since midnight up to 3 o'clock this afternoon. All of the boats that have come in since Saturday are busy loading and unloading. It is expected that quite a bunch will go out this evening.

The Northwestern Transportation company's big steamer, the Huronic, came in last evening and left four hours later. She came in light and took on some grain here. She also took out some passengers.

MAY BLOW OVER

Hitch In Deal For Bridge Bonds May Be Averted.

Painters Have Only Few Hours Work to Be Done.

"There is nothing that I can see that will prevent the deal going through smoothly," said City Attorney Bert Fesler, when asked this morning if the Duluth ferry bridge would be accepted and paid for.

"The bonds cannot be passed upon by the bond attorneys until the bridge has been accepted by the city, but when the bridge commission has taken over the structure I see nothing to prevent the matter being closed up. In fact it looks as if this scarce about a hitch was going to peter out."

Mr. Fesler's statement will be welcome news to both the bridge company and the taxpayers.

The thirty days during which the company was to operate the bridge have expired, and for nearly two weeks the company has been running the car at its own expense. Nominally the reason for this was that the painting had not been completed. While this furnished an excellent excuse for holding up the money, and while the city was perfectly entitled to do so, there is little doubt but the company would have been paid when the thirty days expired if there had not been a hitch concerning the bonds. The painting is but comparatively a small job, and had nothing to do with the working of the bridge or its mechanical success.

There was a hitch in the negotiations for the bonds, however. It has been claimed that the old Duluth Canal and Bridge company was endeavoring to collect for the tower foundations placed in the piers several years ago, and that some of the officers of that company were interested in the Commercial Investment company which purchased the bridge bonds.

Whatever truth there may be in this, the matter has evidently been arranged, or is about to be, judging from Mr. Fesler's statement, and the money for the bonds will be paid over.

Meanwhile the painting on the bridge is nearly completed, and the men will probably quit work tonight. Just as soon as the job is done the officers of the company will make a formal demand for the acceptance of the bridge from the bridge commission, and it is difficult to see what grounds the commission will have for further delay.

Complaints are being made by the residents of Park Point of the service given by the ferry car. This will be bettered, however, when the bridge is taken over by the city, and an effort will be made to have it connect with the street cars on both sides of the canal. The company is running the car from day to day at a heavy expense, expecting to have the bridge taken over by the city at any time, and the schedule of trips has never been properly arranged.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Homesteader Finds He Has Been Sleeping With Rattlesnake.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—G. C. Conant, a homesteader in the ceded portion of the Rosebud Indian reservation, in the Bonesteel country, had a thrilling adventure with a rattlesnake, which invaded his home during his temporary absence. Conant had been absent from his farm for several days, returning home in the evening. As it was raining, he decided to go to bed early. He dis not notice anything strange about his bed at the time he retired, but about midnight he was awakened by a movement near his body, under the bedclothing. He lost no time in springing from bed, and, lighting a match and turning down the bedclothing, was horrified to find that he had had a huge rattlesnake as a bedfellow. That he was not bitten was doubtless due to the fact that the pressure of the bedclothing did not give the snake the necessary space required by this species of reptile to coil and strike. The snake, which was killed by the frightened homesteader, had eight rattles, and these are now worn as an ornament by Conant as a memento of his midnight experience.

Mistaking wild parsnips for artichokes nearly cost the life of Myrtle Sweet, the 13-year-old daughter of Jesse Sweet, living near Sioux Falls. The girl, by an exhibition of rare presence of mind, saved her own life. Both her parents were absent at the time she ate the wild parsnips and realized that she had been poisoned. Remembering that her mother usually administered soda for internal troubles, the girl took a quantity, which caused her to be relieved of the greater part of the poison. But she was in a serious condition when her mother arrived and medical aid was summoned. It required some heroic and lively work to save her life even then, and the physician gave it as his opinion that had she not taken the soda nothing could have saved hed.

Deadwood—In the circuit court in this city John S. Vance, who burned his dwelling house and shot his cow at Cyanide, a mining camp west of this place, was sentenced to one year in the state penitentiary.

He burned his dwelling house in order to "place his wife on the hog as he was." His wife recently secured a divorce from him.

Clark—The baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of the Clark high school will be delivered on Sunday, May 28, by Rev. R. Oldfield. The same day the G. A. R. will hold memorial services in the Catholic church, with sermon by Father Bonneterre.

The annual election of officers of the Chautauqua circle resulted in Mrs. William McGaan being chosen president; Mrs. C. G. Sherwood, vice president, and Mrs. Fred Bahrle, secretary.

Saturday was pay day at the Clark creamery and patrons received 28 cents a pound for butter fat; 21,000 pounds of butter were made in the month ,and brought $5,000. There are now over 200 patrons.

Armour—Three new rural routes have been established out of this place. Five rural free delivery routes in this county do away with the country postoffices of Ebenezer, Beulah, Kennedy and Heubner.

The weather bureau reports over five inches of rain so far this month.

ATTEMPT TO ROB

Cracksmen Blow Open Safe In Union Depot at Scanlon.

They Do a Very Poor Job and Secure No Money.

The depot at Scanlon, used by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads, was broken into some time last night by cracksmen and an unsuccessful attempt was made to break open the safe by the use of nytro-glycerine.

Evidently the would-be robbers were amateurs in the business, for they succeeded in getting only the outer door of the safe off, and were therefore unable to get at the money they were after. Had they succeeded in their designs they would have secured only about $200, it is claimed.

Nothing was known of the affair until this morning, when James Carney, day operator, reported for duty. The sound of the explosion was heard by no one except a woman in the sectionhouse near the depot, and it did not alarm her sufficiently for her to deem it necessary to arouse the men folk. The supposition is that the robbers—it is believed there was more than one of them—were afraid that people would be attracted to the scene by the explosion, for they fled without making another try to secure the cash.

Marshal O. J. Simons and deputies are working on the case today, and the two railroads have sent special agents to Scanlon to investigate the matter, but up to this afternoon no arrests had been made, and seemingly no definite clew on which to work has been discovered. It is thought the culprits have a fair chance of making their escape.

Scanlon is a small village located about three miles this side of Cloquet. There is no night watchman or police officer of any kind in the town, so the cracksmen had little difficulty in breaking into the depot without being detected. At the station there is no night telegraph operator or agent employed, and as no one lives there, the building is left without an occupant all night.

The robbers gained access to the structure through the front window. Although the sash was nailed up, it was pried open from the top, leaving enough room for a man to crawl through. The safe was in the office. Evidently the explosive was used in a bungling manner, for the force of the explosion was only sufficient to tear the outer door from its place, leaving the rest of the safe practically unhurt. Not a very large charge could have been used, for the heavy door was thrown only a short distance, and no damage was done to the office. Nothing of value was taken.

Last year thieves gained entrance to the same depot and blew open the safe.

Railroad Notes.

The old Great Northern freight depot, located just west of the Union depot, which has not been used for the past two or three years, has been leased by the Ham Brewing company for storehouse and office purposes. The building is being remodeled and improved.

George M. Smith, general agent of the Omaha in Duluth, has returned from a trip to Sault Ste. Marie, Marquette and other Michigan points. He says the business outlook at the Soo is very promising. The Algoma rolling mills on the Canadian side are running full blast night and day, turning out rails at a rapid rate. Everything appears to be done automatically at the plant, even to the loading on cars, making an interesting sight, says Mr. Smith.

It is said that Martin Adson, general agent in Duluth for the South Shore road, stands a very good chance of being promoted to the position of general passenger agent of the road, to succeed G. W. Hibbard, who has resigned to go with the International lines of Mexico. Mr. Adson has returned from Chicago and professes ignorance regarding the matter in which the report got started, and says he has as yet had no inkling of who will succeed Mr. Hibbard. His many Duluth friends are standing ready to offer their congratulations at any minute, however.

Six locomotives have been leased from the Northern Pacific by the Duluth & Iron Range road to help out with the ore traffic. The engines, which are to be used for switching purposes, are now coming forward from Brainerd.

H. A. Kimball, assistant general freight agent of the Great Northern, is in the city today from St. Paul.

All the townsites on the branches of the Great Northern is to be built this year in North Dakota will be controlled by the Dakota Improvement company, recently organized at Willmar, Minn. The company will sell lots in eighteen townsites along the Lakota, York, Towner, Westhope and Sharwood extensions.

The Northern Pacific has appointed two traveling immigration agents. They are L. G. Bricker, with headquarters at Cincinnati, and O. W. Seaton, with offices at Chicago.

J. T. Kenny, formerly supervising conductor on the Northern Pacific road, has been appointed to the position of district passenger agent, to succeed George W. McCaskey, who has also been promoted, although to what position it has not yet been announced.

Northern Pacific officials say that the freight business is better now than it was at this time last year, and that all indications point to a good season. There is quite a heavy movement of almost all classes of freight locally.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Would-Be Suicide at Escanaba Concludes He Will Live.

Escanaba—Fred Paul, who attempted to commit suicide by hanging in his cell at the Delta county jail at Escanaba, because his wife, who had caused his arrest for beating her had failed to secure his release, is now content to live and has made no further attempts to take his life. A deep red line circling his throat, where the improvised rope cut into the flesh when the weight of his body was brought to bear upon the noose, still remains as a reminder of his experience. It is said that he is still confident that he will not be forced to spend his full sentence of sixty days in jail, as he believes that if his wife has deserted him to his fate that he has friends who will pay the fine demanded by the court before the end of his jail sentence is reached.

The officials of the city of Escanaba and the Barber Asphalt Paving company have signed an agreement relative to the paving of Ludington street, and work will be started as soon as there is some settlement of the difficulty with the street railway company.

Waucedah—Samuel Bridges, a Waucedah farmer, is the owner of a ram that weighs 300 pounds. It is said there are only two other animals of the same breed in the world that exceed it in weight. Mr. Bridges is devoting much attention to raising livestock, at the present time having a herd of about fifty cattle and a flock of seventy-five sheep.

Munising—The annual report of the secretary of state shows that Alger county has 12,490 acres of land in farms, and that of this 3,454 acres are cultivated and 8,976 acres are uncultivated. The county has 134 farms and the average number of acres in each farm is ninety-three.

Dollarville—George Aenis, formerly of Dollarville, Luce county, is now located in Lac du Flambeau, Wis. Mr. Aenis is engaged in the lumbering business, operating on a large scale, and states he is doing well, putting in a million feet of logs per week.

Sault Ste Marie—A Sault Ste Marie contractor states that the present season will probably see more cement walks laid in the Soo than during any summer in the past. He has already secured contracts for a large amount of work and expects to keep several gangs of men in commission all season.

Negaunee—At the home of the bride's parents, Miss Lillie Hampton and Mr. Albert Jewell were united in marriage at 7 o'clock, May 20. Both are of the city of Negaunee, where they will reside after a short wedding trip.

TAFT AS LUCKY AS ROOSEVELT

Washington, May 22.—Much has been said about the recognized ability of Secretary Taft of the war department and of the splendid work he has done during the absence of President Roosevelt in holding down affairs in two great departments.

Some criticism was heard here, especially by the railway representatives from foreign countries, on account of the action of Secretary Taft in bringing up the railway rate question at a dinner given by the railway men. The foreigners insisted that it was bad taste for a government official to bring up a domestic matter of controversy in an international convention of railway experts. Whatever may be the general opinion, it is asserted by those who ought to know that Secretary Taft strengthened himself very much before the contrary by that speech, and that he won the cordial approval of President Roosevelt.

Secretary Taft is making a great hit in Washington. It is the common remark of men who have had long experience here that he is one of the biggest, brainiest and most wholesome men who has appeared in high public place here for many years. Moreover, he has won everybody by his genial ways, his approachableness and his winning ways on all occasions. He is big and good-natured. Everybody who desires may see him at almost any time of day, and the only complaint he makes about Washington official life is the fact that he finds it necessary to see so many people that he does not have time to transact his official business. He has captivated Washington and won the hearts of legislators and visitors.

THREE DIAMONDS

Worth $90,000 Disappear From Tiffany's Workshop.

New York, May 22.—Three diamonds cut from the world-famous "Excelsior" stone, and valued in the aggregate at $90,000, have disappeared from the shop of Tiffany & Co., 15 Union square. Satisfied that they were stolen by some person in their employ, but mystified by the strange circumstances connected with the theft and the absence of clews, the members of the company have set in motion the detective forces of two continents in their endeavor to recover the precious gems.

In all, ten diamonds were cut from the Excelsior last fall, shortly after its purchase by Tiffany from an English syndicate. The stone was found at Jagersfontein, South Africa, in 1893, and in the rough weighed 971 carats. It was the largest diamond that has ever been cut up, and the total value of the ten stones taken from it was $500,000. Five of the diamonds were sold by Tiffany to well-known New York people last Christmas. Of the remaining five the company now has only two.

The robbery was committed in the workshop on the fifth floor of the Tiffany building, in Union square, on the afternoon of Thursday, May 4. The next morning, when the manager of the department went to take them from the safe in which they should have been locked for the night, they had disappeared.

In fact, the three diamonds, upon which a trusted workman had been employed all day on the 4th, had never been placed in the safe. Loosely wrapped in paper, the $90,000 worth of jewels had been laid by the workman on the shelf of the window in the wire cage which separates the office from the workshop.

A Farm for $10 Down and $4.00 a Month! Think of It!

This will give you 40 acres of good fertile land in the big red clover district of Bayfield, Wis.,—as many acres as you like on the same basis for each 40-acre tract at $5 an acre.

Fine Investment for Young Men and Women

Think of the thousands of young people paying over money to the great life insurance companies every month with the expectation that at the end of twenty years or more they may only get their money back and a very small interest. Then think of the development of the United States in the past twenty years, and look on a map at the location of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin as related to the head of inland navigation and the expanding markets of growing nearby cities. Will any reasonable man say that the land in this region will not be worth from three to ten times its present price within twenty years? Reason it out for yourself.

Worth $200 to $300 an Acre.

J. Sterling Morton, ex-Secretary of Agriculture, recently asserted that all well-located land in the United States would be worth that price within 50 years.

"I believe," he added, "that money invested in farms is the best possible investment one can make; even if purchased at what some may term 'boom prices,' one will soon see his investment doubled."

We Will Build You a Comfortable House

On any sized tract that you want, from forty acres up, upon payment of only one-quarter of the value of the land in cash, and spread the balance over several years. For a man who wants to get on a farm at small initial cost, this is a remarkable opportunity. All this land is surprisingly fertile, and it will pay you to investigate its possibilities. The Omaha railroad alone placed 900 families in Northern Wisconsin last year. We have about 60,000 acres to choose from.

Best Farming Land in Northern Minnesota.

We also have about 40,000 acres of the richest farming land to be found in this section of the state, all lying within a reasonable distance of railroads and midway between Duluth and the Twin Cities. We will give it to you for one-quarter its value in cash and the balance to suit your convenience. Runs from $5 to $15 an acre.

Chance for Investors.

We have some snaps in large tracts that can't be beat. CALL OR WRITE.

STRIKE SETTLEMENT HINGES ON THE ACTION OF EXPRESS COMPANIES

Trouble Would End If They Would Take Back Men.

Large Number of Lumber Wagon Drivers Join Strikers.

Everything Is In Readiness For Calling Out the Militia.

Chicago, May 23.—There were additions to the strikers ranks today, more drivers of lumber wagons going out, because of the discharge of some who refused to make deliveries to the boycotted houses.

Adjutant General Scott is in the city by order of Governor Deneen, and everything is said to be in readiness for calling out the militia whose armories are in Chicago. If called they are to be put in the lumber district.

A conference was held at the mayor's office at which were present the railroad express managers, who, however, were unwilling to make any concessions to the strikers—adhering to their stand not to re-employ any of their old drivers. The other employers are willing to take back their former teamsters as fast as opportunities offer. The strike, therefore, hinges upon the railway express companies.

Chicago, May 23.—Widening of the breach between the lumber dealers and their drivers signalized a continuance of aggressive feeling on both sides today in the teamsters' strike. Renewal of orders to deliver material to boycotted business establishments was pushed vigorously by the lumber dealers, notwithstanding invariable previous experience that such orders would be met by refusal on the part of the drivers. Equaly determined, the teamsters showed no signs of wavering, although faced by a certainty that discharge would follow and that their fellow employes would inveitably be involved in the general strike. One after another, three additional lumber companies were drawn into the struggle today and the prospect of stoppage of all building construction in Chicago came palpably close to a reality. The concerns against which strikes began today were the Acorn Lumber company, C. A. Parker & Co. and J. C. Deacon & Co.

With increasing rapidity, the list of lumber firms affected by today's developments became more and more lengthy. Soon the total amounted to a dozen additional to those named and included yards of all kinds, large and small.

While the strike was spreading fast in the lumber district today, a new peace conference began at the city hall. Mayor Dunne and a committee of aldermen went into session with managers of the seven express companies, whose decision not to reinstate strikers has been for several days the principle obstacle to a settlement of the strike. At the same time active preparations were under way for the possible ordering out of troops to keep down a wave of rioting which, it was feared, might come, especially in the lumber district, where labor disturbances have generally been of a savage character. Adjt. Gen. Scott was in Chicago from Springfield, under orders from Governor Deneen, and everything was said to be in readiness to put soldiers on the streets in the shortest possible time. The express managers left the mayor's office after a brief time. They refused to talk of the conference. Mayor Dunne immediately summoned Chief of Police O'Neill and Sheriff Barrett. This action gave rise to a rumor that the express managers refused to concede anything to the unions, and that preliminaries were under way for a call upon the governor for troops.

Mayor Dunne denied later that there was any special significance in the talk which he had with Sheriff Barrett. A meeting this afternoon between President Parry of the Express Drivers' union and the express company managers was arranged.

All seven of the railroad express companies were represented in the meeting with Mayor Dunne and the aldermen. Levy Mayer, attorney for the Employers' association, was spokesman for the express company managers, informing the mayor that there had been no change in the attitude of the express companies in declining to recede from the stand that no striking express drivers would be reinstated in former positions.

A PARADOX.

Strike Increases Yet Hopes of Peace Grow.

Chicago, May 23.—The teamsters' strike today threatens to assume proportions that will render a call for troops necessary, and at the same time new hopes of a paceful settlement have developed. The situation is thoroughly paradoxical. While the strike grows, peace is once more in the balance.

The express companies seem to hold the key to the situation, but hopes based on these companies may be elusive, for in spite of many rumors to the contrary, the emphatic statement is made that they will not yield an inch.

The striking express drivers may get their old places after the strike is settled, but the stand of the Chicago agents, backed without exception by the general officials of the companies, is against making any promises in advance. The agents of the express companies were expected to be represented at an adjourned conference between the employers and the teamsters, which was scheduled for today. Attorney Mayer was the only representative of the former at the meeting last night, and if the express agents meet the strike leaders today, it will be for the first time since hostilities began. Their prospective presence presents another hopeful sign to the optimistic.

STRINGENT METHODS

Will Be Adopted With Striking School Children.

Chicago, May 23.—The board of education has determined to resort to stringent methods to prevent further strike demonstrations in connection with the public schools.

All pupils attempting to induce other pupils to boycott the public schools are to be arrested. All adults seeking to incite trouble at the schools are to be locked up. All persons, young or adult, attempting to interfere with school children on their way to and from school, are to be arrested.

Principals and teachers are expected to co-operate with the school authorities in apprehending all disturbers lurking about the schoolhouses. It was declared that in several instances teachers in the public schools not only have participated in demonstrations, but have encouraged the children to shout at the non-union teamsters. A school trustee said this charge would be investigated.

Fifteen boys, arrested by truant officers, will be arraigned in the juvenile court today.

They are charged with attempting to get children to go out on strike, and with inciting trouble at the schools which they attended.

JAP REAR GUARD

Tokio, May 23, noon.—Imperial army headquarters, reporting today, says:

The Russian cavalry, which detoured toward Fakumen from the right bank of the Liao river, was frequently defeated by our rear guards. "In the meantime a few companies of the enemy's force remaining on the left bank of the Mallen river, were defeated and retreated northward in disorder. Otherwise the situation is unchanged."

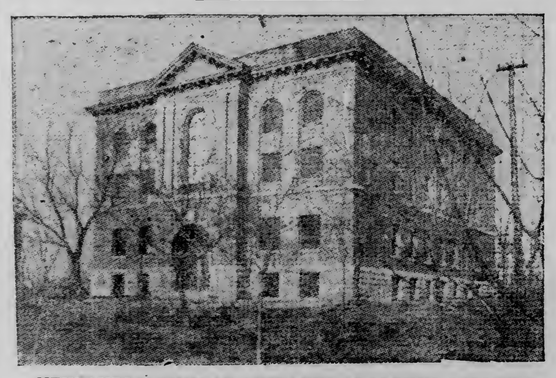
GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS COLLEGE EXERCISES

Dedication of New Auditorium and Installation of New President.

Governor Johnson and Rev. J. A. Krantz of Duluth Deliver Addresses.



NEW AUDITORIUM AT GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS COLLEGE.

St. Peter, Minn., May 23.—The sixteenth annual commencement exercises are being held this week at Gustavus Adolphus college. They are of special interest this year, as with the usual commencement programs are combined the dedication of a new auditorium and the installation of the new president, Prof. P. A. Mattson.

The exercises were opened with a musical recital last Saturday night by the graduates of the conservatory of music. Sunday morning Prof. C. A. Blomgren preached before the missionary society and in the evening the baccalaureate sermon was delivered by President Mattson at the Swedish Lutheran church.

The graduates of the academy had their class exercises yesterday morning in the new auditorium, and the graduates of the school of commerce had their exercises at 2:30 p. m., when Professor E. W. Van Aken of Winnebago, president of Parker college, delivered an address.

The big event of the week—the dedication of the auditorium—took place this morning. Addresses were made by Governor Johnson, Congressman C. R. Davis, C. A. Smith of Minneapolis, H. N. Benson of St. Peter, Rev. L. G. Almen of Balaton, Rev. J. A. Krantz of Duluth, president of the conference, Dr. M. Wahlstrom of Chicago, former president of the college, and Dr. E. Norelius, president of the synod. A concert will be given in the afternoon and in the evening the seniors of the college proper will have their class exercises.

The new president, Rev. P. A. Mattson, will be installed Wednesday morning by the president of the conference. President Cyrus Northrop of the state university, President W. H. Sallmon of Carleton college at Northfield, Rev. L. G. Almen, president of the board of directors, Prof. A. C. BRITONS ARE LOSING THE SIBERIAN TRADE.

London, May 23.—The board of trade today, issued an exhaustive report made by Special Commissioner H. C. Cooke, on the trade of Siberia, in which British trades are again taken to task for allowing other nationalities to elbow them out of a promising market.

"The American, Dane and German," writes Mr. Cooke," are already there and have captured some of the most fruitful fields of enterprise. These rich regions will be to Russia's increasing millions what the colonies are to the British isles. Even now Russian emmigrants in Siberia, peasants though they be, are supplying the London market with butter, as they reap their crops with American harvesters and discuss with intelligence their preferences for machines from Milwaukee or Chicago.

A section of the trestle gave way under the weight of three Pullmans, and the cars are now in a depression on the edge of the creek. Eight or ten passengers were slightly injured, but nobody was killed. The first part of the train passed over the trestle and bridge in safety.

MAYOR OF PHILADELPHIA SAILS INTO THE GRAFTERS

A. W. MACHEN PLEADS GUILTY AND GETS FINAL SENTENCE

Four Years In Prison, But May Save One Year.

Eleven Other Indictments Against Him to Be Quashed.

AUGUST W. MACHEN.

Washington, May 23.—By pleading guilty to the charge of conspiring to defraud the government, August W. Machen, formerly superintendent of free delivery of the postoffice department, when arraigned under the joint indictment with W. G. Crawford and George E. Lorenz, received a sentence of two years in the Moundsville, W. Va., penitentiary, and escaped trial on eleven other indictments. The district attorney has agreed to quash the remaining indictments. In passing sentence, Justice Wright, presiding over criminal court No. 1, District of Columbia, said he would take into consideration the facts that the government would be relieved of the expense and time necessary to further trials and make the sentence much less than if the defendant had not pleaded guilty. The two years' sentence will begin upon the execution of a like term given him upon conviction on the indictment on which Machen, Lorenz and Diller B. and Samuel Groff were tried, about a year ago. One year will be saved by Machen for good conduct in the penitentiary, and will reduce the total penalties on account of his irregularities in the postal service to three years.

When the Machen-Crawford-Lorenz case was called today, District Attorney Beach asked that Crawford be first arraigned. A severance had been asked by District Attorney Beach for the trial of Crawford and Machen, but this was denied by Justice Wright. The plea entered by Machen will accomplish the same purpose, and Crawford will be tried separately, a severance having been granted previously for the trial of Lorenz.

MARY A. LIVERMORE, AUTHOR AND REFORMER, PASSES AWAY

Dies at Her Home at Melrose, Mass., Aged 84 Years.

Has Delivered Lectures All Over This Country and England.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE.

Melrose, Mass., May 23.—Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, the well-known writer and reformer, died at her home here today. Bronchitis and a weak heart hastened the end.

Mrs. Mary Ashton Livermore was born in Boston, Dec. 19, 1820, and was the daughter of Timothy Rice. In 1845 she was married to Rev. D. P. Livermore, a Universalist clergyman who died in 1899. In 1857 she removed to Chicago where her husband became editor of a Universalist paper, Mrs. Livermore acting as associate editor. Mrs. Livermore was the first president of the Illinois Woman's Suffrage association. In 1869 she became editor of the Agitator but in the following year she returned to Boston and was editor of the Woman's Journal for two years. At the time of her death she was president of the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage association.

Mrs. Livermore was active in the anti-slavery agitation and Washingtonian Temperance movement. During the Civil war she took a leading part in the work of the United States sanitary commission. In the course of her work on the platform she delivered lectures all over this country and in England and Scotland. She also was the author of many books.

GOLDFIELD BANK FAILS; HAD BUT $21.00 IN CASH ON HAND

Gildfield, Nev., May 23.—The Goldfield Bank and Trust company with liabilities of $78,227 has failed. The assets so far discovered are $4,821, of which $4,800 is in notes. There was $16 in the vault and a five dollar gold piece was found under the counter.

The most disorganized state of affairs seems to exist in the books of the bank. J. B. Young, president of the bank is also president of the Goldfield Lida Investment company. Two checks drawn on the John Cook bank here by W. R. Hale of San Francisco, each for $5,000 in favor of Francis L. Burton, promoter of the Goldfield Lida Investment company were recently paid by the insolvent bank. One of these checks was dated the 23rd and was paid on the 20th. It was evidently presented at the Cook bank by the Goldfield bank and Trust company as it is stamped "No funds." W. H. Hale, having no account there. The bank has two cashier debit slips, one for $36,500 and another for $7,200 account stocks and bonds as collateral.

Cashier James R. Boals was found at Hawthorne late last night. A telegram has been received from Burton in San Fruncsco, denying that he has anything to do with the failure and stating that President Young is there with the bank's collateral endeavoring to get assistance.

Goldfield is a new mining town in the heart of the newly discovered gold country of Southwestern Nevada.

San Francisco, May 23.—J. B. Young, president of the Goldfield Bank and Trust company declared that he had nothing to do with bringing about the crisis in the bank's affairs. He declared that he was opposed to the manner in which the bank was conducted by its cashier and directors.

According to Young, he sold his stock in the bank, but denies that he fled from Goldfield. On the contrary, he says, he came to San Francisco for a brief trip and that he intends to return to the mining town as soon as possible.

Young does not believe that the liabilities of the bank will exceed $100,000 and he says that it should have assets enough to meet this amount.

SWINDLER ARRESTED

Manager of Another "Get-Rich-Quick" Concern In Toils.

Chicago, May 23.—William T. McKee has been arrested here, charged with being the manager of a "get-rich-quick"concern, which has branches in many other cities, and according to the police, has swindled thousands of persons.

The proposition submitted to subscribers by the company was that after paying $1.25 for eighty-four weeks they would receive a diamond valued at $200.

According to the police, the business associates of McKee were driven from Buffalo after the postal authorities had stopped their mail. Then, it is alleged, the name of the concern was changed from the International Mercantile company to the Keystone Commission company.

Then, it is said, the business was taken to Danville, Pa. The next field wast East St. Louis, where the managers stayed a short while and departed. The concern, according to the police, then moved to Houston, Tex., where it again operated under the name of the Keystone company. Two of the officials were arrested there, it is said.

McKee was arraigned before Justice Caverly, who committed the case until June 1.

SENSATION IN CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE

Begins Fight to Prevent Leasing of the City's Gas Plant.

Orders Resignation of Two Officials and Will Remove Others.

Philadelphia, May 23.—Director of Public Works Costello and Director of Public Safety Smyth today, at the request of Mayor Weaver, tendered their resignations. This is the latest and most startling development in the fight against the lease for seventy-five years of the city gas works to the United Gas Improvement company.

Each official in tendering his resignation used the phrase: "To take effect when my successor has qualified," these words are taken in political circles to indicate a determination to hold on to the offices as long as possible as the successors of the two directors must be confirmed by a two-thirds vote of a select council. Mayor Weaver evidently took the same view as it was stated this afternoon that he had notified Messrs. Costello and Smyth that the form of resignations was not satisfactory and he gave them two hours to resign without qualification on pain of removal from office.

The action of the mayor is the all-engrossing topic of conversation here. It is safe to say that no such political sensation has been sprung in twenty-five years. Now that the mayor has declared war on the Republican organization leaders who placed him in office, it is expected that a bitter fight will be waged during the remaling two years of his term. Including policemen and firemen there are upwards of 20,000 officeholders in Philadelphia and practically all of them are at the mercy of the mayor. The "organization" leaders headed by State Insurance Commissioner Durham expect that no mercy will be shown and that every supporter of the "organization" will be removed. No announcement has been made of the successors of Costello and Smyth.

The mayor's first move will undoubtedly be to remove from office all of the forty-three ward leaders who continue their fealty to Mr. Durham. His first move in this direction was to suspend, on Saturday last, Oscar Noll, Republican leader of the Thirty-seventh ward, and an assistant highway commissioner. Today he directed the suspension of A. R. H. Morrow, as assistant director of the department of supplies. The fight grew out of the determination of the "organization" leaders to raise $25,000,000 for public expenses by leasing the city gas works to the United Gas Improvement company for seventy-five years. The mayor was utterly ignored in the transaction, and he has been urged by the newspapers and reform organizations to veto the ordinance of the council's putting the deal into effect. This he declares he will do, and the leaders have declared they will pass it over his veto. They can easily do this, as they control practically both branches, only thirteen votes being cast against the lease in a total membership of 162. The mayor has been in constant communication today with men who are strangers in the city hall. Those have been delegated to the rear by the "organization" are flocking to his standard, and on every side predictions are heard of a fierce political contest with the mayor as the leader of the reform organization and disgruntled former office holders arrayed against the Republicans. The leaders of the latter are defiant in their expressions against the mayor and his friends, and express themselves as perfectly willing to meet them in a battle at the polls.

BIG TRUST COMPANY CLOSES ITS DOORS TO AVOID A RUN

New York, May 23.—The doors of the Merchants Trust company of this city were closed today.

The Merchants Trust company had a capital stock of $500,000, and owed depositors about $2,000,000. An examination of the company's affairs was made by the state banking department on Dec. 23 last. The report of the state banking department showed that the company's book surplus of $1,198,737 had been reduced by the examiners to $1,074,548. While the examiners had increased the value of some of the securities held by the company, they threw out some others as valueless, and reduced the valuation of others. The company is trustee of a $4,000,000 consolidated mortgage on the property of the Hudson Valley Railway company, which is a consolidation of trolley lines around Albany, Troy, Saratoga and Lake George. The bank examiners accepted the company's valuation of the securities of the Hudson Valley Railway company held by it. The company was organized in 1899. In may 1903 the stock reached a high point, 290 being bid for it. Edwin Hawley was president of the company at one time.

The company was closed by the order of F. D. Kilburn, state superintendent of banks, a notice to that effect being posted upon the doors. It was said today that the closing of the institution was due to inability to secure payment of certain large loans on which the collateral consisted of securities of the Hudson Valley Railway company. The company was a participator in the Hudson Valley Railway company syndicate to the extent of $533,500.

Reports that the company would be obliged to discontinue business were circulated in Wall street yesterday and affected the stock market in the late dealings yesterday afternoon. Samuel Untermeyer, counsel for Jacob L. Phillips, president of the Merchants Trust company, gave out the following formal statement:

"In view of the publicity that has been given to the efforts of the company to increase its cash resources and to the unmarketable character of certain of the securities which it holds as collateral for large loans, I have advised the president to recommend the suspension of business so as to prevent a run on the institution."

Mr. Phillips has been president for only a few months. The loans that have crippled the cash resources were not made under his administration and he has no responsibility for them. Ever since Mr. Phillips assumed office his efforts have been directed towards inducing those under whose administration the loans were made to take them out of the institution. This has not yet been done.

"The president will probably make a statement later."

The officers of the trust company are as follows: President, Jacob L. Phillips; vice-president, Cassus W. Wickes; secretary and treasurer, Jacob C. Coyne.

One of the directors is Dr. John P. Munn, physician to the Gould family.

Albany, N. Y., May 23.—Upon the application of Attorney-General Mayer, Justice Cochrane of the supreme court here today appointed Douglas Robinson and the New York Trust company as receivers of the Merchants Trust company. The bond of Mr. Robinson was fixed at $500,000. Under the law the trust company as receiver is not required to give a bond. Local interest in the failure of the Merchants Trust company, is enhanced by the important effect which the failure entails on the affairs of the Hudson Valley Railway company. No one in Albany is in a position to say how it will affect the Hudson Valley railway, whose offices are at Glens Falls, Addison B. Colvin of that place being its president.

INDEMNITY SETTLEMENT

With China Again Delayed Because Russia Wants Silver.

Tien Tsin, May 23.—The settlement of the Boxer indemnity question has been delayed by the action of the Russo-Chinese bank. Russia has chosen to receive her portion of the indenity in silver and the Russo-Chinese bank is endeavoring to obtain payment in Shanghai at the London price of silver instead of the price at Shanghai, thus avoiding extra charges. If China consents the bank will secure an advantage amounting to 1 per cent. The powers have made a protest against the proposition, and it is considered probable that the Russo-Chinese bank will not be successful in its negotiations. No Tung, the governor of Pekin, representing the board of revenue, did, in fact, consent, but his consent was not ratified. If China weakly assents the settlement of the indemnity question will be prolonged indefinitely because similar advantages will be demanded in other quarters.

EXPLAINS TO VON BUELOW

Why Secretary Hay Did Not Call on Him.

Berlin, May 23.—Ambassador Tower called on Chancellor Von Buelow yesterday evening with a message to the chancellor from Secretary Hay, who regretted that he found himself unable to come to Berlin. Mr. Hay desired Mr. Tower to express his compliments to the chancellor and say that only by the advice of his physicians had he given up his intention to make a personal call on the chancellor. The latter was much pleased with the secretary's message, and sent his best wishes for Mr. Hay's recovery.

Former Governor Odell of New York has arrived in Berlin.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Peace Maker Attempts to Stop Quarrel and Is Killed.

Escanaba—As the result of attempting to separate two companions engaged in a quarrel at Wells, Nicholas Skucki, an Austrian was struck on the top of the head with a heavy club, and received injuries from which he died two hours later. John Bushon, who struck the fatal blow, disappeared immediately after the murder, and was caught after an all-night search by the officers of Gladstone.

While playing in a baseball game between Menominee and Escanaba, Albert Hubert, one of the Menominee players, attempted to slide to the base feet foremost and sustained a fracture of the ankle.

Norway—George Roach, a well-known locomotive engineer, had a narrow escape from death at Norway. While leaning out of the window of the cab he lost his balance and fell to the ground, striking on his head, and just missed the wheels. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and for a time it was feared he had fractured his skull.

Manistique—George Scott, foreman of camp No. 45 out from Manistique, shot and killed Henry Deroche. Scott thought Deroche was a bear. During the past few weeks several hogs have been stolen from the camp by bears. Scott, who was watching for the animals, heard a noise in the vicinity of the pig pen and woke Deroche. The foreman slipped out of the shanty with a gun, and slowly approached the pen. He saw the bear and was creeping up to it, when the fatal shot was fired. In the darkness Deroche's body looked like a bear. The bullet struck him in the abdomen. A special train was sent out on the Manistique, Marquette & Northern road carrying Dr. Colet and Sheriff Klagstad, but the man was dead before they arrived.

Ironwood—Joseph Sauter, the 15-year-old son of Mrs. P. Sauter, who resides on Ayer street, had his right foot crushed while riding on a Chicago & Northwestern ore train from Ironwood to Hurley. The young man was alighting from the train when his foot was caught under the wheels, crushing it. He was brought to Runstrom's hospital, where the foot was amputated.

THE KLONDIKE SAID To Have Tin as Well as Gold.

Vancouver, B. C., May 22.—It is said that J. J. Black has discovered a large tin mine 150 miles north of White Horse in the Klondike country. The ore tested averaged 28.32 per cent in tin. There are two veins, one three feet and one five feet. Fifteen claims have been staked and will be developed by a syndicate of Vancouver citizens. Canada provides a heavy bounty for working of tin mines. The lumber, shingle and loggers' associations have joined issue in exposing an alleged irregularity in the Canada Pulp company. They claim that the prospectus of the company in the London Times is misleading. The provincial government has been asked to cancel the pulp concessions to the company.

RAILROAD NEWS

General Freight and Passenger Agents of Milwaukee Here.

Say That Roads Will Enjoy a Prosperous Season.

A party of Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway officials arrived in the city this morning, coming over the old St. Paul & Duluth in a private car from Minneapolis. In the party are E. S. Keeley of Chicago, general freight agent; F. A. Miller of Chicago, general passenger agent; J. T. Conley of Minneapolis, assistant general freight agent, and W. B. Dixon of St. Paul, northwestern passenger agent. The officials will leave for Winnipeg this evening.

"There is nothing of special import connected with our visit to Duluth today," said Mr. Keeley. "We are merely calling at the different offices of the company, and looking for chances to improve the service wherever and whenever possible, following out the usual policy of the road. It is always our policy to do all that we can for the public, and remain friendly with it. We believe the business of a railroad can and should be conducted something along the same system as a grocery store or any other business establishment. The better a store does by the people the better the people will do by the store, and the same holds true of the railroad. Our agents are instructed to always hold this in mind."

Mr. Keeley was asked if there was anything to the report that a through freight and passenger service was soon to be established by the Milwaukee between Duluth and Chicago.

"That is an ever-present possibility," he said, "but the report, so far as it states that such a service will be started in the immediate future, is entirely without foundation. Our company has for a long time contemplated running through trains between Duluth and Chicago, but nothing definite in this direction has as yet been decided upon, and there is no telling just when such trains will be put in operation, but it is certain that this will not occur for some little time yet.

"The freight business is good on our line this spring, and I believe the same is true of the other roads. The outlook for a prosperous season is very good. We look for a good year all the way through."

Mr. Miller, who recently returned from a Western trip, had the same to say of business in the passenger department.

"Everything is doing nicely in the freight and passenger departments of the Western and Northwestern roads," he said, "and the fact that the railroad business is good means that the country generally is in a prosperous condition, for when the railroads are busy it means that things are active in nearly all lines of business. The passenger traffic will be heavy this year, and it already has an excellent start. The Portland fair will help a lot in this respect. A great many people will take advantage of the low rates West who care more for seeing the country than they do about visiting the exposition, although they will, of course, do both. The double attraction is a strong one. In this way the big exposition will prove of benefit to the whole Northwest. It will result, for one thing, in the more rapid settlement of certain parts of the Northwest."

The party lunched at the Kitchi Gammi club as the guests of C. L. Kennedy, commercial agent of the road in Duluth.

LEAVES GREAT NORTHERN. John C. Eden Will Turn Attention to Mining.

John C. Eden, assistant general traffic manager of the Great Northern railroad, and for several years commercial and general agent of the Eastern Minnesota railroad at Duluth, will leave the employ of the Great Northern June 1. He has tendered his resignation and will devote his entire time to mining on the Iron range, where he owns several valuable properties. He will form a partnership with Price McKinney, who is interested in the Stevens mine. Mr. Eden has been in the railroad service since 1880, being connected with the Grand Trunk, Milwaukee and Great Northern roads. He was stationed at Duluth as general agent of the Eastern Minnesota from 1890 to 1896.

PITTSBURG ORCHESTRA

Great Musical Organization and Madame Gadski Delight Duluth.

The story of the visit of the Pittsburg orchestra, under its great leader, Emil Paur, and Madame Gadski, the famous prima donna, to Duluth at the Lyceum last evening, must read much as have nearly all previous accounts of visits to Duluth by great musical organizations—an auditorium full of enthusiasm and a box office deficient in the wherewithal to pay the musicians. In spite of the double attraction—either one sufficient in itself for the evening's entertainment—the usual audience of half size greeted it.

Everyone heard what they expected to, a magnificent organization controlled by a master mind and a musical genius, but there was a rare delight in making the personal acquaintance, as it were, of Mr. Paur. He is a leader whom it is a pleasure to watch, as well as to hear the wonderful music that comes forth at the sway of his baton. Simplicity, dignity and graciousness seemed to be finely blended in his nature.

The program was a brilliant one, opening with the beautiful Leonore overture No. 5 by Beethoven, charmingly interpreted. Some confusion existed over the second number. The original program called for the Tschaikowsky symphony No. 6, (Pathetique). This had been played here by the Thomas orchestra and a request was made for the substitution of the Beethoven "Eroica" symphony. Slips were printed announcing the change and pasted into the programs. This change brought some protest, it being claimed that a single request should not justify a change in an announced program. The force of this was apparent and the slips were torn out. Unfortunately, however, about half or more were left in and while the musically educated people probably knew what was being played, a portion of the audience thought it was something else. The Tschaikowsky symphony was rendered and magnificently. Other numbers were a portion of the delightful Liszt rhapsody No. 3, the ever beautiful Schumann "Traumerei," Moszkowski's serenade and the preludes to acts 1 and 3 of "Lohengrin" by Wagner.

Madame Gadski took the house by storm with her magnificent voice. Nothing finer has ever been heard here and from the lowest tones to the highest notes it was a delight. She sang with orchestral accompaniment the "Tannhaeuser" aria "Dich Theure Halle," and in response to the insistent encore gave "The Call of the Valkyrie" in a style that was positively electric. Later she sang with piano accompaniment Massenet's "Ouvre Tes Yeux Bleus," Weil's "Spring Song" and Schubert's "Erlking." The Weil number was beautiful and an obligato by Mr. Von Kunitz, the concermeister of the orchestra added to its effect. "Erlking" was sung as few can sing it. For an encore she gave a delightful song by Nevin.

There are several things that deserve some public complaint. During the first number, a very delicate and beautiful piece with many pianissimo passages, late comers were being seated and half the pleasure of the number was spoiled. People who cannot get there on time should be compelled to wait until the playing of a number is concluded. The habit that ocasionally prevails among some young men of sitting in the back rows and conducting conversations regardless of the feelings and rights of others, was in evidence last evening and greatly disturbed some of those in the rear rows.

REFORMED PICKPOCKET Went to Police Station to Escape Himself.

New York, May 23.—Patrick Flannagan is 32 years old, has a wife and three children in a cozy flat, and for five years has resisted temptation and kept out of Sing Sing. He is a stonecutter by trade. Lately he has been chopping stone and drilling rock on the Pennsylvania station site. Yesterday afternoon the foreman discharged a gang of men, among them being Flannagan. Pat took a drink or two and the old fever came on him. While he was lost in his thoughts some pickpocket extracted from Patrick's Pocket $7.50 that he had saved up.

"Guess I'll have to get my fingers to work now," he said disconsolately. Going through Thirtieth street the green lights of the station impelled him to walk in. "Better lock me up, Sarge," he said. "I am out of a job and missus and the kids is likely to go hungry, and I am likely to go picking pockets. I was just going to try the Thirty-fourth street cars now."

Patrick told his story, gave his number in the rogues' gallery and his cell at Sing Sing. The sargeant locked him up.

ATLANTIC CITY THIEVES Stole Everything From Rugs to Electric Lights.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 23.—The discovery of a room beneath the board walk, furnished with costly wares looted from the Hotel Raleigh, has resulted in the suspension of four policemen pending an investigation. On the floor of the room were two rugs worth $1,000 each, while a stock of wines, liquors and cigars was found, estimated to be worth many hundred dollars. Not only was the room furnished with all the comforts of a club, but it had running water and electric lights. Some one had tapped the water pipe and the electric light wires running into a merry-go-round at States avenue, and run the light and water into the room.

FROM SAME BOX Where the Foods Come From.

"Look here waiter, honest now, don't you dip every one of these flaked breakfast foods out of the same box?" "Well, yes, boss, we duz, all 'cept Grape-Nuts, cause that don't look like the others and people know 'zackly what Grape-Nuts looks like. But there's 'bout a dozen different ones named on the bill of fare and they are all thin rolled flakes so it don't make any difference which one a man calls for we just take out the order from one box."

This talk led to an investigation. Dozens of factories sprung up about three years ago making various kinds of breakfast foods, seeking to take the business of the original prepared breakfast food—Grape-Nuts. These concerns after a precarious existence, nearly all failed, leaving thousands of boxes of their foods in mills and warehouses. These were in several instances bought up for a song by speculators and sold out to grocers and hotels for little or nothing. The process of working off this old stock has been slow. One will see the names on menus of flaked foods that went out of business a year and a half or two years ago. In a few cases where the abandoned factories have been bought up, there is an effort to resuscitate the defunct, and by copying the style of advertising of Grape-Nuts, seek to influence people to purchase. But the public has been educated to the fact that all these thin flaked foods are simply soaked wheat or oats rolled thin and dried out and packed. They are not prepared like Grape-Nuts, in which the thorough baking and other operations which turn the starch part of the wheat and barley into sugar, occupy many hours and result in a food so digestible that small infants thrive on it, while it also contains the selected elements of Phosphate of Potash and Albumen that unite in the body to produce the soft gray substance in brain and nerve centres. There's a reason for Grape-Nuts, and there have been many imitations, a few of the article itself, but many more of the kind and character of the advertising. Imitators are always counterfeiters and their printed and written statements cannot be expected to be different than their goods.

This article is published by the Postum Co., at Battle Creek. Additional evidence of the truth can be supplied in quantities.

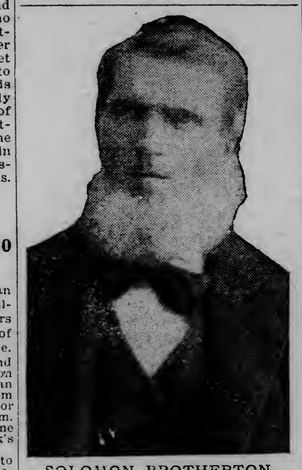
CLOSED IN DEATH

Solomon Brotherton's Long Life Ended By Final Summons.

Interesting Discussions to Be Heard at Congregational Meeting.

Solomon Brotherton, one of the best known men in West Duluth died at 10 o'clock last evening of general breakdown from old age. He was 74 years of age and since the death of his wife, three years ago has been gradually failing. He was very much affected by that loss and all attempts of his children to comfort him failed. Their married life had been exceptionally happy and they were constant companions.

His death took place at his home, 222 North Fifty-third avenue West. He has lived there for thirteen years. He leaves a family of nine children five boys and four girls. The boys all of whom live in West Duluth and are well know there are: Thomas A. S., James, Joseph E. L., John, and



SOLOMON BROTHERTON.

William F. The other children are: Mrs. William Seguin, Mrs. Napoleon Seguin, Mrs. George C. O'Brien and Mrs. George Bothwell. Another member of the family is Joseph Hickson, who was married to a Miss Brotherton, daughter of Solomon Brotherton and who is dead.

The funeral will be held Thursday morning at 9 o'clock from St. James Catholic church and interment will be had in Calvary cemetery.

One particularly sad feature of the affair is the misfortune which has befallen Mrs. O'Brien, one of the daughters of the deceased. She and her whole family are quarantined with smallpox and she is therefore not permitted to even look upon her father's remains. Together with the worries over her family, she is almost prostrated over the new loss and the condition accompanying it. The rest of the family were at their father's bedside when death came.

A May Snow Storm.

J. J. Galway, well known at West Duluth, and who is manager of the North Shore Abrasive company, arrived here Sunday morning and left on his return trip to Point Corundum, near Split Rock. He took with him on his return $1,000 worth of supplies. Mr. Galway told his friends while here of a narrow escape from death that he and a few others had, two weeks ago Sunday. They went out on Lake Superior for a sail and got caught in a seven-hour snow storm. Through luck principally, and aided by skillfully directing of the boat, they reached land, but after an experience they do not care to have repeated.

C. O. F. Meeting.

The five courts of the order in this city will be represented by delegates. The local court has the honor of holding the highest office in the state, that of chief ranger. P. H. Martin is the officer, and a strong effort will be made to re-elect him to that position. This will be an important convention of the order, and many changes of vital interest to the society will come up for discussion. At tonight's meeting of the local court a discussion on proposed changes will take place, and a large attendance is expected on this account.

HAY TO MEET FOREIGN MINISTER DELCASSE.

Paris, May 23.—Secretary Hay will arrive here next Monday for a stay of two days. Arrangements have been made for him to meet Foreign Minister Delcasse. This is likely to arouse considerable speculation, but Mr. Hay's only purpose is to make a visit of courtesy upon M. Delcasse, and the latter, on hearing this, expressed a desire to make the first call upon the American secretary of state. The reception of Mr. Hay would have assumed a notable character at the Elysee and the foreign office had the secretary not requested the avoidance of official and social functions, owing to his wish to secure the full benefit from the rest cure taken at Bad Nauheim.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO NOW WORTH $19,000,000.

AMERICAN POLO TEAM Organized to Contest For the Bennett Cup.

London, May 23.—Craig Wadsworth, second secretary of the American embassy, has organized an American team to contest for the James Gordon Bennett polo cup in Paris, about the middle of June. The players will be Richard Tobin of San Francisco, Frank J. Mackay, Lawrence M. Creery and Craig Wadsworth. The cup was first offered two years ago, but as there were no American entries, it has never heretofore been competed for. It is considered probably that an English team will enter.

MILK LICENSES. Every Owner of Two Cows Must Get One.

Harris Bennett, state dairy inspector, is not receiving applications for milk licenses in as great a number as he should, and with the date when they must be taken out, which is June 1, but a week distant, only about half the number that should come have done so. It is, perhaps, not generally known that every person who keeps two cows, whether he sells milk or not, must get the state license, which involves the payment of a fee of $1. About 100 have come in, but there are easily another hundred that should. Mr. Bennett's office is 509 Palladio building.

A professional model whose complexion is of the classic type has this to say about her smooth skin and its treatment:

"I suppose I ought to say that I owe my complexion to soap and water, but to tell the actual truth, neither soap nor water agree with my skin very well. I seldom wash my face, vulgar as this may sound.

"I am accustomed to taking a cold bath every day, which is a matter of habit. It is good for some people and bad for others, but it agrees perfectly with me. I feel invigorated by it.

LINEN FOR NEW HOME.

Some Pointers That Will Be of Interest.

When they're intended for that new little home, even work on the practical linens becomes fascinating, and each "stitch, stitch, stitch," that the poor little seamstress of poet fame sang so dolorously, is taken with a joyous hum as accompaniment, says the Indianapolis Sentinel.

Cup towels are hemmed with more of a pleasant feeling that mere patience, and the tiny stitches are apt to be again.

As to tablecloths and napkins, there's something wrong with the woman who doesn't revel in fine damasks and beautiful table linen, and doesn't set her stitches with conscious pride, not only while she's working on her trousseaus, but as long as she has a table to sew on, and get her fingers on the right linens.

If you've a choice between fine linens and enough linens, choose the latter. You must have enough to keep the table always dainty, and a few fine ones won't do that. But manage someway to eke out one best one. In spite of Mme. Recamier's famous habit of living as if she were always before a court, and so learning perfect carriage and manners, most of us like to set our tables a little better when we hold court, as we might term our times of entertaining.

Match your tablecloths with napkins whenever you can; and, if possible, embroider them. If you can't embroider yourself, there are women who do beautiful work, and do it for an almost nominal sum, when you consider the actual amount of labor necessarily expended.

If you get lunch napkins—the kind with fringe—whip each napkin around close to the linen, something like a crude sort of hemstitching. It won't show, but will tell wonderfully in the wear. It can be easily done by holding the fringe down over your fingers—if you leave it loose, the work is almost impossible to accomplish.

Towels you've never enough of, so no matter how many you've allowed, get more! Have your best towels embroidered, of course, with a single big initial, in preference to your monogram; but have, besides, bath towels (those Turkish towelling ones) and the little hand towels, kitchen rolier towels and any other kinds you may happen on. You can't have too many.

And have, too, plenty of the pretty linens. You'll have to replenish everyday kinds, but, unless you're blessed with a goodly percentage of this world's goods, you're apt to let more apparently pressing needs push the others aside, and they're just as necessary.

REDDY'S ASSIST

By D. M. Henderson.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The placards which had been displayed throughout Cordova, announcing a post-season game between the home club and the Hillsboro nine, the team which had fought Cordova so stubbornly for pennant honors, brought throngs to see the game. Not only did the prospect of a close game attract the people. They were to have their first opportunity to pay homage to the sturdy fellows who had brought to the town the handsomest pennant which now floated over the ball park.

The lion's share of the crowd's attention went to Reddy Dillon, who had been Cordova's mainstay in the pitcher's box. Reddy, however, was not then in an appreciative mood, although no one but himself could be blamed for that which caused his unhappiness. Upon the day before, Reddy had been at the railroad station when a young lady alighted from the train. Perceiving by her bewilderment that she was in a strange town and surmising that the person she had expected to meet was not there, he, with true Irish gallantry, had offered his services. The girl timidly accepted his offer and under his guidance soon reached her destination. Now with so slight material, the impressionable Reddy had begun to weave a romance, for the girl's loveliness had captured him from the start. Although he remembered how his ugliness had caused the girls of Cordova to worship him from afar only, mistaking the grateful girl's natural cordiality, he comforted himself with the sophistry that this girl was not of Cordova and therefore different in temperament from the town girls. He then began to plan a way to meet her again, deciding to ask Daly, one of his comrades who boarded at the house at which the girl was staying, to bring about an introduction after the game, were she a spectator.

When the hour for the game drew near he began to watch for her. To his delight he saw her enter the grand stand and choose a seat in the front row. He was all the more delighted when he saw that she was unattended, but his joy vanished when he saw Pembroke, Hillsboro's pitcher, approach her, for she made no effort to conceal her joy at the meeting. The more Reddy watched the pair the more he became convinced that they were sweethearts. Her presence in Cordova was now explained—she had come to see her lover pitch. As his dream faded Reddy became moody, causing much wonderment among the friends who sought him out. And as he looked at the handsome Pembroke, his own ugliness impressed itself upon him. By a strange freak of his hot nature, his sulkiness turned to anger against his unconscious rival. He now saw self-esteem in every movement of Pembroke; he beheld the marks of a dandy in the player's neat, well-fitting uniform. He hated this dude pitcher.

In Woman's Sphere

Social, Musical and Club Circles.

Tomorrow evening "The Merchant of Venice," under the stage direction of John Milton, will be given at the Lyceum. The affair is under the auspices of the Women's Council, and the club women of the city are greatly interested in the production. The Women's Council is an organization composed of the presidents and representatives of the various women's clubs of the city, and work of special advantage to the city and such work as may be most fittingly undertaken by the women citizens receives the attention of the council. Through the efforts of this organization the department of domestic science has been added to the normal school, barren and unsightly spots in the city have been improved, and other work acomplished. This year the council is devoting the most of its energies to school gardens for the good of unemployed school boys during the summer months and a school of domestic science for the young girls who would otherwise be passing the time on the street, without home care or influence. These two projects have been well begun and a generous percentage of the proceeds of tomorrow evening's production will go to further this work.

Aside from the interest in the affair through the club women, society is interested in the play for itself and the people who will appear. John Milton will assume the character of Shylock and Mrs. Milton will appear as Portia and the other characters will be taken by well-known readers.

Miss Milly Baker has returned to Duluth for the summer and a large number of her friends here will be interested in knowing of the success with which she has met dring the last year. Miss Baker finished the season as leading soprano with the Isle of Spice company which finished its season at Sandusky, O. She began in the chorus and as understudy to the leading woman's part and when her opportunity to take the character came, was so successful that she finished the season. Miss Baker has the offer of two positions of a New York engagement for next year and with this arrangement will be enabled to continue her musical studies in New York. She will leave the first of August for rehearsals and during the next two months will be the guest of her parents in this city.

CLASSIC COMPLEXION.

How Professional Models Acquire Desirable Things.

It is only a short time ago that a society of Parisian artists voted upon the merits and demerits of their models. There were twelve models in the voting contest, which was to be decided wholly on the beauty of the complexion. The majority of the votes were cast for a certain model, "not because she was so beautiful," explained one of the artists to the writer, "but because she has such a classic complexion."

A "classic complexion," by the way, is one that is absolutely smooth, says the Brooklyn Eagle. English girls in their early youths have classic skins. The skin is smooth and has a ripe color. The skin of the Irish girl is a little too fair. It is too pure and too suggestive of vegetation diet, which is not very strengthening. It fades too early and plumpness is succeeded by pudginess.

But the classic complexion endures. It is found most often in Italy, and it is engendered by the genial climate which brings out the good points of the complexion. "You sweat out the impurities," explained a Virginia girl to a friend more truthfully than poetically.

Of late years the American girl is rejoicing in this skin and, on the street of an afternoon among the best groomed girls one will see a dozen or so with this classic skin. It is not white, nor brown, nor pink, nor yellow. It is olive, perfectly smooth, clear in color, and it looks as though nothing had ever disturbed it and never would.

It is a dust proof complexion, a com-

nine, losing the toss, went to the bat first, to be retired in one, two, three order. Pembroke, as he came in from the pitcher's box smiled at his sweetheart. Reddy saw him smile and grinned unpleasantly to himself. If he couldn't boast of a good figure and fine features he possessed a good pitching arm. If he wasn't able to win a girl he could win a game. "I'll make him look small before her, anyhow," he muttered.

The game developed into a pitcher's battle. The players caught the spirit of their leaders and supported them faultlessly. Again and again the crack batsmen on both sides strove mightily but unsuccessfully to hit the ball. The score at the end of the eighth inning was 1 to 1.

As Reddy seated himself upon the players' bench at the opening of the ninth inning, he found his comrades conversing upon the subject which interested him.

"Pembroke's working hard!" one of them remarked.

"No wonder!" another said. "He gets a place on a major league team if he wins. I heard it from Pembroke himself," the speaker continued, in answer to Reddy's query. "The manager of one of the big teams—the same chap Manager Benson got ahead of when he signed Reddy here—has his eye on Pembroke, whose average stands next to Reddy's. But he's watching Marley of the Cliftons, too, whose average is just below Pembroke's. Now neither of the two have won a game from Reddy, so when the manager heard that this game was to be played he wrote Pembroke that if he won the place would be his."

The first batter was retired on strikes.

"He's game!" a player remarked.

"He's working for more than a big league's position!" Daly said. "He's engaged to a girl over there in the grand stand. When big league pay's assured he's going to get married."

The second batter was also retired on strikes.

"Good luck to them!" one of the first speakers responded. "If that's so we won't mind losing."

"We ain't going to lose, though," growled Reddy, as he went to take his turn at the bat, the batter preceding having managed to secure a base on balls. A moment later, to the determined Reddy's great satisfaction, he made a single. The bleachers, who were anxiously awaiting an opportunity now brought into use every conceivable means to rattle Pembroke. The place became a pendemonium.

Pembroke knew that his crucial moment had arrived. At an earlier time, under similar circumstances, he had lost control of his nerves and disaster had resulted. He had dreaded ever since the approach of such a crisis. He battled against his nervousness, but despite his efforts the batter who faced him went to first on balls. The pandemonium continued. Hope, however, came to the distressed pitcher when he saw the next batter. This man was the weakest batter on the team. Cunningly he delivered the ball, eager to stop these hellish noises. But the unexpected happened. The batter caught the ball squarely upon the end of his bat. It soared away like a freed bird, striking at last against the right field fence. It seemed a home run, but Parsons, the right fielder, made a throw which landed the ball in the catcher's hands before the runner crossed the plate, and he was called out. But Cordova was now three runs ahead.

The home team now took the field, bent upon retiring its opponents in short order. The first Hillsboro batter struck out; the second bunted, but, as a result of Reddy's clever fielding, found the first baseman awaiting to touch him with the ball. Victory for Cordova seemed assured, but things were yet to take an amusing turn.

Now, as the third batter was approaching the plate, Reddy glanced towards Pembroke's sweetheart. His glance became a stare, for he beheld her furtively wiping her eyes, and he noticed that her face was as white as the rag she held against it. Another impulse, as sudden in its coming as was the one of jealous anger against Pembroke, seized Reddy.

"Play ball!" cautioned the umpire.

Reddy resumed pitching. Although delivered with great care the first ball dug into the earth before the home plate. The next ball, as cautiously delivered flew so high that the catcher had to jump for it. That person gasped, while Reddy scratched his head in apparent perplexity. Four balls were soon called. Those who but a moment before were shouting triumphantly now sat silently staring at the idol. The next batter had two strikes and three balls called upon him when, with many a twist, Reddy delivered a ball which went wide of the batsman's reach by the length of a yard. The batter who followed was struck in the side by an inshoot. And now, with the bases filled, Reddy at last found the plate. But the ball that sped across it was such that a tyro's bat could not have missed it. The next batter struck out, but Hillsboro had won by a run.

In awful gloom, the spectators dispersed. Suddenly, without a comforting word to Reddy, his comrades left the field. Through the gathering dusk Reddy left the park and went towards his boarding house. As he passed the lighted waiting room. He caught sight of Pembroke and his sweetheart. Their faces were depicted happiness. For several minutes Reddy watched the girl.

"Them purty eyes were nivir mint to hould tears!" he said to himself, resuming his walk.

GIRL KNOCKS OUT MASHER

Takes Boxing Lessons In Order to "Land" Properly.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 23.—Annoyed by persistent attention of a masher for the last month, Miss Jennie Heade, a Germantown stenographer, took boxing lessons from her brother, and when the masher addressed her Sunday, while on her way from church, Miss Heade turned on him. With three well directed blows the young man went down. When he recovered his senses he leaped to his feet and fled.

Miss Heade met the masher, who lives Olney, about a month ago, and he at once began to force his attention on her. The young woman then went to her brother.

"I'll fix him," said young Heade.

"No, you mustn't," his sister replied. "Teach me how to box. Then I can take care of myself."

When he saw his sister was in earnest he bought a small pair of gloves for her and sparring lessons began. At the end of two weeks she became proficient.

Meanwhile the masher persisted. Sunday she resolved it was time to call a halt. The masher appeared at church, as usual, and took a seat in an adjoining pew. After the services he followed her towards her home.

When the masher spoke to her Miss Heade wheeled around. Her right arm shot out and her fist caught him on the side of the jaw. Then the left arm swung on the masher's jaw. He staggered back. Another terrific right swing landed on the point of the man's jaw and he dropped in the street. The young woman looked at him as he rose to his feet, and then he caught sight of her clinched fist under his nose he gathered himself together and fled down the street.

WILL TALK IT OVER

Traction Company Magnates and Citizens Will Hold Conference.

Will Endeavor to Settle Disputed Points Regarding Service.

The long delayed conference between the Duluth street railway and the representatives of Duluth citizens will be held tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the city council chamber.

Thomas Lowry, the head of the traction company, will come up from Minneapolis to attend the meeting and whatever he consents to will doubtless be final.

Efforts have been made by City Attorney Bert Fesler for the last month or or six weeks to arrange for a conference with Mr. Lowry, but the latter has been in the east on business and but recently returned to Minneapolis. Last evening Mr. Fesler reached him on the long distance telephone, and Mr. Lowry consented to come to Duluth for the conference tomorrow morning. He will probably arrive on the early morning train and will remain only a few hours.

The city attorney, the members of the council, representatives of the Duluth and West Duluth Commercial clubs and some representative citizens of Woodland and Lester Park will be in attendance at the conference to present the city's side of the case.

The two principal reasons for calling the conference are the wishes of the West Duluth people for an extension of the Grand avenue line, and the desire of the Woodland people for the double truck service to the end of the Woodland line in place of the present stub line service from Hunter's Park.

There is also a general demand for the double truck cars on all lines in the city, for the payment of the license fee of $10 per year for all cars operated under the old West Duluth franchise, and for the assistance of the company in the sprinkling of the city's streets.

It is not likely that the company will be willing to agree to all of these concessions without a protest, and the meeting tomorrow is likely to be productive of a warm discussion.

IMPRESSED WITH JAPAN

G. G. Barnum and Party Return From the Orient.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Barnum, their son, George, and Allan House, son of F. E. House, returned yesterday afternoon from their tour of the Orient. Mr. Barnum is enthusiastic over the possibilities and the progress of Japan. He says he and his party enjoyed every minute of their absence and were much impressed with the Japanese. Mr. Barnum said that there is but little furore about war in Japan for the Japs are confident of victory. He ventured the opinion that the Russian fleet, which is looking for the Japs, will never return, nor will it get to Vladivostok. It will be simply prey for the Japs. He was particularly impressed with the cleanliness and intelligence of the Japs. Ninety-seven per cent of the inhabitants of the island can read and write and they are teaching the Russian prisoners English. Children are not whipped, but obey and the Japs are temperate invariably. As a people they are hospitable and welcome Americans and English particularly.

At a cherry blossom party which the Barnums attended at the invitation of the emperor, the men all wore silk hats and frock coats showing that the native dress is going out. The party was magnificent and the empress greeted each one in person. Mr. Barnum says that while it is practically assured that Japan will dominate China, there is no danger of a yellow peril as some claim.

As to the Philippine islands, Mr. Barnum says the best thing the United States can do is to establish a strong naval base there and sell the rest to Japan.

New Park Point Service.

Commencing tomorrow the Interstate Traction company, which operates a street car line on Park Point, will inaugurate a double track service from the car barn at Fourteenth street to Oatka beach. It had been expected to put the new double truck cars in service on the Park Point line by May 1, but owing to the rush of orders at the car works where the new vehicles are being turned out, the cars could not be shipped on time.

A telegram received by the management of the traction company today gives the assurance that the cars are now on the way and unless some unforeseen delay occurs the double truck cars will be in service June 1.

DULUTHIANS IN NEW YORK

Former Residents Here Making Good In the Metropolis.

An old Duluthian recently returned to this city from New York has an interesting tale to tell of the success of a number of young men who are carving their fortunes out in that city and who formerly belonged to Duluth.

One of the most prominent of Duluth's contingent in New York is Arthur W. Little, formerly treasurer of the Lyceum theater here. Mr. Little after everal changes in the metropolis, became first assistant manager of the big Waldorf-Astoria hotel. He has been connected with the big caravansary for some years, and his acquaintance among the big men of the country who patronize it is large and valuable.

Charles Eldridge, who was a former resident of Duluth, is now connected with a big iron company in an official capacity and owns a beautiful residence in one of the Jersey suburbs.

Verplanck Quilliard, who made a great success on the stage in the one production he appeared in "Venus," under the management of E. E. Rice, is now and has been for some time, connected with a big advertising company. He retired from the stage after his one success and made for a business career in which he has been more than ordinarily successful.

All of these men were members of the old Bohemian club, which ran in Duluth for several years. Some of the young women who joined in the amateur productions given by the club have also been successful. Adelaide Sawyer, whose stage name is Adelaide Thurston, made a success for several seasons on the road and then was the first to follow Maude Adams in the part of Lady Babbie in The Little Minister."

Following this engagement she became a star under the management of Frank, Claxton and Paul Wilstach and for several years has been making money in such pieces as "Cosy Corners," "Polly Primrose" and others of the quiet comedy drama character.

Mina George, who played character bits with the old Bohemian club, and now known profesionally as Bayonne Whipple, has also made a success on the stage, having been leading woman for one of the musical comedy hits of the season last year.

Frederick Hartley, another of the Bohemians, made a most emphatic hit in New York when he supported Julia Arthur in "More Than Queen" at the Broadway theater. He played Jurot and played it well enough to make a solid reputation for himself. Hartley's death was widely mourned in the profession.

Ernest Hannegan, another of the old Bohemians, has been a successful newspaper man in New York for ten years.

Arthur Miller, formerly manager of the Lyceum and a Bohemian, is now personal manager for Francis Wilson.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

New York, May 23.—The Evening Post says today that proposals have been made and are believed to be satisfactory to President Alexander and Vice President Hyde, that control of the Equitable society be turned over to a board of trustees. The Evening Post also says that telephonic communication from Washington this afternoon gave assurance without details that the plan to enlist the aid of the government in securing a full investigation of the business as it is now conducted, had received unsolicited and wholly unexpected aid from a powerful quarter."

ALWAYS FRESH FOOD.

Crisp and Easily Digested, Malta-Vita Goes Straight From Its Huge Ovens to the Many WHo Eat It.

The Malta-Vita Pure Food company, of Battle Creek, Mich., has adopted a successful method of keeping the public always supplied with fresh Malta-Vita, the perfect food.

When Malta-Vita comes from the ovens, it is the crispest, most delicious food in the world, containing only 1 per cent of moisture. The other 99 per cent is food—brain and bone and nerve and muscle food—and most easily digested because the gelatinized starch of the thoroughly cooked wheat has been converted, by fine malt extract, into maltose (malt sugar).

No other food preparation contains such a low degree of moisture.

Of course, if Malta-Vita were permitted to stand on the grocery store shelves for months it might lose some of its crispness. But such a state of affairs is not permitted.

The Malta-Vita company limits orders from every wholesale dealer to a quantity which the company knows can be disposed of quickly in the wholesaler's territory. The wholesaler, in turn, makes only such shipments to grocers as he knows they will be able to handle satisfactorily.

Thus the grocer's supply of Malta-Vita is always as fresh and crisp as when it comes from the ovens in the big factory at Battle Creek—always the kind that melts in the mouth.

Malta-Vita is so deliciously refreshing and satisfying that it should be in every home. It is the only perfect food. Best for children and best for grown folks.

At all grocers now 10 cents. Same high quality, same big package as when sold for 15 cents.

Man of Novel Occupation Gets Ten Day Sentence.

Finn Sentenced For Threatening to Carve Ferry Engineer.

"Yes, sir, I'm a laboringman, judge. I work for my living."

"Let me see your hands. They don't look as if you overdid it. What is your occupation? Running for office on the woman's suffrage ticket?"

"No, sir. I manufacture smoked glasses for people to watch eclipses of the sun through. Business is dull these days though. Naturally in my line of business there are long spells when business is quiet."

"I believe that peculiar line of activity is not suited to your faculties," replied the judge. "How would breaking stone suit you?"

"I don't believe I could hold a job like that down, your honor."

"Well, we'll give you a trial for ten days, and if you don't like it at the end of that time the sheriff can fire you."

This pleasant little piece of repartee took place in court this morning between Judge Windom and a man who gave his name as Abe Johnson, and whom the police are anxious to see shake the dust of Duluth from his feet. They claim he has a funny little habit of running his hands through the pockets of drunken lumberjacks.

Just because the engineer of the Duluth-Superior ferry boat would not vacate his seat and allow August Kolsobakka to occupy the warm spot next the boiler, Kolsobakka pulled a gun and a knife and threatened to make mince meat of the engineer.

The engineer said he had promised his mother when but a child that he would not allow anybody to cut him into mince meat, and he was determined to keep his word. But Kolsobakka insisted, and would not show proper respect for the engineer's promise until the later threw him down on the deck and sat on his head while the captain took away the knife and gun.

The judge gave Kolsobakka thirty days for attempted subordination of perjury.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., TO BOLT?

Rumor That Magnate's Son Rejected Standard Oil Methods.

New York, May 23.—John D. Rockefeller Jr., according to a discussion among the members of his Bible class Sunday, intends to follow his action of resigning the leadership of the class by withdrawing from all official connection with the Standard Oil company.

This determination, it was said, is due only in part, if at all, to ill health, but is largely the outgrowth of the great public outcry against "tainted money" recently raised by Congregational ministers in New England. A member of the Bible class at the close of the meeting said that he understood young Rockefeller had held several heated interviews with his father on the general subject of Standard Oil methods.

Rockefeller Jr., according to report, had made it clear to Rockefeller Sr., that the former did not approve of all the Standard Oil's modes of doing business, but regarded them as affording at least an excuse for the cry which has been raised against "tainted money."

As for young Mr. Rockefeller's health, it was said his real ailment had turned out to be nervous dyspepsia of a type similar to that which afflicted his father for years. The trouble is attributed to the care and worry growing out of the great responsibility that has devolved upon the young man since his father transferred to him the actual official control or a share in the Standard Oil and the various banking and railroad corporations affiliated with the monopoly.

Considerable solicitude as to his health was expressed by members of his class. It was recalled by several members today that the young man had been depressed and despondent for some time.

Rumor of a break between them on the subject of Standard Oil methods and "tainted money," with a determination on the part of the son to clear himself of the taint, did not arouse much surprise among members of the Bible class, who discussed the subject.

Young Rockefeller has devoted himself with every show of enthusiasm to his Bible class and has, within the last few months, gone publicly on record as saying some sharp things about modern business methods. He has said that a corporation that did not do good to others as well as to itself would ultimately fail.

According to a member of the class, young Rockefeller while in Cannes some time ago was under the care of a specialist, who told him that unless he showed great improvement this summer he would have to return to Europe this fall and continue the cure during the winter.

At the Rockefeller home in Tarrytown young Rockefeller declined to be interviewed on the rumored withdrawal from Standard Oil.

S. C. Jackson Writes That He Likes Minnesota Lumberjacks.

Is Sending Man to Duluth to Get 120 of Them.

S. C. Jackson, general manager of the American Lumber company, formerly of the Clark-Jackson Lumber company of Duluth, still has a strong affection for the Northern lumberjack, according to a letter received by G. S. Richards of the National Employment company. Mr. Clark is head of the lumbering operations for the American company in New Mexico, and the work of seeing that enough men for the several logging camps are secured is a part of his duties.

In the communication referred to he announces that he is about to send a man to Duluth to enlist the services of two car loads of Northern Minnesota lumberjacks, and as an inducement to them to leave the fragrant pine forests of this section of the country he will furnish them with free transportation all the way to the Southwest, because, he says, their work is far superior to that of any woodsmen who are to be found in the South. He believes it will pay the company to go to this extra expense to get men on the scene who really understand all the ins and outs of the business, and who are not afraid to work for their money.

Sixty tie makers and as many general woodsmen, such as sawyers, cant hook men, top loaders and teamsters, will make up the party. They will be paid from $25 a month for sawyers to $60 for top loaders, and are guaranteed five years steady employment, the year round, if they will take enough baggage along to prove that they really intend to go to work, and that they are not merely putting in their applications to get free transportation.

Council's Action on Lincoln Park Pavilion Is Objected to.

Signers of Petition Feel They Have Been Slighted.

Those who have been fighting the granting of a permit for a dancing pavilion at Lincoln park, are incensed to a considerable degree by the action of the city council last night in laying the matter over for a week. This action was taken on motion of Alderman Tessman, who said that justice should be done the applicant as well as others. Mr. Tessman's stand in the matter cannot be well understood by the petitioners from the West end, in view of the fact that he does not belong down there and also in view of the further fact that the petitions presented to the council contain 1356 names asking that the permit be not granted.

Considerable protest is being made at the West end this morning. Those who signed and circulated the petitions are not at all pleased. They feel that Alderman Tessman and the council has rather strained their sense of so-called justice when they hold up the wishes of 1,356 people for the wishes of two. Regarding the matter, J. J. Moe said this morning:

"I cannot see where the sense of justice mentioned at the council comes in. We have two people—the owner of the property and the man who wishes to lease it—who desire a dancing pavilion at Lincoln park; on the other hand we have 1,356 people who live in the neighborhood of the park, who demand that the pavilion must not be permitted to exist. And yet the city council in its wisdom feels that it must delay matters in order that the hopeless minority may have what the alderman from the Fifth ward terms "justice.' There has been enough delay now and the matter should have been settled one way or the other last night. It would have been fairer to Mr. Chestock and it certainly would have been fairer to the petitioners.

"Neither the council or anybody else should get the misunderstanding that we are fighting this matter because Mr. Chestock or the person who owns the property wants it. It is not a matter of personal opposition. The fight would be made no matter who the applicants had been. The only thing is that we do not want that pavilion and we are not going to have it if we can prevent it. It is the sole desire of those who petitioned the council that morality be sustained in the West end and we sincerely believe that such a pavilion as is proposed would tend to demoralize our part of the city. So far as Mr. Chestock is concerned, I have met him only once and have no feeling for him either way. As to the lady who owns the property, I wish her well, but I for one do not want to see that pavilion established at the West end, and that, I believe, is the feeling of every signer to those petitions.

"If the council can explain why the wishes of 1356 signers should be held up for the wishes of two people, I should like to hear that explanation."

SIXTY INITIATED

In Modern Samaritans at Columbia Hall.

Samaritanism at the West end received a great advance last evening when sixty recruits were added to its ranks at the ceremony which took place at that time in Columbia hall, under the auspices of Beta council. Forty-eight of these were men and twelve were women. Good Samaritan Charles E. Dice presided at the initiation of the men, and Lady Good Samaritan Mrs. A. A. Parrington conducted the initiation of the women. The work was done under a special dispensation of Imperial Good Samaritan George H. Crosby.

Following the initiation a program of more than ordinary talent was given. William S. McCormick delivered an address, and his sallies and eloquence were greeted with great applause. Mrs. J. Twaddle, who was in excellent voice, sang, and was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. A. Andrews. Miss Agnes Johnson gave a reading in splendid style, showing fine talent in elocution. Thomas Colbertsen played a violin solo with his usual charm. The committee which prepared the program should be congratulated on the success of its efforts. This committee consisted of R. Johnson, A. Carlson, G. Hultquist, D. Shesgren and J. H. Hultquist.

A dance followed the program and was enjoyed by all. Blewett's orchestra playing excellent music. The ladies served refreshments, and should be congratulated on the beauty of the decorations.

West End Fortunate.

The council last night voted to start the improvement of West Superior street between Eighth and Twenty-fourth avenues before any other street improvements are made. Alderman Schaffer is largely responsible for the successful pushing through of this matter, pointing out that the city could not afford to risk the finishing of smaller improvements this year, to the detriment of the larger and more important one. This improvement will involve an expenditure of about $100,000 and it is likely that the work will not be commenced before Aug. 1.

The funeral of Ellemore L. Wendell of 319 Twenty-first avenue West was held this afternoon and the body was interred in the Lutheran cemetery. The child was only one year old but died of consumption, evidently inherited from the father, who died with the disease one year ago. The mother, Mrs. Ellen L. Wendell has the sympathy of all.

St. Luke's Episcopal church will have a choir practice tomorrow evening and it is urged that there be a full attendance.

Sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. John Jackson of 2215 West Tenth street and to Mr. and Mrs. Gust Nelson of 4118 West Fourth street.

Many building permits are being issued to West end people for improving houses and building new ones. Among the latest permits was one to the Duluth Lumber company for the erection of a brick boiler house on Garfield avenue, to cost $1,500.

INVENTED A SPEEDY BOAT

Iowa Farmer's Device That Will Revolutionize Navigation.

New York, May 23.—A muscular farmer from North McGregor, Iowa, arrived here a month ago and has already convinced a group of capitalists that his principles for building every variety of vessel that travels the water will revolutionize the construction of launches, ships and war vessels.

He claims that if constructed according to his plans high power naphtha launches will attain a speed of thirty-five miles an hour, and torpedo boat destroyers with 8,000 horse-power and the ordinary displacement will be able to make at least fifty-five miles an hour. This farmer-inventor is William B. Motherall. Though he has received scarcely a years' actual schooling in his life, he has always been an assiduous student of higher mathematics. He conceived the idea of supplying a cushion of air for the boat to travel on.

He mortgaged his farm and built a vessel with air pipes leading from the top of the boat to the bottom, all pointing to the stern. He attached a force pump to the engine and drove air through these apertures. When he attained a speed of nine miles per hour he was surprised to find that the pump was not needed, but that air was sucked from the top of the launch underneath the bottom. He found that the launch fairly skimmed over the water.

After thirteen years of trials and trouble he patented his discoveries two months ago. His brother, Samuel Motherall, who lives at 271 West One Hundred and Twenty-second street, aided him in interesting capitalists. Both spent the last three weeks in Egan's workshop, near Highbridge, where they have worked on their model. Yesterday, William's fifty-fifth birthday, it was launched.

"My launch is thirty-four feet long and six feet wide," said Motherall, "and with a seven horse-power engine and two men in her will have 1,500 pounds displacement. She will make sixteen to twnty miles an hour. An ordinary speed launch with seven horse-power engines makes eight and a half to twelve miles. With fourteen horse-power in my boat I will make at least twenty-six miles, and with twenty-four, at least thirty-five miles.

"My principles can be applied to warships and to any other sea-going vessels. Torpedo boat destroyers would make sixty miles an hour and run on two feet of water."

Six Norwegians Sent Back to Canada By Inspector Dean.

Claimed to Be Broke to Escape the Head Tax.

To Immigrant Inspector William H. Dean, who yesterday sent six Norwegians back to Port Arthur on the America, it looked like a job put up among these immigrants to declare themselves broke financially. However, if such was the case, their system of financiering showed poor judgment, to say the least. The immigrants were Albert Sande, Ed Dahl, Carl Tue, Nikola Hoel, Carl Carlson and Fred Nicholson, and they came down from Port Arthur Sunday on the Easton. They were sent back yesterday on the America. Mr. Dean having reason to believe that they would be likely to become public charges. The story thereof is interesting, and it is evident, or seemingly so, that the immigrants have been hoisted on their own petard, to use a classical phrase.

As the various immigrants on the Easton were being examined by the immigrant inspector, they had to pay $2 each head tax before they could be examined physically. The six men named above were observed watching the proceedings with a sharp eye, and then they would whisper together, commenting in their own tongue probably about the supposed "boncoe" game the inspector was working. It would seem as though they had figured it out among themselves that if they declared themselves to the inspector as broke, they would get through without paying the head tax that the others were handing over.

However, they reckoned without their host, who, in this case, was Mr. Dean, an urbane, affable and at the same time decidedly astute gentleman who has been handling immigrants for years and is well acquainted with the vagaries of the different brands.

The first of the party who came up to the inspector answered his questions all right until the inspector asked him how much money he had. He replied immediately in dialect, but which, translated into real English, means "I haven't a ——— cent." The replies of the rest of the party to this question might be recorded by ditto marks, for they were painfully alike, so much so in fact that the inspector scented a rodent. After the Booth Steamship company had paid the head tax for each of these men and they had their examination, the inspector sent them back to Canada, much to their amazement. If they have money, and they probably have, they will have time to think the matter over before attempting passage into Uncle Sam's domain again and will likely cut out their attempts at being cute.

Henry Fuller, an Englishman, whose home is at Bechworth, county of Surrey, England, was turned back by the immigrant inspector yesterday because he had trachoma. He came down on the America from Port Arthur. Uncle Sam is bloomin' blawsted particular about trachoma, which is a very dangerous and contagious disease of the eye.

The Huronic on Sunday brought in a party of Russian Poles.

ANOTHER POSSE AFTER DIETZ

Fifteen Days Is Maximum Time Given For Capture.

Black River Falls, Wis., May 23.—Affairs at the Cameron dam on Thornapple river, it can be said positively, will reach a crisis within a few days.

Former City Marshal J. H. Walters of this city has been engaged by United States officials from Madison, Wis., to join a posse of picked men said to have been chosen to get John F. Dietz. Walters left here yesterday for Madison.

It is said that the posse will be made up of fifteen or twenty picked men, who will receive each $7 per day and expenses, and fifteen days is the maximum given them for capturing Dietz.

Hayward, Wis., May 23.—Valentine Weisenback, principal ally and silepartner of the famous John F. Dietz of Cameron dam, in the southeastern part of this county, was released from the county jail here Saturday upon $1,000 bail, furnished by Henry and William W. Dietz, brothers of the Cameron dam homesteader.

Weisenback was charged with firing upon the county sheriff and his posse when they endeavored to serve a circuit court summons upon John F. Dietz over a year ago. His trial is set for the fall term of circuit court in this city.

Weisenback's arrest was accomplished by a ruse of one of the detectives employed by the logging company. He owns a homestead adjoining Dietz and has been the staunchest friend that Dietz has had in his trouble with the logging corporation, and has given the homesteader invaluable assistance in defending his rights to Cameron dam and preventing the logging company from running its 20,000,000 feet of logs through the dam. While Dietz slept or ate, or was detained from his post, he was relieved by Weisenback, who stood guard over the dam with his Winchester, keeping the drivers and officials at a distance.

Weisenback made occasional trips to the little village of Winter, the nearest railroad station, for provisions and for mail. It was while on one of these trips that the company's detectives laid a trap for him and soon had him in their possession. However, it is not believed they can show any case against him, and he will undoubtedly be dismissed by the court, there being little or no evidence to show that he committed any wrong.

Weisenback is a strong and fearless young man and is said to be the favored suitor for the hand and heart of John F. Dietz's young and handsome daughter.

Merchants Plan to Bring More People to the City.

Band Concerts and Other Entertainment Features Proposed.

At the meeting of the Duluth Retail Merchants' association, last night, a committee was appointed to confer with the Commercial club in regard to additional features of amusement for Duluth this year, to attract more outsiders to the city. Those on the committee are: J. J. Moe, J. M. Gidding, George A. Gray, John Panton and C. W. Ericson. These gentlemen will also put forth a strong endeavor to get more excursions to the city from the ranges this summer.

Among other things it is planned to hold band concerts on the piers of the canal Saturday afternoons during the warm months, also in the evenings. More steamer excursions and various other forms of entertainment are already being planned. It is thought that the grounds for the band concerts on the pier can be secured from the government through the agency of the park board.

The committee will try to secure a change in the schedules of westernbound passenger trains, in addition to conferring with officials concerning excursion matters. The object of this move will be to allow the lake tourists, on their way West, more time in this city. Every year there are thousands of tourists who pass through Duluth, but under present conditions they are allowed little time here between boat and train, unless they wish to miss a boat, which is not often the case.

The merchants also took up the matter of the lighting of the aerial bridge. President Silberstein will appoint a committee to appear before the city council, at its next meeting, to ascertain what has been done relative to the matter.

I. Freimuth, William White, E. Mendenhall and F. S. Kelley, were appointed a committee to confer with the county commissioners to see about getting only a fair and just taxation.

GONZALES DEAD.

Revolutionist Who Brought About Maximillian's Death.

New York, May 23.—Jose Gonzales, nephew of the late Cardinal Gonzales of Mexico, is dead at his home here.

He was one of the revolutionists who overthrew Emperor Maximillian and brought about his execution. During the revolution Gonzales was captured and sentenced to death. The order was revoked, but his hair turned white in what he thought was the last night of his life.

Gonzales quarreled with his family after the revolution, and came here. After his resources became exhausted he became a cigarmaker.

TUBBS TO GO FREE.

Washington, May 23.—President Roosevelt has commuted to expire immediately the sentence of Dr. John F. Tubbs, who has been serving a five-years' sentence at the Leavenworth, Ky., federal prison since January, 1903, on a charge of counterfeiting. Recently, during an epidemic of pneumonia at the prison, Dr. Tubbs proved himself very useful in the prison hospital, where he was assigned to duty. Among the patients were several who had consumption, and Dr. Tubbs contracted the disease, with the result that his life is now despaired of. The papers in the case were sent to the president, who acted promptly.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN DULUTH

TO SUBSCRIBERS:

It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed, to give both old and new addresses.

AS TO MR. PAINE.

Elsewhere in this issue The Herald publishes a story showing that upon the complaint of a Duluthian the governor has ordered the attorney general to investigate the charge that there are existent in this city, in violation of law, a meat trust and a grocery trust. In the same place will be found a communication from Franklin Paine, a wellknown citizen of Duluth.

In view of the fact that the case of the butchers and grocers seems likely to come before the courts, it will be the better part for The Herald to leave it to the courts, and pay a little attention to Mr. Paine, inasmuch as he has seen fit to make his chief attack upon the newspapers of the city, an attack involving both their enterprise and their integrity. In the first place, it is perfectly clear to anybody that reads the story of the complaint and Mr. Paine's communication that Mr. Paine is the governor's informant.

Whatever the case may be with Mr. Paine's charges against the butchers and the grocers, his remarks about the newspapers and the city of Duluth and its citizens are intemperate, uncalled for and not justified by the facts. He states an untruth when he asserts that the newspapers have ignored the situation, for The Herald, without its being necessary for Mr. Paine to suggest it, has published column after column about it, and has laid before the public all the facts that have come into its possession.

It is true that the cost of living has increased, but that is true everywhere in this country, and complaints about it—with the possible exception of that of Mr. Paine—are no louder in Duluth than in Kalamazoo and Podunk. Though neither in Duluth nor elsewhere have they increased to the extent that Mr. Paine asserts. The statement that salaried people have no business to live in Duluth is an undeserved attack upon the fair name of the city that has given Mr. Paine his living for a number of years, in return for whatever benefit he may have been to that city.

Mr. Paine states that evidence of overt acts, with names of witnesses, were offered to reporters and ignored. If this is a specimen of the soundness of Mr. Paine's charges, don't think too harshly of the butcher and the grocer. Mr. Paine never made such an offer, and when the grand jury was in session, and by common knowledge was considering this very question, if Mr. Paine appeared before that body with his "evidence of overt acts and lists of witnesses," it does not appear to have been very effective, as no results followed.

The courts are competent to handle the charges that Mr. Paine has made against the grocers and butchers, and The Herald for the present will let the case remain in their hands. It cannot afford, however, to overlook the charges made by Mr. Paine against the city that is affording him a home and his bread and butter, and the newspapers that have always stood ready and always will stand ready to defend the fair name of that city and to fight for its glory and its upbuilding.

KEEPING A SECRET.

There has always been a good deal of talk about the inability of women to keep secrets, and it has been more or less openly insinuated—by men, of course—that a woman's mind is so peculiarly constituted that it can no more hold a secret than a mosquito netting will hold water.

A woman died in a New York prison the other day who gives this theory a terrible blow. She preserved the secret of her identity during fifty-two years of captivity. Furthermore, there was a Chicago woman who knew that secret all during that half-century, and who also kept her lips sealed on the subject. Does this prove that women cannot keep secrets? No, it simply proves that you can't make any general rule about women that applies to all of them or to any of them all of the time.

In 1853 a Mrs. Henrietta Robinson was convicted in Troy, N. Y., of the murder of a man and a woman, whom she was said to have poisoned out of petty spite. The accused wore a heavy veil during the trial, and absolutely refused to remove it. Her sentence of death was commuted to life imprisonment. Twenty years later she went mad, was removed to an asylum, recovered, and was returned to the prison. The last years of her life were spent in the prison hospital. During all of these years, and even up to the hour when her body and soul parted company, she resisted all efforts to induce her to reveal her identity.

Now that she is dead the Chicago woman, Mrs. Charlotte P. Morris, has broken her long silence and has stated that the prisoner, who was her classmate sixty years ago, was Charlotte Ward, daughter of a rich Canadian merchant.

The story which is reminiscent of "The Man in the Iron Mask," simply shows what woman's will can do, even against the strongest impulses of her nature.

THE LAST VETERAN.

The approach of Memorial day, which will again awaken the younger generation to the fact that the ranks of the veterans are dwindling more surely than they ever did under a whirlwind of hostile bullets, is associated with the recent passing of the last veteran of the war of 1812, Hiram Cronk, who died ninety years after the war of which he was the solitary survivor.

The last veteran of the War of Independence, Daniel F. Bakeman, died in 1869, just eighty-eight years after Cornwallis' surrender.

If the last veteran of the Civil war lives as long after Appomattox as Bakeman did after the revolution, he will live until 1953, while if he holds out as long as did Hiram Cronk, he will be honored—upon Memorial day at least—until 1955.

The fact that there were many more participants in the Civil war than in either of the preceding wars leads to a chance that the Cronk record will be equalled, and that 1955, ninety years after the surrender of Lee, will find the last survivor still alive.

Both Cronk and Bateman, naturally enough, were objects of great interest during the years when they were the sole survivors of their wars. Bateman's position was somewhat obscured by the bewildering turmoil of the Civil war, as next to the last survivor of the War of Independence died just at the beginning of the rebellion, and Bateman himself died only a few years after the war, and before excitement had quite died down. Cronk has had no such interference, however, and had been an object of great interest for years. The last survivor of the Civil war will probably hold a still more commanding position, especially if, as many hope, war will have been finally abolished during his life-time and swords made into plow-shares.

SOME BAD ADVICE.

The department of agriculture has rendered great and valuable services to the farmers of this country, and the farmer that follows its discoveries and takes advantage of them in his own operations will, as a rule, find it to his profit.

But there is much doubt about the value of a recent item of information which the department has spread abroad to the effect that the American farmer can add to his income by producing the poppy plant, from which opium is extracted. Assuming that there is such an opening for the American farmer—and past experiences with the department's information give rise to no reason for doubting this item—does the American farmer want to raise opium, and if he does do we want him to make money that way?

If opium should be produced upon a large scale in this country, the inevitable result would be the cheapening of a dangerous drug; a drug that is highly valuable when properly used and a deadly destroyer of humanity when abused. It is already cheap enough for medical uses, and much too cheap for other uses. To cultivate the poppy in this country would be to place opium more conveniently to the hand of the weaker brother who falls under the loathsome sway of the opium habit. Can any profit to the American farmer compensate for such a result as this?

The poppy is cultivated in Asia, and in China it has enriched and debased a people. Naturally we flatter ourselves that we are not made of such stuff as the Chinaman, and that we could enrich without debasing ourselves. But unless we are very sure indeed of that it would be much better to let China go on and produce all the opium she desires, and let the American farmer continue to produce stuff that puts brawn and energy into man instead of enfeebling his mental and physical being.

GOVERNMENT BONDS.

Shall the government pay up its bonds when they come due, or refund them, and make a permanent thing of its debt?

The question is more important than it would appear to be at first blush. The natural theory would be that the quicker the government could get out of debt the better. Against this, however, is the fact that government bonds have become so important a feature of the financial interests of the country at large that the operation of removing them might be attended by serious injury. As safe investments for funds there is nothing on earth to compare with them, and while the returns they yield are not large they are so valued by investors that they command a high premium.

The Bankers' Magazine says in this connection: "It is probable that the requirement of bonds as security for national bank notes and public deposits, as well as for organization purposes, exerts a strong influence in favor of perpetuating the debt. In fact, it may be said that so long as bonds are by law required for these purposes there will be bonds to supply the requirement, irrespective of the ability of the country to pay off the debt."

The government will soon have to prepare either to take up or refund bonds of about $156,000,000, bearing 4 per cent, issued in 1877-79 and becoming due July 1, 1907. Even if a policy of retiring bonds were adopted it would be a long time before the books would be clear. The present total public debt bearing interest is $895,157,770. Of this total $156,593,950 is represented by the bonds above-mentioned, and $118,489,900 by 4 per cent bonds due in 1925. The 2 per cent consols due in 1930 amount to $542,999,950, and the 3 per cent loan of 1908-18, is $77,135,360.

Hotel Gossip.

"There is no getting around the fact that California is a nice place to live," said C. S. Fulton, formerly of Duluth, but now a resident of Pasadena, at the McKay. "The climate is unsatisfactory in many parts of the state, however. First I took up my residence at Riverside, then at Covina, finally winding up at Pasadena, as the most satisfactory place to reside. I am quite content there.

"Pasadena is a very fashionable resort and has a large number of very beautiful homes. The city has forty men who are classed as millionaires, and as its population numbers only 18,000 or 20,000, that is a pretty good record. The three Merritts of Duluth have fine homes there. Al Merritt's residence is particularly handsome. My home is located on a patch of ground comprising seven-eighths of an acre, and in this small area I have sixty-three fruit and nut trees, all of which bear fruit and nuts every year. They produce almost every variety of fruit known to this continent, and the nuts are of several kinds. There is a good deal of fruit raised in that section of the state.

"I do not like San Francisco very well as a place to live. It is too cold and damp. The climate is rather disagreeable the year round. It is a busy and interesting city, however, and probably the most cosmopolitan town in the United States. All nationalities are to be found there—white, red, yellow and black. There are more Chinamen in San Francisco than in any other city in the country. For $5 a guide will take you through Chinatown, most of which is situated under ground. Before starting on the rounds you are given a light and a revolver.

"So far as I was able to ascertain, better wages are paid the common laborer in the state than is the case back here, and the labor market does not appear to be flooded. You can hire a man to work about the house or grounds for less than $2 a day. The plasterers earn $6 a day and the hodcarriers $4. Carpenters are paid from $3.50 up. The living expenses are probably about the same in California as they are here, except that the fuel bill amounts to less. Last winter I burned only half a cord of wood for heating purposes. Gas is used extensively in cooking. Nearly all the railroad locomotives use kerosene oil as fuel, and the manufacturing plants use the oil in lieu of coal, because it is cheaper. There are rich oil fields in the state. Passing through Los Angeles you can easily count 100 oil wells by the frame work built above them.

"I left Duluth about four years ago. The doctors had given me up. I am now very much improved in health, and see no reason why I should not remain on this earth for some little time yet, thanks to California's climate. From here I went to a little town about twenty-two miles from Portland, Ore., but was literally rained and roasted out of there. The climate there was bad, despite anything that may be heard to the contrary."

"Every year sees better and faster train service established between the larger cities of the country," said R. A. Warren of Milwaukee at the St. Louis. "Transportation is being brought down to a pretty fine point, and the rivalry on different roads, except where they have entered into a combination, is keen.

"Take between Chicago and Milwaukee, for example. The St. Paul and Northwestern roads are engaged in a war of train service between these two points. The St. Paul last week put on two new trains each way between the two cities. Both are exceedingly fast, making the run in one hour and fifty-five minutes. The Northwestern recently put on two new trains between the same points, making the run in the same time.

"The additional train service is due to the extreme rivalry which has existed between the St. Paul and the Northwestern for years over the Milwaukee business. Each road now has eleven trains one way and ten the other every day, or twenty-one daily trains between Chicago and Milwaukee.

"In order that neither road may be left in the competition large sums of money are expended annually in keeping the tracks and roadbeds and the signal system in perfect order. Furthermore, the schedules of the fastest trains are such that people can live in Milwaukee and spend full working days in Chicago, or vice versa."

"The first Alaskan boundary survey parties of the year left Seattle early the present month, said George E. Peters of Seattle at the Spalding. "In the original treaty the old boundry lines of the American and Canadian territory were described. Then the Canadians got out maps showing that their lines. According to these their lines were close to the coast, while the American maps showed the line to be some thirty miles inland. From 1893 to 1895 new surveys were made, and later, about two years ago, I think, the maps showing these were sent to London, where the lines were drawn.

"The work of the parties going north now is to make the actual land surveys according to the correct maps. As it now stands the theoretical surveys are made and approved by both governments, but the present work, which will, it is supposed, consume some years yet, is to make the surveys from the maps on the ground. Where the lines traverse wooded districts a 20-foot line will be cut, and all along the line monuments will be put up.

"For each American party there will be a surveying party of Canadians. The Americans and Canadians will verify each other's work. In case of a disagreement the decision will be left to the boundary commissioners, and they will have to visit the field before coming to a decision. This is about the only system that could be hit upon that would not necessitate the commissioners being on the field all through the survey."

The Weather.

With just enough of the breath of the East to make the air full of snap and vigor, yesterday and today have been verging on the ideal, even if the weather has not been such as to encourage radical changes in wearing apparel. The sun has shone brilliantly, scattering microbes wherever its rays penetrated, and the skies have been an almost untarnished blue.

The weather man says it is likely to keep on about this way for another day, with a tendency rather toward more clouds and a little more wind—the kind he calls "fresh to brisk." He says also, as to weather in other parts, that temperature changes have been slight, that there were rains in the Rockies, in Manitoba and near Lake Erie. The lake country has much the same sort of weather Duluth had this morning.

THE PRICE OF BEEF.

Chicago Tribune: A few years ago the consumer of beef began asking why he had to pay so much for it. He was told by the cattle raisers and other authorities that the beef trust should be held accountable. He was told that it had a monopoly of the dressed beef business and was growing rich by overcharging him. That seemed to be an adequate explanation. Whenever prices rose the consumer denounced the "trust" and called on the national government to crush it.

A few months ago the bureau of incorporations made an elaborate investigation. It reported that the so-called trust of petty political persecution" on the part of it was supposed to have. The bureau reported also that the trust was not responsible for the advance in the price of beef.

As this was an attack on the cherished belief of many, the accuracy of the report was angrily denied. Its conclusions have not been disproved and until they are must be accepted. The question why the price of beef has advanced remains unanswered. Why should beef on the hoof go down so that cattle raisers say they are doing a losing business, and at the same time the beef in the butcher's stall goes up?

That is the question which plagues the consumer. Who is to enlighten him? Government agents have assured him that the confederated packers are not the guilty parties; they have done it in a 300-page book, which he has not time to read if he can get a copy.

Now that an alibi has been proved for the packers, the government officials should have said sometimes that the retail butchers were responsible for the higher prices. Nobody accuses them of being a trust, but there are so many of them that they may put up prices in order that all can get a living. No inquiry can be complete which leaves them out.

If the government, after full investigation of the cause of the advance in the price of beef, is unable to say to anybody, "thou are the man," there is still something it can do. It can give for a series of years the price of cattle on the range, the cost of transportation to the packing centers, of slaughtering, of dressing and of transporting the dressed beef to points of consumption. It can give the wholesale price of dressed beef and the retailers' price.

With the aid of the summarized information put in an intelligible form, the consumer may be able to find out who oppressed him. Or he may learn that the advance in prices is due to causes over which neither he nor his government has any control.

SHORT-LIVED JOY.

I chanced to strike it rich one day,
A "tip" was passed along;
I risked my all—things came my way,
Instead of going wrong—
One turn, and I was rich and proud
And greeted by the great;
Around me willing lackeys bowed
And served my meals in state.

And one that I with awe had viewed
And worshiped from below
Smiled on me sweetly as I wooed,
And all the joys they know
Who, after being long denied,
Are richly blessed I had;
In all her beauty and her pride
She came to make me glad.

My splendid yacht was on the bay,
My fame was everywhere;
I found new pleasures day by day
And feted my back to care;
In hard-fought tournaments I won
And hear her praise my skill,
And youth, whose sands so quickly run,
Was in my keeping still.

Beside me in my yellow car
My lovely princess sat;
We traveled rapidly and far
Through scenes worth looking at,
And many a dog and many a goose
Lay lifeless where we sped,
And many a farmer's team tore loose
And galloped off in dread.

With love-lit eyes she turned to me,
As faster yet we flew,
And candidly confessed that she Adored me through and through—
Not for my riches only—no,
But for my worth, she vowed;
She had a luscious mouth, and, oh,
Gee whiz! but I was proud!

With one hand on the wheel, I bent
And drew her very near;
We hit a railroad train and went
Up in the atmosphere!
The shock was awful; when we struck
She murmured, "Holy Smoke!"
And, while descending, blame the luck,
Your humble bard awoke.

Woeful Lament of Lumber Trust.

Chicago Chronicle: It is pleasant to be able to reassure the Mississippi Valley Lumbermen's association which views with alarm the growing scarcity of timber and which has felt compelled to hoist prices a few notches in consequence thereof. The association has evidently overlooked the fact that there are several million of acres of virgin timber land in Canada which may be made available as soon as the Mississippi valley society and its contemporaries petition congress to take the tariff off Canadian lumber. We are in no imminent danger of a lumber famine.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Royalton Banner: An exchange says that a man who has no enemies should be ashamed. We have no cause to blush on that score.

Red Lake Courier: The Beltrami county investigation disclosed the fact that the tax-payers have been systematically robbed of nearly $50,000 by dishonest officials, and yet some of the newspapers declare that the investigation is "a piece big type over the item that Minnesota of Governor Johnson.

Owatonna Journal: A newspaper puts Aitkin Republican: Senator Laybourn women must tell their ages to the census enumerators as if that was a good joke. Why, that old thing was chestnutty when Noah counted the inhabitants of the Ark. There isn't one woman in 500 that ever thinks of refusing to tell her age when asked in a legitimate way. The accusation may be as justly brought against the men.

Fairmont Sentinel: Grover Cleveland's broad face must have been decorated with a sardonic grin when he read in the papers that the Republican party bosses are seriously considering the matter of restoring the taxes to cover the treasury deficit. Grover had a little trouble along that line in the years of panic, but when such things occur during prosperity Cleveland may be pardoned for feeling that he has been endorsed.

Cannon Falls Beacon: J. Adam Bede as governor might not prove such a joke after all.

Owatonna Herald-Star: Frank Eddy says we can have his political future, he is through with it. Thanks, its better than anything we've got in the same line.

Brainerd Dispatch: According to a ruling of the new census every woman in Minnesota must tell her age to the enumerator who calls on her next month in the discharge of his duty. This is scandalous.

The Mayor's Mishap.

New York Press: New York's mayor had been wearing an Alpine, or slouch, hat for a long time, and was accustomed to remove it when saluting a woman by catching its indented crown between his fingers—a very awkward yet unavoidable method, because the arm must be lifted so high as to take away every bit of grace in a man. Saturday he blossomed out in a brand new, glossy, latest style chapeau, which just scraped the microbes off the bottoms of the straps in subway and elevated cars. In the lobby of a business office he espied a charming woman of his acquaintance, and made haste to bare his head in her glorious presence. Up went the hand, reaching for the indented top of the familiar Alpine; it met the high stiff crown of the silk, and off went the $8 confection, over his shoulder and down upon the grounted floor. Then occurred what is called a "tableau." After that a visit to the hatter.

Louisville Courier Journal: First Duke—Well, do you think Miss Van Bullion intends to buy you?

Second Duke—My dear boy, I don't know. Some days I think she does. At other times I fear she is merely shopping.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Our parlor clock doesn't work right," said Miss Patience. "It's positively eccentric."

Philadelphia Press: "I can't imagine anything more unsatisfactory," remarked the Chronic Kicker, "than a meal at our boarding house."

"No?" replied the sentimental youth. "Evidently you never got a kiss from your best girl over the telephone."

Detroit Free Press: Tim—I'm feeling fine this morning. I was up with Jark!

Jim—I'm not feeling so fine this morning I was up with a lark last night.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Yes, he's in college, but he's not very bright."

"No. What studies has he taken up?"

"Greek and stenography, and the Greek characters and the shorthand symbols have got him so balled up that he can't tell one from the other."

Washington Star: "Have you never given any thought to what posterity will say about you?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum; "I long ago arrived at the conclusion that posterity cannot make you as much trouble as one of your next door neighbors."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The French admiral strained his eyes as he stared into the offing. He could see nothing of the Russian admiral.

New York Press: There is hardly any more fun than being afraid you are going to be caught but not being.

A Wood Nymph.

She was a lass, and I was a lad,
And oh! but the willowy form she had!
She had,
Egad!
'Twas a willowy form she had!

And ah! my soul, but she was fair,
With a billowing wealth of chestnut hair!
That hair,
I swear,
Was the finest of chestnut hair!

Now some have eyes like summer skies,
But she had the wonderful hazel eyes—
Those eyes!
He lies
Who ever denies those eyes!

And her mouth was framed for merry quips,
For she had the reddest of cherry lips—
Sweet lips!
Who sips,
Your honey, but I, sweet lips?

Willowy figure and chestnut hair,
Hazel eyes, cherry lips—I declare,
See there!
I'll swear
She's awood nymph complete, for fair!

THE "BAYHA SYSTEM" of Selling Stoves

Has made hundreds of new friends for us and has cemented the old friendships more closely. It has eliminated all "dickering" from stove buying, and has made our prices so far below competitors that there is no argument left. To see our stoves and their prices is to fully realize that fact. Under this system all stoves are marked in plain figures at their lowest possible cash price (or money value) which is from $5 to $15 less—grade for grade—than the lowest price that can be obtained in any of the "trade back" stores. If you wish to purchase on EASY PAYMENTS, you may do so at the cash prices on the most LIBERAL TERMS for which we charge you NOT ONE CENT.

If the best is not too good for you—THEN BUY A UNIVERSAL—they cost no more than the other kind.

Farmers Replace Old Log Cabins With Substantial Homes.

More Profitable to Sell Timber and Buy Lumber.

"The second crop of houses are now appearing throughout the many farming communities that have been established in St. Louis and Carlton counties," said A. W. Kuehnow, of the Boston & Duluth Farm Land company, yesterday afternoon.

"Instead of the regulation little log house and log barns that we were accustomed to see in the newly settled communities you can now find good substantial frame houses which are not only comfortable, but an ornament to the place.

"A person can gain an excellent idea of the extent of his farm home building movement by taking a drive out through Hermantown to Pike Lake. All along the route there are attractive new homes going up to replace the older structures built, some of them, several years ago. The old log houses are now being turned into cowbarns or pig pens while the farmer, who has been prospering with his crops raised on this Northern soil, is now determined to have a home more suitable to his station in life.

"This condition may be taken as an excellent indication of the prosperity that has followed in the wake of the settlers who have come into St. Louis and adjoining counties within the past several years to build for themselves a home and develop the agricultural possibilities of the land.

"The Boston & Duluth Farm Land company has been placing in this district a large number of settlers during the last few years and almost without exception these settlers have made a permanent improvement, besides developing their farms, by erecting many substantial buildings.

"The day of the old log houses is practically over. The new settler realizes that there is too much money in the logs to put them to that purpose, so he sells the timber and purchases back the lumber necessary to build for himself a house or barn. Small sawmills are rapidly following the new settlements and it has been found far more profitable to market the timber cleared off a place and purchase the lumber than to use the timber direct for building purposes.

"The inquiry which is being made for farming lands within the Duluth district continues very strong. Not a week passes but that we have new inquiries and take out parties of prospective settlers to look over lands. From all appearances the season of 1905 should witness one of the largest immigration movements to this portion of Minnesota that the district has ever witnessed. The land companies are getting very active in this matter of settlement of unimproved and wild lands and the publicity that is generally being given the opportunities to be had in the hitherto undeveloped agricultural or dairy regions, is bringing splendid results."

GREAT MINE CAVES IN

Clark's United Verde Falls to the 700 Foot Level.

Prescott, Ariz., May 23.—Millions of of tons of rock and earth caved in at noon yesterday in Senator Clark's United Verde copper mine at Jerome, Ariz., the ground dropping over the surface to the 700-foot level. Cracking timbers gave the alarm, and 300 miners fled for their lives and escaped uninjured.

For several days the ground has been settling, and timbers creaking. Yesterday, with a mighty crash, the earth caved, carrying with it the new shaft, levels, drifts and stopes. Through the fissures on the surface came clouds of sulphur smoke from that part of the mine which has been on fire for several years.

The extent of the damage cannot as yet be ascertained, but if it is as bad as feared, the great property will be closed and the existence of Jerome will be doomed.

The hoisting works, which are over the mine, have settled, and the machinery cannot be worked. The smelting plant has also been shut down.

Winnipeg, Man., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Duluth White Sox continued their victorious career here yesterday by romping away with the first game of the Winnipeg series before a crowd of 1,100 fans.

Kennedy, the Winnipeg catcher, made the visitors a present of all three runs by his poor throwing to bases, but he partially made up for it by scoring Winnipeg's only run with a clean two-base hit in the fifth after Johnson had rapped out a nice double.

Sporer and Harris both showed good form, the Winnipeg twirler being especially good with men on bases. He had ten strike-outs to his credit.

Menefee, the Duluth left fielder, had two sensational plays to his credit.

THE TWINS WIN.

Defeat Crookston In Ragged Exhibition of Baseball.

Crookston, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—By a rapid succession of errors in yesterday's game Crookston allowed the Orphans to score up on them in a disgraceful manner. Until the first of the fourth the game progressed at a very even rate, and was as pretty a specimen of the American game as has ever been witnessed in this city. Then an error upon the part of Crookston's second baseman set the team wild, and in the melee which ensued the visitors piled up four scores without any effort or exertion whatever, simply depending upon the muffs and errors of the home players. In the fifth the same performance was duplicated by the visitors and another quartet of runs successfully passed home plate. From that on through the sixth and seventh Crookston picked up its lost spirits and the grand stand did heroic work in its efforts to retrieve the game with vigorous rooting.

Davidson, the little man with the deceiving ball, was "glass armed" by the vigorous rooting, but only for one inning, the eighth, in which he allowed Crookston to bring in four men by the same tactics which had characterized his own team's work in the fourth and fifth. Crookston played dummy ball, however, and in the ninth the third man went out with the total 9 to 6 in favor of the visitors. Schlatter, Crookston's third baseman, made a spectacular run in the sixth. He batted a third "fair ball." Roesch, catcher for the visitors, threw a wild ball to first to stop him, and he made the rounds, while the Orphans were searching in vain for the ball at the bottom of a puddle in the out-field. He came in covered with glory which did not last much longer than a snowball in the hot place, for his umps immediately pronounced him out in accordance with the rules of the league for bunting a third strike fair ball.

The attendance at the game was fair. The error column, as will be seen by the score, is largely on Crookston players, and the visitors played a very clean game of ball, although not exhibiting remarkable ability or talent. The score:

TIGERS WIN.

Big Crowd Sees First Game at Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Over 2,000 people saw the opening game of the Northern league season in this city today. The band escorted the players to the grounds, followed by an enthusiastic crowd of rooters.

Just before the time for the game Prof. A. A. Bruce, dean of the State University Law school made a short talk before the grand stand. In the course of his remarks the professor said that the American people wanted sportsmen, but not sports. Umpire Long arrived at the beginning of the third inning, and the players who had been umpiring the game gave him the indicator and went to the bench.

Fargo went to bat. Donovan and Mehl struck out, and Rose sent a dinky grounder to the first baseman and was thrown out. Chandler was the first man up for the Tigers. He scored the first two-bagger of the game, and went to second on an error by the short stop. Caldwell went out on a foul, and Anderson sent a little fly to the third baseman. Hanrahan struck out, and the side retired, but Chandler had scored on a wild throw to third.

French of Fargo started the second inning, by flying out to the pitcher. Traeger went to second on a wild throw by the pitcher to first. Fitzgerald sent a little fly to the short stop, and Hissey struck out. Spanton, started the fireworks for the Tigers by finding a single. Sonders struck out, and Muller advanced Spanton to second on a single. Smith was unable to locate Hansen's curves and struck out. Bond tried hard to bring in Spanton, but his long drive was captured by Hissey in the center garden.

Alberts for Fargo started the third inning by sending a weak grounder to the pitcher, and died before he reached first. Hansen fanned the air, and Donovan was thrown out on first by a grounder from Muller. The Tigers went out in one, two three order, Chandler was thrown out on first. Caldwell was caught out by Rose. Anderson sent a fly to the second baseman.

In the fourth inning both sides sent three men to bat, and each side was retired by some fast ball playing.

Fargo's first hit came in the fifth inning. Traeger was the first man up, but was thrown out on first. Fitzgerald and Hissey each got a single to their credit, but Alberts and Hansen were each thrown out on first, and Fargo's men died on the bases. Muller, for the Tigers, sent a liner to first, and was put out. Smith went to the initial sack by being hit, but was caught trying to steal second. Bond drew a single, and Chandler retired the side by sending a slow grounder to the pitcher, and went out on first.

Fargo's story for the sixth was short. Three up and three out, while the Tigers got busy in their half of the inning at the stick. Caldwell sent a long fly to the right garden, and Rose by a phenomenal run, and one hand catch put him out. Anderson got a single, as did Hanrahan and Spanton took two bags by a good drive, scoring Anderson. Sonders also drew a single, and then the catcher tried to get the man on third, and threw wild, and bases were soon cleared. Three men scored on the wild throw. Muller struck out, and Smith ended the comedy by sending a grounder to the pitcher.

In the seventh it was three up and three out on both sides.

In the eighth Fargo came very near scoring. Hissey, the first man to bat sent a hot grounder to Hanrahan, and went out on first. Alberts tried the same thing, but the pitcher reached out for it, and threw the runner out on first, but Hansen turned the tables and reached for the third hit of the game on the Fargo side. He drove a liner through the short stop, and reached first, being the fourth man to do the act on the Fargo side. Donovan also got a hit, and sent Hansen to third. Donovan stole second, Mehl struck out. On the Tigers' side three long flies went into the gardens and each were captured.

In the ninth, Fargo tried to turn the tables, and save herself from defeat. Rose sent a liner to first, but it was stopped, and Rose was put out. French tried a different line of tactics, and sent a high fly to the left garden, and he too suffered the same fate. Then Traeger tried to send one through Hanrahan on second, but failed, and the game was ended. Bond scoring a shut out against the visitors.

SUCCESSFUL TRIP.

White Sox Winning Games and Making Money.

Granted fair weather, the Duluth team will come home from the present trip at the top of the league and with a full treasury.

The White Sox have played to fair crowds in St. Cloud and Brainerd, and they are doing a record-breaking business at Winnipeg. Two games will be played on Wednesday, which is Empire day in Canada, and if the weather is fine, between 8,000 and 10,000 people will witness the two exhibitions.

The team seems unable to shake off the pace it struck last year and seems bent on making a clean sweep of all comers.

After the completion of the Winnipeg series the team will go to Crookston for three games and then to Fargo for the same number, returning home to open the season here Thursday, June 1.

PLAN TO RELIEVE

Condition of State Revenue Fund Is Proposed.

St. Paul, May 23.—A plan was discovered by state officials yesterday to relieve the condition of the state revenue fund, which has a deficit of $140,000 now and, if not replenished, will have a deficit of $1,000,000 by the first of the year. The plan, suggested by State Treasurer Block, is to offer for sale approximately $2,000,000 Virginia state bonds, held by the permanent school fund, and bearing 3 per cent interest. The money from the sale of these bonds will go into the state school fund, and under the law the treasurer is authorized to draw $600,000 from other funds for the benefit of the revenue fund.

A second purpose of this financial transaction is to take the money out of the state of Virginia and invest it in the bonds of Minnesota municipalities, which pay 4 per cent interest.

IMPROVEMENT IS AGAIN POSTPONED

Second Street Will Not Be Paved This Year.

West Superior Street Contract Will Be Rapidly Pushed.

The council last evening:
Decided to improve Superior street before Second street is done.
Laid over question of Lincoln Park dancing pavilion license.
Laid over the Parlor theater license for one week.
Received notice of a conference with street railway magnates Wednesday morning.
Laid over indefinitely application of Joe Sheehy for employment agent's license.
Ratified action of bridge commission in accepting ferry bridge.

The improvement of Second street will not be made this year, and all minor contracts will be held up until the contract for the West Superior street improvement has been let.

Such was the decision of the council after considering the possibility of undertaking both improvements this year.

Alderman Moore, as chairman of the committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks, urged that the work on Second street be undertaken first as this could be done before the preliminary assessment was levied. The Superior street contract, however, owing to its size would have to wait for its own advance assessment to be collected and this would delay the Second street job until too late in the season.

Aldermen Chesney and Schaffer opposed ordering Second street done first on the ground that it might prevent the Superior street contract being done this year. Alderman Tessman stated that a great many of the Second street property owners were not particular about the work being done this year and it was finally decided to go ahead with the Superior street improvement first, which will mean that Second street cannot be paved this year.

At the suggestion of Alderman Moore all small contracts will be held up until the Superior street work is let, owing to the condition of the revolving fund.

The West end citizens were out in force to protest against granting a license to W. J. Chestock to run a dancing pavilion in Lincoln Park, and a petition with 1,325 names attached, was presented.

The committee on police and license, through Alderman Tessman, stated that it had been unable to agree on a report and submitted a resolution granting the license, without any comment or recommendation.

Mr. Chestock was present and, at the request of Alderman Tessman, spoke. He stated that he intended to conduct a respectable pleasure resort, and would allow no beer to be sold or any disreputable characters to frequent the place.

"I am satisfied that the council has reins on me if they grant me a license, and as I have a five-year lease on the grounds I cannot afford to conduct anything but a respectable place. The council can shut me down any time it thinks I am not conducting the place as I should.

"I do not see how you can discriminate against me in favor of the proprietors of the pavilions on Park Point and at Lester park, but if you see fit to do so, I have nothing more to say. If I am granted the license I will live up to every promise I have made you in the petition you received last Monday night, and which is on file."

Rev. J. W. Loughbridge, Father Gilliet, Father Leo, John J. Moe, Rev. J. W. Robinson, R. R. Forward and John Sundeen spoke against granting the license.

On a motion by Alderman Tessman the matter was finally laid over for another week.

"We can't afford to discriminate," said Alderman Tessman. "Properly conducted, a pavilion is a nice thing to have in a park. It furnishes shelter for picnic parties and a place to get refreshments. I would like to look into this matter more thoroughly."

* * *

The council was evidently in a mood to postpone decisions, as the Parlor theater license also went over for another week on a motion by Alderman Moore.

Alderman Moore cross-questioned F. C. Lillis, the applicant for a license, as to whether or not liquor would be sold in the theater, and the latter finally admitted that it could be taken there if desired.

Later in the evening the First ward aldermen sprung a surprise on some of the members of the council. When they were feeling that the license question was disposed of for a week, Aldrman Wilson submitted a resolution declaring that it was the sense of the council that no license be granted to any theater which was connected with a saloon by a door, window, hole in the wall, dumb waiter, or in any other manner.

"I do this out of fairness to the applicant," said Alderman Wilson, blandly. "We took this stand in the case of the Metropolitan theater and we should let the applicant know how we stand."

Alderman Moore seconded the motion.

Alderman Tessman moved to lay the motion over for a week, saying he wanted more time to consider it.

"Why, you don't need any time to consider this," said Alderman Wilson. "This merely expresses the sense of the council. Every man here knows how he feels on the matter of granting a license to a theater which is connected with a saloon."

The matter was, nevertheless, laid over on a close vote of 8 to 7.

Mayor Cullum presented a communication to the council, stating that Thomas Lowry, the president of the Duluth street railway, had granted a hearing to the members of the council for Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, in the council chamber, and he urged everybody interested to be present.

There was a wonderful similarity in the bids received for coal supplies for the city hall and armory. Five local companies submitted bids, all of which were identical.

Joe Sheehy came up again for a renewal of his employment license.

President Haven asked City Attorney Fesler whether the city was not now having trouble with Sheehy.

"We have never had anything but trouble since I came into office," said Mr. Fesler.

"I move that this license be referred back to the committee until this trouble is adjusted," said Alderman Moore, and once more the resolution carried by the vote of 8 to 7.

On a motion of Alderman Moore, the board of public works was instructed to notify property owners whenever telephone or telegraph companies were planning to erect poles in front of their property, and the owners will have an opportunity to enter protest to the board, or signify how they desire the poles to be placed.

The council received notification from the members of the ferry bridge commission, consisting of the mayor, the city attorney and the city engineer, that they had accepted the new ferry bridge, and the aldermen, by a unanimous vote, ratified the action of the commission.

The bridge is now therefore the property of the city as soon as the remaining $65,000 is paid over.

City Attorney Bert Fesler stated in an interview published last evening in The Herald, that he did not anticipate any further trouble regarding the bridge, and it is understood that if the Commercial investment company refuses to accept the bridge bonds, the Modern Steel Structural company will take the issue at par in payment for the bridge.

President Haven submitted an ordinance regulating the piling of shakwood. Under its provisions no more than twenty-five cords can be piled on any one lot, except by certain firms engaged in the business of manufacturing it.

* * *

On a motion by President Haven, the attention of the police department was also called to the ordinance regulating the speed of automobiles, with the request that it be rigidly enforced.

Alderman Waugh gave notice that he would introduce his smoke ordinace at the regular meeting on June 5.

Alderman Harker asker for information from the water board as to the plan of laying gas mains in the alleys in West Duluth. He called attention to the fact that the water mains aer laid in the streets and that the gas mains are being laid in he alleys, which will necessitate the digging of two trenches to make conections with the property.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

We don't put Scott's Emulsion in the class of advertised cure-alls; it doesn't belong there. We hardly like to use the word "cure" at all, but we are bound to say that it can be used for a great many troubles with great satisfaction. Its special function is to repair the waste of the body when the ordinary food does not nourish, and this means that it is useful in many cases which are indicated by wasting.

TROUBLES ARE NOW ADJUSTED

Superior School Board Whitewashes Blaine High School Affair.

The board of education at Superior met last evening, rescinded the resolution calling for Superintendent B. B. Jackson's resignation before the end of the school year, and passed resolutions entirely exonerating Principal B. B. James from any blame or censure in relation to the difficulties at the Blaine school. The resolution carried with it a strong recommend as to Mr. James' competence and qualifications as an educator and his fitness to have charge of a public school.

In a communication to the board, asking it to rescind its resolution calling for his resignation, Superintendent Jackson stated that all he gave out to the newspapers was that he would not be a candidate for re-election, that his decision had not been arrived at hurriedly, and that he had made the statement so that the board and public should know his position, and he would not be drawn into a controversy concerning any school policy where personal interests would seem to cut a figure. Mr. Jackson denied responsibility for any further utterance through the papers.

ASKS FOR ACTION

Complaint to Governor of Retail Combinations In Duluth.

Attorney General Young Will Investigate the Charges Made.

A dispatch from St. Paul says that complaints have been lodged with Governor Johnson that the retail grocers and the retail meat dealers' associations, at Duluth, are violating the Minnesota anti-trust law, and the governor has ordered an investigation. The complaints have been referred to Attorney General E. T. Young, and if it is found that the facts as alleged constitute a violation of the law, it was stated at the governor's office that proceedings will be instituted to enforce the law.

The name of the person making the complaints has not been given out, but it is stated that he alleges that the grocers and meat dealers are maintaining combinations on prices, in violation of chapter 359, laws of 1899, the anti-trust law.

The dispatch further says:

"Although the complaint originated in Duluth, the complainant calls attention to the fact that similar agreements have been made by associations in other cities. It is possible that the investigation ordered by the governor will include the acts of the state associations, to which most of the city and village associations belong.

"The Duluth complainant alleges, further, that the facts he presents were submitted to the county attorney of St. Louis county, and that that official referred them to the grand jury. He alleges, further, that several of the members of the grand jury were either grocers or meat dealers, and that no indictment was returned."

It is probable that the correspondent was in error in saying that it was alleged that several of the members of the grand jury were meat dealers or grocers, and that it should have read that several of the witnesses before the jury were grocers and meat dealers.

Simon Clark, president of the Minnesota State Retail Grocers' association, speaking relative to the matter this morning, said:

"There is more behind this move than appears on its face. We do not know for certain just who is back of the proposition, but it is pretty clear that the Armours have a hand in it. As a matter of fact, if the thing were probed to the bottom I believe it would be proven conclusively that the Armour private car line interests are at the bottom of the affair. They have started the action against the grocers because we have been actively working against the iniquities of the private car line system for some little time past. We submitted to the unjust methods of the Armours just as long as we could, but at last were forced to turn against the food trust, and the result of our turning, and our announced determination to put up the strongest possible fight, is the present action.

"The Armours are working through some unknown man, probably an individual who has been placed on the black list because he refused to pay what he owed to the different grocers of the city. We have no fear of the result of the investigation which has been ordered. It is merely brought to annoy us and to turn our attention as much as possible from the other fight. Efforts have been made before to make trouble for the retail grocers' associations, but they have never amounted to anything. Our association is perfectly legitimate in every way. We have always invited the closest scrutiny of our methods, and are at any time willing to have representatives of the press present at our meetings, which are never secret. We invite the searchlight of publicity. We are working for a good deal smaller fee than is the attorney who is prosecuting the case. If anyone could sell groceries at a smaller profit than they are sold today and live, I would like to see that person.

"The association is maintained for the sake of protecting the individual interests of the grocers who are members, and not to fix a set scale of prices. By means of the organization we are enabled to keep in touch with one another for protection in extending credit. It is true that there is a uniform price maintained on a certain few staples, but there is nothing in this that anyone can complain of, for the very smallest possible price is made in such cases. The association has done and is doing nothing that is prejudical to the public."

Frank Cox, of the firm of Cox Bros., retail meat dealers, says there is no ground whatever for the complaints.

"We have no fear of the results of the investigation," he said this morning. "Our methods, and the methods of the association, are at all times open to public inspection. Our association is just as legitimate as the Commercial club, or any other organized body in Duluth. We formed for mutual protection, and our work has a tendency to lower rather than raise prices of meats.

"It would be an utter impossibility for the association, or anyone else, to fix a scale of meat prices, to be followed by all the dealers in the city. Any charge to this effect is absurd. By looking at the prices charged in the different shops of the city any day in the year you will see that they always vary a range of several cents to the pound. Here is a cut, for instance, that we are selling for 7 cents a pound, and that same cut cost us 8½ cents a pound. We have had it on hand a little time, and while it is still in prime condition, we want to get rid of it, and so put on a reduced price. But in the meats that we sell the same day as received the prices are not the same in most instances as are charged in other shops. I do not know who can be back of the move."

In connection with the above subject The Herald yesterday received the following communication, which was crowded out of yesterday's issue:

To the Editor of The Herald: Perhaps you will allow me to suggest a few points which you might have made more clear in your editorial reply to "clerk's problem" in Saturday's issue.

For instance you might say that prices of groceries and meats are fixed here by two combines called the Retail Grocers' association and the Retail Meat Dealers' association. The grocers force "clerk" to pay 25 per cent more for his groceries than the same groceries bought in the same way, (that is, at retail) would cost him from Chicago, laid down in his pantry. This amounts to $3.25 on his monthly bill of $13.00. The meat combine takes 30 per cent upon his meat bill of $8.00, making $2.40 more, a total of $5.65 per month, or over 11 per cent of his monthly wages. This $66 per month would make a good nest egg for the bank accounts which he now finds impossible.

You might also say that the statutes of Minnesota, 1899, chapter 359, make such combinations a felony, punishable by a fine of $500 to $1,000, or three to five years' imprisonment in the penitentiary. The papers of Duluth know this, or ought to, but they have never suggested any action or remedy such as impartial enforcement of the law. Perhaps the fact that the combiners are advertisers has some weight.

Although these Duluth combinations in restraint of trade are matters of common belief and constitute a felony, no judge has, within my knowledge charged a grand jury to probe them. You can say, too, that evidence of overt acts with names of witnesses has been offered to reporters of the daily papers and ignored. Fancy a live city daily failing to snap up such a story. It is also a fact that names of witnesses to specific violations of the statute have been given to the county attorney with the request that he take action before the grand jury. After more than a year he was finally successful in having a jury consider such evidence as he furnished. He presented as witnesses only men who were owners of or employed in meat markets. He did not call any of the witnesses whose names were given him. None of these butchers know of any combine. Can you imagine a Folk or a Jerome letting such evidence escape?

The combines are a dead weight upon the city. Laboring men, craftsmen and salaried men and women are the principal sufferers. They constitute the great majority of the population. Since these combines have fastened upon us, the cost of living has increased more than 50 per cent. I don't know whether the wages of labor have increased that much within five years, but salaries have not. Except in a few famed localities there is less demand for real estate and prices are lower. Manufacturers are kept away because where competition in the necessaries of life is not untrammelled only the wealthy can afford to fix their homes.

Butchers in small places twenty-five to fifty miles outside of Duluth buy their meat from packers here, pay freight on it and then retail it 30 per cent cheaper than we can buy it here. Tell "Clerk" to move out. He nor any other poor man has any business trying to live in Duluth while it is saddled with combines; while with officers sworn to enforce the laws we have not public spirit enough to drive them to do their duty.

Our Commercial club of a thousand members ignores these conditions and is said to have allowed the use of its rooms for a meeting of retail groces to "discipline" some of their members for "cutting prices."

These local trusts grind us more severely than the big national ones. What right have we to expect the president or congress to come to our relief when we do not enforce a ready made statute which covers the ground? Any reporter who was promised hearty support from his paper could in a week of quiet work secure evidence enough to convict 90 per cent of the meat dealers and grocers in Duluth and then in course of time public opinion might persuade the prosecuting officers to sit up and take notice.

"Clerk" will have to suffer and postpone that bank account until our papers will fearlessly help the common people and officers can be found who will make some effort to enforce the laws, or until laborers craftsmen and clerks of all kinds get together and organize a cooperative association which will reduce the necessaries of life 40 per cent and put the combines out of business.

TOWN LOSING MONEY.

Electric Plant Has Proved a White Elephant.

Kingston, Ont., Whig: Paris, Ont., has one of the best, most complete and most compact electric plants. The building is in the center of the town, and it is occupied with a splendid plant, which is run by either steam or water. So far this year, and since March, the water wheels have been driving the machinery.

Two thousand incandescents and twenty-seven street lamps are lighted by means of two dynamos, both of which are very fine machines. The two boilers are 150 and 100 horsepower respectively, and the two engines are 80 horsepower and 175 horsepower. The building is heated by the Webster vacuum system from the exhaust.

The regrettable feature of the whole thing is that the powerhouse has proved a white elephant on the town's hands. Last year, so those financing the concern say, the earnings of the plant were $1,500 over actual expenditures, but this amount falls short of paying debentures on the building and machinery. This year receipts fell $500 short of total cost of maintenance in the first quarter. Buildings, plant and all in the first place, cost the town in the neighborhood of $40,000.

The gross receipts were $5,450; the operating expenses, $2,897.27; interest at 4 per cent, $1,959.61; depreciation, at 5 per cent, $2,449.51, and loss of taxes, $500. The deficit for 1904 was $2,456.29.

When the nerves cry—

Look to the Coffee

The cry may be in some one of many ways, Trembling, Sleepy in day time, (comes from stomach), Headache, Dyspepsia, Bowel Trouble, Heart Palpitation, Pains in various parts of the body, and even Piles, Diabetes, and weak eyes originate in a disordered nervous system brought on by coffee.

If you don't heed the "cry" (Nature's hint) you may be sure the trouble will get worse, and not better, until you either quit the coffee habit which is the cause, or you develop fixed organic disease that may carry you down.

It is the finest trade possible, to quit coffee and get well.

Health is the most exquisite fun on earth.

It's easy to quit coffee when you have choice, well made Postum Food Coffee, a delicious hot beverage with the deep seal brown of strong coffee that changes to a rich golden brown when cream is added. Then you have the crisp coffee "snap" and a flavor all its own. The nerves are relieved of the old hurt of the poisonous "Caffeine" of coffee and in its place you feed the system on strong food elements in Postum which quickly rebuild the worn out and exhausted nerve and brain cells destroyed by coffee.

You and each of you are hereby notified that the Great Northern Power Company, a corporation created, organized and existing under and by virtue of Title I, of Chapter 34, of the General Statutes of Minnesota for the year 1894, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, will, on the 10th day of June, A. D. 1905, at nine thirty o'clock in the forenoon, at a special term then to be held at the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County, present to the District Court in and for said county a petition, signed and duly verified by its President and Secretary, which petition is now on file in the office of the Clerk of said Court.

The object of said petition is to have the lands hereinafter described condemned for the purpose of enabling the petitioner to construct and operate the dams, canals, pipe lines and electrical transmission lines and other works and improvements in said petition described, and to have the court appoint commissioners to determine the compensation to be paid to the owners of such lands.

Said lands are to be taken for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a dam, reservoir and gatehouse; such dam is to be constructed to the height of twelve feet, with suitable gates, across Beaver Creek (the outlet of Rice Lake), in the Southwest quarter of the Southeast quarter of Section Seven (7), Township fifty-one (51) North, of Range Fourteen (14) West, on the westerly side of the McComber Road as now located and travelled across said section and immediately adjoining said road.

The object of the erection of said dam is to raise the level of Rice Lake and create a reservoir for the storage of water—to be drawn off and used in connection with the dam, reservoir and gatehouse, to be constructed by petitioner at or near the Village of Thomson in Carlton County, Minnesota,—and a canal from said last mentioned reservoir to a forebay in Sections Nine (9) and ten (10), in Township forty-eight (48) North, of Range Sixteen (16) West, in said Carlton County, and a series of pipe lines from said forebay to a power house to be constructed on the banks of the St. Louis River, in said County, near the center of Section eleven (11) Township forty-eight (48), North of Range Sixteen (16) West. The whole of said works are to be used to supply water to the inhabitants of the territory tributary to such reservoirs and canal, also to provide an improved waterway for public use and for generating and furnishing electricty to the public for light, heat and power.

The lands described in said petition and herein referred to are described as follows:

NELSON EASY FOR ATTELL

Philadelphia, May 23.—Battling Nelson of Chicago made his first appearance in the prize ring in this city last night, and proved a rather easy proposition for Abe Attell of San Francisco. It was the old story of the finished boxer against a fighter. Attell's cleverness proved too much for Nelson and in the first of the sixth round the Californian jabbed the other man at will. In the fifth round Attell's strength began to wane, but he was able to hold Nelson easily.

It was a good, fast bout from start to finish. The way Attell started in it looked as though Nelson would not last the six rounds, but what he lacked in cleverness he made up in gameness and ability to take punishment. The first four rounds Attell was successful in jabbing Nelson in the face and in the stomach. In the latter part of the fourth round, however, Nelson sent Attell to the floor, but he was on his feet in an instant. The fifth round was slightly in favor of Nelson, as was also part of the sixth. In the latter part of this round, however, Attell recovered himself and was hammering Nelson with rights and lefts when the bell sounded.

Up to the time the men stepped into the ring it looked as though they would not meet. There was a hitch over weighing in. Attell weighed in at 126, but Nelson refused to get on the scales, claiming that his contract did not call for it. Attell refused to go on and the management decided to put on "Kid" Herman of Chicago. Attell finally consented to fight. Nelson looked to weigh about 134 to 136 pounds.

There was a fair sized crowd in the hall of the National Athletic club.

MINISTERS VISIT MAYOR

Philadelphia Divines Are Opposed to the Pending Gas Lease.

Philadelphia, May 23.—Citizens of this city witnessed an unusual spectacle yesterday when more than 100 ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church solemnly marched to City hall to express to Mayor Weaver their protest against the pending gas lease, and to congratulate him on the stand he has taken upon the question. The decision to call on the mayor was made at the morning session of the weekly meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Ministers' association, after resolutions commending the mayor and the councilmen who had voted against the lease had been adopted.

The ministers had assembled at the Methodist bookroom, at 2:30 p. m., and prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Garbutt Reed, president of the association, in which he asked that the "city might be delivered from harm and injury and from evil designs of evil men." The march to City hall was then begun.

The mayor met the clergymen in his large reception room. The resolutions were delivered to him by Dr. Reed, in a brief speech, and remarks were also made by several other clergymen.

The mayor in replying said:

"You have already seen what I think of the gas lease. Within twenty-four hours after the passage of that bill by the two branches of council I made up my mind what I would do. No living soul knows what I propose to do, except myself, and I might say to you now that I shall carry out my purpose to the end. Your meeting has not changed my views. I had but one view, and that was, if I could help it, the gas lease, as proposed, should never be foisted on the city of Philadelphia. As to the methods that I have myself worked out to prevent this, that is something that will develop within the next few days. But I say to you, as I said before, that I will use the utmost of my power to prevent what I believe is the greatest iniquity upon the city of Philadelphia.

"The present lease is infinitely better than the other two, and why should I be asked to consent to the city giving away a contract that we now have, by which we must receive in annual revenue at least $25,000,000 in the next twenty-four years, and with the increase in the consumption of gas probably $40,000,000, and then at the end of twenty-two years we would get back, without any charge against it, the great gas plant, with all its franchises and with all the money expended upon it by the United Gas Improvement company. That plant, I believe, would be worth to the city from $80,000,000 to $100,000,000, so that by the proposed lease we should be practically giving away, without any return, the present gas plant which will be worth at the expiration of twenty-two years from $80,000,000 to $160,000,000. Two ward meetings were held last night, at which addresses against the pending lease were made.

The committee of seventy has planned a mass meeting, to be held in the Bourse tonight, and other mass meetings against the lease will be held during the week.

IOWA GIRL ELOPES

And Leaves Minneapolis Lover In the Lurch.

Ottumwa, Iowa, May 23.—While arrangements were being made to celebrate the marriage of Miss Edith Porter, a popular society girl, to Merton Towle of Minneapolis, the young lady quietly packed her grip and eloped with Lewis C. McCune of Sacramento, Cal. She left with him for his home in the West, stopping over in Omaha long enough to have the marriage ceremony performed.

Both men were suitors for the girl's hand and Towle was the man who first secured her promise. The day of the wedding was set and the time had almost arrived, when McCune made his appearance upon the scene. He came directly from California and the first news that greeted him was the announcement of the prospective marriage of his former sweetheart.

The news did not daunt him in the least, and he resumed his courtship, succeeding, much to the asonishment of her relatives and friends, in carrying off the girl and defeating his rival.

SAVANNA LAWYER SHOT FROM BEHIND.

Savanna, Ill., May 23.—Daniel S. Berry, who was prominent as a lawyer and who was a former member of the legislature, was shot and killed yesterday at the door of his office. Mr. Berry had just come from home and was unlocking the door when he was shot from behind, one bullet striking him in the arm and the other penetrating his brain. He died instantly. There were no witnesses to the tragedy and there are no developments throwing any light upon the mystery. Coroner Schreiner is conducting an inquiry behind closed doors.

ARE FOUND GUILTY

Jury Returns Manslaughter Verdict Against Lenich and Longer.

Maximum Penalty For Crime Is Twenty Years Imprisonment.

Found giulty of manslaughter in the first degree, Frank Lenich and Frank Longer, the two Austrian miners from Eveleth, who were charged with the murder of Peter Kracovitch, must pay the penalty for their crime by serving terms in the state penitentiary which may be as long as twenty years.

Both men were indicted by the grand jury for murder in the first degree, the penalty, on conviction, being death by hanging, without the alternative of imprisonment for life.

As the trial proceeded and so much evidence was introduced by the attorney for Lenich and Longer that would tend to show that Kracovitch was a bad man with a knife, or had a reputation of being ever ready to make trouble and use dangerous weapons, the general sentiment of those who have been following the case was that neither Lenich or Longer would be convicted on the charge which would mean the death penalty.

The jury retired at 4:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the verdict was returned at 10:15 o'clock last evening. Both Lenich and Longer were present at the reading of the verdict, but they maintained the same apparent sullen indifference that has marked their demeanor throughout the trial.

County Attorney McClintock maintained in his argument that while Lenich undoubtedly struck the fatal blow, Longer was equally guilty as an accomplice from the fact that he was concerned in the fight and was chasing Kracovitch when Lenich stabbed him. The jury, by its verdict last evening, holds to the view taken by Mr. McClintock and the two men are probably to receive the same sentence.

The crime for which Lenich and Longer must now pay the penalty was the result of a drunken row at Eveleth Easter Sunday evening. All the parties concerned had been drinking considerable beer at saloons and at the houses of their countrymen, and it was only a question of their meeting when the fighting began. Louis Molinsek, the man who fled from Eveleth with Lenich and for a week was a fugitive from justice in Northern Minnesota woods and swamps, received a bad knife wound in the fight. It was this wound that undoubtedly saved Molinsek from being tried as an accessory to the murder, the nature of the injury being such that he could not possibly have pursued Kracovitch out on the street at the time the latter was stabbed. The grand jury, after considering the circumstances, did not return an indictment against Molinsek and he was discharged from custody.

The testimony of Longer, at the inquest, when he sought to shift the blame to Lenich, the testimony of Lenich's sweetheart that he broke away from her and mixed into the fatal fight when he was not concerned and the fact that Lenich fled after it was noised about that Kravocitch was dead, together with various other little details concerning the bloody knife and the warning Lenich gave Molinsek, was evidence, sufficient in the eyes of the jury to fix tre murderous assault charge on Lenich, while Longer's own admissions, together with the testimony of other witnesses, showed that he was an accomplice in the crime with Lenich.

Both Lenich and Longer are unmarried men, neither having yet reached the age of 30 years. Lenich was engaged to be married to a young Austrian woman of Eveelth, who appeared at the trial.

THE SECRET OUT

Truth is Unshackled

To refute the many false and malicious attacks, bogus formula and other untruthful statements published concerning Dr. Pierce's world-famed family medicines, the Doctor has decided to publish all the ingredients entering into his "Favorite Prescription" for women and his equally popular tonic alterative known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Hereafter every bottle of these medicines, leaving the great laboratory at Buffalo, will bear upon it a full list of all the ingredients entering into the compound. Both are made entirely from native roots, barks and herbs. The ingredients of the Golden Medical Discovery being Golden Seal, Queen's root, Stone root, Wild-cherry bark, Mandrake and Bloodroot. The "Favorite Prescription" is prepared in a similar manner from Blue Cohosh, Lady's Slipper, Unicorn root. Golden Seal and Rattleweed root, these ingredients being macerated for a long time in a non-alcoholic menstruum. The exact working formula for making these medicines cost Dr. Pierce and his collaborating Chemist and Pharmacist many years of study and experiments, but as perfected they produce almost perfect pharmaceutical compounds embodying all the active, medicinal principles residing in the ingredients employed, and this, too, in such form and combination as to keep unchanged in any climate. Thus the use of alcohol is entirely avoided in their manufacture, and instead an agent is employed which possesses valuable medicinal properties, being a demulcent, anti-ferment and nutrient.

PROOF POSITIVE.

Without solicitation, Mrs. H. Harrison, of 112 West 2d St., Sioux City, Iowa, wrote us as follows:

"I suffered for more than seven years with a very complicated form of female trouble accompanied with nervous prostration, and after doctoring with six physicians (all bearing excellent reputations) was informed that unless an operation was performed I would be an invalid all my life. Hearing of the wonderful cures effected by Dr. R. V. Pierce's remedies and believing that there must be a cure for almost every ailment, I determined to make one more effort. I wrote to Dr. Pierce, and I will never forget his kindly advice, telling me to follow his instructions faithfully and not to submit to an operation. I commenced to improve after six weeks' treatment, and in five months my improvement was so noticeable to friends that they began to inquire about my method of treatment. I was pleased to tell them of the wonderful means of cure that I had most fortunately found, and, as so many ladies applied to me for information regarding Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines and his plans of treatment, I felt in duty bound to give them the benefit of my experience, so, told them the facts. The large number of positive cures effected by Dr. Pierce's remedies alone, used by my recommendation, seemed, in one year's time, nothing short of a miracle. I couldn't have believed it had I not seen the parties and known the facts."

"I was afflicted for more than seven years with pelvic trouble, which developed into kidney and bladder disorder," writes Mr. Ernest Rappold, Chairman Executive Committee, Western Industrial League, of 230 West First Street, Los Angeles, California. "I could make water only with difficulty; water was dark and cloudy, my whole system out of order, and severe backache and headache was my daily portion. Finally, I was unable to continue my work and things looked pretty dark in the home with me, without work and no money to fall back on. My employer, whom I had just left, called to see me while in bed, and he spoke so highly of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery that I decided to try it. Within two weeks I felt much better, could begin to relish my food, and my aches and pains grew less. I kept up the medicine for ten weeks, when I was cured and again able to return to work. This was over seventeen months ago, and I have not lost a day's work since.

"My wife had ovarian trouble and ulceration of the womb, and she was cured through the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, so you see, my home, which was once desolate and dark because of sickness, is to-day bright and cheery, and we both give thanks to your grand remedies, which brought us that grandest of all human blessings—health."

A SENSATION IN COMMONS

Wildest Disorder Follows Charges Against Balfour.

London, May 23.—The sitting of the house of commons last night was marked by scenes of the wildest disorder, growing out of a motion by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman to adjourn the house in order that he might discuss the charge against Premier Balfour of having violated his pledge not to deal with the subject of colonial preference without first appealing to the country.

Alfred Lyttleton, secretary of state for the colonies, was put up to reply to the Liberal leader, but the members of the opposition shouted down his every attempt to speak, even after the premier had demanded a hearing for the secretary. Finally the speaker, after he had exhausted every effort to quell the turbulence, put into force, for the first time, a new rule empowering him to adjourn the house in cases of grave disorder.

The matter came up at the afternoon sitting, when Premier Balfour, replying to questions on the subject, said he did not consider himself pledged to inaction in regard to colonial preference, except so far as parliamentary action was concerned. He reiterated that the government did not intend to deal with the fiscal question in the present parliament. The matter of colonial preference might, however, be submitted to a colonial conference in 1906, even though the country had not previously had an opportunity of expressing an opinion on the subject. The decision of the conference, however, would not be binding on either the mother country or on the colonies with legislative action.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, charged Mr. Balfour with violating the pledge he had made in his Edinburgh speech and moved the adjournment of the house to discuss the matter.

The debate on Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's motion came up at the night session and was marked by scenes of the wildest disorder. The Liberal leader demanded a plain answer from Premier Balfour, and Alfred Lyttleton, secretary of state for the colonies, rose to reply. The members of the opposition drowned the efforts of the secretary with cries of "Balfour," "Balfour."

After continuing for about ten minutes, Mr. Lyttleton sat down. Winston Churchill then attempted to speak, but the ministerialists drowned his efforts, the Nationalists joining in the din and shouting for the police.

After a number of members had failed to secure a hearing, the premier rose to a point of order and a temporary lull followed. Mr. Balfour said he thought it highly improper that he should be immediately expected to follow the leader of the opposition. He said he had never before known the opposition to refuse to hear a minister and he insisted that the house should hear Mr. Lyttleton as otherwise its dignity could not be maintained.

Mr. Lyttleton again made an attempt to speak, but the uproar was renewed. Finally the speaker said it was obvious that the scene could not continue and he would there adjourn the house under the rule empowering the speaker to take such action in cases of grave disorder.

The speaker had been unable to secure a semblance of order after howls and counterhowls lasting over an hour.

The action of the speaker and the scenes in the house created a tremendous sensation in the lobbies, which were crowded with members discussing every phase of the evening's occurrences, which were declared to be unprecedented.

The galleries were filled with peers and other distinguished persons who had gathered in the hope of hearing an interesting debate on the fiscal question. They took part in the cries for their favorites, the house adding to the din and afterward joined the excited crowds in the lobbies.

CLARK WINS CASE.

Judge Knowles decided in favor of Clark, holding in effect that he was the innocent purchaser of the land under the timber and stone act.

THE TRUE TEST

Tried in Duluth, It Has Stood the Test.

The hardest test is the test of time, and Doan's Kidney Pills have stood it well in Duluth. Kidney sufferers can hardly ask for stronger proof than the following:

W. W. Scott, operator on the St. Paul & Duluth railroad, and living at 126 Sixty-sixth avenue west, Duluth, Minn., says: "I have already recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. I told in the statement made in 1898 how I suffered with dull, aching pains through the loins and kidneys. From the constant sitting position required in my work my back became so lame and sore that I could scarcely straighten. The kidney secretions were irregular and annoying. At times severe headaches would strike me, and I was feeling worse than ever when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice.

I began using them, and as I have stated in my previous testimonial, they so thoroughly regulated the kidneys, removed the backaches, headaches, pains and weakness that I have felt like a different man. I have never had a return of any of these symptoms, and have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills again and again."

NEGRO DEFIES THE OFFICERS

Has Killed One Man and Thus Far Wounded Seven.

Owensboro, Ky., May 23.—Bob Shaw, a negro, supposedly insane, has killed one man and wounded seven in the past twenty-four hours near Waltman. The body of the dead man lies in front of Shaw's house and the negro continues to defy the officers who are seeking to arrest him. The dead:

WILLIAM C. BROWN, a deputy sheriff.

Wounded: Deputy Marshal John J. Jackson, Dr. G. H. Plitt, Town Marshal Watson, James Ford, John Robinson, Frank Howard, Watson Pelly.

It is probable the house will be burned in an effort to arrest the negro.

Monday afternoon Shaw was terrorizing the community around Waltman, and an appeal was sent to this city for help. A posse was at once formed, but as soon as they approached Shaw's house, he opened fire.

Marshal Watson was shot in the back, Deputy Jackson in the leg, Dr. Plitt in the arm, Frank Howard and James Ford, two boys, were slightly wounded, as also were Jelly and Robinson.

Shaw quickly barricaded himself in his house. The posse tried to storm the house, but the negro opened fire, wounding James Ford and John Robinson. He apparently had only small shot, which saved the lives of those he shot at. Shaw was shot twice. He had two revolvers, but announced that he would save them for work at close range.

A great crowd gathered around the house, keeping at a safe distance. Late yesterday Deputy Sheriff Brown of Hancock county volunteered to go to the house and take Shaw. The crazy man allowed Brown to approach within fifteen feet before he fired. Brown's shoulder was completely blown off. The number of persons around the house is being constantly swelled by fresh arrivals. Excitement is at fever heat and the lynching spirit rules strong. The crowd are determined that the negro shall meat a violent death and as a last resort threaten to burn the house to the ground.

About 8 o'clock tonight a mob of men and boys surrounded the house and set it on fire. Shaw remained in the burning building until the heat forced him to jump out or perish in the flames. He made a leap from a second story window but had hardly landed on the ground before his body was riddled with a hundred bullets.

CATHOLIC FORESTERS

To Hold Annual Convention at New Ulm.

New Ulm, Minn., May 23.—June 11 to 14 is the time set for the annual convention in this city of the different camps of the Catholic Order of Foresters of this state.

Under the management of Chief Ranger Eckstein of this city, who has the care of the meeting on his hands, the convention will open with what is to be known as Catholic day. This is a new feature in the meetings of the order. On this day it is expected that there will be one of the largest crowds of visitors in this city that has ever been seen here.

The plan is to have the railroads run excursions to the place from all directions, timing the trains so they will get here in the morning and leave in the evening, the object being to have as many Foresters present as possible to take part in a monster parade.

There are some 12,000 members of the order in the state, and so far nearly all the camps have been heard from. Camps which have bands or can secure them will bring them along, and it is believed there will be at least twenty bands in the procession.

Catholics of this city have just finished a magnificent school building and in this new building the deliberations of the convention will take place. Speakers have been announced as follows: Rt. Rev. Bishop Starika of Lead, S. D.; State Chief Ranger John B. Hanten of South Dakota, State Chief Ranger J. A. Kuypers of Wisconsin and Julius Coller. There will also be representatives of several states representing the various state organizations and it is certain that the talent in this line will be as good as has ever been assembled upon a similar occasion in the state.

WOMAN SAVES THE BEARDS

Of Chicago Doctors Who Once Shaved Their Whiskers.

Chicago, May 22.—Smiles rippled over the faces of Chicago's medical men, when the news was spread that Dr. J. F. Kennedy, secretary of the Iowa state board of health, had ordered doctors and surgeons in the Hawkeye commonwealth to remove their beards. The merriment was not entirely due to Iowa's attempt to compete with Indiana and Wisconsin in "freak" legislation, for it takes something more than that to cause famous physicians to doff their professional gravity and grin. And thereby hangs a tale.

After exacting a solemn oath that his name be not mentioned, one of the well-known physicians confided the story.

Not long ago a group of prominent surgeons of this city decided that their beards, ranging from closely trimmed Vandykes to ragged burnsides were choice lodging houses for disease germs, and might possibly infect the patients upon which they operated, or the friends and relatives whom they embraced. They held consultation together, and decided that the facial annexes must disappear in the cause of science.

The step brought despair into the heart of many a young student in the medical schools, who had been coaxing moustaches for months. Regretfully the disciples followed the example of the master, the business of barbers was comfortably increased, and the admirers of a journalist who has announced editorially that beards and mustaches were relics of the monkey stage in man's evolution rejoiced at the spread of the gospel.

When the Chicago Medical society gathered for its periodical discussions of all the ills that flesh is heir to, the assemblage looked like a chapel meeting of Benedictine monks. Lips and chins were smooth and blue, although here and there some representative of the old school wagged his beard in disgust at this overturning of tradition.

On one of these occasions Dr. Frances Dickinson, champion of woman's rights and club leader, entered. She stared in amazement at the undecorated faces. It was a gaze of disapproval. Perhaps Dr. Dickinson, out of purely altruistic motives, felt that as a woman and a fighter for woman's rights she must protest. Perhaps she remembered that favorite woman's proverb, "A kiss without a mustache is like an egg without salt," and, with motives absolutely altruistic, believed that a protest should be entered against the wholesale destruction of handsome professional beards.

But, whatever she felt and thought, it is a matter of record that she asked:

"What's all this for?"

"Antiseptic purposes," blithely explained a beardless savant. "Danger of infection brought to minimum. Fine humanitarian idea, isn't it?"

Dr. Dickinson's wit is sharpened to a fine point by the arduous duties which befall a chairman of the social economics clubs. She looked at her man grimly for a moment and then replied:

"Why don't you shave your heads also?"

Dr. Dickinson's criticism exploded the fad at once. When they realized that to be consistent they must be as bald as fresh convicts as well as smooth-cheeked as infants, the former proud possessor of Vandykes and Burnsides began to shun the razor once more.

RAILWAY RATES

In France Are Fixed By Authority of Government.

President of Orleans Railway Explains Working of Regulation.

Washington, May 23.—Of all foreign countries that have tried railway regulation by government authority, the one in which the situation is most useful for comparison with the United States is France. In France the railways are not owned by the government, but railway rates are fixed by the governmental authority, as has been proposed for theUnited States. M. Emile Heurteau, the president of the Orleans railway and one of the foremost railways administrators of France, who came here as a delegate to the International Railway congress, before leaving Washington, gave an interview in which he explained the working of railway regulation in his country.

"The maximum charges which the railways of France may make for carrying merchandise," said M. Heurteau, "are fixed by a contract made by each company with the government, this contract being in effect the company's charter. The government designates the exact course along which roads shall be built, in some cases laying it through territory which would not be profitable for private management, to operate in without some sort of a subvention. This subvention the state gives in the form of an advance or loan, on which the company must pay 4 per cent interest, and which must be returned within a specified period. During that period the company may not declare dividends above a fixed figure, the surplus that might otherwise go to dividends being used in reducing the loan. At the end of the specified term, usually ninety-nine years, the railroad becomes the property of the state outright, except for its rolling stock on which the government holds a lien, to guarantee the payment of any of the advance remaining unpaid at that time.

"This makes possible, you see, the building of railroads in places where the government restrictions would otherwise make it impossible. Naturally, it is the taxpayer,—the merchant and shipper who think they are getting so much benefit from the state's interference in the railroad business,—who pays for all these things. It is the taxpayer and the merchant and the shipper who pay for the construction and maintainance of canals, and canalized rivers,—the latter natural water courses artificially deepened or straightened—which in some places make the existence of a profitable railroad almost impossible, and in others centralize industry and traffic to the detriment of sections of the country that do not have similar advantages.

"There is no provision at all for the state's regulating charges for water transportation. The waterways are, in the eye of the law, public highways. The vessel owner may charge as much as he pleases for the services he gives, and inasmuch as it costs him much less to render them with impunity, so as to seriously affect the trend and movement of traffic.

"This is not, however, competition in the true sense. It produces such results as these: In the region north of Paris, which is the great industrial section of France, a very large proportion of the traffic is carried by canals, which you abandoned long ago in this country as out of date, which are slow and subject to all manner of hindrances from the necessity of repair, the jam of ice in the winter, and what not. In southern France, a very large share of the freight between Marseilles and Paris, for example, moving in either direction, goes around the coast line instead of directly by rail. You can easily see the effect of this. The people are practically deprived of the more efficient means of transportation in the interests of the less efficient. This would of course mean much more in the United States than it does in France, even, for your great Middle West, especially.

"What, you ask, is the cause of this? It is that the government will not allow the making of railroad rates that will take the traffic off the canals, and its refusal to allow this is due to political pressure sometimes, to the jealousy of one community toward another, to the powerful influence of the vessel owners to whom the present arrangement is of such vast financial benefit, to the difficulty of ever getting a governemntal machine to reverse its action or to modify its mechanical methods. The inelasticity that government ownership or close government supervision invariably brings makes it impossible that French railroad rates should go below the point at which the boats on the waterways do business.

"Not only does the government never give its consent to the raising of rates, as might be expected, but also, extraordinary as it may seem to Americans, who have had experience with governmental control of such things, it frequently withholds its consent from lowering them. Our only protection is that our contracts with the government have fixed maximum charges so long as the present agreements are in force. We would be only too glad to adopt the American system of fixing the lowest rates proper and making up the loss of profit on each shipment out of the increased volume of business they make the railways available to, which is the only economically and commercially right and sensible way of doing. We would be glad to build up out territory as the American railways do, by encouraging its industries, by opening its markets, by enabling it to compete with other territory contributing to the same markets. But we cannot do that; the state controlled rates prevent it, however strong our desire or the people's may be.

"The basis on which freight rates are made in France is generally that of distance. In fact, it is impossible that any government or government commission shoud make rates on any other basis. This tape-measure basis is the easiest to defend against charges of discrimination, in spite of its real injustice and its absolutely unsound economy, which a moment's thought will show. It avoids trouble and affords excuses, and your government official's chief thought is to avoid trouble for himself, for he is first, last and all the time a politician whatever else he is.

"Railroads under government supervision must set their rates close to the maximum then and maintain them there for their own salvation. There are many times when, if it were possible, we would like to lower freight charges to meet some special emergency, such as the necessities of a district suffering from a crop failure, for example. That is not philanthropy, but commercial sense, to help the man who creates business for you when he is hard pressed and to increase the volume of traffic that is failing because people have not the money to pay the price they have been accustomed to pay easily. But if we should once lower our rates—possibly to the point of less, as American railways have done frequently in crisis—we would not be allowed to restore them later, when they should be fairly restored.

"Occasionally temporary rates are made for the term of a year, say, but it is quite exceptional. And why, do you suppose? The process of reducing rates under our system of government regulation, which is as liberal as any European system of the kind, involves so many hearings, discussions and disputes by rival boards of trade and chambers of commerce, deputies, politicians, shippers and the rest of them, that it takes many months and sometimes years to get permission to make a reduction in charges. By that time the necessity for which the reduction was asked is passed; it will do neither the railroad nor the community any good, and so we do not ask for such things. Where rate fixing is a national governmental function, whether directely interested in a specific case or not, has the right to be heard. The political considerations involved are most complex.

"It may seem curious to Americans, but no reduction of rates has ever been made in France to meet the needs of the railroads, however much they might want it. A striking instance of how government regulation works in this particular is the experience of my own road in common with others a few years ago, when the philoxera attacked the vineyards of Southern France. There was no wine making to speak of in France then, and the country's supply was imported from Spain. Over there wine is a staple, a necessity of the poor man as well as the rich, and we made a low rate for bringing it in from Spain into Paris.

"The deputies of the vineyard districts protested, however, because they said we were carrying Spanish wine as cheaply as we were carrying French wine. The railroads were obliged to restore the high rate, and immediately the wine went to Paris from Spain by water, through the canals and canalized rivers. In order to make this water transportation easier, the government made large extra appropriation for the canalization of the Seine at that time. The citizen whose temporarily non-existent industry was being 'protected,' partly for the benefit of foreign ship owners, would appear, was a taxpayer, contributing his francs for this canal construction and repair, when he could least afford it.

"As I have told you, our charges for transporting freight are fixed in the railway's original contract with the government, and set down in the cahier des charges—what you would call tariff sheet or rate-book, I suppose. For obvious reasons, the railways never have consented to giving the state the right to lower these maximum charges, nor can it be expected that they ever will consent to such a thing. Our contract with the government is like any other contract; it cannot be altered, except with the consent of both parties. Any form of government supervision, short of absolute government ownership, must be based upon contracts of that kind, otherwise what protection would there be for the vested interests.

"Petitions for lower rates are made to the director of railways from time to time, and perhaps he will suggest the desirability of considering some of them, but he has no power to enforce such demands. Of course, sometimes we must yield to such petitions against our better judgment, when they are evidently nothing less than sectional selfishness. The pressure which any government can bring to bear is tremendous, and may not be withstood in certain circumstances, even though it may threaten industrial misfortune.

"The wonderful growth and development of the United States are the admiration of the whole world. I have no doubt they are to be attributed largely to the freedom you have always enjoyed in your commercial and industrial life. Opportunity is given here for railways and communities to be mutually helpful, and splendid use has been made and is being made of it. The few cases of complaints against your railways, the expansion of trade through the opening of European markets to the producers of your Central and Western states, who are enabled to deliver their products abroad, the low cost of transportation that enables them to compete there with the foreign producer near at hand, whose railways are in no position to help him—all these things sem to me sufficient evidence of the success and desirability of the American practice in the management and regulation of railway matters.

"Any economist, any business man, any transportation manager, will tell you that the present American method of fixing freight rates is the only logical and rational one."

AN AWFUL SKIN DISEASE

Sores Covered Neck and Cheeks—Itched Day and Night—Nothing Did Me Any Good—Was Growing Worse.

CURED BY CUTICURA AT COST OF $4.50

Miss Nellie Vander Wiele, of Lakeside, N. Y., writing under date of April 18, 1904, says: "I do wish you would publish this letter in the newspapers, so that others suffering as I have may see it and be helped. I suffered for many months with an awful skin disease, sores covering my ears, neck, and cheeks. Scabs would form and they would swell, and itch day and night. Then they would break open and blood and matter run out. I had tried many different remedies, but none of them did me any good. I was growing worse when I tried the Cuticura Remedies. The first application helped me, and when I had used two cakes of Cuticura Soap, three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, I was completely cured."

TORTURING, DISFIGURING

Humours, Eczemas, Itchings, and Chafings Cured by Cuticura

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter, and salt rheum,—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt by the testimony of the civilized world.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Proprietors, Boston. "How to Cure Skin Humours."

FAVORS TRUST IN SCHOOLS

Vanderlip Urges College Combine to Abolish Ruinous Competition.

Philadelphia, May 22.—Frank A. Vanderlip, former assistant secretary of the treasury, caused a sensation Saturday at the ceremonics attending the one hundred and fifty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Stephen Girard, when his unqualified declaration in favor of an educational trust, backed by men of great wealth, was applauded by the 20,000 alumni and visitors.

Mr. Vanderlip's main idea was that the "captains of industry," the men who had the genius to make themselves extremely wealthy, should take hold and organize the whole educational system to prevent the untold waste of money and of the precious time and energy of youth. There should be an application of the trust principles of universities and colleges to abolish ruinous competition.

He referred to the two $10,000,000 funds given by Andrew Carnegie, but he proposed a new and greater central fund, to be placed in the hands of "the wisest body of men, who, with a view to distribute the income, should look to the whole field of education to the co-ordination of effort among all the universities and colleges.

"If the people of the United States are to make the most of their opportunities," he said, "they must employ the most effective method. University courses of higher commercial training will be of national value in the development of these opportunities."

Leading up to his main propositions, Mr. Vanderlip declared that the professional educators always were prone to be narrow and provincial and an exhaustive history of one great Eastern university, for example, showed that the faculty had voted against every important step of progress until the trustees forced it on them. The trustees of one university had adopted a new plan of education prepared by Alexander Hamilton against the protest of the faculty.

The speaker desired to enlist the talents of the millionaires in educational developments. The keynote of economic life was the prevention of waste, prevention of useless competition, prevention of unnecessary duplication of plants and of unsymmetrical growth, lacking in central purposes, he declared.

The gift of the time and the talent of the millionaires to the educational problem would be of greater value than their millions, was another statement. There had been a golden flood of educational donations from motives of vanity, local pride, ambition and "without discrimination," usually with a complete lack of perspective as to what would be best for the whole educational field.

ROOSEVELT HAD REVENGE

Of a Picturesque Character on the Tariff Standpatters.

Washington, May 23.—The impression is gradually seeping into the minds of the high tariff statesmen that President Roosevelt, biding his time, has wreaked a picturesque revenge upon them for the brusque rejection by them of his tariff revision plans in the last congress.

The president is making it plain to congressional callers at the White House that the Panama purchase plan was his own and that he intends to stand for it without flinching against all protests.

These high tariff statesmen are rubbing themselves rather ruefully today.

They say there was no question that they gave the president a pretty hard jolt last session over his tariff revision proposition. They made it as hard and as vigorous as they could in the hope, as they said, "it might hold him for a while." The president winced but "took his medicine."

"But the dose he has given us now," said a high tariff senator upon leaving the White House, "is wormwood and gall compared to what we administered to him."

These high tariff statesmen go on to say that they are convinced that while the motive of the president may not have been revenge, his main object was to promote the campaign for tariff revision in which he was frustrated last year and that the effect will be the serious discomfiture of the standpat element in congress.

The stand-patters do not conceal their fear that the president may make a proposition is likely to prove attractive to the masses.

It is a slap in the face, apparently, for the hated trusts and it is in support of the supposedly popular demand for tariff revision.

The people will not stop, it is said, to reason out the theories of protection to American labor, but will view the whole thing in a general way and back up the president.

The next thing on the program will be the organization of the stand-pat faction against tariff revision.

They cannot do anything with the canal case.

The supplies will have to be purchased and delivered before congress meets, and there is no way to stop it.

The standpatters are not worrying over the financial loss to the home producers for that will be merely a bagatelle. They are looking forward to the moral effect of the purchase and will devote their efforts to counteracting it.

WILL TAKE PART

Six Students to Be on High School Commencement Program.

Three Young Men and Three Young Women—Names Announced.

The names of the students who will give the program commencement night, June 30, at the graduating exercises of the seniors were announced by Principal Smith this morning.

They are, together with the titles of their essays: Willis Hamblin, "Representative Men;" Stanley Strand, "Our Merchant Marine;" Harold Cant, "Civil Service Reform;" Elizabeth Morris, "Uncle Ben's Superstition;" Lillie Olssen, "Early Ballad Poetry;" Johanna Strate, "Two of Shakespeare's Heroines."

It will be noticed that three boys and three girls were chosen whereas formerly there were but five students who delivered essays or orations upon this occasion, being selected for excellency in scholarship. This year the choice was based solely on the worth of the papers that were turned in and the oratorical ability of the writer, as in this manner it is believed a more satisfactory program will result. With but one or two exceptions, those chosen have had considerable experience in public speaking, and will undoubtedly be able to make themselves heard throughout the entire hall.

In announcing the names Principal Smith said that all of the pupils had put much time and thought upon their essays, which were of exceptional worth. The class as a whole had made an excellent showing he added, and the results were highly satisfactory in every way.

All of the young women who were successful were also on the honor roll, being among the first five who had the highest standings for the three and a half years of their high school course. Miss Lillie Olssen stood first, Miss Elizabeth Morris second and Miss Johanna Strate fifth.

Canada Not With Us.

It was the general impression that Canada was only awaiting an invitation to become part of the United States, but when the question was presented to 300 of their prominent people, not one favored the plan. This caused great surprise and considerable comment. Another event that has also caused considerable comment is the wonderful cures being made every day by the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Doctors and druggists everywhere have been interested and surprised at its marvelous power, which often affected a cure when other remedies had failed. If your stomach is weak and you suffer from poor appetite, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, cramps, headache, biliousness, female complaints backache or malaria, fever and ague, the Bitters will cure you. NORWEGIAN STUDENTS

Social Conditions at the University of Christiana.

The social conditions surrounding the students at the University of Norway are so different from those of other European universities, excepting those of Sweden and Denmark, where they are similar, that it is interesting to note why singing and other arts are fostered directly under the care of the various faculties. In Germany for instance when a student is admitted to lectures, this is almost his only connection with the university. The social conditions surrounding him are a matter of total indifference to the university authorities. There are a number of groups of student societies each group seldom numbering more than twenty members, and each group sometimes more or less hostile to each other and even indulging in dueling. The great bulk of students who really study on, however, devoid of social organization and very seldom students not pursuing the same study know anything of each other.

At the University of Norway it is different. A student on entering the university will enter the Students' association which has its own building containing a restaurant, libraries, halls for festivities, stage for theatrical performances, and reading rooms of every description. As this institution has been amply endowed since the founding of the university only a very small fee is charged for memberships, so practically all students become members and remain so during their whole stay at the university.

While all special groups, as the medics or jurists or philologists, etc., have a special evening for their social reunions, every Saturday night there is a social gathering in the large hall, where sociability is cultivated and all kinds of themes are up for discussions. Theatrical performances by the students also take place on these occasions, and music by the students' symphony orchestra and the singing society is also frequently dispensed.

This association is also the home of the Students' Singing society, and the director is a member of the university faculty, and no fee is charged for membership, the only conditions being musical fitness. During the last fifteen years the singing society has made several large tours. Besides two visits to Paris, the singing society made a coastwise tour of Norway last summer, on a chartered steamer, and for two months this memorable exodus caused fluttering hearts and general excitement all over the land, and the experiences fill an illustrated volume of 200 pages.

The director, O. A. Grondahl, is a most severe disciplinarian, and the society came through the trying ordeal of such a journey with flying colors and with a multitude of great musical triumphs. The appearance of the students in Duluth, at the Lyceum, the evening of May 30, will be an event long to be remembered, not only by Scandinavians, but by all who admire male chorus singing in its highest possible perfection.

GETS NO SHARE OF PROFITS

George L. Spangler Loses His Case Against Joseph Oreckovsky.

Judge Dibell, this morning, filed with the clerk of district court his findings and order in the action brought by George L. Spangler, a Duluth attorney, to recover from Joseph Oreckovsky a share in the profits from the sale of some shares of the Calumet & Arizona mining stock, Mr. Spangler alleging that he advised Mr. Oreckovsky to buy the stock, and for which advice he was to receive a share of the profits when the stock was sold. The court orders judgment for Mr. Oreckovsky, together with the costs and disbursements of the case.

In his findings, Judge Dibell says that some time in February, 1901, Mr. Spangler and Mr. Oreckovsky had a certain conversation looking toward an investment of the latter's money in mining stocks that were to be recommended by Mr. Spangler, who was to receive, if the investment be made, one half the profits.

The court finds that April 1, 1901, Mr. Spangler investigated and recommended for purchase by Mr. Oreckovsky shares of the Calumet & Arizona stock at $10 per share, claiming that it would in his judgment be a profitable investment. After some talk Mr. Oreckovsky finally decided not to make the investment, and it was abandoned, other investments being talked over, but none being made.

About a year afterward, Mr. Oreckovsky is found to have bought thirty shares of Calumet & Arizona stock at $30 per share, paying an aggregate amount of $900, of which $600 was money belonging to his wife, and which had been given to her by her father, Mr. Oreckovsky acting as her agent. The shares were all taken in Mrs. Oreckovsky's name, but no definite arrangement was made as to the repayment to the husband of the $300 he invested.

The court finds that about September, 1904, the stock was sold for $3,260, ten shares at $110 and twenty shares at $108, making a profit on the investment of $2,360.

Mr. Spangler is found to have demanded an accounting, to which Mr. Oreckovsky demurred. W. B. Phelps appeared for Mr. Spangler and Baldwin, Baldwin & Dancer for Mr. Oreckovsky.

A RENEWAL OF FIGHTING

Indicated By All the News Coming From the Front.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—The news from the front continues to point to a renewal of fighting. Gen. Linevitch is pressing the Japanese center, both on the line of railway and on the Mandarin road, but whether he is simply feeling out Field Marshal Oyama's strength or has assumed a genuine offensive is not yet clear. There is no doubt, however, that Linevitch has made complete preparation for a big battle. All the Russian sick and wounded, who were at Harbin and places south of there, have been transported westward to Irkutsk and orders have been given to clear the intervening hospitals. The sanitary trains have also been ordered to the front.

Gen. Linevitch in a dispatch dated May 16, announces that the Russians east of the railroad, which on May 16 aproached the village of Shahotse and was attacked by a force of Japanese from the coal mines south of that place, occupied Shahotse May 19 and continued southward May 20. Prince Troubetskoy's detachment met the Japanese artillery fire May 17 near Changtfu station, but the Japanese were forced to evacuate the position and retire southwards. The prince, May 20, advanced further southward and another Russian detachment May 20 exchanged rifle fire with a strong Japanese force, occupying the village of Armagan, about four miles west of Kinchuantso.

The Associated Press was informed at the admiralty today that no direct advices have been received from Vice Admiral Rojestvensky for ten days, when it is believed he set out on his long voyage. The report of Rojestvensky's death was ridiculed at the admiralty.

COFFEE CONGESTION

Causes a Variety of Ails.

A happy old lady in Wisconsin says: "During the time I was a coffee drinker I was subject to sick headaches, recurring every 2 or 3 weeks, and sometimes lasting 2 or 3 days, totally unfitting me for anything.

To this affliction was added, some years ago, a trouble with my heart that was very painful, accompanied by a smothering sensation and faintness.

I would be unable to lie down, but was compelled to sit gasping for breath until I was perfectly exhausted.

Dyspepsia, also, a few years ago came to make life harder to bear. I took all sorts of patent medicines as well as doctor's prescriptions, but none of them helped me for any length of time.

"The doctors frequently told me that coffee was not good for me; but without coffee I felt as if I had no breakfast. I finally decided about 2 years ago to abandon the use of coffee entirely, and as I had read a great deal about Postum Food Coffee, I concluded to try that for a breakfast beverage.

I liked the taste of it and was particularly pleased to notice that it did not 'come up' as coffee used to. I had only hoped that the Postum Food Coffee would help my digestion, but I soon found that it was doing much more than that. The bad spells with my heart grew less and less frequent, and finally ceased altogether, and I have not had an attack of sick headache for more than a year. My digestion is good, too, and I am thankful that I am once more a healthy woman. I know my wonderful restoration to health came from quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is this. Coffee has a direct action on the liver with some people, and causes partial congestion of that organ preventing the natural outlet of the secretions. Then follows biliousness, sallow skin, headaches, constipation and finally a change of the blood corpuscles and nervous prostration.

DAVIS TESTIFIES IN BOWEN-LOOMIS CASE.

Washington, May 23.—Richard Harding Davis, the last of three witnesses summoned from New York by Secretary Taft in connection with the Bowen-Loomis case, was examined by the secretary today. Mr. Davis was in Venezuela for some time last winter and heard more or less of the stories that were current in hotels and clubs respecting the American legation and the asphalt company. The secretary afterwards stated that the testimony did not throw any new light of importance upon the case.

OGLE MAY SOON BE IN DURANCE

Mankato, Minn., May 23.—A conference is being held by George D. Eggabroad, representing the relatives of Judge John B. Ogle, the confessed forger) Hughes Brothers, representing Thomas O. Jones, and County Attorney Wilson, with a view to effecting a settlement.

In case no agreement can be reached Mr. Jones' attorneys will have a warrant served for the arrest of Ogle.

Notes in the possession of Jones are pronounced forgeries, as follows: William Schwanenberg, $1,000; W. A. Snyder, $150; Jesse Shepard, $275; A. Lindholm, $135; George Simmons, $197; Cynthia C. Davis, 200. These notes were given to Jones for money which he had placed with Ogle to be loaned.

In addition, two mortgages for $800, one given by George W. Bunce of Mankato to Nellie G. Gilbert of Hennepin county and assigned to Thomas O. Jones, are under suspicion. The first note was assigned in May, 1900, and in June of the same year an identical note and mortgage were given the First National bank of this city. One is a forgery and a lawsuit will follow.

A dispatch told on Saturday of the attempted suicide by drinking laudanum of John B. Ogle, former special judge of the municipal court. It was known that he was heavily in debt and his act was attributed to despondency over his financial embarrassments. The general public had no suspicion of anything worse.

But later sensational revelations were to shock the entire city. George Ogle of Chicago, a brother of the judge, was summoned to Mankato, and to him the desperate man confessed that he was a forger and had attempted his life because of the certainty of exposure.

Ogle left the city Saturday in company with his brother and is thought to have gone to Chicago. Jones has taken legal advice and may ask for a warrant.

County Attorney Wilson says that all claims against Ogle will be paid. George D. Eggabroad, a wealthy Winnebago City man, is Ogle's brother-in-law and is going over the books.

Some years ago Ogle created a sensation by leaving the city at the same time his handsome stenographer did, but he returned some months later and his life since has been above reproach, and none suspected that all was not right. His wife is prostrated by his disgrace.

IS AGAIN HIGHER

Wheat Has Another Day of Advance In All Markets.

Bad Crop Reports Continue and the Cash Demand Stiffens.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 23.—This was another day of higher prices. Bad crop reports were again a feature, and they were coming from many points in the Southwest. Though strenuously denied a few days ago, they are beginning to have considerable effect in many quarters. The cash demand for wheat is stiffening sharply, an indication which is taken to be practically certain to mean higher prices. Duluth shippers sold probably 75,000 bus of wheat to Eastern millers today, and a decrease in the stocks here of from 300,000 to 400,000 bus is looked for this week.

The Liverpool market closed ½@⅝d lower, Paris unchanged to ⅛c lower, Berlin unchanged and Budapest ⅛@c higher.

In the Duluth market: July advanced 2¼c, in Minneapolis 1⅞c, in Chicago and New York 1⅝c, in St. Louis 1¼-⅜c and in Kansas City ⅝-1c. The September option gained ⅝c in Duluth and Minneapolis, ½c in Chicago, ½-⅝c in St. Louis and ¼-⅜c in Kansas City. In Winnipeg there was a decline of ¼c in July and ⅛c in September. In New York May there was a bulge of 6¾c and in Chicago 4¾c, but in other markets that option was not of any particular interest.

Car receipts at Duluth were 4 against 14 last year, and at Minneapolis 185 against 95 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 189 against 99 last year. Chicago received 4 against 10 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 282,000 bus, last year 261,000 bus. Shipments 302,000 bus, last year 249,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 45,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged. July corn in the Chicago market closed ⅛c higher. July oats closed ⅞c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 435,000 bus, last year 502,000 bus. Shipments 151,000 bus, last year 459,000 bus. Clearances were 78,000 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market is very dull. The July option opened ¾c higher at $1.08, sold up to $1.10 at 10:45, fell back to $1.09½ at 11:05, and advanced to $1.10⅜ at 11:35. It fell back to $1.10 at 1 o'clock and then slumped quickly, closing at $1.09, which was 2¼c higher than yesterday. The May option closed ⅝c higher at $1.08⅝. The September option advanced 1½c to 85¼c and closed at 84⅝c, an advance for the day of ⅝c.

Receipts of wheat are running very light and cash offerings are too small to be of consequence. Durum wheat advanced 3c.

Flax was dull. The May and July options were net traded in and closed unchanged. September advanced ⅝c to $1.27 and October 5c to $1.26.

Oats advanced c⅝ for to arrive and ⅝c for on track oats.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive—No. 1 northern $1.08¾. On track—No. 1 northern, $1.08¾; No. 2 northern, $1.04¾. Durum No. 1, 90c; No. 2, 91c; May, $1.08¾; July, $1.09; Sept., 84¾c. Flax to arrive, $1.43½; on track, $1.43½; May, $1.40¾; July, $1.35½; Sept., $1.27; Oct., $1.26. Oats to arrive, 30⅝c; on track, 30⅞c. Rye to arrive, 75c; on track, 76c. Barley—Feed, 39½@41c.

Cars inspected: Wheat 4, last year 14; corn 1, oats 6, barley 5, flax 2, last year 35. Receipts: Wheat, 6,211; oats, 1,091; barley, 796; rye, 584, flax, 1,649.

Shipments: Wheat, 85,000; oats, 3,523; barley, 59,000; rye, 6,358.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Has Firm Undertone—May Option Quiet.

Chicago, May 23.—Notwithstanding lower prices at Liverpool, the wheat market here today had a firm undertone. Trading in the May option was comparatively quiet. July opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 88⅝c to 88¾c. After selling off to 88¾c, the price advanced to 89¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 193 cars, against 35 cars last week and 169 cars a year ago.

Toward the middle of the session the market became extremely strong on aggressive buying by shorts. The immediate cause of the advance was the bullish tenor of numerous advices telling of damage to winter wheat in the Southwest. One report from Kansas City was especially bullish, claiming estimated loss by deterioration by May 1 of 20,000,000 bus in the total yield of Kansas. The highest point of the day was reached at 90¾c. A large portion of the gain was lost on profit-taking, but the market closed firm with July up 1⅜ at 89⅝c.

Influenced by firm cables, the corn market was steady in spite of more favorable weather conditions. Trading was light and confined to commission house conditions. Shorts were moderate bidders for May, but offerings were extremely light. July opened a shade lower at 47⅞@48c. After touching 47⅝c, the price rallied to 48¼c. Local receipts were 449 cars, with 155 of contract grade.

The market responded to the strength of wheat, July advancing to 45⅞c. The close was strong with July up ⅛c at 48¼c.

Increased receipts had a weakening effect on oats. July opened ⅛c lower at 29½c and sold at 29½@⅝c. Local receipts were 284 cars.

Provisions were easier in sympathy with a slight decline in the price of live hogs. July pork was off 2½c at $12.60. Lard was down 2½c at $7.32½. Ribs were unchanged at $7.25@7.27½.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.02⅜; July, 89½c; September, 82¼@⅝c. Corn—May, 52¾c; July, 48½c; old, 48¾c; September, 47⅝c; old, 48¼@¾c; December, 44¾c; old, 45⅝c. Oats—May, 30⅝@¾c; July, 29½c; September, 28¼c. Pork—July, $12.55@12.60; September, $12.82½. Lard—May, $7.12½; July, $7.30; September, $7.47½; November, $7.37½. Ribs—May, $7.10; July, 7.25@7.27½; September, $7.50. Rye—May, 77@78c; July, 66c; September, 59@60c. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.42; Southwestern, $1.38; May, $1.38. Timothy—May, $2.60; September, $3.15. Clover—May, $11.75@12.25. Barley—Cash, 42@56c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1.07@1.08½; No. 3 red, $1.06@1.65; No. 2 hard, $1.05@1.08; No. 3 hard, 99@$1.06; No. 1 northern $1.11¼@1.12½; No. 2 northern, $1.10@1.11; No. 3 spring, $1.05@1.09. Corn—No. 2, 56¾@57¼c; No. 3, 53@54c. Oats—No. 2, 30½c; No. 3, 30@¼c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: The market today was strong and active with the bulk of the trading credited to the July. More rain was reported in the Northwest, but conditions were some better in the Southwest and a better forecast is noted for tomorrow. It would seem that an advance of 6c since Friday would ordinarily call for a little more of a reaction. The situation still looks strong and healthy and we would favor purchases on any little setbacks, especially in September. Much comment is being made upon the spread between that and the July option, and it is not believed that this spread will be reduced at the expense of the July.

Corn—A firm and quiet opening for corn. Receipts continue very liberal. We would still sell the deferred months on any sharp advance.

* * *

St. Louis: A party in Scott, Mo., says: "In one of our best Southeast wheat counties a fourteen hundred-acre field that three weeks ago promised a bumper crop, now indicates not over half a crop due to fly and rust."

* * *

E. W. Lewis, Chicago: We are getting a lot of bad crop reports from the Southwest, and now comes hails from the vicinity of Lawrenceburg and Danville, Ind., and says there is much disappointment in the outlook, which is poor comparatively. It looks as though the July would be worked higher on this talk, with decreasing stocks.

* * *

Chicago Record-Herald: "Corn is in a good merchandising position," said W. H. Bartlett. "Stocks are low everywhere, and there will be a place for the first run of corn from the country. We were in doubt Saturday whether to charter a boat or not for fear we would not be able to get the corn, but we finally found it. We have no stock of cash corn on hand now, however, but could use some if we had it. I anticipate a better liberal run of corn just now, but how long it will last I don't know. I cannot believe it will be long, after the farmer finds himself on the July instead of the May basis of prices."

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 23.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 5@10 points on continued covering and a little bull support, in response to higher cables than expected and further rains shown on the early map. The indications appeared to be for clearing weather in the western belt, however, and with Wall street houses liberal sellers at the advance, while there was also some selling for short account in anticipation of a bearish weekly report at noon, prices soon after the opening eased off to about the closing figures of the previous day. Trading was much less active than yesterday and the market looked unsettled. At midday the market was quiet and about net unchanged, pending the publication of the weekly crop report from Washington. Spot quiet; middling uplands, 8.40; middling gulf, 8.65.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 10 points higher; middling uplands, 8.55; middling gulf, 8.80; sales, 925 bales. Futures closed firm; May, 8.15; June, 7.89; July, 7.97; Aug., 7.96; Sept., 8.01; Oct., 8.05; Nov., 8.07; Dec., 8.11; Jan., 8.16; Feb., 8.19; March, 8.24.

Omaha, Neb., May 22.—E. W. Nash, president of the American Refining and Smelting company, was stricken with paralysis today. His condition is believed to be critical.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Gains Made Early Were Wiped Out Before the Closing.

Selling Was of Light Volume and Close Was Easy.

New York, May 23.—American Securities were in demand in London again today and opening prices of some of the Internationals here were higher in sympathy. Others were subject to pressure and the result was a very irregular opening. Illinois Central rose 1¼, St. Paul, Pacific Mail, Smelting and People's Gas a point; while United States Rubber showed a loss of a point and Car, Pressed Steel Car and Cotton Oil a large fraction. Union Pacific and the Steel stocks were a fraction lower.

Relief over the nature of the bad news supposed to account for yesterday's weakness disclosed by the suspension of the Merchant's Trust company seemed to be the explanation of the sharp rise in stocks. All of yesterday's conspicuously weak features participated to a more or less extent in the advance is the first hour. Northern Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Sugar, Smelting and Car preferred and several others 1 to 1½. Profit-taking sales obliterated a great part of the advance later.

The selling was in such light volume as to encourage renewed buying which lifted prices to a higher point than before. Illinois Central rose 2, Tennessee Coal 2¾, St. Paul and Delaware & Hudson 2½, Northern Pacific 3¾, Wisconsin Central preferred 4½, Smelting 3⅜, while there was an extended list of 1 to 1½ point gains. Some of the usually inactive stocks made notable declines, among them Central of Jersey, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L., Rutland preferred, Linseed, United States Reduction, New York Dock, the Pipe stocks and Telephone. Bonds were irregular at noon.

The upward movement did not culminate until the general level had been lifted above the 12 o'clock range and gains of 1¾ to 2 indicated in Union Pacific, New York Central, United States Steel preferred and People's Gas. After a while the professional realizing became ample enough to check the advance and the market fell off slowly and became dull. St. Paul, Union Pacific and Northwestern reacted a point or more.

Prices ran off easily under a moderate volume of offerings had been forced, running from 1 to 2½, the speculation became quiet and did not increase in activity, when the market began to mend. Losses from the highest reached 2½ in Smelting, 2¼ in Union Pacific, the latter selling below yesterday's final, 1¾ in St. Paul and 1 to 1½ in New York Central, Reading, Copper, United States Steel preferred and other leaders.

The market fell into a torpid state when the selling desisted and made no effective recovery. Later the downward course was renewed. Some leaders got under last night and little was left of the day's gain. Sloss-Sheffield Steel preferred sold at a decline of 1¼. United States Steel sold down to 54 and Brooklyn Transit fell 2. Canadian Pacific 1½, and Metropolitan Street Railway and Locomotive preferred 1 below last night. Chicago & Alton preferred lost 2½. The closing was easy.

COPPER IS HIGHER

Market Takes Stronger Turn and Large Contracts Are Made.

Trade Expects Fifteen Cent Copper Throughout the Year.

Copper metal has taken a stronger turn, and domestic consumers are again in the market contracting for copper in large lots. George L. Walker says the market now looks as though it will go higher rather than lower. He says in his weekly letter:

"Copper is decidedly stronger. Lake is 15¼ cents and electrolytic is 15⅛ cents per pound. Domestic consumers have come into the market again, and it is estimated that they have this week contracted for fully 50,000,000 pounds of copper for delivery as far ahead as September. Confidence has taken the place of doubt, and it is now the concensus of trade opinion that the price of copper will hold around 15 to 15½ cents during the remainder of the year at least.

"A manufacturing establishment that is owned by a leading United Metals Selling interest has recently bought a considerable lot of copper for advance delivery at about 15.10 cents per pound. This fact, obtained from thoroughly reliable sources, is considered conclusive evidence that Amalgamated people are looking for a higher rather than a lower metal market.

"Now that returns from the Pacific ports are in, it seems that exports of copper for the month of April amounted to 24,121 tons, or almost twice as much as in April, 1904. Exports for the first four months of 1905 aggregated 83,947 tons, compared with 82,993 tons in the corresponding period of the preceding year. The shipments of the first half of the present month reached 12,568 tons. Last year the entire exports during May amounted to only 14,772 tons. The prospect, therefore, is that the total United States export movement of the present year will exceed that of 1904—the year which recorded more than a 50 per cent increase over the greatest that had preceded it.

"The recent weakness of the London 'G. M. B.,' or 'Standard' copper quotations has been credited with too much importance. Those quotations represent simply a speculative market, the copper so bought practically never being taken over by consumers. The metal called for by the contracts is a very low grade, only 96 per cent or 98 per cent fine, and must be refined before being available for average uses. 'Standard' had been selling higher relatively than refined copper, and the decline had to come sooner or later. 'Best Selected' has shown much greater relative firmness.

COPPER SHARES.

"The marked improvement in the tone of the metal market has to some extent revived the courage of Boston speculative and brokerage interests and there has been better buying of coppers during the past few days. Only a comparatively small portion of the whole business is for Boston account, however, the best buying continuing to come from New York and the west. There is a constant demand for Amalgamated, Utah, United States Mining, Boston Consolidated and Greene from New York, Chicago, Salt Lake City and other important Western centers.

"Good judges of the stock market express the belief that trading energy has worn itself out, so far as the New York railroad and industrial shares are concerned, that the arguments have all been heard and that the market is entitled to a period of rest. They therefore expect to see the New York trading get dull, narrow and uninviting. If this opinion is correct, the way will be opened for increasing activity in coppers, and we shall have the bull market here that is now many months overdue.

"While the strength of Amalgamated, Utah and United States Mining is maintained, there can be no material decline in other coppers. These stocks have been advanced and supported by a character of buying that carries confidence. It seems to furnish substantial proof that the statistical position of the metal and the financial situation as a whole are such as to warrant expectation of a coming higher range of prices.

"I believe that coppers will show bigger advances from this level during the coming two months than any other group of stocks on the market."

TAWNEY TALKS

About the Tariff and the Canal Supplies.

Washington, May 23.—Representative Tawney, who is in Washington on personal business, called on the president yesterday. Upon leaving the executive office he was besieged by newspaper men for an expression of his views on the recent decision of the Panama commission to purchase supplies abroad if they can be had cheaper than in the United States. Mr. Tawney said:

"If the difference between the domestic and foreign cost of material necessary to construct the canal is greater than the rate of duty, then the order was just. If the difference is less, then the order was not justified.

"I may say also that if the difference is greater, it emphasizes the necessity for the readjustment of the same schedules of tariff which I advocated last winter."

Mr. Tawney called at the treasury department to get some information about the tariff as it relates to supplies needed in canal construction and will study the subject during the summer, with a view to pushing his readjustment scheme next winter.

ONCE RICH WOMAN

Goes to a Home Which She Founded.

San Francisco, May 23.—Mrs. Marie de Wolf, for fifty years a prominent worker in charitable organizations of this city, is about to enter the home of the San Francisco Ladies' Relief and Protection society, which she founded in 1868. At one time Mrs. de Wolf was worth $1,000,000, and one-half of this sum she spent in doing good. The other half was stolen from her by a man whom she trusted as a son. Mrs. de Wolf is the widow of Capt. S. I. de Wolf, commander of the ill-fated ship Brother Jonathan, which sank off Crescent City in 1865 with 500 persons.

PRIVATE CAR

Lines Demand Shippers' Aid In Fighting Reform Legislation.

Mr. Ferguson Produces Letter Written to a Firm In Arkansas.

Washington, May 23.—That the private car lines and especially the Armour company are making a desperate fight to perpetuate the system is plainly brought out by E. M. Ferguson, president of the Minnesota Shippers and Receivers' association, and Judge Powell of Duluth, representing the Western Fruit Growers' association. These gentlemen came to Washington upon telegrams sent by the senate committee on interstate commerce for the purpose of refuting statements made by Vice President Robbins of Armour & Co. Mr. Ferguson, on his arrival, stated that he was willing to submit the claim that he made here last winter, to the effect that the fruit growers in many sections were at the mercy of private car lines, on the evidence already presented to the committee, but te emphasize his contention he has letters sent by the agents of Armour & Co. to fruit men. A sample of these letters, which was written to a firm in Arkansas by H. H. Steele, agent for Armour & Co. at Springfield, Mo., is here given verbatim. It is written on Armour's letterhead, and says:

"There are pending before the senate and house of representatives bills seriously affecting private car lines, and the fight by the advocates of such legislation has about narrowed down to one fight against the Armour car lines. Should such legislation go through, our company would no doubt be forced to go out of business, and the railroads would be expected to return to the practice in effect prior to 1898, furnishing such cars as they could obtain to move the fruit crops. Fortunately this condition never existed in the Fayetteville section, although such would have been the case in 1897-98 had it not been for our cars coming to the rescue of another company when that company was called upon to take more business than they had equipment to handle. Knowing that your interests as a grower are affected as well as our own, we would ask you if you deem it of sufficient importance to write or wire both your senator and representative protesting against hasty legislation on the subject, as any legislation tending to disturb present conditions might seriously affect your interests and that of all growers in the peach and strawberry district of Arkansas."

The firm to whom this letter was addressed, in writing to Mr. Ferguson, regarding the situation, said: "From a growers' and shippers' point of view, the outlook in the fruit business is exceedingly gloomy. We are forced to use Armour cars, as the 'Frisco system, on which we are located, will haul no others, thereby leaving us absolutely at the mercy of the Armour people."

Additional interest is manifested today regarding the private car line legislation. While it has been generally understood that prospective legislation bearing on the private car lines will be treated entirely separate from the general rate-making power, the two questions are more or less identified with whatever is attempted in the line of government control of transportation.

It is understood that there are some senators who favor treating the private car line matter in connection with general rate bill by inserting provisions in the bill by abolishing the private car line entirely and making it incumbent upon all common carriers to furnish adequate service for transportation of these commodities that are now transported in refrigerator cars.

Then there is another view looking to regulating the private car lines and placing them under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission. It is quite probable that Mr. Ferguson will appear before the senate committee for further information and for filing additional evidence in support of his proposition to wipe out the system entirely.

TOMLINSON ORDERS STEAMER.

Detroit, May 23.—An order for a 10,000 ton freight steamer for G. A. Tomlinson of Duluth was yesterday announced by President Pessano of the Great Lakes Engineering works on his return from Pittsburg. The new boat will be built at the Ecorse yards and will come out next spring. She will be 530 feet long 56 feet beam and 31 feet deep. The cost will be $455,000. Power will be furnished by triple expansion engines and Scotch boilers and the hull will be of arch iron struction. The contract provides that the design may be changed to the hopper bottom type like that of the steamer Hoover and Mason, which goes into commission soon, if that boat proves successful.

VIOLATED COMPACT

Isaac Korpi Accused of Cutting Jacob Jorbi With Knife.

Act Was Done After Quarrel Had Been Settled.

Claiming that he stabbed Jacob Jorbi with a pocket knife in self-defense, Isaac Korpi of Chisholm is being tried in district court on the charge of assault in the second degree.

The case is somewhat out of the usual run, for the reason that Jorbi, the complaining witness, has disappeared and the sheriff has been unable to find him. Jorbi was present at the preliminary hearing at Chisholm, and was subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury at Duluth, but he failed to observe the summons, and is believed to have left the country, or to have gone to some other locality, for the express purpose of keeping away from the trial.

In spite of the absence of his principal witness, County Attorney McClintock says that he has plenty of other witnesses to confirm the story of the fight between Korpi and Jorbi, and who witnessed the stabbing affray.

The affair is said to have happened in a saloon run by Gus Martinson, at Chisholm, between 5 and 6 o'clock on the morning of March 21 last. Korpi and Jorbi are said to have been eating lunch in the restaurant just off the saloon, when they began quarreling and scuffling, but were put out by the cook. They are claimed to have walked into the saloon, where their differences were made up, and Jorbi is said to have put some money on the bar and called for the drinks on the peace compact. It is alleged that before the drinks were served, Korpi, without a word of warning, plunged a knife in the back of Jorbi's arm, just below the shoulder, making a wound about an inch wide and about two and a half inches deep, the blade missing the bones and passing through the muscular tissue. Jorbi, as soon as his wound was found to be serious, was taken to a surgeon to have it dressed, while Korpi was arrested and put in the village jail.

Isaac Korpi, who was called to the stand just before the noon adjournment, in his own behalf, testified that while they were scuffling in the restaurant Porbi struck him in the arm with a knife making a small wound. He further claimed that after they went in the barroom, Jorbi threatened to cut him again and he struck in self defense.

On cross-examination Korpi admitted the knife introduced in evidence as his own, but stuck to the self defense theory. He exhibited a cut in the sleeve of his coat and shirt and the scar of a small wound on his arm, where he claimed Jorbi stabbed him.

Korpi is defended by T. A. Gall of this city.

After the disposal of the assault case a jury will be called to hear the case of the state against Captain H. Tallon of the Shenango mine, who is to be tried on a charge preferred by a young woman residing at the Shenango location. The case has caused no little sensation at the mine location where the captain has always borne an excellent reputation in the community, being a Sunday school superintendent and an active church worker. Captain Tallon is married and has several children. His friends stoutly believe in his innocence and prominent citizens of the community will testify in his behalf.

The indictment against Captain Tallon was one of those not made public after the last meeting of the grand jury.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Grand Forks Girl Held For Attempting to Commit Suicide.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Unsuccessful attempts at suicide are to be discouraged in this city. Katherine Tracy, the young woman who attempted suicide in one of our parks, was placed under arrest on a charge of attempted suicide, and a guard was kept in her room at the hospital.

Miss Tracy says her desire to end it all was caused by a man named Hugh Campbell, who had paid her attentions. She invited him to meet her at the park, and after a quarrel she pulled a revolver from her dress, but her companion gained possession of it before she could shoot. He started to leave her and had walked but a few steps when he heard a gurgling sound and turned just in time to see her drain a vial of laudanum. The prompt attendance of a physician saved her life.

Fargo—Another effort is being made to stop the practice of delivering liquor in Fargo by drivers of Moorhead "jag wagons." Two drivers have been arrested and efforts will be made to prosecute them on the same charges as bootleggers. The saloon men will refuse to deliver to many persons if the collections cannot be made on this side, and their business will be greatly curtailed. Numerous attempts to stop the business have failed, and it is thought this plan may succeed.

There is to be a sale of shorthorn cattle here June 6, in which prominent breeders of Minnesota and North Dakota are interested.

On complaint of a Walhalla bank, B. S. Sorenson, traveling for a local machinery house, was arrested on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. It is alleged he cashed two drafts that the local house would not honor.

Jamestown—Neighbors in the vicinity of the Robertson farm, northeast of Jamestown, have helped Frankie Robertson, aged 16, whose father died suddenly a short time ago, to put in his crop. With their assistance the boy has been able to finish his plowing and seed the entire farm.

The neighbors of Charles Berg, who lives near Litchville, gathered from far and near and plowed his farm in splendid shape, while the owner was in a hospital at Valley City getting well from having his leg broken in several places.

Citizens of Underwood, in the absence of complete fire protection, have determined to employ a night watchman, who will be paid by popular subscription.

It appears that prior to the rain and snow of last week the prairie fires along the Missouri spread into the timber in many places and did thousands of dollars' worth of damage. In many cases acres of timber land have been swept over, and all that is left is an area of blasted trunks.

Towers—On the four day of the Olson murder trial Joe Heindricks, a Midway, Minn., saloonkeeper, testified to purchasing a horse from Olson which belonged to Paul Peterson, the murdered man.

The testimony of the Lutheran minister of Balfour regarding a conversation with the defendant on the day of his arrest, was held by Judge Goss to be privileged, and was not allowed to be introduced. It is thought the defendant partially admitted his guilt to the minister.

The skull of the murdered man was introduced in evidence, and plainly showed where it had been broken with an ax or some other blunt instrument. The state will likely rest its case this evening, and about two days will be taken up by the defense.

The jurors are zealously guarded, a residence having been rented for them, and in this they are kept when not in the court room.

States Attorney Weber, assisted by Former States Attorney Christianson, is presenting a strong chain of circumstantial evidence against the defendant.

Neche—Gretna, Man., one mile from this place, will celebrate Victoria day on May 24 with a field day of sports, fireworks and a grand ball in the evening. The principal events will be a baseball game between the teams of Neche and Cavalier, N. D., and a football game between the Crescents of Winnipeg and the Gretna team.

Steele—Recently it was reported there was to be an inquiry to determine if glanders existed, and last week Frank Dowd, from the ranch fifteen miles north, reported that three horses belonging there had been shot by direction of the veterinary department.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—The work of organizing a company made up of Sioux Falls capitalists for the construction and operation of a packing plant has been completed by the receipt of articles of incorporation and the election of the following officers: President, John A. Purdy; vice president and counsel, Ransom L. Gibbs; secretary, Louis A. Kramer; treasurer, Louis Bauch.

The officers of the company are considering three sites for the plant, but will not make a selection for several days. The company is capitalized at $100,000, and will have a paid-up capital of half that amount.

Werner of St. Paul, and Alvin Davis and William Wrigley of Minneapolis.

The commencement proper will be held Thursday morning. Orations will be given by members of the class. The valedictorian is C. A. Gunderson and the salutatorian, J. B. Johnson. Seventy-five will receive diplomas, thirteen from the college, thirteen from the academy, forty-three from the school of commerce and six from the school of music. The alumni banquet in the evening will close the exercises.

Gustavus Adolphus college had its origin in an appropriation made by the Swedish Lutheran congregation of Red Wing in May, 1862, when it gave $20 "for the laying of a foundation for better and higher education." The college did not have a permanent location until 1875, when the citizens of St. Peter donated twenty-five acres of land and $10,000. In October of 1876 the "old main" was dedicated. There were fifty-seven students the first year, which has been increased to 350 at the present time. The school has had a steady growth ever since its foundation. It has now a gorup of seven buildings and has five departments. The agitation for a removal to Minneapolis was closed last spring, when the conference voted to leave the college at St. Peter and accepted the gift of $15,000 from the citizens of St. Peter.

This money was added to that given by the conference and was used for the erection of the new auditorium. Work upon the building was commenced last summer and completed in the winter. The auditorium is built of brick, is 70 by 90 feet, and four stories high. The basement is divided into three recitation rooms, two waiting rooms, boiler room and lavatories. On the first oflor are found the president's office, registrar's office, faculty room and five class rooms. The second and third floors, besides several music rooms, contain the auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 1,200. The building, with its equipments, has cost $30,000, of which the citizens of St. Peter have given two-thirds. It fills in the open space in the row of six buildings on "College Hill," on a point where the Minnesota valley can be seen nealy thirty miles.

The new president of the college is himself a graduate of the school. He has for several years been a pastor at Minneapolis, and he was elected to the presidency at the conference last May. Between the resignation of President M. Wahlstrom and the installation of President Mattson much of the work has been under the charge of Dr. J. P. Uhler, the vice president.

DR. J. P. UHLER,
Vice President of Gustavus Adolphus College.

R. LAGERSTROM,
Director of the School of Music of Gustavus Adolphus College.

The school of commerce is one of the most enterprising departments at the college. Since Prof. G. H. Towley became principal of the department seven years ago its attendance has been trebled. During the past year an agricultural department has been added. This is intended to meet the growing demand for instruction in the principles of agriculture and is provided especially for those who can devote only a limited time to study and wish to return at once to active work on the farm Prof. J. F. Wojta, formerly instructor at the state farm school, has charge of his department.

PROF. P. A. MATTSON,
New President of Gustavus Adolphus College.

TWO MEN ASPHYXIATED IN MINNEAPOLIS FIRE.

Minneapolis, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two men were asphyxiated in a cheap lodging house fire at 240 Hennepin avenue at 9 a. m. today. Both are strangers, one registering as Frank Green and the other simply as Fox. Green made a desperate attempt to escape but failed. Fox was found dead under his bed. He had apparently been intoxicated. Ten other lodgers had narrow escapes.

LUMBER BUSINESS IN CHICAGO IS SERIOUSLY CRIPPLED BY STRIKE

Shortage of Material Causes Paralysis of Various Industries.

All But Two Lumber Firms In the City Affected.

President Shea Will Defy Federal Order to Testify.

Chicago, May 24.—The strike is general in the lumber district today, the teamsters' of all except two firms having quit work because their employers insisted upon deliveries to boycotted houses. The planing mills ran short of lumber, and some of them closed up. The sash and door mills will be the next to be affected. Owing to the interference with building operations quite a number of carpenters were discharged. It looks today as if building operations will be seriously interfered with.

Chief of Police O'Neill, according to his own statement, is about at the limit with police protection. All the men available, including the extras, are now on strike duty.

President Shea of the Teamsters' union expects to go to jail owing to his refusal to answer the questions before the master in chancery, having in hand the injunction proceedings. The executive board of the international union have appointed a man to take Shea's place in the event of his committal to jail.

The managers of the railroad express companies still adhere to their determination to take back no striking teamster, and the lumber firms announced that their discharged men will not be taken back.

Chicago, May 24.—As a storm center of strikes, the lumber district of Chicago, stretching over miles of territory, bordering a wilderness of river slips and railroad tracks, seemed likely today to outdo all previous records there for desperate struggles between employers and wage earners. The lumber dealers today aggressively transferred threatened strikes into virtual lockouts. A dozen lumber companies were quickly added to those previously involved in the ramifications of the teamsters' strike. In each case, orders to deliver material to strike-bound firms brought firm refusal from drivers. Discharge of the driver followed instantly, with quick retaliation ensuing in a strike of his fellow teamsters.

The strikes today made idle practically all of the large lumber yards in the city. "Ninety-eight per cent of the lumber business in the city is now crippled," declared Secretary Hopper of the Lumbermen's association. "It is only a matter of a short time when that per cent of the building operations of the city will cease. We are now calling on the Employers' association for teamsters, and till we get them, the building business will necessarily suffer."

International President Shea of the Teamsters' union announced his intention today to defy Federal Judge Kohlsaat and Master in Chancery Sherman by persisting in refusing to answer questions at the resumption of the hearing of alleged violations of the strike injunctions. President Shea based his determination upon the fact that to answer might tend to incriminate him. The strike leader declared that he would suffer himself to be sent to jail for contempt rather than answer the questions. Relative to the prospective calling out of state troops, Mr. Shea said:

"Let them call the troops. That will not alter the situation, so far as the teamsters are concerned. The teamsters are not interfering with the operations of wagons on the streets, and will not. Neither will the strike be spread to any great extent. We are using our best efforts to keep it within its present limits."

In announcing his refusal to be questioned by the master in chancery, Mr. Shea said: "I think they intend to send me to jail. Anyway I am not going to answer the questions before the master. I will do my own thinking. The law gives me that right. I honestly believe the questions would tend to incriminate me. I might as well go to jail for contempt as for conspiracy. I can run the strike from the jail."

Continuing, Mr. Shea said: "The soldiers will not affect the strike in any way. Our men keep the peace. It would seem to me the business men of Chicago would not want the soldiers here. With a lot of young men unaccustomed to scenes of excitement, armed with deadly weapons, life will be in danger. At any rate, thousands of people intending to come to Chicago to buy goods, will be frightened away and the effect will be serious to many business men. But, personally, I have nothing to say against the soldiers coming."

The planing mills felt the effect of the lumber shortage today, some of them being compelled to shut down. Sash and door factories are almost at a standstill, and carpenters all over the city are being laid off. The paralysis in the building industries it seemed today would extend until at least 100,000 workmen in many trades are out of employment for lack of material.

Extension of the strike in the lumber district was much more rapid today than yesterday. It was a sweeping wholesale affair that sent workmen home in hundreds and closed up lumber yards by the dozen. So complete and thorough was the virtual lockout that in a short time every lumber company in Chicago, except two, were reported as having practically suspended operations owing to the lack of teamsters. It was expected that the two remaining companies would be similiarly involved before night.

Attorney Mayer of the Employers' association stated emphatically today that the demand of the teamsters and particularly of the express drivers, have been permanently and finally rejected. He declared that further conference was useless and defended the action of the express companies as "entirely within their right."

Secretary Hooper of the Associated Wood industries declared today that every lumber teamster who struck has been formally discharged. The lumber dealers, he said, were following the example of the express companies. Not one of the lumber teamsters who struck, he declared, will ever be reemployed by the lumber dealers.

Drivers for the railroad express companies, Attorney Mayer said, occupy the most responsible positions among the teamsters. The express drivers are constantly in charge of valuable freight and large sums of money. The express managers have concluded that they cannot afford to re-employ contract breakers.

"It is as absurd as it is false," said Mr. Mayer, "for the teamsters' representatives, who are guilty of boycotting, to try to turn the tables by saying that the express companies are blacklisting. Each of the companies simply refuse to re-engage its own former strikers. As to all others, the express companies say: 'You will comply with our rules of forty years' standing and make application in the usual way.' Each application will be considered the same as heretofore, on the basis of individual qualification. Such a method is no more blacklisting than is the right of the individual to determine for himself whether he will have eggs or chops for breakfast."

Members of the executive board of the Teamsters' International union met at the Briggs house today and, after some discussion, appointed Edwin Gould of San Francisco to be the active strike director in case the United States court sent President Shea to jail. Gould is the first vice president of the International union, and has been a close follower of Shea and his plans throughout the strike.

Initiative in the use of non-union teamsters in the lumber district was taken today by the Hines Lumber company, which sent out thirty-six wagons thus manned. It was reported to the sheriff's office that the wagons had gone away without being molested but that trouble might result before the wagons returned. To watch closely and keep the sheriff posted by telephone deputy sheriffs were sent to the lumber district and elsewhere on the route taken. At the first extended outbreak, the sheriff prepared to take immediate action. That he would call troops was not doubted.

Chief of Police O'Neill acknowledged today that with the spread of the strike to the lumber district, the ability of the police to afford protection had almost reached the limit and that every policeman available is now doing strike duty.

"We have almost reached the end of our line," the chief declared, after a conference with Mayor Dunne. "We are still supplying men to protect wagons wherever in use and I have a number of men in the lumber district. I am doing all I can and I am supplying every man I possibly can but a policeman cannot be in two places at the same time and I cannot distribute my force any more than I have already done."

INDUSTRIAL WAR

Seems Bound to Be Extended In Chicago.

Chicago, May 24.—Industrial war, with a possibility of martial law looming up in the background, describes the situation into which the comparatively incipient teamsters' strike of a few weeks ago has developed, and which threatened Chicago today. Peace prospects have faded away along with the vanishing hopes of concessions that might be made by the express companies. The express agents hold the key to the situation, so far as any apparent chance of settlement was concerned, having refused to retreat one inch from their previously announced position. All negotiations were at an end, and employers and teamsters began preparing for a vigorous campaign of indefinite length.

Mayor Dunne and Sheriff Barrett were prepared to give the signal that would bring the state trops into the streets of Chicago at the first indication of an outbreak following the newly developed situation. Governor Deneen was ready to respond to the call at almost a second's notice.

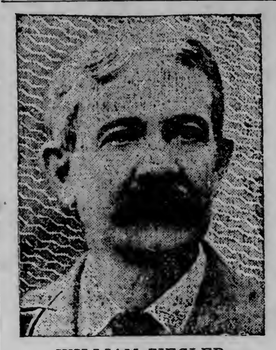
PRESBYTERIANS WILL UNITE.

Fresno, Cal., May 24.—By a majority of twenty-seven the Cumberland general assembly yesterday adopted the majority report declaring for union with the Northern Presbyterian church.

WILLIAM ZIEGLER OF ARCTIC FAME IS DEAD

Passes Away at His Country Home Aged 62 Years.

Has Been Invalid Since Runaway Accident Last October.



WILLIAM ZIEGLER.

New York, May 24.—William Ziegler, the capitalist and promoter of Arctic explorations, died today at his country home, near Noroton, Conn. He was unconscious all of last night. The funeral will be held Saturday.

Mr. Ziegler had been an invalide since a runaway accident in which he was injured last October. He sustained internal injuries and was so severely shocked that the physicians were unable to do little more than ameliorate his sufferings. Two or three days ago his condition had a change for the worse.

He was born in Beaver county, Pa., Sept. 1, 1843. He was educated in the public schools and later learned the printer's trade in the office of the Muscatine Journal. He went into the baking powder business in 1870 and made a large fortune. During the latter years of his life, he operated in Brooklyn and other Long Island real estate to the extent of millions of dollars. He led the fight against the purchase by the city of Brooklyn of the Long Island Water Supply company, the prevention of this purchase resulting in a large saving to the city.

Mr. Ziegler's condition received a setback a few weeks ago by the shock which he sustained on hearing of an accident to his son, who fell on a sharp hook, cutting himself severely Last Saturday he suffered a stroke of apoplexy.

The interment probably will be in Woodlawn cemetery, New York. Mr. Ziegler is survived by a widow and one son.

ST. PAUL GROCER WATCHES A THIEF CARRY OFF HIS STOCK

St. Paul, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—While William Overman, proprietor of a grocery store at Mississippi and Jessamine streets, sat with his wife upon the front porch of his home, a daring thief backed a wagon to the back door of the store, which adjoins the Overman residence, and carted off about half the grocer's stock. Overman and his wife saw the man at work, but paid no attention to him, thinking that he was removing goods from the store next door to the grocery.

Before retiring Mr. Overman went over to the store for a moment to see that everything was all right and was horrified to find the rear door broken open and the stock in a sadly depleted condition.

A young man, who gave the name of Fred Klein, and who said his home was in Minneapolis, was later arrested driving a wagon filled with groceries and held to await inquiry.

CASTRO PARDONS MANY PRISONERS

New York, May 24.—President Castro has signalized the opening of congress and the beginning of his constitutional presidency for six years, cables the Caracas correspondent of the Herald, by decreeing amnesty to all Venezuelans who, for political reasons, have been expatriated, and they are permitted to return to their country. The amnesty also extends to political prisoners in Venezuela below the grade of colonel. There are about 1,500 political prisoners confined in the dungeons of Caracas, La Guaira, Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo.

A national holiday has been declared May 23 of every year, commemorating the beginning of Castro's revolution.

GOPON NOW ACTIVE

Working Hard to Organize the People For Revolution.

Russian Priest Makes Statement From His Place of Hiding.

Paris, May 24—The Journal today reproduces a statement recently made by Father Gopon, but the place and circumstances of the statement are not disclosed, owing to the desire not to put the Russian police on Gopon's track. The statement says in part:

"The most important effect of the events of Jan. 22 has been to unify the various elements of the revolutionary movement. The chiefs of the two great revolutionary parties with whom I conferred recognize the complete change in the plans wrought by the events of Jan. 22. Before that time the Social Democracy and other revolutionary organizations in Russia did not recognize openly the right to propagate the cause by the use of force, which was usually called by them terrorism, but which I call upholding the rights of the people. But the Social Democracy and the other groups now join in recognizing that the emancipation of the people warrants the use of any and all measures of force against the autocracy. I have conferred with the heads of many groups who are seeking co-ordinate methods, with the view to provoking an uprising of the people."

The statement expresses scepticism regarding the government's reforms, and says the return of Russia's defeated army will add an enormous body of malcontents to the ranks of those already disaffected. While confident of the success of the revolutionary movement, Gopon says internal rivalries and quarrels between the revolutionary forces have delayed carrying out their plans.

"This," the former priest continues, "so far has prevented the formation of a central committee, whose sole purpose will be to direct an uprising of the people, but we are working towards the formation of this committee. My special end is to see the committee realized, as it will be the embryo future provisory government. We have already created a system of correspondence between the groups for the purpose of bringing about complete organization. Unless the revolutionists themselves succeed in forming a systematic organization, I fear we shall witness a period of veritable anarchy and chaos in Russia. It is the day after a revolution which is to be most dreaded—when the people are unrestrained by any organization. If the revolutionary parties had been properly organized to strike a united blow, Jan. 22, we would have been spared the months of this desperate struggle, and it is because we wish to avert bloodshed that we organize now, towards securing a prompt and orderly realization of the end we consider inevitable."

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION

In Russia Is Strongly Denounced By Reactionary Organ.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The Moscow Gazette, the leading reactionary organ in Russia, has begun a bitter war against religious toleration, arguing that it will wipe out orthodoxy in the non-orthodox sections of the country. The paper declares that 450,000 Russians in Poland will come under the influence of Roman Catholicism if the Catholics are permitted to proselyte.

"The ukase has already had a deplorable effect on the Russian Mujiks," says the Gazette, "among whom stories are current that the emperor is under the influence of the pope. It is even said that the emperor will become a Catholic, and that the Mujiks, who do not desire to be converted to Catholicism, will be transported and compelled to live in three provinces."

The paper concludes: "This is not a religious war, but a Russo-Polish national battle."

The Novoe Vreyma this morning attacks what it terms the "insatiable demands of the Jews," who, the paper declares, "are exploiting Russia for the benefit of their pockets, but do not show a particle of patriotism, being the real instigators of the revolutionary movement."

The commission appointed under the presidency of M. Kutler, assistant minister of the interior, to decide upon the measures to adopt in order to increase the revenues of the empire, has determined to recommend increased taxation to the amount necessary to meet the additional expenses on account of the war, and is considering the question of an income tax, from which the commission desires to raise $25,000,000.

The government has now taken formal measures to prevent the zemstvos, doumas and other provincial and district institutions from indulging in unrestricted debate and adopting resolutions on the subject of a change in the form of government.

HURT BY BOMB.

Another Russian Chief of Police Is Injured.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, May 24.—The chief of police of Siedlec, capital of the government of that name, was severely injured by the explosion of a bomb at midnight. He was sitting on the verandah of a club when an unknown man approached and hurled a bomb at him. The missile, however, fell short, but exploded near enough to the chief of police for fragments to injure him seriously. Three other persons were also injured. The man who threw the bomb escaped.

POPE APPOINTS THE BISHOP OF SUPERIOR

Vicar General Augustine F. Schinner of Milwaukee Is Named.

Diocese Will Include Sixteen Counties In Northern Wisconsin.

VERY REV. A. F. SCHINNER.

Milwukee, May 24.—The Very Rev. Augustine F. Schinner, vicar general of the Milwaukee archdiocese for several years past, has been appointed bishop of the Superior diocese, recently created by the redivision of the Milwaukee province. The appointment thas been made by Pope Pius X, through the congregation of the propaganda at Rome, and it is believed the brief is already on its way to Archbishop Falconio, apostolic delegate at Washington. Official announcement of the appointment is being withheld, pending the arrival of the brief. Verification of the formation of the diocese over which Father Schinner will preside, will accompany the papal brief.

The diocese will include sixteen counties in the northwestern part of the state, and the bishop's see will undoubtedly be at Superior. The newly-appointed bishop is 42 years old and is a native of Milwaukee.

RIVAL COMMANDERS WATCHING CLOSELY

Situation at the Front Is Becoming Exceedingly Tense.

Gunshu Pass, May 24.—The situation is very tense. The rival commanders are watching each other like hawks, but there has been no decisive move yet on the part of Field Marshal Oyama. Lieut. Gen. Rennenkampff made a bold reconnaissance at the cost of several hundred casualties, but the correspondent of the Associated Press is not allowed to telegraph the results obtained. It is possible that it was Rennenkampff's cavalry which penetrated southwest of Fakoman.

A dispatch from Tokio, May 22, said: "A body of the enemy's cavalry dismounted, attacked Tangshed, on the right bank of the Liao river, thirteen miles southwest of Fakoman, on the morning of May 20. After an engagement lasting two hours the enemy retreated in disorder toward the southwest, abandoning 300 killed or wounded."

JAP FIELD REPORT

Shows Repulse of Russians in Several Engagements.

Tokio, May 24, 10:15 a. m.—Imperial headquarters made the following announcement today:

"On the afternoon of May 21, a battalion of Russian infantry and six squadrons of cavalry attacked the northern height at Chinyangpao, ten miles north of Wesyuanpaomen.

"On the morning of May 22, a battalion of Russian infantry and three troops of cavalry advanced along the Kirin-Taolu road toward Chienchentzu, and one company of infantry gained the western height near the village, but were repulsed.

"The Russian cavalry on the right bank of the Liao river commenced a retreat on the morning of May 22 and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon the enemy had reached a point south of Talun, which lies seventeen miles west of Fakumen.

"With the exception of small collisions, there is otherwise no change in the situation."

BRITISH STEAMER RELEASED.

Nagasaki, May 24, 11 a. m.—The British steamer Lincluden, which was seized by the Japanese south of Korea on May 15, was released by the naval prize court at Sasebo yesterday.

The French steamer Quang-Nam which was seized on the same date near the Pescadores islands, has arrived at Sasebo.

RAILROAD NOT CUT.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The Associated Press has been asked to deny the report telegraphed from Tokio to the London Daily Telegraph to the effect that the Japanese have cut the railroad to Vladivostok and isolated that fortress.

PHILA. REPUBLICANS TO FIGHT TO A FINISH

Leaders Have Taken Up the Gauge Thrown Down By Mayor.

Philadelphia, May 24.—Insurance Commissioner Durham and other Republican leaders have taken up the gauge thrown down by Mayor Weaver and are forming their lines for a fight that will doubtless be to the bitter end. Mr. Durham was in conference with his lieutenants until an early hour this morning.

It was hinted that an extra session of the legislature might be called for the purpose of making the Philadelphia "Ripper" bills passed during the recent session immediately operative. These bills take from the mayor the power to appoint the directors of public safety and public works and place it in the hands of the councils. Under the act of the last legislature the law does not become operative until the incumbent mayor's term expires in April, 1907.

If the city council passes the gas works lease over the mayor's veto, which is probable, an appeal will immediately be made to the courts to prevent the consummation of the lease and a legal war will follow, which will probably not end until the United States supreme court has passed on the merits of the case.

David J. Smyth, former director of public safety, filed a petition in the court of common pleas today asking for an injunction restraining Mayor Weaver from removing him from office, and also asked for an injunction restraining Col. Sheldon Potter from acting as director of public safety.

The same proceedings were taken by Peter Costello, former director of public works, against the mayor and Lincoln Acker, who was appointed to the office by the mayor.

Judge Ralston granted a temporary injunction restraining Mayor Weaver from removing Directors Smyth and Costello from office, and set Monday, May 29, as the date for argument on the injunction.

POSTMASTER AT WEST ALLIS.

Washington, May 24.—The president today appointed Horatis H. Tipple postmaster at West Allis, Wis.

THREE SAILORS ARE DROWNED

Thrown Overboard During Pitched Battle Between Rival Unions.

Bellingham, Wash., May 24.—Three sailors are missing and six wounded as the result of a pitched battle, growing out of a dispute between the Sailors' union and the Longshoremen's union over jurisdiction in loading the lumber schooner Shasta, at the E. K. Wood Lumber company's dock, in this city, last night. Some of the wounded are shot and others are badly cut about the head, though none, it is believed, are fatally injured. The names of the missing are:

C. Eck, J. Hanson and A. Jackson. They are sailors belonging to the Shasta, and were thrown overboard during the melee and it is believed drowned.

CANNOT DODGE RATE ISSUE

President Will Force the Senate to Railroad Reforms.

Washington, May 24.—Cloaked in virtuous consciousness that it has done its full duty, the senate committee of interstate commerce has adjourned without complying with the demand of the country that it formulate a measure for the solution of the railroad rate question. Senator Elkins is wearing a broad smile which reaches even behind his ears and which comes from the belief he has done well as a good and faithful servant of the railroads.

But the committee is reckoning without President Roosevelt. He, as guardian of the interests of the people, will not permit it to nullify the expressed wish of the country, and he will send a strong message to congress when it meets, Oct. 16.

The president has announced that his message will be devoted almost entirely to the railroad rate question. He may touch upon tariff, but this is yet to be determined. He knows from conversations with members of the senate committee that some are trying to dodge the issue. Elkins, Foraker and Kean, for example, favor amendments to the law which mean nothing. Cullom, Dolliver, and Clapp will recommend the report of a measure practically in line with the president's views.

THE UTOWANA SIGHTED.

New York, May 24.—A three-masted schooner yacht, believed to be the American built Utowana, one of the contestants in the trans-Atlantic race for Emperor William's cup, was sighted at 4 p. m. on May 20 by the oil tanker La Campine, 540 miles due east of Sandy Hook lightship. The tank steamer reported sighting the yacht when she arrived here today from Antwerp. The officers of La Campine said they passed within a quarter of a mile of the sailing vessel, and while they were unable to distinguish her signals or name, they were satisfied from her lines that she was the Utowana.

The Atlantic, another of the racing yachts, which was reported several days ago, was sighted late at night on the 20th, had covered nearly 700 miles up to that time.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

LOOK FOR THIS TRADE-MARK ON EVERY BOTTLE.

MEDICINE FOR ALL MANKIND.

Mr. Elias Hartz, widely known in Reading, Pa., as the goosebone prophet, says: "I have been taking Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for a number of years as my only stimulant and tonic. I am now 87 years old, hale, hearty, and as vigorous as a man of forty, and have every reason to believe I will live to a much riper old age if I can always have a supply of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which is my only medicine. I never have colds or indigestion, or any organic trouble. I know that it is your valuable whiskey that has kept me so free from sickness. I was troubled with insomnia before I used it, but now I can sleep as restfully as a baby. I feel no weakness from my old age, and I heartily recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to anyone who wishes to keep strong, young and vigorous.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey contains no fusel oil and is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine: this is a guarantee.

CAUTION.—When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. Unscrupulous dealers, mindful of the excellence of this preparation, will try to sell you cheap imitations and malt whiskey substitutes, which are put on the market for profit only, and which, far from relieving the sick, are positively harmful. Demand "Duffy's," and be sure you get it. It is the only absolutely pure Malt Whiskey which contains medicinal, health-giving qualities. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in sealed bottles only; never in flask or bulk. Be certain the seal over the cork is unbroken. Beware of refilled bottles.

Sold by all druggists and grocers, or direct, $1.00 a bottle. Interesting medical booklet postpaid to any address. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, New York.

FILES BIG MORTGAGE

Lake Superior & Southeastern Company Authorizes Bond Issue.

A $6,000,000 mortgage covering the entire property of the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railroad company, and running to W. L. Bull, as trustee, was filed with the county register of deeds yesterday. The mortgage was authorized at a meeting of the stockholders held at Milwaukee March 22, 1905, the trust deed to be secured by an issue of bonds for an amount not to exceed $6,000,000. The mortgage is to run twenty years at 5 per cent.

The mortgage deed is signed in behalf of the railroad company by Howard Morris, president, and George E. Kingsley, secretary.

At Superior yesterday the railroad company filed nineteen more acceptances of options that it holds on property for its right-of-way. The aggregate amount represented by the options is said to be about $100,000.

EIGHT WENT OUT.

Candidates For Crew Work Out on Bay.

Coached by B. M. Peyton, H. H. Peyton and Guy Calquhoun, who followed them in a gasoline launch, eight candidates for rowing honors were out on the bay last evening in the new eight-oared shell, and put in over an hour in good, hard practice.

This evening two eights will be out under the direction of the coaches. One will start in at 5 o'clock and the second will begin work as soon as the first one has come in. The club has two eight-oared shells, and both eights could be out at once, but the coaches can give their attention to but one crew at a time.

The men showed good form last evening, considering the little practice they have had.

GETS TROPHY.

Company A Presented With Silver Loving Cup.

Company A was last night presented with the silver loving cup which its rifle team won in the contest on the rifle range Aug. 14, 1904. Maj. Resche presented the cup to the company making some very complimentary remarks concerning the rifle team of the company and on the company itself.

Capt. Franklin responded and voiced the hope of the entire company that the cup will remain permanently in the possession of Company A. The presentation was made at the close of the battalion drill last evening. The trophy is of solid silver on an ebony base. The rifle team which won the prize is as follows:

Lieutenants H. B. Whittaker, H. E. M. Kjall, Sergeants F. D. Ash, O. B. Smith, Corporals H. Benston, Fred Marlow and Private Charles Peterson.

GOVERNOR'S DATES.

Busy Days Ahead For State's Chief Executive.

St. Paul, May 24.—Governor John A. Johnson leaves Thursday night for Watertown, S. D., where he will be one of the speakers at the big outdoor meeting of the South Dakota Traveling Men's association. J. A. McDermott, state oil inspector, is a member of the association, and will accompany him.

The Watertown affair is to last two days, and special trains are expected to bring 10,000 people into the city. The St. Louis road will run an excursion train west from Morton, Friday morning, so many Minnesotans will attend. Governor Elrod and staff of South Dakota and two troops of cavalry will take part in the festivities.

Governor Johnson and State Treasurer Julius H. Block are now in St. Peter attending the commencement exercises of Gustavus Adolphus college.

The governor's time is largely taken up with speaking engagements, and he has to refuse many invitations in order to have time for public business. May 31 he is to speak at Dwinnell, Martin county, at the dedication of a Swedish church. He will then appear at five high school commencements, June 1 at Winthrop, June 3 at St. Peter, June 5 at Slayton, June 7 at Fairmont and June 8 at Mankato. The evening of June 9 the drainage board goes to Bemidji for a public meeting June 10. June 12 he will meet with the national guard officers, and June 13 will welcome the national association of freight agents at Minneapolis. June 14 will occur the Flag day exercises, and the removal of the old battle flags to the new capitol. Then follows the season of encampments at Lake City, when the governor must inspect each regiment. This program shows that the life of the state's chief executive is not a bed of roses.

All the healing, balsamic virtues of the Norway pine are concentrated in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, nature's own remedy for coughs and colds.

WARRANT OUT FOR J. B. OGLE

Mankato Loan Agent, In Hiding, Charged With Forgery.

Mankato, Minn., May 24.—John B. Ogle, former special municipal judge, treasurer of the Methodist Church society, a prominent Elk and representative citizen of Mankato, will be prosecuted, if he can be found, for forging notes and mortgages and conducting a series of swindling operations for ten years or more by means of which he is said to have fleeced clients and his relatives of sums aggregating close to $20,000.

The effort made here to settle with those he has defrauded ended in failure.

George Ogle of Chicago, his brother, to whom he confessed he was a forger after twice trying to commit suicide by taking poison, offered to pay one-half the claims against him, provided they did not exceed $12,000, if George W. Eygabroad of Winnebago City, a brother-in-law of the judge, would pay the other half. Eygabroad declined to make this sacrifice and the negotiations for a settlement were declared off.

A complaint has been prepared by County Attorney Wilson charging Ogle with forgery in the second degree, and has been signed by Thomas O. Jones, the complaining witness.

This prosecution will be based upon a promissory note for $850, dated May 21, 1900, purporting to have been signed by George W. Bunce and his wife Mary of Mankato. It is alleged that this note, given to Jones for money placed by him in the hands of Ogle to be loaned out, is a forgery and is a duplicate of a genuine note given at the same time and by the same persons to the First National Bank of this city.

Judge Ogle left Mankato on Saturday and has been traced to St. Paul, but it is not believed he is now in that city. From the fact that relatives have been trying to settle the claims against him, it is thought that some of them at least know where he is hiding.

Mr. Eygabroad examined the books and papers of Ogle, but declares he cannot make a statement from them, as they do not show much. One entry shows that Judge Ogle was indebted to Mrs. French, mother of Mrs. J. W. Andrews, to the extent of over $900. There is nothing to indicate that the judge had any property anywhere.

Eygabroad says that Ogle in six or eight years had $20,000 of his wife's money to loan and use. There seems to be nothing to show for this large sum, and what became of it is a mystery.

Ogle was secretary of the Business Men's association, but his accounts with it are said to be straight.

New York, May 24.—Floods created by the recent rains, cables the Milan correspondent of the Herald, are causing incalculable damage and distress in the province of Vicenza. Seven hundred persons are homeless and have taken refuge in a church and school at Meledo with their cattle and rigs. Many houses collapsed at Penozzo, in the province of Verona. The inhabitants were rescued.

WILL OPEN COUNTRY

Missabe Company's New Extension From Alborn to the Northwest.

Will Be Fifty Miles Long, Terminating In Itasca County.

One of the projected railroad extensions which is now attracting interest in the farming district of this county is the proposed fifty-mile extension of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road, which is to start from the main line at Alborn station and run in a northwesterly direction through the towns of Alborn and Meadowlands, finally terminating in Itasca county.

Ever since the new road has been surveyed through there has been a decided movement toward securing lands along the route of the railroad and much of the railroad company's lands in those town are said to have been disposed of within recent date.

The new road, it is claimed, will give excellent shipping facilities to that large agricultural district between the main line of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road to the range and the St. Louis river. One of the drawbacks to a more rapid settlement of the county has been the lack of roads and shipping facilities. The roads are now being built in to the settlements, the Payne-Whiteface road being one of the notable examples of the new highways last year.

Between the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road and the Great Northern road at Payne, to the Great Northern company's Cass Lake line at Floodwood, there is said to be districts which are from twelve to sixteen miles distant from any railroad and it is claimed that the extension line which the Duluth, Missabe & Northern company will put through into Itasca will practically open all this new country which has so far been isolated from the railroads.

On the strength of the facilities to be given by better transportation facilities for their products to the markets, a large number of the Meadowlands farmers are said to be increasing their acreage, and some are expecting to go quite heavily into the dairy and stock raising business.

One of the rumors heard in connection with the Missabe company's proposed new line to Itasca county is that it may eventually form part of the Soo line into Duluth. It is pointed out that the proposed line has been surveyed in the direction of Thief River Falls, and that it would not require such a wide stretch of the imagination to figure out that the Soo line, in its effort to get into the Head of the Lakes district will some time take advantage of any opportunity which may be offered to make its connection with Duluth from Thief River Falls. That such an arrangement could be possible is claimed from the fact that there would be no competition between the Soo line and the range roads.

In this connection, too, it has been remarked in railroad construction circles that the rumored scheme of the Soo line to get into Duluth by extending its road northward from Frederic, Wis., has been dropped. For several months rumors have been current to the effect that surveyors had been laying out a road from Frederic to the terminal of the St. Croix & Duluth logging road, which connects with the Great Northern road at Dedham, and runs thirty miles southeasterly to the St. Croix river. There was more or less talk of the sale of the logging road to the Soo line, which would by this route gain trackage to a point about thirty miles out of the city.

By some of the railroad contractors this route is still considered as one of the most feasible, should the Soo line continue to push its way toward Duluth and Superior.

FOR YOU.

Here are some facts for dyspeptics.

Are you one?

Probably; because most people are, though they ignore it.

First, please bear in mind that Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, is more than ailment.

It is a disease.

It is a disease, with ramifications into the uttermost, innermost part, of your body.

It does not always begin in your stomach.

No, indeed. It may begin in your mouth.

Your saliva may be of the wrong chemical formula to begin the work of digestion, and so the whole process may go wrong from the very beginning.

Or, everything may be all right, but your liver.

Or, maybe it seems to be in your heart.

Or, you may have a deep-chested lung cough.

Ten times out of eleven, those symptoms point to the plain, everyday common or garden variety of indigestion.

This may seem hard to believe, but if so, it is only because for many years, even after the discovery of the circulation of the blood by Harvey, doctors remained in the densest ignorance concerning the workings of the processes of digestion.

So, of course, of IN-digestion, they knew less.

And of a cuer today, they have no knowledge at all—any of the 140,000 that are "practicing" in the United States.

Except—about 40,000, who use and recommend Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Here we have a medicine which attacks the troube with all of the most modern engines of medical warfare, which are indeed needed to conquer such a malignant, pestiferous, all-pervading disease.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets drive INdigestion OUT.

They contain ingredients which act curatively, not merely upon the stomach, but upon every vessel, organ or gland, throughout the entire body, which is in any way concerned in the great and important work of digesting your food.

In this way, they throughly purge your entire system of any possible disease-taint, and thereby restore you to a condition of perfect and natural health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are unique in the entire history of medicine.

They are a specific remedy for just one disease and this disease they positively and never-fallingly cure.

Try them.

MEXICAN TIGERS,

Driven By Hunger, Are Ravaging the Haciendas.

City of Mexico, May 24.—Tigers, driven from their mountain lairs, in the territory of Tepic, by the scarcity of food, are ravaging the haciendas of the valleys. They are becoming such a general danger that the municipal authorities have offered a reward of $10 each for their skins.

For the past several months great numbers of the animals have swarmed through the marshes of the lowlands along the coast and in the valleys of the territory of Tepic, having been driven out of the states of Sinaloa and Sonora by the floods and the extremely cold weather. The damage caused to the haciendados and the danger incurred by the presence of the animals were such that many of them offered rewards for the skins of the animals some time ago.

The tigers have become so bold that they will enter the houses on the plantations and help themselves to whatever comes in their path. Several deaths are reported in different parts of the territory. In many sections of the state it is necessary to have armed guards stationed at night to insure the safety of the other people in the settlements.

Live stock is suffering more than anything else. With the slight provisions that are necessary for the shelter of stock it leaves them in most cases without any protection from the beasts. Even the presence of numerous guards around a herd of cattle is oftentimes insufficient to keep the tigers from getting away with an animal or two from the edges of the herd.

Hunting for the animals has been greatly stimulated by the offer of the government, and scores of hunters are scouring the country for the animals. The number of the skins that have been turned in thus far is large, and it is believed that it will not be long before the animals are driven back to the mountains.

ASSASSIN HANGED.

Murderer of Grand Duke Sergius Is Executed.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—It was semi-officially announced yesterday that Ivan Kaleiff, who murdered the Grand Duke Sergius at Moscow, Feb. 17, was hanged at 4 o'clock yesterday morning.

On the scaffold Kaleieff made a speech, in which he said:

"It is said that I asked for pardon. It is a lie. I am faithful to the tradition of the people's will. I do not ask any favor. I am glad to die."

"The people's will" is the name formerly borne by the party identical with the present Social revolutionaries.

OHIO RIVER AND LAKE ERIE CANAL TO BE BUILT.

Pittsburg, May 24.—The long-talked of Ohio river and Lake Erie ship canal is to become a reality at last through private capital. The undertaking is to be put through by Pittsburg capitalists, who have formed a company with a capital of $2,625,000, which will be increased to $30,000,000. The names of the company is the Ohio River and Lake Erie Ship Canal company, and was chartered at Harrisburg several weeks ago. Of the capital of the company $600,000 have been subscribed. John L. Shaw is president of the company, and George M. Lehman, chief engineer.

A charter has also been secured from the state of Ohio for the Ohio and Pennsylvania Ship Canal company, which will build a canal to connect with that of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal company.

AUTO BLOWS UP.

New York, May 24.—A large touring car, belonging to Mrs. Howard Gould, exploded yesterday afternoon in front of a garage at Thirty-third street and Fifth avenue, through the carelessness of a street sweeper who threw a lighted match underneath the machine, where there was a quantity of gasoline, which had leaked from the tank. The explosion could be heard for blocks and caused great excitement among the guests of the Waldorf-Astoria. The automobile was wrecked the damage being estimated at $8,000. The machine had just been take out of the garage, where it had been under repair.

BOY STRIKERS PUNISHED.

Chicago, May 24.—Judge Mack yesterday sentenced seventeen school boys for taking part in the strikes at public school buildings. Thirteen of the boys went to the parental school, while the other four were remanded to the institution for boys at St. Charles.

CREDIT IS NO GOOD IF YOU HAVE TO PAY FOR IT!

Now, let's see how much truth there is in this claim we hear so much about that "When you buy on credit you pay for it," meaning that such a store as this, for example, charges more for Clothing, Furniture, etc., bought on credit than cash stores demand for the same articles. Let's analyze it:

In the first place we charge nothing extra for credit. There is nothing on earth to prevent people from going through all the stores in the city and comparing prices with ours. It is true that very few stores can give credit as we do. They buy their goods singly. We buy in conjunction with seventy other stores, and by thus purchasing in huge bulk we are easily enabled to underbuy our so-called competitors. Having this advantage, isn't it easy enough to see why we don't have to charge extra for installment credit accommodation?

LITTLE BUSINESS TALKS.

It has been said that a "Herald want ad. has a thousand thousand eyes."

Sherlock Holmes had but two, although they were uncommonly good ones.

However, Holmes could not have found for you, over night, the one man in the city who most wanted to buy your house, or your store, or your horse, or your yacht, or your library, or your securities, or your automobile, or your old desk, or your piano; or the one man in the city who would be the best partner for you, or the best clerk, or coachman, or handy-man; or the one woman in the city who would be most valuable stenographer for you, or cook, or housekeeper.

But the thousand thousand-eyed little Herald want ads. find these people for you—and find them quickly, presenting no bill for "extras" or "disbursements," as Sherlock Holmes would have been apt to do.

When you want anything, is it not better to set a thousand eyes looking for it than only two?

PHILANTHROPIST UNDER SUSPICION OF MURDER.

Savanna, Ill., May 24.—Bothwell Pulford, the wealthiest citizen of Savanna denies reports that he is the slayer of Attorney Daniel S. Berry, a former leading member of the Illinois legislature. Attorney Berry was mysteriously murdered at the door of his office and it is said the circumstances indicate he was killed by the husband of a woman to whom Berry is reported to have paid attentions. Pulford's store and Berry's office are almost adjoining. Today Pulford claimed to be able to establish a complete alibi showing that he was in his store at the time of the shooting. Pulford is past 50 years of age and is reputed to be worth $500,000. His philanthropy has made him one of the most popular men in Savanna. He has a wife and two grown daughters, one of whom is married. Berry also was married.

CONVICT LABOR PROHIBITED.

Washington, May 24.—The president has issued an order prohibiting the employment of convict labor on government works. The question of employment of such labor was raised in connection with certain river and harbor improvements in Arkansas, the contractor for which desired to employ a number of state convicts under contract with the state authorities. The officials of the war department were almost unanimously opposed to the plan and Judge Advocate General Davis gave an opinion that it was contrary to the spirit if not the letter of the labor laws of the United States.

SMOTHERED IN ORE.

John Uren Instantly Killed at Albany Mine.

Hibbing, Minn., May 24.—John Uren, a Cornishman, 48 years of age, was instantly killed while engaged in poking ore down a chute at the foot of a twenty-foot drift at the Albany mine. In some unaccountable manner the mass of ore gave way and he was caught in the midst of it and smothered to death before his fellow employes could come to his assistance. Uren was formerly a mining captain, and was one of the best known men in the range district. He is survived by a widow and several children.

Fire destroyed the saloon building recently remodeled and opened by N. M. Buerff at Stevenson, in addition to a large stock of liquors and household furniture on the second floor. The fire came without warning and spread so rapidly that nothing whatever was saved. The proprietor was so seriously burned that it is feared he cannot live. He has been taken to St. Mary's hospital, at Duluth, for treatment. Archie McMillan, a bartender, was also severely burned, but will recover.

At the time Nels Peterson was being taken back to the jail to await transportation, John Peterson, his brother was brought to the sheriff's office on a warrant issued in municipal court on information that he has been selling liquor without a license. Peterson runs a general store at Zim.

WILLIAMS INSISTS

On Hanging In Preference to Life Imprisonment.

St. Paul, May 24.—The attorneys for William Williams, sentenced to be hanged Aug. 9, for the murder of John Keller, are in a strange predicament. They would like to have the sentence of the prisoner commuted to life imprisonment, but Williams insists on being hanged.

In spite of Williams' plea that he be hanged at the earliest possible opportunity, his attorneys, James Cormican and Frances H. Clarke yesterday called at the office of Governor John A. Johnson to discuss with him the advisability of asking the pardon board for a commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment. The governor was not at his office and the matter was deferred.

"We have not decided whether we shall ask for a commutation of the sentence or not," said Mr. Cormican. "In fact, we are in a peculiar predicament. Our client is opposed to life imprisonment; he prefers to be hanged, and the question is, shall we disregard his wishes."

AUTOMOBILE LICENSES

May Be Held to Be Unconstitutional.

St. Paul, May 24.—Owners of automobiles in Duluth and other points in Minnesota may not be required to take out licenses hereafter. Some of the brightest attorneys of the three large cities in Minnesota have argued before Attorney General E. T. Young that to license automobiles is in violation of the state and federal constitutions, and the attorney general has begun an investigation.

"I am inclined to think that there is a good deal in the arguments of these attorneys," said Mr. Young yesterday, "and I am going to look up the law."

Mr. Young has received word that Attorney General Sturtevant of Wisconsin has held a similar bill introduced in the Wisconsin legislature to be unconstitutional in that it imposes a license fee upon property, not an occupation, that it makes an arbitrary classification of vehicles and that it imposes double taxation, since automobiles are taxed on an ad valorem basis.

QUESTION OF GOOD AND EVIL

Rev. Hugh O. Pentecost Says He Yields to All Temptation.

New York, May 24.—The Sunrise club had its last meeting of the season Monday night and attempted to settle the question of right and wrong, good and evil. It is a symposium of minds that dwell on heights and interchange views from eyes which look toward the dawn. While what constitutes right and what wrong was not settled so definitely that the club will have nothing to do next year, its assembled lists, ologists, and osophists feel that the meeting is one step forward in human progress.

The most remarkable views of the evening were those expressed by the Rev. Hugh O. Pentecost. He said:

"I tried in my youth to read and understand philosophers and metaphysicians. I gave it up. It was too hard for me. Then I settled it all for myself. Right and wrong, good and bad, moral and immoral ought and ought not to have no meaning for me. The happiest moment of my life was when I found I had eliminated my conscience root and branch and had no moral sense whatever.

"I got there by this process: I went back to nature. I found that one single principle exists in the universe—seeking the lines of least resistance. We simply always do the thing which it is easiest to do under given circumstances.

"Good and evil are all gammon and spinach to me. From the martyr at the stake to the most abject criminal on the gallows we are all doing the things we do because it is impossible for us to do anything else.

"If you would get rid of conscience and all that tommyrot you would have a solution for every problem of life. I have no fear of God or devil. I have no desire to go to heaven and have no dread of going to hell. Every temptation I have in the world I yield to—every one. And I am not a bit different from all of you. I have not a lighter nature at all—nor any lower in nature. I propose to yield to every temptation. I only have to be sure it is a temptation. If it is—good-by, I'm gone.

"If I wanted to get drunk I'd get drunk. If I wanted to beat my wife I'd beat her. If I do not, it's because I had rather not. It's more comfortable. I blame not another man who drinks and beats his wife because it gives him joy?

"Character? There's no such thing as character. Those persons have good character to me who have those desires which I consider beautiful desires and act on them."

James F. Morton, Jr., free love advocate and philosophical anarchist, said the world was troubled by conventional views of right and wrong, but that to say there is no right and wrong at all is to throw out the baby with the bath.

"What is right?" he asked. "That which is in accordance with the process of evolution. We say good egg and bad egg. We mean exactly the same thing when we say good man and bad man. Good egg? It is an egg which fulfills the mission of eggness. It is right in every inch an egg. Bad egg? We mean by that an egg not expressing itself on the plane that belongs to an egg. That's a definition of right and wrong as it belongs to human beings. If an act is in accordance with the broader movement of the universe from incoherent to coherent, from indefinite to definite, it is right."

SAVED BY DYNAMITE.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you die as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her." Strictly scientific cure for Bronchitis and La Grippe. At all druggists, price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

CASH SHORT; TREASURER GONE.

Chicago, May 24.—Anton Pitra, treasurer of the American Building, Loan and Homestead association is missing and an investigation of his books is said to have revealed a shortage of about $11,600. Today counsel for the organization went with several officials of the society to lay the matter before the grand jury. Pitra was a prominent Bohemian resident of this city.

LISTEN TO TAFT

The Republicans of Ohio Meet In State Convention.

Secretary Talks of Republican Success and Work of Congress.

Columbus, O., May 24.—The Republicans of Ohio were represented by more than 1,100 delegates when the state convention to nominate governor and other state officers was called to order this afternoon. Secretary Taft, who acts as temporary chairman, spoke in part as follows:

"Fellow Republicans of Ohio: I congratulate you on the prosperous political calm in which you meet. The tremendous victory of last fall so stunned our ancient enemy the Democracy, that as a party it is hardly even now showing any sign of life. When a president like Theodore Roosevelt, a consistent and othordox Republican, is welcomed with bursts of enthusiastic admiration in Texas, and in the Democratic Iroquois club of Chicago, we may well liken the present to the era of political good feeling which prevailed early in the last century."

The secretary rapidly sketched the attitude of the Republican party on the currency question since 1896, referred to the Spanish war and its results and then said:

"In the campaign of 1904 the Democratic managers ignored the fact that it ever had been in favor of free silver, and sought to make the chief issue the personality of Theodore Roosevelt. Against him they charged imperialism, militarism, usurpation of power, violations of the constitution, a dangerous foreign policy of intermeddling, and an attempt to introduce a personal government.

"This the secretary said 'brought in review the action of the president in various matters which he pointed out, notably the recognition of the republic of Panama, the settlement of the anthracite coal strike, the bringing of the Northern Securities suit, and his Philippine policy. "It made manifest" the secretary continued, "the consistent attitude of Mr. Roosevelt in that he was neither a plutocrat nor a 'mobocrat.'"

The managers of the Democratic party, he said, in the last campaign had begun, "as friends of certain Wall street interests, but as the campaign shaped itself even the kings of the street refused to put their money on a 'beaten horse' and withdrew from the contest, leaving the poor Democratic leaders wallowing in the slough of despond' into which their pusillanimous course had led them." Secretary Taft then referred to the Democratic charges of corruption against the president and the chairman of the Republican national committee and to "the outburst of indignant denial" from the president, which the secretary said should serve as a lesson to those tempted to calumny at a campaign's end.

"It is not true," he went on, "that we Republicans, merely by past success, can escape the responsibility of working out other great questions as to the settlement of which all Republicans do not yet seem to be in full accord."

The secretary said that the interstate commerce law had accomplished much but that inequality and injustice remained. Discussing the proposed remedial bill as it passed the house of representatives the secretary said it attempts to give more power to the railroad commission so that its orers when made shall be effective until set aside by judicial hearing. "It does not as yet," he said, "provide for a general fixing of a table of rates by the commission, but only calls for a fixing of a maximum rate upon complaint with respect to a specific instance of injustice. It seems a moderate measure, calculated to give the added power to the commission necessary to effectiveness to remedying specific wrongs in rates without creating an all powerful tribunal which shall in advance take away from railways the power of rate making and of elastically responding to varying conditions. It will not thus paralyze individual effort in meeting the changing demands of trade. We can certainly trust our law givers to respond to the popular demand and to regulate the railways so far as they ought to be regulated, without interfering with that control over their own property and with that motive for efficiency and economic management which are still required to make successful the enormous business of railway transportation in America. This question must be settled by the Republicans. The Republican party, by its enemies is falsely charged with being a party of the corporations and the trusts, the wealthy. The history of its sacrifices in favor of human rights, and of its contests for individualism against Socialism is a triumphant refutation of the charge. Mr. Bryan represents an element of the Democratic party that is hastening as rapidly as possible toward a doctrine in which vested rights in this are little regarded. He is now formulating a doctrine in favor of the government ownership of commercial railroads to which he hopes to lead his party. Against this proposition I feel confident that the Republican party will always set its face like flint. I only refer to it as Mr. Bryan's remedy for the abuses of which it is said the railroad companies are guilty and as an additional reason why if such abuses exist, as, in some measure, we know they do, we should take all reasonable steps to remedy them in the direction of an increased and effective power of governmental supervision and regulation, in order to meet the argument that government ownership is the only cure."

Secretary Taft discussed the deficit in the revenues and said the Republicans must provide a suitable means of avoiding a real and permanent shortage of cash if next year witnesses a repetition of the deficit. In this connection he said

"It may be that congress will succeed in cutting down here and there so as to reuce the deficit, but the experience of this last session in which the greatest effort to economize was made, gives little hope that if the revenues continue at the same figure as last year, the appropriations may be cut down to a point where no deficit would exist. Are the people in favor of cutting down the naval or army estimates. I think I hear 'no' from one end of the country to the other. Certainly the Democratic party heard that 'no' in no uncertain tones.

"Shall we cut down the pensions. No party has the hardihood to suggest that.

"There remains two alternatives, either to impose additional internal taxes or to readjust and revise the tariff. We have repealed the war taxes which afforded a large revenue and the eight years of the present Dingley tariff have seen in this country a prosperity never before witnessed in the civilized world. If the deficit continues in serious amount, then in one way or the other, either our taxation on imports or our internal revenue system must be changed to meet the shortage, with every effort to cause the minimum of business disturbance.

"A congress of the United States has been elected which will meet regularly the first of December, possibly earlier by the call of the president, before which the issue of regulation of railroad rates and the method of meeting the deficit must come for decision. In the solution of these questions we can be certain that Ohio, represented by Senator Foraker, one of the two ablest debaters and Republican champions in the senate, and by Senator Dick, who, though a war horse in Ohio politics, has still his spurs to win in that body, and by an experienced and able delegation in the house led by those veteran and accomplished statesmen, Gen. Grosvenor of Athens and Congressman Burton of Cleveland, will support her part in bringing about a wise result.

"Mr. Roosevelt has insisted that the United States bear its part in the settlement of these questions between the nations in which, by reason of that guardianship which we maintain over this hemisphere under the Monroe doctrine, we have always claimed a right to be heard, and in these new questions arising in the Far Orient in respect to which, by reason of our ownership of the Philippines and our immense and growing trade with China and Japan, we may properly claim a hearing.

"Nearly at our doors in the Caribbean sea, in the control of which we necessarily have an anxious interest, is one government, too weakened by revolution and insurrection, tottering to a fall. Burdened by a debt whose face value is far beyond the means of the country to pay, it has turned to the United States for assistance in settlement with its creditors. Assuring the world and the state of San Domingo that the United States has no selfish purpose of aggrandisement in intervening, the president concluded a treaty by which, if ratified, San Domingo will go into the hands of the United States as a receiver.

"The treaty was not confirmed at the last session of the senate because there were not enough Republicans present to do so. As all of the powers of Europe acquiesce in approving it, it seems certain that its provisions are so equitable and its necessity so great that at the next session of the senate it will be confirmed.

"Some difference of opinion appears as to the extent of the Monroe doctrine. The president insists that if the United States is to become responsible to Europe for the good conduct of the governments of Central and South America, then it must be heard by these governments when it demands that they put their houses in order and so avoid the just complaints of European powers.

"The Monroe doctrine is difficult to maintain at all events, and if we assert it as we do, we should accept the obligations that follow the assertion of the right."

Secretary Taft said that never before has the influence of the United States for good been greater than today, and because it is known that with a navy of most respectable proportions, should it unfortunately be engaged in such a conflict, it is ready to protect itself.

"People," he continued, "are prone to say that a large navy induces bravado, pugnacity and a recklessness of peace. In one of the South American republics we are at present engaged in attempting to rescue the property of American citizens from what is said to be an unjust confiscation by the sovereign, under color of judicial sanction. We have asked for arbitration and it has been refused, and we are waiting now only until congress convenes before submitting the facts to it for its consideration. Meantime we are exercising toward this republic all the forbearance that is due to a weaker nation. And so it is with the general policy of Theodore Roosevelt, that while he insists upon carrying a 'big stick,' he does, in fact, speak softly and exercises a degree of forbearance that the confidence of strength and a righteous purpose justifies.

"At present the tariff against the Philippines is 75 per cent of the present Dingley rates and under this practically no imports reach the United States from the Philippine Islands. The friends of the Philippines look forward to the coming session of congress with confidence that a measure of justice will be meted out to the islands. We shall hold the Philippines, certainly for a generation, probably for several generations in our effort to lead the people on to education and prosperity and a knowledge of self-government, and during that time we must take those islands to our bosom, so to speak, and give them the advantages of a member of our family. This benefit can never exist as long as we maintain a high tariff wall between us and the islands.

"We have been fortunate in having in the gubernatorial chair in Ohio in the last two years a clear headed business man who has not hesitated to cut down the appropriations presented to him in order that the credit of the state might be preserved. He has been attacked with bitterness by well meaning men, who have differed with him in respect to his course upon the liquor question. If I understand the situation aright, today Ohio liquor law is the best measure in the United States.

"It is a law which leaves to the people living in a community of residences the right to exclude an objectionable saloon from close proximity to them, whether in the country or in a residential part of a large city. It is moderate, it is just, it is effective."

Continuing Secretary Taft said Governor Herrick had made few if any mistakes in his exercise of the veto power. He regretted that the state, county and municipal patronage had not been put on a civil service basis.

The secretary concluded:

"And now, my fellow Republicans, I have attempted to review the issues, not the issues between the Republican and Democratic parties, for the Democratic party is moribund and unable to frame issues, but the issues which in the Republican party itself have been suggested for national improvement. I have ventured, although almost a stranger to the state, to touch upon one or two living state issues and to point out how much of credit for the satisfactory financial condition of the state is due to our governor. We are come to nominate a ticket which we may be reasonably sure will receive the support of a majority of the voters of Ohio, but in its make-up we should not be content simply to obtain a perfunctory victory at the polls, but by the high character of the nominees we should force from the people of Ohio a real expression of continued confidence in that party which has heretofore served them so well. I thank you for the great honor of presiding over this convention. What is the pleasure of the convention?"

CARRIED BY MOSQUITOES

Busy "Skeeters" Declared to Be Carriers of Disease.

Pelham Manor, L. I., May 24.—George W. Dav's, governor-general of the Panama canal zone, who was recalled to this country to save his life, is here taking the Atlantic ocean cold fog treatment for malaria.

In an interview Gen. Davis told some interesting facts about yellow fever at Panama and the fight to eliminate the disease.

"The reason it has been harder to combat yellow fever in Panama than it was in Havana," said he, "is because of the different conditions in the two cities.

"The cause of yellow fever is no longer a theory. If you talk to the doctors about the transmission of the disease by mosquitoes being a theory, they will hardly want to discuss the subject further with you. They will tell you that it is a demonstrated fact.

"For a man to get yellow fever or malaria two things are essential. In the first place, he must be bitten by a mosquito, and in the second place that mosquito must previously have bitten somebody who had the yellow fever or malaria.

"On a Feb. 28, a few years ago, our corps of scientists in Havana announced that they knew the cause of yellow fever and that the disease would be stamped out. By the first of August in that same year they had it stamped out. In Panama it will be stamped out just as it was in Havana. But, as I said before, it is taking longer, because the conditions are different.

"In Havana there was, to begin with, an excellent water works system. Panama had no water works system whatever. All the water came from very shallow wells in the outskirts of the city. It was taken from these wells, put into casks, mounted on wheels and sold to consumers in five-gallon cans. In addition to this, every house, nearly, had a roof cistern, and some had two of them.

"Now these cisterns and the water that was bought and stood, in many cases, in open vessels in the houses, became breeding places for mosquitoes. And these house mosquitoes are the ones that carry civil service heads. The swamp mosquitoes will carry malaria, but they do not carry yellow fever.

"So the problem is very largely narrowed down to killing off these house breed mosquitoes, and the way to kill them off is to destroy their breeding places. The first thing, therefore, was to give Panama an adequate water works system.

"That system is now nearly completed. The source is back in the mountains ten miles away, and the water is brought to the city by an aqueduct. The water should be on by the first of July and after that a month will see yellow fever in Panama on its last legs.

"To get rid of the malaria-bearing mosquito is another matter. The breeding places are too large and the problem is too complicated. I suppose there always will be malaria in Panama."

EMPIRE DAY OBSERVED.

Britons Celebrate Anniversary of Late Queen Victoria.

London, May 24.—Empire day, the anniversary of the birth of the late Queen Victoria, May 24, 1819, was more widely observed in London and the provinces than heretofore. The most prominent feature was a big review of troops at Aldershot by the king, while the leading event in London was the unveiling at St. Paul's cathedral by the prince of Wales of the sculptured memorial, designed and executed by Princess Louise (duchess of Argyle), "To the 40,000 brave sons of Britain over the seas, who laid down their lives for the mother country in the South African war."

Telegrams from South Africa, Australia and the other colonies generally indicate a widespread observance of the day.

BRYAN IMPATIENT UNDER EXAMINATION.

New Haven, Conn., May 24.—William J. Bryan appeared in the probate court here today at a hearing on the accounts of the estate of the late Philo S. Bennett, of which Mr. Bryan is a director. During the examination Mr. Bryan submitted to a rapid fire of questions from Judge Henry Stoddard, counsel for Mrs. Grace I. Bennett, the widow, and at times considerable impatience was manifested by both questioner and witness.

MONUMENT ERECTED

Over Grave of New York Woman's Dog.

New York, May 24.—Confident that dogs have a future existence, Mrs. Annie K. Proudman of 227 West One Hundred and Third street, has had a monument erected over the grave of her pet pug.

Her companion for seventeen years, "Wrinkles" died last January. Mrs. Proudman grieved greatly over his death, and she never tires of recounting her pet's virtues. She believes dogs have feelings and sentiments similar to those of human beings, and she is sure that she will be greeted in the hereafter by the beloved "Wrinkles."

The dog was buried with all ceremony in the Hartsdale cemetery, in Westchester county, where about 1,000 pet animals are interred. Mrs. Proudman, who is wealthy, sent memorial cards among her friends. The monument, which has just been set up, bears this inscription:

"In loving memory of 'Wrinkles,' a little pug dog, who died Jan. 7, 1905. For seventeen years a faithful friend and constant companion, he will never be forgotten by his sorrowing mistress. Our close connection of many years proves this beyond all doubt a truth to be:

"The passing of that little life
Ends not alone in memory
Say what you will, he was, he is
A part of the infinite in me.
Not annihilation, but living still,
He waits and watches in eternity.
"A. K. P."

Mrs. Proudman now has another dog, but she says that the place in her heart left vacant by "Wrinkles" can never be filled. The dog was a regularly elected member of the Ladies' Aid society of the Lenox Avenue Unitarian church and attended all the meetings with his mistress. He also accompanied Mrs. Proudman in her travels all over the country.

HARPER IS AT WORK.

Chicago, May 24.—The fact that President William R. Harper of the university of Chicago, had been somewhat indisposed for three or four days, gave rise to reports that he was seriously ill. While not so well, the first of this week as immediately previous, he is today at work as usual.

A CREEPING DEATH.

Blood poison creeps up towards the heart, causing death. J. E. Stearns, Belle Plaine, Minn., writes that a friend dreadfully injured his hand, which swelled up like blood poisoning. Bucklen's Arnica Salve drew out the poison, healed the wound, and saved his life. Best in the world for burns and sores. 25c at all druggists.

Young Men's Suits... Double and single-breasted; crisply stylish; an almost unlimited range of patterns and all superior to those of last year; handsome grays, blues, browns, fancy, mixed and others—the long coat with graceful skirt and bulldog lapel; large double or single vent in back; vest with or without collar; trousers in extreme conservative or popular models. JUSTIFIES ACTION

Albert Baldwin Upholds Board's Acceptance of Rockefeller Gift.

Discusses Legal and Moral Aspects of the Case.

At the Congregational church convention, holding sessions at Pilgrim Congregational church in West Duluth, Albert Baldwin this afternoon read a paper on the much discussed gift of $100,000 by John D. Rockefeller to the American Board of Missions. Mr. Baldwin said:

"You are all familiar with the problem which has recently confronted the prudential committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and which that committee had no choice but to solve. John D. Rockefeller, upon the recommendation of his agent, who, with the business care characteristic of all of Mr. Rockefeller's transactions, investigated the objects and needs of the board, donated to the board through its prudential committee, the sum of $100,000, to be used by the board for a designated part of its missionary work. After the gift had been received, and a portion of it disbursed in the particular work for which it was given, certain individuals, high in the councils of the board and prominent in the life and work of the church, entered with the committee a protest against the retention of the gift, and asked that if it had been received, it be returned to the donor.

"The committee's solution of the problem has, during the past two months, called forth the earnest expressions of some of the brightest minds in the Congregational church. Ministers, laymen, the religious and the secular press, have all taken part in the discussion, and the widespread interest that this question of Christian ethics has aroused in the minds of the people should be a matter of great gratification to the Christian church.

"In replying to the protest, the prudential committee, with most commendable courtesy, barely mentioned the legal phase of the subject, choosing rather to consider the moral issue tendered by the protest. I desire to mention very briefly the two aspects of the subjects, the legal and the moral.

"The prudential committee of the American board is a trustee appointed by the corporate members of the board to receive the contributions of those who are moved to give to the objects for which the board stands. All funds received by this committee are received by it solely as such trustee, and as such trustee the committee is responsible for the funds that lawfully come into its hands. The money upon being received by this committee does not become the property of the committee. It becomes the property of the American board, held by the committee, the board's trustee, for the purposes of the trust which the committee is to fulfill. The trustee must give an accurate account for every dollar received by it, and for every dollar disbursed by it. The law holds a trustee responsible to a strict observance of the terms of his trust.

"If the legal guardian of a minor, or of an incompetent person, lawfully receives money into his possession as such guardian, he must charge himself with it and must account for it. He has no right to return it on any pretense to him from whom he lawfully received it. He has no right to exercise over it rights of ownership inconsistent with his possession of it as trust funds. The prudential committee of the American board has no more right to divert from missionary benevolences funds lawfully coming into its hands, than I, as guardian of the estate of an infant, have to divert the trust funds in my hands from the purposes of my trust. The prudential committee, as a legal proposition, has no more right to hand over to Mr. Rockefeller $100,000 lawfully received from him for the benevolent purposes of the board, than I, as such guardian, have to give to him, or to anyone else, funds that have lawfully come to my hand as such guardian.

"In the one case the prudential committee would be personally liable, directly to the American board, and indirectly to the constituents of the board, for a misappropriation of trust funds. In the other case I would be directly responsible to the court which appointed me, and indirectly responsible to my ward for a misappropriation of trust funds. In each case the beneficiary of the trust would be entitled to recover a judgment against the trustee for the amount of the misappropriation. There is no difference in the two cases, either in principle or in law.

"This view of the case, however, does not answer the ethical proposition that has been presented by the protestants, 'that the acceptance of such a gift involves the constituents of the board in a relation implying honor to the donor.' In view of the fact that corporate members of the board may undertake, by proper action, to define the duties and responsibilities of the prudential committee, and may, if they see fit, direct the committee as a part of its duties to scrutinize the character and take into consideration the general reputation of those who offer gifts to the board, and may direct the committee to reject such gifts as in its opinion are offered by unworthy individuals, and since the indications are that it is not improbable that the subject may, in some form be brought before the board at its annual meeting to be held in the fall, the constituents of the board should not allow the subject to pass from their minds until they have formed a clear and definite opinion upon the moral question raised, viz: What shall be the attitude of the board relative to the offerings of individuals? Shall all free will offerings be received, regardless of the character or reputation of the individual who gives, or shall the prudential committee be required to consider the moral fitness, so to speak, of the giver, and reject the proffered gift, if in the opinion of the committee, the giver is one whose moral character, or whose methods of doing business, are such that he may not worthily give to the church for missionary benevolences.

"In the first place, the history of the board in this respect, is worthy of consideration. It has never been the policy of the American board, or of any Christian institution, supported in like manner, so far as I have been able to ascertain, to questionu the worthiness of the individual who brings to it his efferings. In its reply to the protestants the committee said:

"'The principle in which this policy rests is the belief that our responsibility begins with the receipt of the gift.'

"There is the strongest reason in this policy. There is nothing inherently evil in the thing, money, no matter whence its source. The money itself is not 'tainted' by reason of the fact that it may have been secured by questionable or even pernicious methods. Let me illustrate. I once knew a church of which a splendid woman was a member, whose husband was a saloonkeeper. His daughter was also a member of the church and was active in the Chrisitian Enedavor society and in the Sunday school. The mother and daughter were regular contributors to the church. The money that was actually given and received was acquired in the most demoralizing of all business. Was it wrong for that church to receive their contributions?

"Miss Helen Gould gives with great liberality to benevolent purposes, and yet the store from which she draws was accumulated in ways doubtless quite as questionable, in many respects, as those by which Mr. Rockefeller operates. Should her gifts be rejected by any church, college or charitable institution? Do you say the cases are not parallel to the case under consideration? Wherein is the difference? They differ only in that the money given is one remove from him who earned it. Is the gift purified because the substance of it, the money, has passed through other hands before reaching the church or the missionary board? No. The gift itself needs no purification. But if the giver has a wrongful motive in the giving; if he expects to receive thereby a commendation from the recipient which reaches beyond an earnest and deserving expression of gratitude for a benevolent act; if he hopes thereby to secure exemption to any extent whatever from criticism by the church for flagrantly evil practices in business, or in private life; if the gift indeed is but another name for bribe, then the duty of the recipient, if it can know the evil motives of the giver, is clear. Reject the bribe as any other offer of bribery would be rejected.

"There is no one in this audience who for an instant harbors the thought that the American board ever received a gift with the understanding, express or tacit, that the giver will be honored to the extent that the church will wink at the particular forms of sin of which he may be guilty. None of us believe that the church, or any of its institutions, as a sort of side issue, is dealing out 'indulgences' for a price.

"There may be, there too often is, great evil in the methods by which wealth is accumulated, but the money having been acquired becomes the property of him who holds possession, unless there is some person or persons who can show a better title to the same. In other words, possession is lawful ownership, unless there is some one who can establish a paramount title. Money once acquired may be disposed of by the possessor for evil or for good. He may, with the avarice of the miser, bury it in the ground. He may, like the prodigal, spend it in riotous living. Or he may endow colleges, give libraries to cities or contribute to the church or any of its benevolent objects. The money is his. None may deny his right to dispose of it. None can deny the fact that in some manner he must dispose of it. He cannot take it with him when he dies. It would be as sinful for him to destroy it as to bury it in the ground. Shall the disposition be for good or for evil? If it is wrong for the American board of commissioners for Foreign Missions to receive the contributions of Mr. Rockefeller, or of any other individual, then it is wrong for the university, the college or for any charitable institution, the offering of the church, to receive the gifts of such individuals.

"Following to their logical conclusions the arguments of those who protest against the American board receiving the gift of Mr. Rockefeller, we have a man placed in the peculiar position of being forbidden by the church of Christ to use his money for good. By taking such a stand the church in effect says, 'Your money is evil. It shall not be used to help along any of those institutions for which the church stands. It may be used, if used at all, only for the purpose of further promoting that which is evil.' Where can the church find any authority holding that it may close to any man an avenue for doing good? Certainly not in the teachings of Him who went about doing good.

"'Before the gift is received,' said the prudential committee, 'the responsibility is not ours but is that of the donors in their own consciences.' Herein lies the truth of the whole matter. To educate the consciences of men; to seek to eradicate the evils of graft, of bribery and evasion of the law; to uncompromisingly attack all those conditions and practices in business which insiduously lead men on to acts of greed, injustice and oppression; this is the supreme responsibility of the church. But when the church attempts to judge the motives of the individual; when it undertakes to deny to any man the right to do a good deed, then the church steps beyond the sphere of its activity; then it assumes a burden that it was never intended to carry, a burden that it can never carry.

"My conclusions, therefore, are: First, in refusing to return to Mr. Rockefeller the gift which had been given and received, the prudential committee of the American board did the only thing it could lawfully do.

"Second, neither the church nor any of its institutions has any right to dishonor any man because he seeks to do an honorable deed."

THE SPEED OF AUTOMOBILES

Owner of One Compares Them With Street Cars.

"A street car just a few days ago inflicted injuries upon a man on East Superior street from which he died the following day, but I have seen no editorial in the morning paper denouncing the reckless speed at which street cars operate," said an owner of an automobile this morning.

"For some time the News-Tribune has been agitating the people upon the subject of the speed at which automobiles run, inspiring in their minds a belief that every automobile driver runs recklessly and without regard to the safety of pedestrians. Now I want to say that street cars are operated with far more recklessness than automobiles. At the East end the cars fly past Twentieth, Eighteenth, Fourteenth and all of the avenues running at times at eighteen and twenty miles an hour. And yet a street car is controlled with far more difficulty than an auto.

"I will take any automobile with any driver in the city and run alongside of a street car keeping even with it in speed, and at a given signal, the auto will be brought to a dead stop in one-half the distance that will be required for the street car. Furthermore the street car has no power to dodge an object which gets in front of it, while the auto is quickly controlled.

"I do not wish to be understood as excusing any person who runs his auto recklessly and would like to see punished every one who does so, but I do think it unfair and unjust, simply because of some prejudice a man may have, to inspire in the minds of the public generally an antagonism that has no basis in reason."

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Escanaba Boy Drowns In Sight of Frightened Companions.

Escanaba—Within but a few feet of two companions too frightened to aid him, Rudolph Barth, aged 8, fell from a breakwater into Ford river while fishing and was drowned. His body was recovered within thirty minutes from under a logdrive, where it had been carried by the current.

A fire which started in the Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber company's rollway, twenty miles north, threatened over a million feet of timber. The fire departments from Gladstone and Rapid River were called and the fire extinguished with a loss estimated at $3,000.

Because it is claimed that the contract for paving Stephenson and Hartnett avenues leading to North Escanaba, which was awarded by the council to John McLaughlin, exceeds the estimate by at least 75 per cent, Mayor Valentine will refuse to sign the contract until he has determined whether legal action can be taken and whether the special assessment can be collected. It is charged that the price for crushed stone is 61 cents higher than was charged for the Stephenson avenue contract, which has been completed. It is also claimed that the city is being made the victim of a peculiarly arranged monopoly.

Gladstone—Edmund Cookson, for years walking boss for the Chicago Lumbering company, has contracted with the Northwestern Cooperage company, Gladstone, to cut and ship the pine from the E. N. Orr tract on the line of the Manistique, Marquette & Northern road. The cut will be about 1,500,000 feet. Logging operations are now in progress, twenty-five men and six teams being employed. A spur track has been built to the timber.

Sault Ste. Marie—Alderman Forest of the Soo was convicted in circuit court for the second time in a few days, charged with violation of the liquor law in the sale of liquor to a minor. The jury was out over two hours, it needed seven ballots to reach an agreement. There is much talk at the Soo favorable to Forest's removal from the council, a number of the aldermen being quoted as expressing themselves desirous of voting against him. The Soo News states that there is an ordinance under which Forest can be proceeded against.

BUILD HOME FOR CHILDREN

Wealthy New York Women Plan a Mammoth Tenement.

New York, May 24.—Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont and other women of great wealth have organized a syndicate to build a mammoth tenement exclusively for families with children. It will be twenty stories high and fill a whole block in Brooklyn, thus making it the largest tenement in the world. It is to be a children's tenement and is intended as a blessing to families who are fighting race suicide against the terrible odds raised up by the landlords of New York.

The plans call for a department store to occupy the entire ground floor. The store is to be a business enterprise for the making of money, but at the same time a store where the occupants of the model tenement may buy everything at wholesale cost. Outsiders will have to pay full retail prices.

Mrs. Belmont explained that the tenement will be conducted by women; that women have prepared the plans, so far as they have been worked out, and that the same women will superintend the erection of the wonderful structure. It is expected that the tenements will not only be self-supporting but will bring a fair return on the investment. The profit, it is said, will go into a fund to build other tenements on the same plan.

The tenement is to be equipped with all modern conveniences, with large, clean and light apartments, renting for less than is charged for the dirty and dark hovels of the East side.

STUDENTS CLEAN THE STREETS OF STOCKHOLM.

Stockholm, May 24.—Students of the high schools are cleaning the city's streets in place of the regular street cleaners, who have struck for improved conditions. BE PICTURESQUE.

First Thing That Attracts Man to Woman.

Perhaps there is no woman so indignant as the acknowledged beauty who meets a man who looks upon her charms with indifference, says the New York Press. It is very easy try-not to be able to impress upon such an individual what he is missing by not looking at you twice. Yet there never was a woman so beautiful that every man thought her so. It is curious how strangely masculine taste differs on the subject of feminine beauty. Two equally nice young men will almost come to blows over their diverse opinions with regard to shape of a woman's nose or the color of her eyes.

Sometimes a man's taste is formed by his mother and sisters, who imbue him with their own ideas of feminine attractions. Again, it is formed by the girls he has been brought up among. Still again, the first girl he ever loved becomes his ideal. If she had a pug nose and red hair, he gauges all other women by her, and a woman with a perfect Grecian nose and jet black locks stands no chance of finding favor in his eyes. But, most often, a man's taste is based largely on the law of attraction of opposites. If he is tall, slender and blond, he falls in love with every stout, short brunette who may snap her eyes at him; while if he is of the roly-poly dark type himself he adores women of the sylph-like yellow-haired variety.

There are only a few rules besides this upon which a girl can base her judgment of a man's ideal or upon which she may work to attain that ideal.

First of all, he cares nothing for style. You may pinch in your waist and pad your figure until you ache without nearing your goal, if it be masculine admiration. You may spend a fortune at the tailor's only to find yourself outshone by a girl who makes her own frocks and wears her hats four seasons.

Picturesqueness is the thing a man first notices in a woman. Lots of women who never look a fashion book manage to attract the attention of men because they have the artistic instinct in dress and can put on a hat, tie a ribbon bow and arrange their hair in a fashion that makes them look distinctive. They don't know the first thing about style, but they can manage to look a picture in any old white mull dress or shabby shirt waist. They have the knack of wearing their clothes effectively. They understand color. Best of all, they buy their clothes simply and solely because they are becoming and without regard for any thing else.

A man admires a graceful girl and remembers her long after he has forgotten a merely pretty one. An attractive trick of using the hands, a well-poised head, good outlines and feet gracefully used appeal to him beyond anything. He calls such a woman "well set up," and she never falls or ceases to attract him.

A bright face, one that lightens when its owner is talking, one that dimples when she smiles, is much more attractive to the average man than a perfectly molded face without expression. A girl's eyes need be neither large nor beautiful and their color does not matter, if they sparkle and twinkle; her mouth may be any shape, so that there be a row of white teeth behind her smiling lips.

Men like girls in whose every lineament health is apparent. Many women without health are fascinating; but they would be doubly so were they full of vitality.

Lastly, a man likes a girl in whose features and figure femininity is strikingly evident. Small features and tiny figures are generally more beautiful in a man's eyes than heavy features and amazon-like figures, simply because they seem more feminine. But many girls handicapped by coarse features and huge bones have completely overcome these defects by a feminine charm of manner which made one forget all else.

FOR GUEST ROOMS.

Some Pretty Things to Be Found.

There are some very pretty things for guest rooms to be seen in the shops; but, truly, the variety is so endless and the combination of colors so bewitching that the half of it cannot be told in one of our talks. So many many have the possibilities of being made in similar guise, but of cheaper fabric, that it is often only a question of a woman's cleverness whether her house shall be a little artistic gem, though it be simple, or whether it shall be a gathering together of articles that do not go to to make an artistic whole. For instance, we all know how sweet little bags of perfume in a guest room closet will make the room's atmosphere, to say nothing of the delicious odor imparted to the clothes; but here is a new idea: Make a pretty sheet of figured silkolene, hemming it at the bottom, at its back stitch many little pockets in which sweet sachets are slipped. Put rings at the top of this sheet to slip over the closet hooks, and you have not only an improved sachet, but a sensible cover to dresses as well, protecting them from the dust, says an exchange.

The dear old chintz-covered chairs our grandmothers used to have are being copied in the exclusive shops. Have you in the attic any old plush-covered chair, that never was really pretty, and has worn out its usefulness by growing hopelessly shabby? Get it down on a rainy day. Rip off the plush being careful to save all the buttons, then upholster it yourself with chintz. It is not so hard to do, after all, and you will be well repaid for your trouble when you have a comfortable chair for your guest room to place by the window where the view may be enjoyed. If you happen to have an ugly old wooden bed in this room, paint it white, hang chintz valance curtains from the springs, soft pretty curtains at the windows, and the room will be transformed.

Have your guest room complete, not merely a place in which to sleep. Have there some books, a handy work basket, a table fitted as a desk, with all the requisites for writing a letter, and the guest who enters will find it a room in which to "live"—and that is a comprehensive word, as we all know.

AN EXCHANGE OF CONFIDENCES

By Richard B. Shelton.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The pier was deserted when Barlow and Miss Grant came strolling up the beach from the automobile races, which had proved to be a decidedly tame diversion. Barlew had many things he wanted to say to the girl, and he wanted to say them in a place where he could be sure they would be alone and uninterrupted. The pier looked promising.

"Shall we go out?" he said, halting at the pier and addressing the girl.

"It's nearly time to dress for dinner," she demurred, consulting her watch. "Still, it does look quiet and inviting out there. Perhaps we might go out for a few minutes."

"We need a few minutes rest," he laughed as they walked down the pier.

They went to the end and sat down on a stringer that make a comfortable seat. The sun had gone down, and the trees of the orange grove were shapely black silhouettes against the flaming sky. Beneath them lay a tranquil saffron sea, shading in the distance into duller hues of gray blue and violet.

The girl leaned back against a stanchion and closed her eyes.

"Isn't it perfect?" she said. "Does a twilight like this set you thinking?"

"It certainly does," said he, smiling quietly.

"What about?" she asked.

"Oh, lots of things," he replied. "My sins, sometimes."

"That's the way it affects me," she said quickly. "It sets me thinking of my sins—and of Tom."

"Tom?" he repeated questioningly, leaning forward a bit.

"Yes, dear, old, prosaic Tom," she said, "who hasn't the temperament to enjoy a twilight. Indeed, he can't enjoy much of anything but silly figures about stocks and bonds and margins."

"Your brother, Miss Grant?" he asked. She shook her head. He waited rather impatiently for further information.

"He's back there in a stuffy office," she went on, "slaving and saving. Imagine being tied to a stuffy office day in and day out, Mr. Barlow."

"I've experienced the pleasure," he said grimly.

"Tom wants to get a certain amount of money, you see," she explained carelessly, "and when he does, he'll ask me to marry him."

"I see," said Barlow, rather stiffly, looking across the water to the orange trees.

"He's such a dear, stupid, faithful creature," she said affectionately, "You know the kind, Mr. Barlow."

He eyed her narrowly. Why had she never spoken of this man before? He felt hurt, ill treated. Up the beach the crowds were cheering lustily as the last race was finished in semi-darkness. He smiled grimly. She should never know he was hurt, anyway.

"It is strange where twilight carries one's thoughts," he said evenly. "Twilight always carries me to Margaret, no matter where she is. Just now she is in Venice, but this magic twilight takes me to her."

"Yes?" said the girl with languid interest.

"I should be there with her now," said he, "if it wasn't for the fact that my affairs here won't let me get away for more than a fortnight at a time. We'd be poking about the galleries together and invading those strange little shops, picking up odd bits of tapestry and old brasses. I spent one happy, happy winter in Venice when she and her mother were there." He paused. "It's to be in June as soon as she returns," he said quietly.

The girl sat silently for a time, watching the saffron sea change slowly to a dull gray in the dying light. Then she arose and laughed lightly.

"Come, we must go back. It's getting very late," she said.

He arose and silently they walked together down the pier. The last red glow was fading in the West. Myriad little stars were peeping out of the purple back above them.

"I think," said the girl, "that our's will be in October."

Barlow said nothing. He strode along in moody silence, his hands thrust deep into his pockets.

"Of course you're fond of Tom?"

"He's the dearest boy that ever lived," she said with enthusiasm.

Half way down the pier Barlow stopped short. He touched a match to the cigar between his teeth and blew out a cloud of white smoke. He watched it drift away on the still air. Then he came a step nearer the girl.

"Hang Tom!" he growled irrelevantly.

The girl drew away, a bit frightened at his vehemence.

"What?" she gasped.

"Hang Tom!" he repeated.

She stood staring at him in speechless amazement.

"I don't want you to marry Tom,5' he burst out, "nor anyone else, for that matter—but me. I've loved you from the first minute I laid eyes on you—and—and —oh, forgive me for making such an ass of myself!"

Her hands were clutching the guard-rail of the pier. He thought she shivered slightly.

"We must go back at once." There was quiet force in his voice.

"Oh, I'm sorry—awfully sorry," she said contritedly. "I didn't know about—about—"

"About Margaret?" He laughed harshly. "Neither did I. There isn't any Margaret. There never was. There never will be. She was an imagination to cover the wound your Tom tore in my heart. I thought I could hide my wounded pride and—and, yes, my love, behind her. Kindly notice how well the expedient has served," he ended with bitter irony.

Silently they finished their walk down the pier. Silently they crossed the orange grove and mounted the hotel steps. The orchestra at one end of the piazza was playing a lively march. He was sick at heart and disgusted with himself.

He was aware of a vague sense of relief when the girl said good-night at the door. To his surprise, instead of going in at once, she stood looking at him with a queer light in her eyes.

"There is something I feel I really should tell you," she murmured slowly.

Barlow waited silently.

"There wasn't—that is, there isn't—" She paused and flushing beautifully. "Oh, there isn't any Tom," she cried hurriedly and fled through the door.

CUPID'S ROLL.

Many at Vassar Will Respond "Guilty."

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 24.—When Cupid's roll is called at Vassar next month at least a score of the 194 girls in the graduating class will answer "guilty." There are those in the college who believe that from present indications that the number will reach forty or fifty. No previous class has ever held so many engaged girls.

The class dinner takes place every year on the evening of commencement day. It is held at the college and only members of the class are present. A time-honored custom of this dinner is the roll call. As the names are called in alphabetical order each girl is required to answer "guilty" if she be engaged to be married, and "not guilty" if she be "heart whole and fancy free."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Edward Kimball of Boston Lectures at the Lyceum.

Edward A. Kimball, S. C. D. of Boston, last evening lectured at the Lyceum on Christian Science. The theater was filled and the lecture was heard with close attention. Mr. Kimball explained at the outset that it was not to be supposed that in one evening he could give a full exposition of the Christian Science faith and that he did not expect his hearers to believe all that he would say, but he wished to arouse in them the desire to investigate and reach conviction by studying the teachings of Mrs. Eddy.

With reference to Mrs. Eddy he denounced the harsh criticism of Mrs. Eddy that have appeared in newspapers and elsewhere, claiming that the attacks were of the basest kind. The propensity of the human mind, he said, has always been to revile and defame the prophets and everyone who has ever healed the sick through divine power has met with this treatment.

Her life he said is an answer to all that has been said in her disparagement.

Inclosing his discussion of Christian Science, which was lengthy, Mr. Kimball said:

"Every revelation of truth, very scientific discovery has found its way to humanity through some man, woman or child. It so happened that Christian Science was discovered, assimilated and disclosed by a woman, and forthwith and since then there have been many objections, all of which can be congregated in one common belief that woman is not fit to know the truth. It is not strange that this barbaric belief that mental inferiority inheres materially in woman should have penetrated so many centuries, but it is amazing that this generation needs yet to learn the scientific fact that there is no reason, mental, moral or material; physical, metaphysical or spiritual why woman may not know anything that is true, and know it as soon as a man and as well as a man.

"I feel that I need not stand long before an intelligent audience to debate the question as to whether or no its grand women constitute fit ministers of God to them that sin and mourn and suffer. I know it is expected that a chivalrous man will speak in gracious terms of gracious womanhood, but I rejoice to know that the women I mean need not, nor do they thrive on unnutritious compliment. Because of the sublimity of inspiration, fidelity, courage and character they stand on exalted heights which they have achieved for themselves.

"It has been my good fortune to know a splendid womanhood of whom I am greatly enamored, but I never knew one who was so meek, loving and humble as is the leader of our cause. I never knew one who seemed so intent on knowing the will of God or so glad and satisfied to do that will. I never knew one who was so honest, so charitable, just or kind. Her many years of consecrated experience have ripened into Godly reverence for and devotion to the daily life that is in imitation of Christ. Her chief ambition seem to be battle for humanity against sin and disease, and to continue without reproach before God and man.

"Some day the world will know all this and render tardy justice, and meanwhile the tender, loving woman knoweth that a million people, many of them once dying, who have been rescued from unspeakable depths, and who know that for a generation she has stood as the lone rock stands far out against an angry sea, are thankful that in spite of every contention against her she has been faithful to her trust."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Recent Bride of Sioux Falls Takes Her Life.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—By drinking a quantity of wood alcohol, Mrs. Rhoda Bishop Monroe, aged 35, a well-known resident of Sioux Falls, today ended her life. She was married April 8 last, her husband being the local representative of a commercial supply house. For some time she conducted a restaurant which was well patronized. She had been in poor health and the last day or two was in a highly nervous state. She had frequently threatened to take her own life, and at the same time she did so is believed to have been temporarily deranged.

McLaughlin to hear their protest against the rule of the bureau withholding from the Indians on the reservation under 18 years of age their share of the proposed payment to the tribe. It is asserted that the Indians are greatly in need of all the money coming to them, as some of them are in actual want. They also assert that if the money is not forthcoming white men will seize their property to secure their debts.

The body of Walter Tracy, son of D. H. Tracy of Lien township, Roberts county, was found in a filed near his home with a bullet through the heart and an empty revolver by his side. He was 26. No cause is assigned for the suicide except temporary insanity.

NEW SECRETS OF LIFE

Learned By Professor Loeb of California.

San Francisco, May 24.—Prof. Jacques Loeb, biologist of the University of California, who for years has been attempting to produce life by artificial means, has announced, through a university bulletin the consummation of another important step. He has succeeded in developing by artificial means the eggs of the sea urchin so that the larva produced in the laboratory cannot be distinguished from the living forms produced during the process of natural fertilization.

In the bulletin Prof. Loeb tells of the experiments by which he formed the membrane of eggs exactly as done when spermatozoon comes in contact with the egg. He describes this process as follows:

"The eggs first are treated with an acid which causes membrane formation. For this purpose a solution of fatty acid of the stones with which the well was walled up had slipped from its place, leaving a small opening under the platform, through which it is supposed the child must have crawled.

Armour—This city is making preparations to entertain the gremen's tournament which will be held here on June 20, 21, 22 and 23. The official program has been issued, showing that over $1,600 will be awarded in prizes. It is expected a large number of firemen will be in attendance.

The first day will be given to welcoming the visiting firemen, while the following two days will be devoted to racing. On Friday the annual election of officers of the state association will take place and the meeting wil cose at 9:30 p. m., with an exhibition by the Darktown fire brigade of Mitchell.

Aberdeen—Plans have been drawn for the new store building of Charles I. Appel, at Main street and Third avenue west. The building wil be two stories, 134x25 feet, of brick and stone.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Mrs. T. R. Peart prevented an accident in an exciting runaway. She and her husband and child and H. P. Murphy were on their way from Lynch-burg to Casselton, when the team ran away, throwing both men from the rig. Mrs. Peart picked out a soft, muddy spot and dropped the child from the rear of the rig. It landed uninjured. She then climbed over the front of the rig, secured the lines and turned the frightened animals upon a freshly ploughed field, where the horses became exhausted and were stopped. Nothing was broken and none of the party injured.

The Edwards-Wood company case of the Farmers' Independent Elevator company of Denbigh against the Pennsylvania Fire Insurance company, which has been on trial in the United States court several days, will reach the jury this afternoon. This is the third trial. The grain in the elevator, which had been mortgaged to the commission men, was burned. An interesting feature of the action was the refusal of Charles A. Pape, one of the witnesses, to answer certain questions, which he claimed might incriminate him.

R. S. Sorenson will bring action for $5,000 against the Walhalla bankers who caused his arrest here on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He says he had a letter from the company for which he was working, authorizing him to make drafts when necessary, and says he showed this to the banker. When arrested here he put up the money necessary to cover the amounts.

Fred Teaslee, an 18-year-old boy from Fairyville, Wis., was struck by a Northern Pacific freight train near Tower City and so badly injured he may die. He was taken to a hospital at Valley City for treatment. He was walking from Valley City and sat down on the ties to rest and went to sleep.

Forman—Frank McNally has returned from a trip to the Argentine Republic.

Building operations all over Sargent county are in full swing.

The Sargent County Board of Realty is holding regular sessions and expects to increase the sales of land in this county.

PRISON LABOR PROBLEM.

The difficult problem of prison labor has puzzled many states, and in Michigan it has gone into the courts, where an important decision has been rendered to the effect that under the Michigan constitution prison labor cannot be manipulated so as to interfere with the rights of free labor.

The alternative in many states is between taking all work away from the prisoners, or permitting them to compete, in some measure at least, with free labor. The former is an inhuman punishment, for to deprive a long-term prisoner of the blessing and forgetfulness of labor is positively fiendish. On the other hand, an offender against the law has deprived himself of his right to consideration, at any rate to such an extent as to prohibit his depriving free laborers of the profits of their work.

The decision in Michigan, by a state circuit court, has yet to go to the supreme court for confirmation. It arose over a complaint of the broom-maker's union against the invasion of its ranks by prison-taught broom-makers who had never served a lawful apprenticeship under the rules of the union. The decision is to the effect that under the constitution the trade cannot be taught in prison. It is unfortunate that the news at hand so far does not state the precise ground of the decision, and the section of the constitution that is infringed. At any rate, it is regarded as an important victory for labor in Michigan.

In Minnesota the problem has been solved in a manner that is so far satisfactory. The law is that the number of prisoners that may be employed in any one industry shall not exceed 10 per cent of the total number of free workers engaged in that industry in the state. In other words, if there were 1,000 binding twine laborers in Minnesota, only 100 prisoners could be engaged in the making of twine in the penitentiary. As there are no Minnesota workers engaged in this occupation outside the prison, and as the prison manufacture of binding twine has resulted in a competition with a binding twine trust that has been most profitable to Minnesota farmers, there has been no trouble so far. The only other large industry in which the prison engages is the manufacture of shoes, and not much more than half the legal limit of prisoners has ever been used in this work.

In Minnesota, therefore, the prisoners have been given the balm of labor, without serious interference with the rights of free workers, and in that respect there are many states that have reason to envy Minnesota, for in their cases the problem is much more complicated.

FOOLING THE PEOPLE.

There is a man in Englewood, N. J., who is either a great public benefactor and an avenger on the trail of the Wall street shark, or a common fraud, and logic points strongly to the latter proposition.

He advertises that he will give instruction by mail in the art of stock speculation, and promises that he will equip his pupils so they cannot fail to make money, no matter how the market goes.

It is suggested that possibly this man would rather be useful than rich, and that the fact that he is willing to part with such a secret on any terms is a cheering example of generosity in a selfish world. For there are "terms," it appears. He charges for his instruction in stock speculations, though just what the terms are or just how the game is worked does not appear in the advertisements.

It is a perennial mystery how anybody can ever be fooled by such claims, but people are being fooled by them every day, and probably will continue to bite until the end of time. Naturally, a man who knew how to beat the market no matter how it acted would be astonishingly rich in a short time. As only his desires could set the limit on the riches he could attain to, naturally one would expect to find a Carnegie or a Rockefeller in such a public benefactor as the one who would share his priceless secret with the world. But strangely enough, that is not the case. As a rule the possessor of the great secret is a man that depends upon what the day's mail brings him from suckers as to whether he shall eat or not.

So, unless you are quite sure that you are dealing with a real Carnegie, don't venture your money with the man that promises a sure thing. It is bad enough to take long chances, but a sure thing is almost fatal.

THE HOPEFUL FILIPINO.

It will doubtless be a surprise to many believers in the theory of benevolent assimilation and in an imperialistic policy that after seven years of American rule the Filipino still harbors hopes and dreams of freedom. Descendants of those who nursed the same hopes and dreamed the same dreams in 1776 may find it in themselves to sympathize with this spirit, even though they are fond enough of the results of 1776 to think that they ought to be good enough for any people. They are good enough for anybody, but is the Filipino getting quite all that resulted? Of course he is not, because they say he is not fitted for such privileges, even though he is far enough advanced to wish for them.

Arthur Stanley Riggs in the May Bookman tells of the seditious plays that the natives have been putting on in Manila, which have given vent to the native's visions of independence. It is asserted that one Dr. Gomez, knowing the susceptibility of the Tagalog to the influences of the drama, wrote some patriotic plays and had them played in the native language. The first play came out about three years ago, and the people literally went wild over the piece. The object of Gomez, according to Mr. Riggs, was to make all the trouble possible for the American government, and at the same time to make all the money possible for himself.

So delighted were the people with plays that dealt with Filipino freedom that the government "was forced to take some definite and well-considered course of action." The police were ordered to stop at once all plays at all suspicious, and it was further ordered that all native plays must be censored before being put on. It seems that we who are so disgusted with the Russian censor, now going out of date, have censors of our own. In spite of these efforts, however, for a time the seditious plays persisted. They were given some such inoffensive title as "The Butterfly and the Cuckoo," or the "True Path to Heaven," and the censor let them go through. Later it appeared that the natives got as enthusiastic over tame things like these as they did over the old plays, and that American flags and insurgent uniforms were essentials to the way to get to heaven by way of the theater. This resulted in the discovery that the natives were depending on American ignorance of Tagalog to permit them to play their plays—patriotic, they call them; "seditious," our people name them.

So even after seven years of freedom under the flag without the constitution but with the cocktail, there still exists a Filipino dream of independence, so persistent as to defy the police and the censors.

ADVICE FROM DENVER.

The mayor of Denver has just issued to the people of his city a proclamation that is a little out of the ordinary. Inasmuch as Denver is to have many visitors during the summer, he asks the citizens to do certain things that will make the city look cleaner, brighter, better and busier.

Duluth is to have many visitors, too, during the coming summer, and the advice of Mayor Speer of Denver will be just as applicable to this city as it will to Denver. Here it is, and if the citizens of Duluth will heed and obey it they will be showing their loyalty and public spirit in a tangible form:

If your store front, residence or fence is dull or dingy, order it repainted.

If your awning is old, torn or faded, get a new one.

If your sidewalk, fence or gate needs repairing, fix it.

Destroy the young weeds that are starting on your property and on your neighbor's property.

If your advertising sign is old and faded, take it down or repaint it.

Resolve never to throw paper on the streets.

Take all dandelions out of your lawn—they spoil its beauty.

Burn all the rubbish possible—allow no one to throw it on streets, alleys or vacant lots.

Promise not to spit on the sidewalk.

Organize a block improvement society, and allow no weeds to grow on sidewalk area or vacant property in your block.

Ask your milkmen, grocerymen and expressmen to have their wagons repainted.

Irrespective of the size of your house, make your lawn the finest.

Illuminate the front of your store in the business section.

Every dollar spent in this way will come back to the city two-fold, and if every citizen in Duluth followed every one of these suggestions that is applicable to his case, the result would be incalculably profitable to the city and its citizens.

DESERTING TARS.

The navy department appears to have a difficult problem before it not only to secure sailors for the new war vessels, but to keep those it has already secured. A recent statement issued by the bureau of navigation shows that last year the desertions amounted to over 10 per cent of the entire naval force, 3,210 men taking French leave of the navy.

When it is remembered that the navy is constantly growing and that there is an increasing need of men to man the new vessels that are being put out, the problem becomes a serious one indeed, and the navy department is now engaged in looking into the situation very carefully. It will not only endeavor to find out what the trouble is, but when it is found, the next move will naturally be to remedy it, if that be possible.

The desertions are not so numerous among the sailors as among the so-called messmen—cooks, wardroom stewards, cabin boys, etc. Nearly a quarter of the entire number in these employments eloped from the service of Uncle Sam last year. This reduces the percentage of deserting seamen to a small figure.

There are several obvious reasons for these desertions. The deserters are mostly young men, who find naval discipline exceedingly irksome in times of peace. The men in the navy are compelled, perhaps, to walk more closely to the line than men in similar ranks in the army, and their liberties and privileges are not numerous. Besides, the opportunities for better pay in private yacht service are many and tempting, and these no doubt have had something to do with many of the desertions.

If Uncle Sam is to become a world power he will have to have a large navy, according to the world's customs, and if he is to have a large navy he must have men for his ships. Therefore the problem is one that demands speedy and effectual remedy.

Hotel Gossip.

"Grand Rapids will be to the west end of the Mesaba range what Hibbing is to its center," said J. H. Holman of Grand Rapids, Minn., at the McKay. "The ore properties around the town are showing up in fine shape, and some of the mines will be large producers. There is great activity there now, and the principal talk heard on the streets concerns mines and mining.

"Five drills are at work on the Buckeye property, about seven miles northeast of the village. They were also working churn and diamond drills in section 2-55-25, section 9, in the Kinney lake district, and in various other sections in the vicinity of Grand Rapids. The Artures mine and my old forty, known as the Holman forty, are making a good showing. No branch lines of railroad have as yet been built into the iron districts, and the work there is carried on under difficulties in consequence. During the past winter 5,000 tons of coal were hauled by team from the tracks at Grand Rapids to Bovey, and more of the fuel is to be taken in this summer, as soon as the roads are in fit condition for the work. While the snow lasted there were 100 teams kept busy taking in the coal, and before the task could be completed the snow left the ground. Now they are improving the roads leading to Bovey, which is coming to be quite a little settlement.

"The Steel trust has options on land all around Grand Rapids, and appears to own the principal properties. My old forty, which I sold four years ago for $30,000 is now worth many times that. Explorations show that the tract contains 20,000,000 tons of ore. The vein measures from 180 to 200 feet in depth.

"Everybody who owns land in that section is holding on to it, and you cannot buy it for any price. All hope that a find of ore will make them rich. Explorations are being carled on all the time. You can't buy a piece of land within three miles of the range. Although Bovey may be nearer the center of operations, it is believed th steel trust will build its working offices at Grand Rapids, because of the educational advantages of the town, which will make it agreeable to the men with families as a place of residence. Bovey is eight miles from Grand Rapids."

"Minneapolis is supposed to be a closed town, strictly clean in every respect, but there is doubt as to whether this much-to-be-desired state of affairs really exists," said W. H. Ellis of Minneapolis at the St. Louis. "Taken as a whole, however, I think you will find that Minneapolis is as well off in this regard as any other city of its size in the country. It is practically impossible to keep any large city entirely free from vice, and there is bound to be some of it going on, just how much depends upon those who have the municipal affairs of the town in charge.

"Aside from the extensive building going on in Minneapolis there are a good many municipal improvements in progress. New pavements are being laid and old ones being repaired. Minneapolis has the reputation of having about as fine a system of streets as any municipality in the United States, and a visit will show this reputation to be well earned."

"The prize wolf story of the season comes from Ewen, Mich.," said A. D. Roth of Grand Rapids, Mich., at the St. Louis. "According to the tale, one James Colgin of that place made $364 in a two-days' wolf hunt.

"About ten miles north of Ewen is a place where the deer are supposed to be quite numerous. It was a sort of a yard, so to speak, where the deer were wont to congregate in large numbers. Colgin believed he could find wolves there. Partly to investigate, but prepared for action, he went to the scene. Wolves were there, and they were raising havoc with the deer, as numerous carcasses testified. Colgin had a quantity of suet, which he cut up and distributed about the place. In each piece he placed some strychnine.

"The following day he returned to the place and found that five wolves had taken the bait and died. This made him feel pretty good. But when he heard a pack howling near by, and coming in his direction, he made up his mind that he might easily add to this number if he went about it in the right way. It so happened that he was but a short distance from a lake. He figured that the deer would run out on the ice, with the wolves in close pursuit. This is just what happened, according to Colgin's version of the affair. The procession passed him, not more than fifty yards away, and he opened fire. With a dozen well-directed shots from his repeater he dropped nine of the savage brutes, thus saving the deer's life. Whether the deer then fell upon its knees and asked that blessings be bestowed upon the bold hunter is not recorded, but the supposition is that this is just what happened.

"For each wolf Colgin received a bounty of $22, and he sold the hides for $5 each, making $28 for each of his thirteen animals, or a total of $364 for his two days' work, which is certainly going some."

Riding.

In the morning of existence,
Baby sorrows to beguile,
To the pink and white persistence
Comes the mother with a smile.
"We shall ride out in our carriage,"
Says the mother with a smile.

When there comes life's noonday golden
And the air is full of bliss,
In the fashion, good and olden,
Comes a lover with a kiss.
"Let us twain go buggy riding,"
Says the lover with a kiss.

When the falling shadow lengthens
And the day no more is blithe,
When the dusky twilight strengthens
Knocks a stranger with a scythe,
"Come! we twain shall ride together,"
Says the stranger with a scythe.

The Weather.

A frolicsome switch of the wind in the night time, and presto! there comes the soothing touch of summer, borne upon breezes that are welcome, even they come in a manner somewhat boisterous. They come, too, tempered by prairies still cool from the lingering touch of spring, and the result is charming and wholesome. These breezes tamper wantonly with skirts and hats and street dust, but their pranks are forgiven because of the hint the Southland's softness that they carry. They earned forgiveness again by scattering the threatening clouds of the morning, and making way for the royal progress of a kindly, mellow sun.

The weather man said this morning that the wind would stay in the western half of the circumference of our situation during the twenty-four hours ending tomorrow evening at 7, the time covered by his prediction. He intimates that it will be cooler, probably, that there may be showers, and that the winds will be variously from the northwest to southwest.

Rains fell yesterday in the Northwest, the extreme Southeast and in Texas. The morning opened warmer in the Upper Mississippi valley, along the south shore of Lake Superior, and it was cooler down toward New Mexico and Western Texas. The barometer is low over Manitoba and the extreme Southwest.

The Ladybug.

'Twas the snug little tug the Ladybug,
And her Captain stood in the rear,
And he took a bite off the for'ard light
As he called to the engineer:

"O Engineer, may I ask this here—
Now what is the speed o' we,
And what is the rate that we palpitate,
As we steer for the oping sea?"

Said the Engineer, "It is easy to do,
The thing that ye arsk o' me;
Our smokestack registers forty-two
And our compass thirty-three."

"Enough, enough!" said the Captain bluff,
Go butter the turbine coil
And grease the lops of the under-tops
With a bottle o' salad oil."

So the Engineer with a right good cheer
He did as the Captain said;
And that snug little tug the Ladybug
Forged many a knot ahead.

But the Captain's frown it was heavy and brown,
And heavy and brown spoke he,
"Oh, blow me blow! but we're goin' too slow—
This isn't no pace for me!

"Now, Engineer, come here, come here!
Pray what are you hired to do?
"To dust the coke and to shovel the smoke
And poultice the triple screw."

"Well, that's all right," said the Captain light,
"But it's force that yer engines need—
Go feed yer furnace with dynamite
And look for a burst o' speed."

So the Engineer, with a subtle sneer,
He handied the dynamite,
Till the gong went Clang! and the hull went Bang!
And the ship blew into the night.

And all that was left of that gallant craft
Come floating to shore last year;
'Twas half o' the crew and half o' the screw
And half o' the Engineer.

A Blow At Dingleyism.

New York World: There is crape on the door of the American Protective Tariff association. The mourners of the Home Market club are sobbing pitifully behind the drawn shutters. Low moans of anguish escape from the pallid lips of Wilbur F. Wakeman. Hot tears are coursing down the furrowed cheeks of Gin'ral Charles Henry Grosvenor. The administration has been and gone and done it.

The irreverent may jeer at the grief of the stand-patters over the open-market order for Panama canal materials, but it is a very real grief nevertheless, and ought to be respected. When the government of the United States brutally refuses to be held up by its own tariff-fattened manufacturers it is setting a most pernicious example to its citizens. In fact, the stand-patters may justly charge the federal government with inciting a revolt against the Dingley schedules.

Certain sons of Belial in Washington who sympathize with the Taft order are reported by the Tribune as saying that steel rails for the Panama railroad, which would cost $33 a ton here, can be purchased abroad for $20 a ton, and that they will be made by the same company in either case. This is only another way of saying that the Steel trust would charge the government $13 a ton more than it charges its foreign customers. Last fall the pool was selling rails delivered at England ports for $22 a ton, while the domestic price was $28. If the government were restricted to the home market in buying rails for the Panama railway it would have to pay any price the pool saw fit to demand.

According to Noses.

Philadelphia Bulletin: Have you heard of the science of rhinology, otherwise the study of noses?

Here are some of the conclusions reached by its devotees:

Thick and fat noses denote material instincts.

Turned-up noses bespeak vanity.

Wide nostrils are a sign of strength.

Small nostrils indicate weakness.

Large noses betoken intelligence.

The eagle nose shows a firm, strong will.

The pointed nose and chin in conjunction proclaim general wickedness.

Certainly the most interesting nose is the cogitative, for it expands with thought, which comes, according to rhinology, or the science of nose-reading, from reflection.

While the ideal of physical beauty remains, as it has always been, the classic Greek nose.

FOR MEN ONLY.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: Men ought to know that—

A woman is afraid to ride a horse for fear she will fall off; afraid to ride in the cars for fear of a collision; afraid to go on a boat for fear it will sink; but she is never afraid to get married, which is ten times more hazardous than all three combined.

When a girl marries a man to save him she generally loses herself.

If the Lord had commanded Eve to eat the apple instead of forbidding her to partake thereof, our first parents would still be in the Garden of Eden.

If it were not for the fact that the Bible states that Solomon was a wise man and possessed 500 wives, more married men would believe the Scriptures than they do now.

Women are much closer observers than men; they can see beauties in a pudgy, red-faced, bald-headed baby that men are utterly unable to discover.

Nobody but a woman can make persons feel awfully uncomfortable by simply being "nice" to them.

Woman's inhumanity to woman beats man's inhumanity to man a thousand miles.

When a woman can really afford to purchase fine raiment she no longer enjoys wearing it.

A man always holds a good hand when he clasps five feminine fingers.

Some Range Amenities.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: The "red-tongued orator of the Mesaba" may be good, if it is meaningless. But our old friend Claude Atkinson, who loves us so dearly, must remember that tongues of healthy men are always red, while bilious, white-livered knockers are always found with that organ coated a dirty white with streaks of yellow. Mr. Atkinson of Hibbing can doubtless tell whether there is a tongue of the latter kind in this town.—Hon. Patrick Ellerd Dowling, statesman, the red-tongued orator of the Mesaba, in the Eveleth Star, his paper.

Yep. Quite a bunch of 'em here, and when Paddy's in town his feet tracks always lead right into the middle of the bunch. Paddy should not get so all-fired mad because of well-meaning criticism of his spectacular and vainglorious flutters in the state legislature. Paddy is a public servant—not worth much, to be honest about it—and we are one of his valued and admiring constituents, and are therefore well within our rights when we criticise his public misdeeds. And besides, we thought that "silent contempt" racket was another of his "fake" grandstand plays. It was. Now, we shall not play any more if Paddy is going to get mad and slobber all over his shirt front. We will be able to prove, easily, that he is a "fake" without any of his assistance, and we want our glory undimmed and without meddlesome interference by a person not qualified to judge, even of himself, or see his own failings.

After the Struggle.

Philadelphia Record: The wife of a well-known Western senator is a Southern woman who was married to the senator late in life. While still a young girl she left her native state and came North to live, but from time to time she would revisit her old home.

On one of these occasions shortly before her marriage she happened to meet the old colored "mammy" who had been her nurse, and who was vastly surprised to find that "Miss Mary" was still unwedded.

"Lan', Miss Ma'y," she exclaimed, "ain't yo' married yit?"

"No, not yet, Aunt Sally," was the answer.

"My, my! Who'd a-thought it? An' yit," she mused, determined to soften this disgrace, "aftah all, dey does say dat ol' maids has de happies' life; dat is, aftah dey quits struggln'."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Sauk Center Herald: An ignorant honest official that can neither be bulldozed or bought is of more worth to his constituents than the smartest man in the country if he is corrupt or without backbone.

Madison Independent-Press: What is the secret of Japan's success? Work, work, work. Rich or poor, every young man in Japan has but one thing to do and that is work, work, work.

Bemidji Sentinel: The beef trust seems to have made a success of having government specialists see only those things they desired to have seen when the plants and books have been opened for inspection.

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: Those in a position to know say that the recent rains have caused the crop of gubernatorial candidates to sprout considerably, and already an abundant harvest is assured; still there is always the possibility that a large part of this kind of crop will not ripen. The crop will not be closely investigated for some months yet to come.

Madison Independent-Press: The Northfield News is beating the tom tom and crying with a loud voice that the railroads are about to organize a new party, a party that will look to their interests in season and out of season, first, last and all the time. This is probably a case of "seeing things" as it would be far less expensive for the railroad interests to continue the practice of using the old parties to accomplish their ends.

Sauk Center Herald: A newspaper is the cheapest messenger you can employ to tell the people that you have bargains to offer.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: We fear that Bro. Charley Mitchell of the Fairmont News is not happy. He may remember that while holding two remunerative offices he turned his back on the men who gave them to him, in the effort to grasp another one with a better salary. We are of course sorry that he failed in this venture, and lost what he already held, but with such a record he is hardly in position to question the motives of men who were actuated by principle and least of all he the right to charge any other man in this wide, wide world with inconsistency. Charley is a good fellow and we like him, but he is no Golden Rule.

Albert Lea Standard: It is claimed the new census will show that Minnesota has a population of two millions. And that is not the best of it—there is room for two million more. Grand and surpassing land is Minnesota.

A Trifle Unconventional.

New York Tribune: An eccentric farmer near Highland, Kan., was married the other night. "Do you," said the preacher, "take this woman to be your wedded wife, to love and to cherish in sickness and health, for better, for worse, for rich or for poor, until death do you part?" There was an awkward pause. Then the bridegroom finally replied, "Them's the calculations."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It is easier to get into public life than to stay there.

When a man can support his family it is a sign that he is no genius.

Some men are so lucky that when they lose their purses there was never anything in them.

There is a lot of difference between being married in your honeymoon to the girl you love and all the rest of your life to her family.

Paw.

When biscuits are light and coffee just right,
And the bull purp behaves like a saint,
Paw never heard a-remarkin' a word,
But my, how he kicks when they ain't!
When the sun's shinin' clear, and the birds holler cheer,
And the grass wears a new coat of paint,
Paw will not admit they are purty and fit,
But my, how he kicks if they ain't!
And that's what I say if he tried a new way,
I wouldn't make any complaint,
If paw would just yell when a thing is done well
And not say a thing when it ain't.

SESSIONS OPEN

Congregational Conference at Plymouth Church, West Duluth.

Rev. H. O. Hannum and Rev. Alex. Milne Are the Speakers.

Rev. Alexander Milne, as registrar of the Duluth conference of Congregational churches, opened the initial meeting of that body at Plymouth Congregational church last night, in the absence of W. S. Woodbridge, the moderator. Rev. Herman Obenhaus, pastor of Hope Congregational church of Superior, conducted the praise service that opened the meeting. Rev. F. A. Sumner of Minneapolis, who was to have delivered the opening address last night could not be present, but will be heard today.

The audience was not large last evening and those who stayed away missed two of the finest addresses given on an occasion of this kind, that Duluth has heard for some time. The first speaker was Rev. H. O. Hannum of Superior. His subject was "The Dynamic of Christianity," one which in its very title breathed the spirit of the Twentieth century, and its subject matter carried out this impression. Mr. Hannum spoke of this as the dynamic age. He mentioned the tremendous strides in science, in art, religion, social problems and other forces that go to make up and move life. At the bottom of it all he said, is Christ, the dynamic force who moves everything.

Rev. Mr. Hannum said that there was never a time in the affairs of men when all forces seemed to be striving to reach the truth as they are today. Scientific research is being pushed more strongly than ever to make clear certain conditions of life and the reason for things. The various ideas in regard to social conditions, Rev. Mr. Hannum regards as encouraging and detrimental to human progress that there should be such a large number of different teachings and beliefs as to social conditions, such as socialism in its various forms and other social and political ideas. Rev. Mr. Hannum takes issue with those who think this condition discouraging. He says that the very fact there are so many so-called solutions offered is an indication that never before in the history of the world have there been so many using their thoughts and energies in trying to bring about a solution for social conditions and the betterment of mankind.

In religion, Rev. Mr. Hannum said there are four dynamic forces which lead to live better. The first is the appreciated weakness of humanity and the inherent thirst for a living God. The second is the boundless hope that springs eternal in the human breast for greater things than life itself. The third dynamic force, Rev. Mr. Hannum finds is the fact that the Christian religion is not confined to any particular creed or system of ethics, but is a Great Personality, namely, Christ. The fact that there are so many creeds and the speaker believed to be a good indication, that many are trying to find the right way. The teaching of the Christian religion, said the speaker, should be by showing how to live, not by merely stating the theory of how to live. Therein lies one great value of Christ's life on earth. He showed men how to live and that is what all of his followers and disciples should do.

Rev. Mr. Hannum said, in the fourth place, that the dynamic for right living is found in the hearts of humans and one does not necessarily need to go back to Christ to find it although Christ is the great dynamic force that moves things in the right direction. Men at heart are disposed to live rightly as is testified by the fact that men for ages have organized for proper government.

Rev. Mr. Hannum closed with urging Christians to teach the doctrines of Christ by living them. That, he said, is the best way to teach and will have more influence in a community than all of the sermons that could be preached.

Rev. Alexander Milne, preached the annual sermon of the conference taking this verse from the sixth chapter of Matthew: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and its righteousness and all of these things shall be added unto you." He urged that the finding of the kingdom of God and the secret of right living is first and important and the affairs of every day life are of only secondary importance and will take their natural place in life, but that first of all each one should learn right living and practice it. He said that he believes men may be unconscious Christians without ever having made a profession of faith. A man who is living and doing the things that Christ wants him to do is as good a Christian as the man who has publicly declared his belief in Christ and joined the church. Said the speaker:

"Christ said: 'Other sheep I have which are not of this fold,' evidently meaning those who live the life He wanted them to live no matter of what creed or sect they belonged.'

Dr. Milne said that men are altogether too prone to consider things great because they are large. The only great things, he said, are those which benefit humanity. Their magnitude does not make them great. He mentioned the recent battle of Mukden.

"Men tell us," said he, 'that the battle of Mukden was the greatest battle of modern times. Maybe that is true. But I fear that those who say it is the greatest, take into consideration only the number of men on each side, the number killed and wounded, the amount of ammunition used and the completeness of the victory. These things will not make the battle of Mukden the greatest battle of modern times in the eyes of the historian. The only thing that will make it great is the result so far as benefit to humanity is concerned."

The speaker quoted John Ruskin on youth, reminding the young that that above all ages youth is not the time where carelessness should be the feeling. That is the time for doing earnest and only the death-bed is the place where one should be free from care. Right living from the youth up will render one careless and yet confident of the future on the death bed.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL SAYS ORRINE CURES THE LIQUOR HABIT.

The following statement from F. W. Palmer, Public Printer of the United States government in Washington, will bring hope of relief to thousands who suffer from the most horrible curse that afflicts humanity. He writes:

"My attention was recently called to one of the employes of this office who had, through the habit of intoxicating drink, become so inefficient as to be on the verge of dismissal.

"Six weeks' treatment with Orrine not only cured the appetite, but practically all the signs of dissipation disappeared. It is a pleasure to acknowledge the value of a remedy which brings results so beneficial."

Orrine is a guaranteed cure for the liquor habit. Take or give it without publicity or loss of time. It can be administered secretly in tea, coffee or food, for which purpose No. 1 should be bought. Orrine No. 2, in pill form, is for patients who wish to be cured of this terrible habit. The price is $1 per box. Ask us about Orrine—we do not hesitate to recommend Orrine as the best and only cure for the liquor habit. F. W. Kugler, 108 West Superior street, Duluth.

DENNISON TRIAL

At Des Moines Will Have Leading Politicians as Witnesses.

"Policy King" Confident That He Will Be Acquitted.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 24.—The trial of Tom Dennison of Omaha, which began at Red Oak yesterday before Judge Macey, promises to be sensational from the fact that many prominent politicians will be placed on the witness stand and asked to tell under oath the truth of Iowa political scandals. Among those subpoenaed in the case are Secretary L. M. Shaw, Mayor Moores and Editor Rosewater of Omaha, H. G. McMillan of Cedar Rapids, former chairman of the Republican state central committee, State Senator John C. Hipwell of Davenport, John N. Baldwin, attorney of Council Bluffs, Fred H. Gaston, associate editor of the Sioux City Tribune, and clerks in the office of Governor Cummins, who are conversant with the records of the Schercliffe pardon.

The chief witness is Frank Schercliffe of Des Moines. Schercliffe has made a confession implicating Tom Dennison of Omaha in the robbery of W. L. Pollock of New York city on a train near Missouri Valley Nov. 4, 1892. Schercliffe was tried and convicted of the robbery of diamonds valued at $15,000. He was sentenced in 1893 in Harrison county, and it was noticeable that Dennison, who at that time and since has held Omaha politics almost in the hollow of his hand, took a great interest in the trial.

No sooner had Schercliffe been taken to the penitentiary than an effort was begun to get him pardoned. The matter was first taken up with Governor Francis M. Drake, who refused to consider it. In 1900 when Governor Shaw was inducted into office an effort began in earnest to get Schercliffe out of the penitentiary. The late Judge Hubbard and Attorneys Baldwin and McMillan were most active in behalf of Schercliffe. Congressman "Dave" Mercer of Omaha, who, it is said, had often been under great political obligation to Dennison, sent a personal request to Shaw to grant the pardon.

After Schercliffe had been released from prison he went to Omaha and made his home with Dennison. Even this fact might not have excited so much interest in Iowa but for the publication in 1903 of the famous "bill of expenses" which Dennison alleged he had incurred to get Schercliffe pardoned. This statement was included in a letter to Homer Morris at Marshalltown, Iowa. Morris is a relative of Schercliffe, and gave the letter to the public. In the letter Dennison said that it had cost $14,850 to get Schercliff's parole. This bill of expense is now in the hands of the state, and Attorney Fallon of Logan, who is prosecuting the case for the state, assisted by E. E. Thomas of Omaha, lawyer for the Omaha Civic federation, will call it into evidence. Among the chief items in the statement are the following:

Paid to Schercliffe in the fall of 1892 when Pollock was robbed	$3,075 00
Paid to defend Schercliffe on trial	2,847 50
Paid to Charley Prince, a notorious crook killed two years later in Quincy while trying to escape from officers	425 00
Paid to "Hooker" (unknown crook)	275 00

According to the statement, the balance of the money was practically all spent in securing the parole, including $867 to Senator Hipwell of Davenport, $2,500 to United States District Attorney H. G. McMillan, $400 to help Congressman Mercer of Omaha "so he would see the governor," $200 cash to take niggers across from Omaha to Council Bluffs to help Gear in the Cummins-Gear senatorial fight."

It is noted in conection with the last item that National Committeeman E. E. Hart was pressing the Gear fight at the time the "niggers" are said to have been run over the river. Hart is now on Dennison's bond.

The records of the pardon clerk at the statehouse will be brought in to show that many politicians used their influence with Governor Shaw to secure Schercliffe's pardon, and Secretary Garrett of Governor Cummins' office will be called upon to testify concerning the exhibits.

Dennison is confident he will be acquitted. He has rented an entire hotel at Red Oak for the accommodation of his lawyers and "friends." His attorneys will claim an absolute alibi.

A sensational part of the evidence will be the confession of Schercliffe before the Harrison county grand jury. Schercliffe declared that he had been told by Dennison to commit the robbery, and outlined in detail the plans which he had carried out. He said that he had gone to Davenport with the booty after leaving Pollock for dead. Recently it has been discovered that Tom Dennison was in Davenport Nov. 9, 1902, just four days after Pollock was robbed.

STATES ONLY HAVE POWER

To Regulate and Control Insurance Companies.

Washington, May 24.—It has developed that Secretary Metcalf of the department of commerce and labor has made a careful inquiry into the question of federal control of the insurance companies.

The secretary is handicapped by the fact that insurance is not interstate commerce any more than banking is interstate commerce, and, even if congress were to define it as such, it is not believed the courts would uphold the definition. The conclusion has been reached consequently that the states themselves must regulate insurance.

As a result of the view adopted by Metcalf, it may be stated positively the president will not intervene in any way in the Equitable Life Assurance society scandal.

ASCENSION DAY.

Preparations For Services For June 1 In Progress.

June 1 is Ascension day and the Episcopalians of Duluth will duly observe it. There will be meetings in all of the Episcopal churches of the city, some in the morning and others in the afternoon. In the evening a union meeting of all the Episcopal congregations of the city will be held in St. Paul's church, corner of Lake avenue and West Second street and Rev. W. J. Cordick of Superior will preach the sermon.

Christmas and Ascension day are the only special days observed in the Episcopal churches which do not necessarily fall upon a Sunday, and of these they are the most closely observed by Episcopalians. Ascension day is used by Episcopalians to get together their families and properly worship and observe the ascension of Christ.

This year quite an elaborate program of music is being arranged by Prof. A. F. M. Custance, director of St. Paul's choir.

JUDGE PARKER SAVES

Granddaughter's Hand From Permanent Mutilation.

Esopus, N. Y., May 24.—If little Mary Hall should not be compelled to go through life with a mutilated hand, it will be because of the surgical skill of her grandfather, Former Judge Alton B. Parker.

Mr. Parker and Mary were swinging on the lawn at Rosemont, when Mary's hand was caught in the swing and the third finger so crushed that it hung by a shred. Mr. Parker skillfully replaced the finger and telephoned the Rev. C. Mercer Hall, the child's father, to have a physician meet him at Kingston.

He then carried Mary to the railway station, where he walked up and down soothing her until the train came. With the child resting in his arms, the journey was made to Kingston, where Dr. Norwood redressed the hand.

GENEROUS EVANGELIST

Illustrates His Faith in Human Nature.

Chicago, May 24.—The Rev. John Lawrence, evangelist, illustrated his confidence in his fellow man Sunday night during one of his sermons at the Open Door mission.

"Will some gentleman in the audience kindly step outside and get this changed for me?" he asked, waving a $20 bill.

The request almost created a panic. In the sudden rush for the platform it was seen that every man in the room, most of them habitues of the lodging house district, was anxious to oblige the speaker. The man who reached the $20 bill first left the room precipitately, followed by cheers and groans from his disappointed competitors.

"He will return," said the Rev. John Lawrence, calmly.

"Nit," said the audience in chorus.

In three minutes the man who had seized the $20 bill returned with a $10 bill, a $5 bill and five silver dollars, which he placed in the hands of the evangelist.

"Well done, good and faithful servant," said the Rev. John Lawrence, and he gave the faithful servant the $10 bill for the faithfulness. Then he threw the rest of the money among the rest of his audience. These fought and scrambled until the possession of the $10 bill and the silver dollars had been established beyond dispute. Then they left the hall, cheering the generous evangelist.

GIRL SUES FATHER

For Damages For Striking Her With Hammer.

Indianapolis, May 24.—Miss Lulu Kagely, who has just attained her majority, has brought suit in the superior court here against her father, Fernando G. Kagely, for $10,000 damages for injuries which she alleges she inflicted upon her when she was 12 years old.

According to her story, her father struck her with a hammer and was arrested for the act, but pleaded insanity, and was afterwards committed to the insane hospital.

She claims that the injuries received at the time have wholly incapacitated her for mental or physical work, and have thus deprived her of the power of supporting herself.

COMPANY REFUSES TO EXTEND LINES

Thomas Lowry Throws Down Gauntlet to the City.

Mayor Cullum Accepts Challenge Extended By the Magnate.

Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis, the millionaire head of the Duluth Street Railway company, hurled down the gauntlet this morning at the conference held in the city council chamber in an effort to secure certain concessions from the traction company.

Mayor Cullum instantly accepted the situation, and in a brief but heated speech informed the street railway president that if he would not grant the concessions asked for, a way would be found to compel him to do so.

With innocence that was bland-like and mild, Mr. Lowry informed the people present at the gathering that he did not know the Woodland, Lakeside and West Duluth lines were operated under franchises that had been granted to other companies, and that he did not know he was violating any provisions of the franchises.

Then in a smooth, unruffled tone of voice he informed his hearers that no extensions would be built in West Duluth, or any other part of the city, at the present time, unless the company was forced to do so.

He, however, hinted that some change might be made in the Grand avenue line, which would accommodate the people along the hillside.

"The question seems to have developed into a legal proposition," he said, after the case of the city had been thoroughly and ably presented to him. "It seems we are operating our Woodland, Lester Park and West Duluth lines under separate franchises. I didn't know that we were violating any provisions of these franchises, as is claimed. I also have heard for the first time of this car license fee for the West Duluth lines. I will have the company's attorneys examine into it."

"There is no legal proposition about the extensions," said City Attorney Bert Fesler.

"I am frank to say," replied Mr. Lowry, "that I see no necessity for extending the line to the park at the present time. As far as building the line to build up the property out there, we won't do it unless we are compelled to."

"I would like to know when we may expect an answer on the other questions," said R. C. Mitchell.

"Within two weeks."

"We have been carrying on a diplomatic correspondence with the company for many months," said Mayor Cullum, coming forward from the seat which he had occupied throughout the meeting, and speaking for the first time. "In looking for information we have been referred from the conductor to the car starter, and from him to the roadmaster, and from his to the superintendent, and from him to one director after another, and then to the president, who was in Europe. We have spent three or four months in trying to get a hearing.

"Now we people here in Duluth have come to think that we have graduated from the position of a little suburban village and are worthy of recognition. We want a man here who can decide questions for the company without compelling us to spend months in arranging for a conference. If you haven't got a man here whom you can trust to decide such questions, we would like to have you get some man whom you can.

"We propose to have these things if we have to fight for them, and when your attorneys examine into this matter and you give us your answer, we would like to have you tell us just exactly what you will do and what you won't, so that we may know what we will have to make you do."

"Any matter of operation is decided in Duluth," replied Mr. Lowry. "All matters which require expenditures of more capital are referred to us."

The meeting then adjourned without further discussion, and matters were left in this status.

City Attorney Bert Fesler acted as chairman of the meeting, and after calling it to order asked H. H. Phelps, representing the West Duluth Commercial club, to present the West Duluth people's claims.

"We don't complain of the service," said Mr. Phelps. "The trouble is you don't reach the people. Having an exclusive franchise, as you do, you owe it to the people to extend your lines. There is no other part of the city where people are left to walk as they are in West Duluth, and that line is the best paying line you have. The fact is the company never built one foot of line in West Duluth that it was not compelled to build by an order of the court. That is what we complain of. We would be glad to ride in a bobtail car or a wheelbarrow or anything, if you will build these extensions."

W. J. Holmes was the next speaker.

"I have not much to add," he said. "Last year the city built bridges costing $6,000 so the line could be extended along Grand avenue. The bridges are still there, but we have no cars."

M. M. Clark, president of the West Duluth Commercial club, and Alderman Chesney also spoke along the same lines.

"Fairmount park is one of the finest in the city or even in the state," said Alderman Chesney. "The extension would be a paying proposition for the company.

Aldermen Getchel, Barnes and Haven also spoke briefly, covering much the same ground that had been touched on by Mr. Phelps.

Mr. Fesler then called on Senator Laybourn to present the case of the Woodland people.

"The people of Woodland don't ask for much," said Mr. Laybourn. "They don't want any more frequent service or any extensions that will cost money. All they ask for is a different system. We are now compelled to take a small car from Hunter's park, making teh change in all kinds of weather. We are entitled to a service with large cars to the end of the line and that is all we ask."

L. B. Lum was the next speaker.

"My talk will be chiefly a statement of testimony," said L. B. Lum. "A number of years ago a number of men, including myself, were induced to purchase property in Woodland. The directors of the old Motor Line company told us it was to have the best service in the city, that they were to build fine residences out there and that it was to be the garden residence part of the city. Now after fifteen years the service, which we have had, is to be broken. It is so manifestly unfair to make a service poorer in a city that is growing, that no street railway company has ever attempted it before."

"Who built that line originally?" asked Mr. Lowry. "This management had nothing to do with the old line."

"The same people are interested in both companies," said Mr. Lum.

"Duluth has the best cars of any city five times its size in this country," said Mr. Lowry. "It takes three times the power to run a large car as it does to run one of the small ones. It is absolutely impossible, with the power we have now, to run any more big cars. The power company has agreed to furnish us power by next year.

"Concerning the West Duluth matter, there is nothing on earth to take the people down to that park. In regard to the extension which we were urged to make on Grand avenue, I would like to ask Mr. Phelps if it is not a fact that the street is not graded."

"That is not so," replied Mr. Phelps rising and shaking his finger at the street railway magnate. "That was one of your defenses when the suit was tried in court, and the court held that it was not so."

"Well we will abide by the decision of the court," said Mr. Lowry.

The chairman here called the meeting to order, saying that the presentation of the city's case should be completed.

R. C. Mitchell was the next speaker.

"Mr. Lowry attempts to escape responsibility for anything Mr. Mendenhall has done," he said.

Here Mr. Mendenhall interrupted.

"I had no connection with the management of the Motor Line company, except that I had the misfortune to own four or five shares," he said.

"Yes," said Mr. Lum, "but weren't Mendenhall & Hoopes the agents for the land held by the company, and didn't they make the most glowing promises of what was to be done?"

"And for God's sake," continued Mr. Mitchell, "don't tell us you haven't the power to run the big cars up the hill. When you run the snow plow up that hill through two feet of snow you can run one of the big cars, especially as you you claim it will be empty."

Mr. Fesler here interrupted the proceedings again.

"While the city officials are indifferent as to how broad this discussion becomes," he said, "with the city officials it is simply a question of making the corporation now holding the franchise live up to that franchise. The question of who constitutes the present company or who constituted the previous companies is immaterial."

John Jenswold was then called upon to present the case of the Lakeside people. He called attention the fact that this line is being operated under a franchise granted to the Lakeside Street Railway company, which calls for a fifteen minute service with the best type of cars in use on the other lines.

"We are willing to make concessions," he said. "Instead of the fifteen-minute service you are required to give us, give us the twenty-minute service and we will be satisfied."

"It seems to me the complaints of the Woodland people are well founded," said Alderman Watson S. Moore. "The company should realize that it has never lived up to either the spirit, much less the letter of its franchise. It has always been met in a spirit of fairness by the city in any concessions asked by it whereas it has never yet dealth fairly with the city.

"Other businesses advertise the goods they have for sale, and push their trade. But the company has done nothing to make it attractive for people to ride, or induce them to use the company's lines."

"I would just like to say a word to the street railway men," he continued. 'One year ago we met with the directors of the company. We all understood a straight promise to build to Fairmount Park. It seems Mr. Goodrich understood the matter differently. We would like to have whatever statements are made by the representatives of the company now, made in such manner that we can understand them clearly and rely upon them."

Mr. Lowry showed no intention of rising, but sat sonversing with Mr. Goodrich.

"If they do not desire to be heard," said Mr. Fesler, "a motion to adjourn is in order."

Mr. Lowry was on his feet instantly, stating that he had thought there were still some speakers to be heard. He then made the statement given and after Mayor Cullum had replied, the meeting adjourned.

As the matter now stands, the company refuses to build any extensions in West Duluth. The decision on the improvements desired in the Woodland and Lester Park services will be made known within two weeks.

When that time has expired the council will probably direct the city attorney to commence proceedings against the company to compel it to sprinkle the streets between its lines, to place large cars on every line in the city, and to pay the $10 license fee for all cars operated under the West Duluth franchise for seven years back.

MALLORY THE MAN

Commercial Club Names Him to Run For School Board.

Delegation Named to Attend the Street Railway Conference.

At its special meeting last evening the West Duluth Commercial club unanimously selected George J. Mallory as candidate for the school board to succeed H. H. Phelps. J. A. Scott, W. B. Getchell, J. J. Frey and O. S. Olson were appointed a committee to see to the preparation and signing of the petition to put Mr. Mallory on the ticket.

Another matter which came up was the discussion which took place this morning between citizens and Thomas Lowry regarding street car service. The matter which the club is mostly interested in is the extension of the street railway line to Fairmount park and an extension of a hillside line to Norton avenue.

The three aldermen from West Duluth, namely L. A. Barnes, W. B. Getchell and William Chesney, together with H. H. Phelps and W. J. Holmes have had this matter in hand, but last night were reinforced by the appointment of P. H. Martin, O. S. Olson, J. J. Frey, A. Hendricksen, W. H. Kiltin, J. A. Scott and M. M. Clark These gentlemen attended the conference this morning

CURO'S MISHAP.

Has Hard Time Getting to West Duluth.

J. A. Curo has bought a 27-foot launch from some people uptown and had a hard time getting it down to West Duluth on Sunday. He started from uptown at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and reached West Duluth at nearly 9 o'clock although the boat is supposed to go at the rate of twelve miles an hour.

The engine played out on him and while he was drifting around in the bay, the life-saving crew, much to Curo's chagrin, thought the boat was helpless and went out to rescue the occupants. The crew dragged the boat to shore and there the engine was fixed and Mr. Curo and his companion proceeded on their way.

YOUNG JOHN D. IS SHOCKED

By Charles M. Schwab's Advice to Have Good Time.

New York, May 24.—"You want to brace up, John. Have a good time. Let other people save their own souls for a time.

This greeting, accompanied by a hearty slap on the back, was made by Charles M. Schwab upon meeting John D. Rockefeller, Jr., while abroad.

And young Rockefeller, with a pained expression, and in a hurt tone, replied:

"Why, Mr. Schwab!"

The pale face of the son of America's wealthiest man caused Mr. Schwab to advise him to abandon his hard work for a time and seek more recreation.

It was said that Mr. Schwab had been greatly shocked by young Mr. Rockefeller's changed appearance. The latter returned from abroad recently, still suffering from the effects of illness, and looked thinner and paler than he was when he first went away. It was this that caused Mr. Schwab to proffer the young millionaire the advice to "brace up," which, while made in a jovial manner, was really full of meaning from Mr. Schwab's point of view.

Mr. Rockefeller has shaved off his Vandyke beard.

THOUSANDS OF MEN LOCKED OUT

New York, May 24.—Between 10,000 and 12,000 men belonging to the Rockmen's and Excavators' union have been locked out by the Contractors' Protective association, in this city. By tomorrow it is expected that the lockout will be extended to the rest of the 76,000 members. The workmen already locked out were employed on more than 100 contracts in various parts of the city.

For several weeks the men have been threatening to strike for various concessions, and the contractors finally decided to force matters, apparently with the object of putting an end to the union. Their decision to lock-out the diggers came when the Teamsters' union agreed to stand by an agreement they have with the association. The lock-out will stop work for the time on hundreds of buildings in the city, where excavating is just beginning, but it will have no effect on buildings where work has gone beyond the foundation stage.

The receiver took full charge of the company today.

THE RUSH ABROAD

Every Ocean Liner Leaving New York Filled With Passengers.

Very Large Sums In the Aggregate Carried to Europe.

New York, May 24.—The rush of our people to Europe is in full tide, every ocean liner leaving this port being filled with passengers, from first-class cabins to steerage. The Caronia, which grounded in the lower bay on Wednesday last, finally got off the bank in good condition, and at 4 o'clock Thursday statred for Queenstown and Liverpool. She carried fully 1,800 passengers, and her enforced delay was borne very patiently by the throng upon her decks.

Bankers in this city state that the European travelers are taking larger sums abroad than ever before known, and many millions of dollars in our coin will be spent on the continent and in the British Isle before Oct. 1, when the late stayers generally depart for their homes in America.

This money is not carried to Europe by the wealthy or the fairly-off classes alone, but thousands of German, Scotch, Irish and Italian trades and working people now arrange to visit their former homes during the summer months, and very large sums in the aggregate are carried over to Europe by those people, not for expensive travel, but to bestow upon their relatives, who very often need the relief brought them from the United States.

It is largely the return with money of these successful trades and working people that recruits and fills up the lists of new immigrants for the United States. Those who have remained listen to the stories of advancement and prosperity told by their friends who have been to the United States. They see them better clothed than prior to leaving home; they behold the shining coins that glisten in their hands or hear them jingle in their pockets; those who have come back gleefully relate their real or imaginary good fortunes as the case may be, and the households of friends, neighbors and relatives are soon aflame to go to the land across the sea and enjoy the good times there.

The exodus, therefore, of the additional thousands from America for summer vacations in Europe is absolutely certain to bring hundreds of thousands of imigrants to the United States next year. There is another very noticeable feature of ocean travel for the past three years, and that is the unusually heavy travel from Europe to this country and return of the wealthy, the enterprising, the scientists, the pleasure-loving public of European nations. It has become a part of the education of the leading business men of the very best classes to make the tour of the United States, and this fact is, to some degree, a recognition of our growing importance in the political, professional and business world. English, Irish and Scotch especially frankly admit that they come to this country in order to acquire information from our manufacturers in many lines that they concede we excell their own people. Germans and French are much more loth to admit that we can surpass them in any lines of manufactures, or, indeed, in any lines of trade, or in professional or mechanical training.

The French and German manufacturers of automobiles have always maintained that their machines were far superior to those made in America, and this claim was confirmed in the years prior to 1905 by the purcahse of French and German machines by hundreds of Americans in those years. The French and Germans have this year failed to place their machines in the United States in any number approximating the sales of former years, and now the trade journals of those countries are calling the attention of the automobile manufacturers to the fact that the American manufacturers are this year turning out mchines fully up to the standard of any made in the world, and that the American machines are specially built for work upon the roads such as are to be traveled in the United States, while the European built machines are only adapted to the smooth highways to be found in Europe.

These journals call upon the manufacturers abroad to study the conditions of the roads in the United States and to construct machines capable of traveling them under all circumstances and plainly state that their trade in the United States is forever gone unless this is done. The loss to European manufacturers in the automobile business is not only gain to the automobile manufacturers of the United States but to the country at large, for it keeps the money in this country and contributes to the increase of our own trade and the employment of our own labor, instead of going to swell the revenues of France and Germany.

The handwriting in the automobiling business is on the wall, and can be plainly read by those who run. Within the next two years the importation of foreign machines will come to an end, for our own manufacturers will be building the best machines of the world, and it can be predicted safely and certainly that before five years elapse our United States built machines will be favorites in the British Isles and upon the entire continent, unless a German tariff prohibits their sale in that empire.

The majority of the automobile manufacturers have their salesrooms in this city, and active agents busy soliciting orders in the leading cities of the country, and each and all of them tell the same story as to orders for machines months ahead of ability to supply them. It would seem that the business is but yet in its infancy, and that the demand for powerful machines at reasonable prices will be so great for many, many years to come that it will give employment to hundreds of thousands of people, and prove an exceedingly profitable business for those well equipped to build the machines. The bulk of the business will not be in the class built for racing, but in the classes of vehicles required for business uses and family purposes. Express companies are adopting them generally for transporting their consignments, department stores and other concerns, for delivery purposes, are rapidly putting them into action.

In many cities on certain streets where there are no car lines the automobile for passenger traffic are found convenient, serviceable and profitable. The latest designs of our American manufacturers are powerful machines of light weight and great strength, comparatively noiseless, easily controlled and quickly started and stopped, indeed, so simply managed as they require very little experience to successfully operate them. These are the purchasers desire or market in the United States for the heavy, complicated, expensive machines made abroad. Millions of dollars will be invested in the automobile during the coming years, for many thousands of these vehicles will be demanded and purchased by the progressive people of the United States and foreign countries.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

On Girl Who Was Dragged Two Miles.

Westchester, Pa., May 24.—Miss Annie Thesklison, aged 16, years, daughter of Kuntz Thesklison of Chaddsford is alive after being dragged over a high stone wall and along two miles of rough country road by the foot by a runaway horse. She is terribly cut and bruised and still unconscious, but is expected to recover.

The girl had a long rope attached to the horse, which she was leading about the yard at her home, permitting it to eat grass, when it became frightened. It made a dash for a high wall beside the road and plunged over, the girl's foot becoming entangled in the rope. She was dragged over the wall and at breakneck speed the horse ran two miles to the home of a former owner in Chaddsford village, where it collided with a wagon and stopped.

Every stitch of the girl's clothing was torn off, except the corset.

HUSBAND TO TESTIFY

Against Wife Who Fraudulently Got Pension.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 24.—The trial of Ella P. Williams before Federal Judge Anderson this week, on the charge of fraudulently obtaining a pension, promises to develop a story of unusual interest. Samuel J. Williams, former husband of Mrs. Mrs. Williams, whom she has seen but once in forty-one years, and whom, she says, she has mourned as dead for twenty-four years, is coming from a New England state to testify against her.

Their marriage took place at the breaking out of the Civil war. They resided in Virginia then and Williams enlisted on the side of the Union. At the close of the war they lived together a year, when, she says, he disappeared. Not until sixteen years afterward did she hear from him, and then a letter came, she says, asking her to join him in Boston. She says he only kept her a week, telling her he could not support her and buying her a ticket to their former home.

In 1889 she says she obtained a certificate from the city board of health in Boston stating that Williams had died. On this certificate she obtained a pension. Last year, however, Williams made application for pension and it was discovered that the woman, claiming to be his widow, was drawing the money. An investigation was made and she was indicted by the grand jury here. Williams claims, it is said, that he was divorced from her in 1866, and that he never saw her afterward.

CURED OF ECZEMA

Of Many Years Standing by

D. D. D. Prescription

Davenport, Iowa, August 25, 1904.

Mr. H. A. Emeis, Druggist, City.

Dear Sirs: I consider it but just to write you about the wonderful cure effected in my severe case of Eczema of several years standing, by the D. D. D. Prescription which I procured of you some time ago. For a long time I have suffered untold torture from Eczema and have tried all kinds of physicians and patent remedies with no result. Finally I was induced by you to try D. D. D. and I did so. I was very agreeably surprised by the improvement the first bottle made, and I kept on using it freely until now I am glad to say that I am thoroughly cured, and have no trace of it for a month past. It certainly is a wonderful remedy and I unhesitatingly recommend it to anyone suffering from Eczema or any other skin disease. I have recommended it to one of my friends and he tells me that it has completely cured him also.

Yours truly, MAX E. OCHS.

In the face of the many genuine testimonial letters we have presented to the readers of this paper it would seem needless for us to advance any further argument to prove that D. D. D. Prescription will cure any and all cases of Eczema or skin disease. The treatment is scientific and logical. Attack the parasites in the skin directly. Don't dose the stomach and upset the entire system. We have cured, we do cure, we can cure any case of skin trouble or we will refund every cent. Get a $1.00 bottle today, and today your cure is assured.

TIPPING A CRIME

Editor Bok Says the System Stamps Out Real Courtesy.

Habit of Feeing One of New York's Greatest Evils.

New York, May 24.—The question of tips in New York is exciting much discussion among visitors in the metropolis. Perhaps the most aggressive tip hater is Edward Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. He has turned the grasping hotel employe on his spit in the Philadelphia publication from time to time, but his latest outburst dresses down the metropolis and its residents in one of its own publications.

"The custom of tipping servants and other employes," he says, "is rapidly spreading from New York to other parts of the country. It is becoming a serious nuisance. It is simply a form of graft. There can be no doubt of its increasing evils, due to the cruelly blatant position which money holds in New York.

"I lived in New York eighteen years ago, and now that I have been away from the city for a few years I can go back and see things in proportions not always revealed to those who view them too close at hand. It is the influence of the newly rich in New York that is exaggerating the tipping nuisance so that it threatens to become a national pague. New York is the worst of all American cities in that respect. It is the center and exemplar of senseless and vulgar extravagance."

Mr. Bok sat in a spacious room trimmed in dark woods, with a fringe of green plants at the windows, softening the view of Philadelphia's roofs. The click of countless typewriters sounded through the quiet building. In spite of the fact that his office is the seat of enchantment for the American feminine world, and the confluence of the quiet currents of philosophy from tobacco hating womankind, Mr. Bok smoked a cigaret.

He was born in Holland. He is 41 years old, and it is not so hard for him to live in Philadelphia because he passed his boyhood in Brooklyn. When he came to America he could not speak English.

"It is all well enough to talk about tips as signs of generosity, but the plain truth of the matter is that the tip in New York is becoming a charge upon the public, from which it cannot escape easily, and it is getting to be so elsewhere. The tip today is a bribe by which one person hopes to get better service than another. In many cases it is pure blackmail.

"As I said before, New York is the worst offender in the country. It is a mistake to attribute the heavy tips demanded in New York to the influence of foreigners. Foreigners hold that sort of thing in contempt. It is we, ourselves, who are doing it—the vulgar, ostentatious rich and the thousands who go there to spend their money.

"New York is setting the pace for America. Where does it lead? Nowhere. It stamps out all courtesy. I don't know a more boorish city than New York. This regard for the value of money, springing from a desire for display, has already revealed itself in the gross morals of the street life of New York. A woman cannot walk in the day time on portions of Broadway without being stared at in the most offensive and suggestive manner by men. This is simply a reflection of the coarse spirit bred by pomp and money.

"When I go to New York and walk upper Broadway at night I find the blaze of light on everything hard and sordid and cold. Everybody is reaching out for money, giving not the slightest courtesy unless it is paid for. Fortunately this cannot be said to the same degree of other American cities—Boston, for instance, or even Philadelphia. One finds at least some natural courtesy and moderation a characteristic of the normal American outside of New York.

"There was a time in New York when a 10-cent tip would satisfy the waiter in a restaurant or the hotel porter. That tip grew in time to be 25 cents. Today the waiter or porter expects 50 cents for the most moderate service.

"The example of New York has been copied on most great lines of travel. You pay the Pullman porter 25 cents for doing what you have already paid for in your ticket. Rather you used to pay 25 cents, but now you are expected to pay 50 cents.

"In the dining car you are expected to pay the waiter 25 cents or 50 cents for walking perhaps twenty steps to bring your meals, otherwise he will neglect you when he sees you again.

"If you want to get a decent seat in a theater in New York you must pay 50 cents more than the price of the ticket to some agent in a hotel or be blackmailed by speculators on the sidewalk out of 50 cents or a dollar."

PRESIDENT ON IMMIGRATION

Will Call Attention of Congress to the Problem.

Chicago, May 23.—Walter Wellman, in a Washington special to the Record-Herald, says:

"President Roosevelt has taken up the immigration question and is preparing to call it to the attention of congress and the country. The president believes that one of the most serious problems now confronting the American people is how to deal with the hordes of undesirable immigrants Europe is pouring upon our shores.

"During the fiscal year which ends June 30 next all immigration records will be broken. In those twelve months well on toward a million steerage passengers will have arrived in the United States, looking for homes or work. The greatest number arriving in any previous year was 857,046, during the twelve months ending June 30, 1903. For 1904 the total was 812,870 and for 1905 it will be between 900,000 and 1,000,000.

"These are appalling figures. They are the more appalling when they are analyzed and their significance more fully understood.

"They mean that in a single year there pours into the country a multitude of humble people equal to or greater than the present population of any one of the eighteen states of the Union.

"It means that if all these newcomers, poor of purse and most of them poorer yet in qualifications for citizenship, were to assemble in one place they would alone make a city exceeded in population by only New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

"It means that to every eighty men, women and children in the United States at the beginning of the year one is to be added during the twelve months from the steerage of the transatlantic steamships.

"It means an increase of about 20 per cent in the number of men in the United States whose means of livelihood is such that they are officially classed as "laborers" in the census reports—and this 20 per cent increase in a single year is reached by reckoning that only about one-half of the new arrivals will join the ranks of workers at the bottom of the industrial ladder.

"In view of these amazing facts, it is not surprising to learn that President Roosevelt has upon his desk a collection of reports bearing upon immigration which he is carefully studying with the intention of urging consideration of the problem upon congress at an early day. In the opinion of the president and his advisers, this is a problem with which the national lawmakers and the American people must wrestle, and that speedily."

POOR SHOWING OF THE BAPTIST BOOK TRADE.

St. Louis, May 23.—The annual report of the finance committee read at the Baptist convention here today showed a falling off in the book trade and a laxity in the amount of accounts. The report stated that the society's books showed unpaid accounts aggregating $98,000. The convention then adjourned sine die.

SURPRISE FOR THE POLICEMAN

Confronted By His Wife When He Overhauled Auto.

New York, May 24.—When, enveloped in a cloud of dust, a big red automobile whizzed past Bicycle Policeman John Dillon of the Westchester station, in Pelham Parkway, he quickly turned his wheel about and sped after the violators of the eight-mile-an-hour law. An exciting chase followed through the crowded park drives. The persons in the automobile, evidently unaware that a policeman was trying to overhaul them, kept up at the same merry clip. Finally, however, when the many curves in the roadway necessitated the slowing up of the automobile's machinery, Dillon, perspiring and dust-covered, rode alongside and demanded that the party halt in their reckless flight.

In the automobile, besides the chauffeur, were two women, their faces entirely concealed by heavy veils and large goggles. When the automobile came to a standstill they removed these articles, and the indignant policeman was confronted by—his wife.

"Well, John, you certainly are not going to take me to the dark, ugly police station, now are you, hubby?" she said.

"I would not love you half as much loved I not duty more," replied Dillon, sternly.

"But," entreated his wife, "you know we were not going so fast, after all."

"Well, I'll let you go this time, but you must not do it again. Possibly my timing watch was a bit too fast, anyway."

The automobile belongs to Mrs. W. C. Smith of Poplar street, Westchester. The Smiths and the Dillons are next-door neighbors, and both Mrs. Dillon and Mrs. Smith are close friends. Mrs. Smith was in the automobile with Mrs. Dillon. Mrs. Smith's husband is a brother of the late "Pittsburg Phil," once a well-known race-track man.

TERRIFIC RACE WITH DEATH.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

SLEUTHS GO ACROSS SEA

In Search For the Diamonds Missing From Tiffany's.

New York, May 24.—Coincident with the publication of the robbery of the three diamonds valued at $80,000 from Tiffany & Co. a fortnight ago there appeared advertisements in the London newspapers offering a reward of £1,000 for the return of the gems. It is likely that the offer will be duplicated in this country, now that the secrecy which had heretofore enveloped the case has been cast aside.

A representative of Tiffany's immediately after the robbery had been committed went to London to confer with the authorities of Scotland Yard, after visiting the other great European capitals.

So far as the public of this city were concerned the same seal was upon their lips as has been since first the matter was placed before Acting Inspector Stephen O'Brien, who is in charge of the detective bureau. All knowledge of the case was denied at headquarters in Mulberry street, although it had become generally known that the report was based on truth.

Nor did the city police mark the limit of the reserve that has characterized the incident since it occurred. The private agencies which have to do with the matter professed ignorance, and this, too, was the attitude maintained by the officials of the company which was robbed.

From other sources, whose authority cannot be doubted, an exact exposition of the robbery and the work that has been done since to detect the perpetrators was learned.

When the store was reopened for business on Friday, May 5, and the gems, which had been worked upon the preceding day on the sixth floor, where is located the shop in which the stones are cut, polished and mounted, were taken out of the safe for the resumption of operations, the three stones were not found.

They had been in the hands of an old and trusted employe of the house, concerning whose integrity there has never been the slightest breath of suspicion, and by him had been returned to the custodian of the valuables, whose duty it was to put them in the strong box.

After a thorough examination of the other departments had been made, amounting practically to an inventory of all the unmounted stones in the house, and there remained no doubt that the gems had been stolen, a conference of the officers and directors of the firm was hastily called and the determination was reached to lose no time in placing the matter at the hands of the authorities.

While thus far there had been no tangible evidence adduced to prove the assertion, it is declared with confidence that there is not the slightest doubt that the diamonds will sooner or later be recovered.

If the gems have been sold it is thought that they have been smuggled abroad by some one to whom they were intrusted by the robber, and who is unknown to the police, for all even remotely connected with the matter have been from the start under surveillance, and it would have been difficult for them or any of their intimates to have made the least movement to which suspicion might be attached without immediately bringing the police down on them.

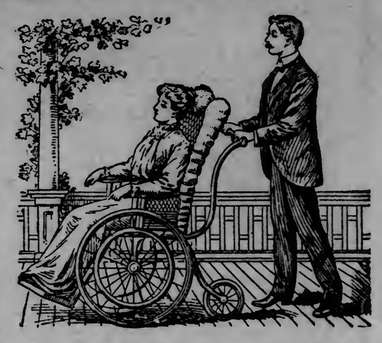
RHEUMATISM

ALMOST AS COMMON IN SUMMER AS IN WINTER.



While the damp, cold, changing weather of Winter intensifies the pains and other disagreeable symptoms of Rheumatism, it is by no means a winter disease exclusively. Through the long months of Summer its wandering pains and twitching nerves are felt by those in whose blood the uric acid, which produces the disease, has accumulated.

Rheumatism is a disease that involves the entire system. Its primary cause results from the failure of the eliminative organs, the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels, to carry out of the system the urea, or natural refuse matter. This coming in contact with the different acids of the body forms uric acid which is taken up and absorbed by the blood. This acid causes fermentation of the blood, making it sour and unfit for properly nourishing the body, and as this vital stream goes to every nook and corner of the body, the poison is distributed to all parts. The nervous system weakens from lack of rich, pure blood, the skin becomes feverish and swollen, the stomach and digestion are affected, the appetite fails and a general diseased condition of the entire system is the result.

Not only is Rheumatism the most painful of all diseases, with its swollen, stiff joints, throbbing muscles and stinging nerves, but it is a formidable and dangerous trouble. If the uric acid is allowed to remain in the blood, and the disease becomes chronic, chalky deposits form at the joints, and they are rendered immovable and stiff, and the patient left a helpless cripple for life. Every day the poison remains in the system the disease gets a firmer hold. The best time to get rid of Rheumatism is in warm weather; because then the blood takes on new life and the skin is more active and can better assist in the elimination of the poisons. With the proper remedy to force the acid out of the blood, and at the same time build up and strengten the Liver, Kidneys, Bowels and other organs of the body, Rheumatism can be permanently cured. External applications relieve the pain and temporarily reduce the inflammation, and for this reason are desirable, but they cannot have any effect on the disease. The blood is poisoned and the blood must be treated before a cure can be effected.

S. S. S., a remedy made from roots, herbs and barks, is the best treatment for Rheumatism. It goes into the blood and attacks the disease at its head, and by neutralizing the acid and driving it out, and building up the sour blood so it can supply nourishment and strength to every part of the body, it cures Rheumatism permanently. S. S. S. is the only safe cure for the disease; being purely vegetable, it will not injure the system in the least, as do those medicines which contain Potash or some other mineral ingredient. S. S. S. tones up every part of the body by its fine tonic properties. While cleansing the blood of all poisons it builds up the appetite and digestion, soothes the excited nerves, reduces all inflammation, relieves pain and completely cures Rheumatism in every form—Muscular, Inflammatory, Articular or Sciatic. If you are worried with the nagging pains of Rheumatism, do not wait for it to become chronic, but begin the use of S. S. S. and purge the blood of every particle of the poison. Write for our book on Rheumatism, and ask our physicians for any advice you wish. We make no charge for either.

IS TO BE HIS OWN HANGMAN

Nebraska Boy Murderer to Spring the Trap Himself.

Lincoln, Neb., May 24.—Frank Barker a boy murderer, confined in the penitentiary at this point under the sentence of death, will touch the button which will spring his own death trap. Because Warden Beemer, the official hangman for the state, whose duty it is to spring the trap at all legal deaths in Nebraska, is too tender hearted to perform the "operation" on the boy, young Barker has volunteered to be his own hangman.

"I'd just as soon do it as not," said Barker, when asked about the report. "I might just as well touch the button as anybody else. I've got to die anyway, and if Warden Beemer, who has been good to me since I have been here, doesn't want to hang me, I will save him the trouble and do it myself."

Barker is not yet 20 years old, and was found guilty of one of the worst crimes ever recorded in the state. For the sake of the few dollars they possessed he deliberately killed his own brother and his brother's wife at their home, where he himself was staying without paying board, buried the bodies in the cattle shed and then took possession of the residence and farm, giving out the story that his brother had gone to Denver to live and had given him the entire property.

Young Barker was engaged to marry a girl in the neighborhood, but the girl had told him she would not marry until he owned a home. Within twenty-four hours after the double murder, and wearing the shirt stained with his brother's blood, Barker went to his sweetheart's house and told her he now owned a home and was ready to claim his bride. But before the ceremony could be performed neighbors had begun to suspect that all was not right at the Barker home and started a search, which resulted in the finding of the dead bodies.

Frank was arrested, after a search lasting two days through the country. He was taken to Red Cloud to jail, and three different attempts to lynch him were made by farmers. His trial lasted only a few hours, the evidence being so overwhelming against him that the jury returned a verdict without leaving their seats.

The hanging will take place the last week in May. The date has not yet been set and Barker is the most unaffected person among those immediately concerned.

PAROLED CONVICT

Feigned Suicide, Dreading Return to the Prison.

Michigan City, Ind., May 24.—Limping from the effects of a bullet wound inflicted last week by an officer at East St. Louis, who attempted to arrest him for horse stealing, John Slatton, a fugitive paroled convict, was brought back to the state prison to serve his full term for a crime committed several years ago at Washington, Ind. The arrest of Slatton at East St. Louis was attended by a foot race between the officer and Slatton and a rapid exchange of revolver shots.

Slatton was paroled from the state prison on Aug. 1 last, and given work in this city. Fearing that he would be returned to prison for an infraction of the parole rules, he deposited an old suit of clothes and his other personal effects on the harbor dock, leaving a note informing the finder that his body would be found at the bottom of the lake, and requesting that Melvin Slatton of Plainville, Daviess county, Ind., be informed of his fate.

The harbor was dragged from time to time by the crew of the life saving station, and he was believed dead until his arrest at East St. Louis. When arrested he gave an assumed name, but the officers sent out Bertillon measurements and descriptions to prison officers throughout the country and his identity was established.

Slatton was sent from Daviess county to the reformatory at Jeffersonville, May 13, 1857, to serve from two to fourteen years for shooting an officer who attempted to arrest him for stealing. He had served two terms before and was transferred as a habitual criminal to the state prison.

The convict is a member of one of the leading families in Daviess county. While he was serving in the state prison his grandfather died and left him 100 acres of land in Daviess county. After his flight he sold the land for $5,000, through the agency of an attorney and went to a Kansas town, where he opened a restaurant, he says, and squandered every cent.

HAT PIN WAS FATAL.

Exposed Sex of Girl Dressed as Boy.

Pittsburg, Penn., May 24.—"Hello, fellow," Special Officer Copper, at the Union depot, said as he clapped his hand on the shoulder of a slim-looking young person dressed in boy's clothes at the ticket office window.

With a scream of terror the supposed boy shrank away, and ten minutes later pretty little Maggie Lockhart of Grove City, Penn., who had tried to start to California dressed as a boy was in a cell at the central police station, being denuded of her garments by the matron.

A hat pin had given the little girl away. Officer Copper had not paid much attention to the natty little "fellow" who came up to the window until he noticed the jaunty cap was fastened by a hat pin, and this set him to thinking all was not right, and so he got Maggie.

Maggie Lockhart is the daughter of a well-to-do coal merchant in Grove City. She slipped away from home a month ago, and has been hiding in and around Allegheny since. She got the boy's rig out and started to get out of town, but the hat pin was fatal.

BRUNDAGE SMASHED

Both the Phonograph and His Wife.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 24.—Because his new phonograph persisted in playing "Hail to the Spirit of Liberty" backwards, Frank D. Brundage, a railway fireman, smashed the instrument into several hundred pieces with an ax, and then when his wife remonstrated with him for his conduct he put her to sleep in one round.

When the police arrived the house looked as though a cyclone had passed that way. Beneath the debris was the prostrate form of Mrs. Brundage, unconscious, and with her face badly discolored from the beating which she had received. The woman was sent to the hospital.

On his way to the city jail Brundage excused his riotous conduct by describing the exasperating perverseness of his newly purchased phonograph.

SKILLFUL FORGERS

Raise Check So Cleverly as to Fool Bank Officials.

New York, May 24.—So cleverly had a check which made its appearance in the Tombs court yesterday been altered that detectives say there are only five known men in the country, if not in the world, capable of doing the work. These five men are in receipt of a regular pension from the American Bankers' association in return for which they have agreed to refrain from exercising their dangerous talents.

All of them have been kept under constant surveillance for years and the police say it would have been next to impossible for any of them to have altered the check without their identity becoming known. They are convinced, however, either that this has been done or that a new or unknown "penman" equal in every way to the most accomplished forgers of the past, has begun work in this city.

Frank Clifton, a bartender, was arraigned in the Tombs court charged with attempting to pass the check, which had been raised from $110.58 to $2,800. The police are convinced that, even if Clifton had any guilty knowledge regarding the check he was only a tool for the real criminal. He was held for further examination.

According to statements made by detectives and Assistant District Attorney Kressel in the police court, the original check was stolen while in transit through the mails. It was then taken in hand by an expert, photographed and tracings were made of all the handwriting in the body of the check. Next, with the aid of powerful acids the check was washed of all the handwriting with the exception of the signature and the cleaned check filled in for the larger amount. This was done by using the tracings already made, letter by letter, and using the photograph of the original check for reference and as a guide. By using the individual letters in the words of the original check the forger secured all the letters needed except "a" and "g" and the figure "2." These letters and figure give a clue to the method of operation. The finished check was done so cleverly that the official of the Second National bank, on which the check was drawn, certified it without question when it was presented several days ago.

INSULT TO WOMANHOOD.

Governor Higgins So Characterizes Legislative Bill.

Albany, N. Y., May 24.—A bill introduced to legitimatize a child born out of wedlock, which caused considerable comment but little opposition in its passage through the legislature, was vetoed yesterday by Governor Higgins. The measure is entitled, "an act for the relief of Adelia Queenie Barker," and recites that she is the illegitimate offspring of Charles Bell Barker and Adelia Gertrude Stringer. Governor Higgins characterized the bill as "an insult to every faithful wife and to womanhood itself."

"The father at the time of the birth of the child," says the governor, "had and now has a lawful wife living. He and his paramour, with brazen impudence and utter disregard of the rights of the lawful wife and the rules of morality, unite in a petition to the legislature to legitimatize the issue of their lawless love. If this bill should be approved, a legal status would be given to a semi-polygamous relation and concubinage would become an honorable estate."

DYNAMITE IN SHOES.

Connellsville, Pa., May 24.—In the office of District Attorney Thomas H. Hudson is a woman's shoe, the hollowed heel of which it is said, contains enough dynamite and nitro glycerine to kill several persons. Monday night Mrs. Lulu Engle of Union town, Pa., found a pair of lady's shoes in her back yard. She discovered that the heel of the one had been hollowed out, four exploding caps placed in and the hole filled with waste soaked with nitro glycerine. The shoes were turned over to the authorities, who are making a rigid investigation.

TODAY'S GAMES.
Duluth at Winnipeg, (two games.)
St. Cloud-Brainerd at Crookston.
Fargo at Grand Forks.

Winnipeg, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The champion Duluth White Sox continued their usual tactics here yesterday afternoon and after putting two pitchers and three catchers to the bad, and playing an errorless game in the field, won out by the score of 13 to 3.

It was a sad day for the Winnipeg fans, but a good one for the batting averages of the visitors. They began warming up to Maloney's curves in the first inning, and after repeating the dose in the fourth, fell on him in a vicious manner in the sixth. After six runs had been scored with only one man out and the bases full, Wittman was called on to stop the slaughter. He succeeded, and for two innings blanked the Duluth men. They were just beginning to treat him in the same manner that Maloney had been handled, when the game ended.

Neighbors was especially strong with the willow, scoring the three runs in the first inning with a two-bagger when the bases were full, and the run in the ninth with a clean single when Menelce was on third. He was also mixed up in the swatfest which took place in the sixth inning.

Menelce scored the three runs in the fourth with a lucky three-bagger, which would have been an out had not Piper slipped as he ran to capture it.

Miller pitched good ball until he had the game well in hand with a lead of twelve runs.

ORPHANS WIN.

Take Second Game of the Crookston Series.

Crookston, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a good game of ball here yesterday the Orphans demonstrated their ability to "play ball" from every standpoint of the game, winning from the home team by a score of 6 to 2. During the first six innings it appeared to local fans as if McNell's bunch would be shut out entirely. Poor fielding was the cause of Crookston's defeat.

Drennen and Sperry for the local team did good work in the box and behind the bat, the latter being a bit weak in his throws to second. Crookston during the game piled up five errors and St. Brain but two. The game was attended by a fair crowd of people and the grounds were in excellent shape. Gilchrist pitching for the Orphans was hit liberally by Crookston playerse and the record of fans was not large.

As a result of the two games lost by McNell's bunch to the Orphans, Dunne, who pitched in yesterday's game and did shameful fielding has been released and it is probable that quite a number of recruits will be added to the bunch of Crookston players during the next day or two. Interest in the game here is heavy and every effort will be put forth to show the Duluth team a series of hot contests upon their appearance here Friday for the end week engagement. Sunday ball will be played next Sunday, and it is expected that the largest crowd of the season will turn out to witness the game.

FARGO WINS.

Defeats Grand Forks Team In Pitchers' Battle.

Grand Forks, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo took yesterday's game from Grand Forks in a gale of wind which blew clouds of dust across the diamond, by the score of 2 to 1.

In spite of the wind and dust the game was a fine exhibition, being a pitchers' battle between Converse and Peter Hanson, in which honors were about evenly divided. The Fargo man had a little better support, however, and won out.

Two-base hits by Rose and Traeger were responsible for Fargo's runs in the first and sixth innings.

The best known remedy in all America for the symptoms as above given is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—an honest and a safe remedy which no woman can afford to lose the opportunity of trying for the cure of those distressing complaints which weaken a woman's vitality. Dr. Pierce not only assures you that his "Favorite Prescription" is honestly made, but he lets you know just what it contains. It is now nearly forty years since he put up this prescription in a form to be easily obtained at every drug store. Previous to that time Dr. Pierce practiced medicine and made the diseases of women his specialty. He found that there was one prescription that cured ninety-eight per cent. of his cases. The ingredients were taken from Nature in the shape of a non-alchoholic extract of medicinal roots and plants whose curative properties are generally recognized by the medical profession throughout the country, and whose harmless character you can learn from any druggist or physician. Dr. Pierce early learned how to combine these ingredients in just the right proportion to make a harmonious and efficient remedy. Experienced chemists under his direction use great care in the preparation of this non-alcoholic compound.

THE PROOF.

Dr. Pierce is not afraid of letting the public know all the truth about his "Favorite Prescription." It contains a non-alcoholic extract of the following American medicinal plants:

Lady's Slipper (Cypripedium Pubescens).
Black Cohosh (Cimicifuga Racemosa).
Unicorn Root (Chamælirium Luteum).

GERMAN M. E. CHURCH, FIFTH AVENUE EAST AND SIXTH STREET, WHERE SESSIONS OF CONFERENCE ARE BEING HELD.

HAVE BOAT RIDE

Visiting Members German Methodist Conference View the Harbor.

Much Interest Is Manifest In the Sessions Now Held.

The visiting ministers who are in the city to attend the conference of the Northern district of the German Methodist Episcopal church, are this afternoon the guests of Rev. J. F. Steiner, pastor of the local church, on a boat ride about the harbor.

The morning session of the conference was well attended and was a very interesting one for the members present. It began with a prayer meeting lead by Rev. E. P. Christ, of Browntown, Minn.

Two interesting papers were read on the topic, "The Spiritual Equipment of a Minister," by Rev. J. E. Benz of Crow River, Minn., and Rev. F. Brinkmann of Morris, Minn. These papers emphasized especially the fact that the physical condition of man and the highest possible culture get their full swing only by the complete possession of the Holy Spirit; that the ministers must be men of God through and through.

An exegesis on Matt. 16, 13-19 was read by Rev. John F. Steiner of Duluth and another by Rev. W. Boemmel of Valley City, both efforts being much appreciated by the visiting ministers.

The papers read this morning were discussed by every minister present, the interest running high.

This evening the regular program will be observed, with the addition of a sermon by Rev. E. P. Christ of Browntown who was unable to be present at the session held last evening, owing to a funeral that he had to attend before leaving home.

The session this evening will begin with an Epworth league meeting at which Prof. C. Hohn will speak on the league and Rev. W. Boemmel will talk about the Sunday school.

The conference was opened at the German M. E. church of this city last evening, with the Rev. C. L. Lehnert presiding elder.

Rev. W. H. Koenig offered the opening prayer and Rev. A. H. Koerner of St. Paul preached the sermon, in the absence of Rev. C. P. Christ of Browntown. Rev. Mr. Koerner took for his subject "Christ as the Vine Stock," and likened the Savior to the vine stock and His people as the branches. Mr. Koerner was followed by Rev. F. J. Preine of Minneapolis and several selections were rendered by the choir. A trio composed of Misses Ida Steiner and Lydia Schultz and Alfred Hock also sang.

A ROLL OF HONOR BANK

High Praise For First National Bank of Duluth.

The Financier of New York the leading banking journal of the country, pays a high tribute to a Duluth banking institution in its issue of May 22, just out. In speaking of the First National bank of Duluth, it says that it is the first and strongest bank in the entire State of Minnesota in the matter of surplus and profits.

This is a record of which the bank may well be proud, and in which the citizens of Duluth, too, should and no doubt will find material for self-congratulation. For while the showing is excellent for the bank among all the great, strong banking concerns of the state, it is something that the city can take some pride in that she should be able to support such an institution.

The latest statement of the First National bank to the comptroller of the currency still further emphasizes its strong position. The loans are shown to be $5,101,763; the cash on hand and due from banks amounts to $1,731,265; capital paid in, $500,000; surplus and profits, $831,326; deposits, $5,761,702; total resources $7,293,029.

The announcement of the coming marriage of Miss Rose T. Wickstrom and E. H. Shallen of St. Paul has been made. Miss Wickstrom has held the position of buyer and head saleslady for J. M. Gidding & Co.'s fur department since that firm's opening. Mr. Shallen is general manager for the American Tobacco company in the two Dakotas. The wedding will take place June 7 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Cone, Coney Island cottage, Twenty-eighth street, Park Point. Mr. and Mrs. Shallen will make an extended trip East, and then make their home in Aberdeen, S. D.

"WIDER, LONGER, HIGHER" BERTHS.

A certain railroad has put out an advertisement that ought to prove a gold mine to its coffers. It says that the berths in its sleeping cars are "wider, longer and higher than the berths in similar cars of other lines." Everybody of medium height and over who reads that advertisement will be apt to patronize this particular line when going between Here City and Thereville the two points which, as is well known, the road with the big berths connects. For what stronger inducement could be offered to the unhappy night traveler than "wider, longer and higher" berths?

SALOON TO STAY

Court Dissolves Restraining Order Against Martin Johnson.

No Interference Possible Until Main Issue Is Determined.

Until the question of ownership of a small island in the St. Louis river opposite Fond du Lac, is decided, and it is determined whether the island in in Minnesota or Wisconsin, no temporary injunctional order will be issued restraining Martin Johnson from conducting the booze dispensary which he has established on the small plat of ground and from which he refuses to be ejected.

The order denying the temporary injunction was filed by Judge Homer B. Dibell, in district court, this morning.

The case against Johnson has been instituted by Mrs. Emily Chambers, of Fond du Lac, who claims that the saloonkeeper has taken possession of a small island in the river to which she claims title and from which she alleges he has ousted her. She also claims that the saloon, which is opposite her picnic grounds at Fond du Lac is a great nuisance and will keep people away from that popular summer resort.

The hearing of the temporary restraining order was held before Judge Dibell several days ago, the court holding the matter open until affidavits as to the boundary line between Minnesota and Wisconsin should be filed. These affidavits have been filed together with an affidavit by H. H. Phelps, one of the attorneys in the case who claims that the other affiants are mistaken in their premises, that no boundary line between the two states was ever surveyed, according to the records of the land office, but that such surveys as were made were to establish the section and quarter section lines at Fond du Lac and to determine the depth and flow of the St. Louis river.

The memoranda filed by Judge Dibell is of much interest in that the court, while denying the temporary restraining order says that the boundary matter is in doubt, but that Mrs. Chambers' contention is probably right. The outcome of the case is likely to bring about some action looking toward some definite establishment of the boundary line in the St. Louis river at Fond du Lac.

The court's memoranda is as follows:

"The middle of the main channel of the St. Louis river is the boundary line between Minnesota and Wisconsin. The rule is that if there are several channels the middle of the principal one, or the one usually followed, is the true boundary; and the rule is, further, that the true boundary follows changes in the mid-channel caused by a gradual accretion or degradation, but not changes caused by avulsion.

"The defendant's saloon is located on a small island in the St. Louis river. This island has been formed within the memory of men still living. The plaintiff claims this island as an accretion to lot 2, in section 7, 48-15, also an island in the river, which was entered at a land office in Minnesota and patented to her predecessor in title.

"Several hundred feet lower down the river, and opposite the public dock, at Fond du Lac, is an island, known as Peterson's island, which is admittedly in Wisconsin. The main channel of the river runs between it and the mainland of Minnesota. It was entered at the Wisconsin land office. The island surveyed as lot 2 is nearer the main body of dry land of Wisconsin than of Minnesota. Peterson's island is nearer the main body of dry land of Minnesota than of Wisconsin.

"It is the contention of the plaintiff that the main channel of the river, as it comes down from the rapids and assumes a general easterly course, passes southerly of lot 2, thence passes northerly of Peterson's island, and thence in a somewhat irregular course to the east out to Lake Superior. If the public surveys were correct, the main channel of the river must have passed southerly of lot 2, and thence somewhere between lot 2 and Peterson's island, and north of the latter. The water between these two islands seems now to be shoal. From the affidavits presented it is not possible to determine with accuracy whether the island on which the defendant has his saloon is in Minnesota or Wisconsin.

"It is stating the case favorably to the plaintiff if it is said that probably her contention is right, with the vital question still in doubt. This being so, the case is not one for a temporary injunction."

DISCUSS FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 24.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church today took up the subject of foreign missions. The report urged special Christmas and New Year's contributions from Sabbath schools, and asked for $1,500,000 for foreign mission work next year.

NORTH BUTTE IS STRONGER

Better Demand and Stock Closed at $27 Bid.

Copper stocks were more active today. North Butte stiffened up sharply and at 1 o'clock $27 was bid for it. The amount of dealing is small, but the offerings are very light, and there is very little of stock coming out.

Calumet & Pittsburg is also very stiffly held. While the price does not change materially, and keeps at a low point, offerings are very sparing, and with any stimulus in the trading it would undoubtedly have a sharp upward turn.

Black Mountain is also very strong. Up to about noon today practically everything offered at $3.10 had been taken by Eastern people, but the close was at that price asked.

The New York Sun's mining correspondence on Monday had this information, which will be of interest to North Butte holders:

"The Butte district in April produced 34,380,000 pounds of copper, at the rate of 412,560,000 a year, the daily average being the high record of recent years, the principal companies' daily output being as follows: Anaconda, Washoe, Colorado, Parrot and Butte & Boston (Amalgamated), 640,000 pounds; Boston and Montana (Amalgamated), 195,000 pounds; United Copper (Heinze), 130,000 pounds; Clark mines, 117,000 pounds; North Butte, 65,000 pounds.

"The general average yield of copper to the ton of ore for all Amalgamated mines was about 65 pounds, and 2½ cents in gold and silver to the pound of copper. United Copper yielded about the same, while North Butte averaged 80 pounds of copper to the ton of ore, its daily output being 800 tons of ore. There is a considerable decrease for May, owing to the shutdown of the Parrot."

TELLTALE TONGUE.

How Doctors Can Estimate Character and Disposition.

When a doctor looks at a patient's tongue he finds out a good many things about the patient other than the state of his digestion, says the New York Press. He estimates pretty accurately, if he is a wise doctor, his disposition.

For instance, a man who talks well puts out his tongue in a manner entirely different from that affected by the comparatively silent man. The eloquent tongue inclines to the right side of the mouth, the reticent tongue to the left side. Most orators, debaters and successful preachers and lawyers have a right-sided tongue, whereas persons whose disposition is marked by peculiarities, eccentricities and selfishness are left-sided.

The tongue that shoots out straight without turning or wavering indicates a solid, reliable man of affairs. The property of widows and orphans and public institutions is likely to be safe in his hands, and if he lives long enough he will eventualy enjoy a fair competency of his own.

Tongues that turn up when under the doctor's eye indicate an impractical nature. Their owners have little sense of the value of money. They are dreamers and reformers, and contract debts which those whom they have been trying to reform are frequently called upon to pay.

Then there is the melancholy or pessimistic tongue. That has the downward droop. A man born to poverty and general bad luck reveals his unfortunate state by the hopeless dropping of his tongue. Also, there is the cruel tongue. It flattens and broadens when extended. Physicians who have prescribed for the world's famous tyrants have left to posterity no description of their patients' tongues, but if they had they would undoubtedly have given to every despot a tongue of the flounder type.

The tongue whose edges curl up belongs to the artistic temperament. Qualities that commonplace persons are wont to speak of in tones of reverence—emotionalism, sentiment, imagination of a high order lie wrapped up in that curling tongue. Unfortunately, jealousy and a certain degree of miserliness lurk there, too, so it is just as well to handle that kind of a tongue with care.

Persons who love life and are destined to cling to it for many years close the teeth down tight over the extended tongue.

Everybody is acquainted with the man to whom neither his own nor anybody else's secrets are sacred. By his tongue may he also be known. It protrudes further when under examination than any other tongue. It is a tongue possessed by very nervous people, by the chatterers, by the superficial. Opposed to that is the short-distance tongue. It is a tongue that is both a pleasure and a torment to the doctor. It annoys him because it cannot be coaxed out far enough to enable him to make a thorough examination, but it pleases because it usually belongs to the chronic invalid and adds more dollars to the doctor's bank account than all other kinds of tongues put together.

CATCHING TARPON.

Outing: The boat stops still; yonder is a swirl on a wave, and a great fish, with a greenish body and large, projecting fin, appears above it; in a breathless moment. "Look ou, dar," yells "Tony"; there is a splash about thirty yards away, your line becomes taut and is gliding out like lightning before you can apply the brake. When you do it is almost jerked from your grasp and simultaneously the tarpon leaps and writhes above the water again. There is no sight more beautiful to the eye than that of the tarpon, like a gleam of light from darkness, leaping forth from the green sea. That moment when the tarpon has the bait and you strike is the one of all others most fraught with intense excitement. It is the first crisis in the battle. He is down again and your hook holds. He darts back and forth ever going deeper in his wild rushes. It is an earnest fight. The first ten minutes seem like an hour. "Rush 'im, reel up don't let him rest;" following the advice your arms tire, your hands become numb it may be bleeding and blistered, but you save your fish. Thus you are towed out toward the sea, always fighting. In his mad rushes the huge fish gained on you taking out nearly 100 yards of your line. During the first half hour he has decidedly the better of the fight and keeps most of the line. During the second half hour you gain the lost line foot by foot and the honors are about equally divided. Now the long rushes and leaps begin to tell and he loses wind. If he did not help to kill himself by these wild rushes and leaps, you could never land him. By some kind of intuition, an angler can tell when he has gained the mastery over the fish. You feel instinctively that the crisis has been passed and the boat turns back toward the beach; and as the beach is nearer you reel in and fight at close range.

Once he dashes almost up to the boat and suddenly turns about; you nearly lost him that time. You soon lead him back, however. Now he is near the boat you see his gleaming sides glisten in the light. "Steady now," says our man, as the boat touches the beach; you climb out and, resisting his last waning strength as he lashes spray upon you, you pull him out upon the sand and the fight is won.

WILKES BOOTH'S PISTOL.

The Derringer pistol used by John Wilkes Booth in assassinating President Lincoln is in a safe in the office of the judge advocate general of the army in Washington, says the Kansas City Journal, having been in the custody of the judge advocate general since the trial of the conspirators. This has been brought out by the recent sale in Philadelphia of a pistol with which the crime was said to have been committed. The purchaser wrote on to the war department and learned that he had been victimized.

GALLANTRY AND HEALTH.

Haparanda, a little town in Sweden, has suddenly sprung into renown through a rare act of thoughtfulness on the part of its womankind, says the Kansas City Journal. Having learned from medical statistics that in winter colds, neuralgia, toothache and influenza are much more prevalent among men than women the women of the place decided to relieve the men of the necessity of doffing their hats to them during the cold weather. It was announced that during the winter the women would only require a military salute.

PERSONAL SOUVENIRS.

Reminders of Famous People Have Brought High Prices.

Perhaps you do not set any particular value on your old clothes, your old books, your old love letters—but if in after years you become famous, such insignificant articles will be worth a gold mine to your descendants, says the San Francisco Bulletin.

Take Thackeray's case. When he was at school, like almost every boy, he ornamented his Latin dictionary, his Euclid and his Horatius with little ink sketches. You could pick up such books on any old stand, but because they belonged to the great author they realized, not long ago, not less than $200.

A one-page letter, written by Charles Dickens, changed hands for $160. The plain, unpretentious house in Portsmouth in which he was born, which you would hesitate to acquire for $1,000, was also sold recently for $5,625 to the Portsmouth corporation, who intend to convert it into a Dickens museum.

For a love letter written by Robert Burns, the Scottish poet, $50 was paid not long ago. Yet a brass collar which was worn by Boatswain, the dog to whose memory Lord Byron erected a monument at Newstead abbey, fetched 21 guineas, while the cellar of Thunderer, another of Lord Byron's dogs, realized 4 guineas only.

A mulberry tree planted by Shakespeare has already brought in a small fortune. A casket made from the wood was sold a few months ago for $700; a figure of the bard similarly carved fetched $65.

Fancy prices are frequently paid for relics of theatrical stars. The Louis XVI. clock which formerly belonged to Mrs. Siddons, a short time ago fetched 38 guineas.

Seven relics of Charles Kean, nevertheless, were sold for $20, one among them, a Highland dirk, used by him when playing the part of Macbeth, going for $3.

For the pistol with which Dick Turpin once instilled fear into the hearts of passengers on the Great North road, however, 5 guineas were considered sufficient.

Relics of Lord Nelson are also worth a small fortune. An enameled gold telescope, once in the possession of the great admiral, was sold recently for $200; the wine flagon of Admiral Brueys, taken by Nelson, fetched 50 guineas; but a letter written by the gallant hero to Lady Hamilton just before he died realized the huge sum of $5,150.

At the same sale another letter, written the day after the battle of Waterloo by the duke of Wellington, was sold for $565. Part of the mane of the charger ridden at the same battle by the great duke also fetched an extraordinary price.

A few cents under $50 was paid not long back for a button which had once adorned the coat of Oliver Cromwell. It was accompanied by a certificate stating that it was on his coat when he "sett to judge King Charles." An order signed by the Protector also fetched $50.

At a collection sold some time ago a letter from the king when prince of Wales realized $200. A Sarah Siddons' letter went for $60, and one from Edmund Kean for $45. The same price was paid for David Garrick's autograph.

But it is royal relics which fetch the highest prices.

A little while back a pen, whose initial cost probably did not amount to sixpence, was sold for $160. It was used by the Emperor Francis I., the Czar Alexander I. and King Frederick William III. of Prussia, in appending their signatures to the treaty of the holy alliance in 1815.

A lock of Napoleon's hair, not long ago, fetched $5, his court coat 191/2 guineas.

A SODA LAKE.

One of the most remarkable discoveries ever made in the region is that of a lake of liquid soda in the inaccessible desert between Crestone, Col., and Hooper, in the San Luis valley, says the Chicago Chronicle. The lake is an acre and a quarter in extent and lies at the bottom of a little basin valley in the desert. On its surface soda crystals have collected to a depth of eighteen inches, the whole lake having the appearance of a body of ice with a hard snow covering.

A recent examination by the State School of Mines shows that these crystals are 37 per cent pure soda, purer than most of the commercial soda offered on the market. A Denver man, E. M. Falke, has secured a lease of the land containing the lake and is now installing machinery which will convert the native crystals into marketable form. There are 4,000 tons in sight.

The School of Mines experts say that the soda is a creation of feldspar. The granite masses of the Sangre de Cristo range stand sentinel on two sides of the little valley. The feldspar in the granite, undergoing decomposition, collects in the lake basin, where it is held in check by an impervious clay, and proper conditions are furnished for concentration and evaporation.

LAKEWOOD STATION

Threatened By Fierce Bush Fire Raging Around It.

Settler Named Grey May Have Perished In Flames.

Fire was threatening the pumping station of the Duluth water and light department at Lakewood for a time today, and if the present wind holds out it will sweep the country between the station and French river.

The blaze is believed to have originated from a fire which was started by a settler to burn up some rubbish. It has spread through the dry brush rapidly fanned by the heavy wind it now envelopes the pumping station on all sides, extending northward and westward as far as Colbyville, which is also threatened by the flames.

The employes at the pumping station have been wetting the grass about the building all morning, and about noon they telephoned in to the fire department for assistance. A chemical was sent out from the Lakeside house.

The people of Colbyville also asked for assistance and the chemical from number three hall was sent out there.

A pile containing over 3,000,000 feet of logs which is lying near the pumping station, and which belongs to L. R. Martin, is on fire, and another pile containing 700 cord of wood, most of which belongs to C. S. Prosser, is also in flames.

Wilson Palmer, engineer of the pumping station, stated about 3 o'clock this afternoon that he believed the danger to the station was about passed, but that if the wind held the fire would probably sweep everything before it as far as French river.

A settler named Grey, who lived in the track of the fire, brought his wife and children in to the pumping station this morning fearing that their lives were in danger. He then returned to his home to endeavor to save it from the flames. Nothing has been heard from him since, and as the spot where the house is located is almost entirely surrounded by flames, his wife is nearly frantic with fear lest he has met his death in the fire.

BANQUET IS POSTPONED

Auto Owners Will Parade and Feast on June 3.

The banquet of the Duluth Automobile club has been postponed until June 3, as several of the guests will not be able to arrive in the city until that time.

W. J. Stevenson will act as toastmaster, and the speakers will be: William Dalrymple, E. B. Ellison of Superior, W. B. Silvey, R. B. Knox, Mayor Cullum, B. A. Ledy of St. Paul, John T. Black, W. W. Walker and A. E. McManus.

All the automobiles will assemble promptly at 5:30 p. m. at the fountain at Ninth avenue east and Superior street and will start from there promptly at 6:45 going east on Superior street to Twentieth avenue east, turning there going eastward to Eighth avenue west, thence east again and halting on the lower side of Superior street between Fourth and Fifth avenues west.

The electric machines will be first in the parade, then the smaller gasoline machines, then the larger ones and lastly the steam propelled ones. The machines must keep at least fifty feet apart and excepting in an emergency shall maintain a straight line on the right side of the street.

Each machine will be assigned its particular place in the parade just prior to the starting. No decoration will be allowed on the cars.

The banquet will begin promptly at 6:30 in the small dining room in the Commercial club and will be for members of the club and invited guests. The automobiles from Superior and Scanlon are expected to be in the parade and their owners will attend the banquet. The committee has prepared an elaborate menu and program of toasts and the participants in the banquet will not be obliged to close their entertainment in time to catch the last street car home.

One of the members of the club said today:

"I don't understand why the morning paper should have become so agitated and excited lately about the speed of the twenty-five or thirty automobiles in this city. For the last ten days it has conducted a continuous campaign of 'cussing' and complaining. Now, there is not a single member of the Automobile club, and it includes practically all the owners of machines, that would intentionally ignore the law or put himself in a position to be subjected to reasonable criticism. They all realize that there is an existing prejudice against automobilists when they first appear in a community—a prejudice perhaps founded primarily upon envy and fostered by jealousy; and recognizing that fact, are all the more careful to demonstrate to the criticising public that their fears and fancies are but visionary and that the drivers are not demons in disguise nor criminals unconvicted.

"Neither the police department nor the mayor has up-to-date received directly or indirectly a single specific complaint of fast driving. So the statements to the contrary are absolutely without foundation in fact. Can it be that the long suffering public has decided to abandon all hope of protection from the city government and has sought to make the News-Tribune the champion of the liberties of the dear people? Are the streets made for only the street car company and the peanut peddler? The street car company exceeds its speed limit every day and has even run to death two of our citizens in the last two weeks, yet no voice is raised in protest and no hue and cry is made by the morning paper, and I am not complaining about the speed of the street cars, for even if they do exceed the speed limit, it is not every technical violation of any ordinance that demands the infliction of a penalty.

"The Automobile club is anxious to be advised either by the police or by anyone else of any reckless or negligent driving and it will doubtless be able to keep all its members well within the letter and the spirit of the law. Let specific complaints be made either to the police or to William Dalrymple, the president of the club, or to William J. Stevenson of the laws and ordinances committee and we will try to so regulate our conduct as to have no cause for complaint and there has been no cause yet, so far as we know. We are not an exclusive set; we are not aristocrats nor to the manor born. Any man with necessary cash and courage can join us—and it doesn't take very much of either.

"This city is no longer in the back woods, but is assuming metropolitan customs and habits and while the automobile is an innovation to some people it is no intrusion. We will become accustomed to it as we have to electric cars and thundering express wagons. In the last five years the business and traffic of Superior street has increased so rapidly that many people have not yet realized the increased caution necessary at crossings. Many people step into the street without looking in either direction, or stop midway to hold a conversation. People cross the street at all points instead of at street intersections only, and that subjects them to dangers they fail to appreciate. Whether there are automobiles or not on the street, pedestrians should cross only at street crossings and should stop, look both ways and listen before leaving the curb, and then walk straight across. They will then be comparatively safe from all the dangers of the street."

CARICATURE SKETCH OF CHARLES E. MAGOON.

As governor of the Panama canal zone, Mr. Magoon will be obliged to reside there. Mr. Shonts, the chairman of the commission, will only make occasional visits there, however.

MANY FOREST FIRES.

Are Numerous Along Line of Missabe Road.

Register of Deeds M. C. Palmer, who came down from the range on the Missabe road last evening, says there are forest fires along the road, both sides of the track. The train passed through several localities where the woods were blazing close to the railroad tracks. Mr. Palmer saw two large frame houses burning, one about four miles out of Proctorknott. At another point, where there is a small sawmill land lumber yard, some fifty or sixty men were busily engaged in hauling water from a nearby swamp and fighting the fire back from the sawmill and the lumber piles.

"With scarcely any fire protection," says Mr. Palmer, "the settlers along the route seemed to be at the mercy of the forest fires."

AGED ACTRESS DEAD.

Munich, May 24.—Amalie Schoenshen, an actress, who was well known on the German stage for fifty years, died last night at the age of 71.

SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

Ross Valley, Cal., May 24.—William Stephens today murdered his wife, shot his five children, three of whom died instantly, attempted to murder a passing milkman and then committed suicide. No reason for the tragedy is known.

It's folly to suffer from that horrible plague of the night, itching piles. Doan's Ointment cures quickly and permanently. At any drug store, 50 cents.

WIELAND'S

OWNER GOT EVEN.

Story of Cutthroat Days at Old Guttenburg.

"And talking about the old days at the Gut," said the horse owner to the Washington Post—he meant the old track at Guttenburg, but horse owners never allude to it that way—"every time I hear of a double-cross on any track I can't help but think how a plunger who got himself talked about a good deal last summer, on account of the fat winnings, got the ditch-and-the-dump at the Gut when the old merry-go-round was on its last legs and all hands were about willing to take a chance on beating their grandmothers to death with a piece of cord wood for a two-dollar note.

"This plunger wasn't such a calcined proposition in those days as he is now, but he was some few, at that, and he generally had enough up his kimona sleeve to keep himself in cigarettes and peanuts, which is to say that he had that winning way about him, with access to everything that was going on about the track. He dealt in jockeys quite a lot, giving them their figure with a slight scaling down, according to his own idea of what was coming to them for being kind to him. He was wise and he was haughty, and, toward the wind-up of that old Gut meeting, he fell into the notion, apparently, that the whole thing had to be done his way or the kickers had to fade out of the game.

"An owner who didn't have much, drifted along to the Gut with an ordinary bunch of sprinters—all except one filly, that was real good, but a bit high in flesh, and not ripe for a hard race. She was a filly that could, when at her top-notch, run over anything at the track, and she had the additional advantage of not being known by the Eastern crowd, for she had been doing all of her running in the West.

"The poor owner had his own boy along with him, and he was hard up for fair when he struck the Gut. He stuck this good filly of his into a five-furlong sprint with the idea of really going after the purse, which he needed for feed money for man and beast. He knew that his filly wasn't up to her best concert key, but he had it doped out that she could beat the lot pitted against her, and he really meant to cop if he could. He told his boy to take the filly right out in front and get as good a lead as he could, so that in case her flesh stopped her and she curled up the rest of them would never be able to get nigh her. This was the arrangement right up to the post time. The filly—well, we might as well call her the Countess—was so little known at the Gut that 5 to 1 was chalked up against her with the poor lot.

"Now, it happened that this plunger knew all about the Countess—being, as I say, a pretty wise proposition—but he didn't think that she could win in her condition, and, anyhow, he had something doing on another one in the race. He had so much doing on the race, in fact, that all of the rest of them, except the Countess, were dead to the one he had picked to play. The plunger dug up the owner of the Countess, and he said to him:

"'Pal, your little one won't do today, will she?'

"'Well, she'll make a stab,' said the hard-up owner. 'I need the duff, being several shy of paying my feed bills. The game has been throwing me lately. She's going to try.'

"'You need the purse, hey?' said the plunger. "That isn't much—only $200. Hoy'd $500 do—better?'

"'Spot cush?' inquired the hard-up owner.

"'Spot, after the race,' replied the plunger.

"'You're on,' replied the poor owner. 'I'm not any more phony than my neighbors, but it's a case of real dig with me just now. The Countess will finish with the also-rans. Are you pinchy about the one you've got to turn the trick?'

"'It's like getting money by Wells-Fargo,' said the plunger.

"'All right,' said the owner of the Countess. 'You can duck around to my shed and slip me the five centuries after they're under the wire.'

"The poor owner 'saw' his jockey, and the Countess' head was yanked off, with the boy's feet tickling her ears. She could have won in a stroll, short of work as she was, but the boy had the biceps, and he held her down so that the plunger's good thing went through all right.

"After the race the plunger, who had made a great big thing out of it, hunted up the poor owner and put up a beef about the $500. He said that he hadn't been able to get much down on his sure one, and asked the hard-up owner to compromise on $300. The plunger's poor mouth didn't tickle the hard-up owner a little bit, but he was a pretty foxy piece of work himself, and he took the $300 without letting on a particle that he considered it a cheap gag. The plunger went away, thinking that he had the owner of the Countess on his staff for good, and the hard-up owner made sundry and divers resolutions within himself to the general effect that the next time he did business with that plunger there'd be pink icicles in August, and so on.

"Well, the owner of the Countess didn't race the filly again for a couple of weeks, and all that time she was getting good. He gave her a lot of work around 3 o'clock of mornings, in the dreamy dawn, so that nobody got onto just how good she was becoming. He shot her in about two weeks after he had been dickered down by the plunger. He knew that she was going to win, and with his other skates he had picked up nearly a thousand wherewith to play the Countess. On the day before the race the plunger sidled alongside of him again.

"'I see you've got that nice little girl of yours in again tomorrow,' he remarked. 'How good is she?'

"'She's got a show for the big end of it,' said the owner.

"'Um,' said the plunger. 'Well, she'll be about 5 to 1, whereas I've got a pipe on one that'll be as good as 15 to 1. How about doing a little business?'

"'On a strictly pay-in-advance basis, yes,' said the owner of the Countess, chewing a straw. 'Maybe I'll be able to see my way to delivering the goods for a pat $1,000 in hand. Otherwise I cop with my little Countess.'

"The plunger put up a terrific howl, and tried oiliness, persuasiveness, bamboozling, the whole works, with the owner.

"'Why,' he moaned, 'I can buy all the Countesses from here to Gehenna and back for $1,000.'

"'Yep,' replied the Countess' owner, 'but you can't slip a 5-to-1 shot over every day. Let's not talk about it any more. You've got my terms. Thousand down, right now, and the countess walks, and I'll get the coin, anyhow, by betting on her.'

"He got the $1,000 in hand two hours before the race was run. Then he looked the Countess over and called his boy into a dark corner of his stable.

"'Take her out in front, son, and tow-rope them,' he said. 'Don't let any of them get within a block of you. I'll send your mother a couple of hundred after you bring the mare home.'

"'She'd win today with a bag o' coal on her,' said the boy.

"Then the Countess' owner takes the $1,000 that he already has in his kick, and the $1,000 the beefing plunger has handed him, and spraddles it all over the United States in the pool room on the Countess to win at from 5 to 1 to 7 to 1.

"The Countess won by fourteen lengths, pulled sideways, her head bobbing and her tail a-swishing. It was just funny the way she won. The plunger, with his mouth twitching, hunted up the Countess' owner, and all he got for his was a line of chile con carne conversation, and finally, a puck in the eye.

"'Do others or they'll do you,' isn't the way they used to teach it when I went to Sunday school," concluded the horse owner; "but there are some occasions on this man's turf when the quotation has jes' nachully got to be twisted that way."

A LETTER RECEIVED AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Philadelphia Record: Although belated more than twenty years, a love letter appointing a tryst has been discovered and forwarded to the person addressed, Alonzo Birdsall, a motorman, who lives in Barry. Birdsall was born and raised near Bay City, Mich., and there he met, wooed and won his wife, who was a Miss Parkinson. Her parents and his people occupied adjoining farms, but, owing to a temporary feud, the young people's love did not run smoothly. They courted on the sly, and, to facilitate meetings, used to leave letters for each other in the hollow of an old elm tree. One day death visited the Birdsall family, and the feud was suddenly terminated. In the excitement Miss Parkinson totally forgot a letter she had just left in the tree. The barriers removed, the lovers married, and about ten years ago moved to Philadelphia. Last week Birdsall received a letter from his brother, which explained that in chopping down the old elm he had found a note, which he enclosed. Although weather-beaten and discolored, the writing was legible. It ran: "John, Dear—Meet me at the willows tonight. Ellen."

A BAD MONOPOLY.

At the sale in New York of the late Surrogate J. H. V. Arnold's collection of autographs a lawyer said, according to the New York Tribune: "Do you see this autograph—this autograph of one of the richest men in the world? Well, Surrogate Arnold, in showing it to me, told me a story about its author. The rich man, it seems, had been arguing with Mr. Arnold about monopolies—had been claiming that there were good and bad monopolies, and that those he was connected with were distinctly of the good and helpful sort. Then he showed what a bad monopoly was. He showed the character of a bad monopolist. He said there was a young man in the South who had all the characteristics of a bad monopolist highly developed. This young man went one summer on a visit North. He sought out another young man on his return, and said impressively:

"'Look-a-here, I understand that you took advantage of my absence from town last month to go callin' on Miss Henrietta Brown?'

"'You're mistaken,' the other young man answered. 'It is her sister, Miss Clarissa Brown, that I've been calling on.'

"'Well, sir,' said the first, 'that makes no difference. I've got my eye on both them girls.'"

ROYAL RAKE WORKS HARD.

Though King Leopold of Belgium is perhaps one of the most disreputable rakes that ever wore a crown, he is nevertheless a hard worker, says the Kansas City Journal. Those well acquainted with his majesty's habits sometimes refer to him as "the Yankee of European monarchs." He works rapidly and reaches decisions rapidly, and, being a man of almost encyclopedic knowledge, he is able to get through a vast deal of business in a very short time. In spite of his many escapades he enjoys a certain kind of popularity, and it has been said that should Belgium proclaim a republic, Leopold would easily be elected president.

STUTSON NAMED

Biwabik Pastor Elected Congregational Moderator For Duluth District.

Interesting Session Going on at Plymouth Church.

This morning the Duluth conference of Congregational churches elected Rev. Henry H. Stutson of Biwabik moderator for the ensuing year and Rev. Alexander Milne of Pilgrim Congregational church, Duluth, scribe and registrar. The conference was called to order at 9 o'clock and after organizing the roll was called and the following delegates replied to their names:

Aitkin—Mrs. A. L. Hamilton and Mrs. Warren W. Potter.

Biwabik—Rev. Henry H. Stutson.

Brainerd—First church not represented; People's, Rev. E. P. Kuhl, J. M. Schulz, A. W. Wilson, Marcus Swanson and W. A. Hanna.

Duluth—Pilgrim church, Rev. A. Milne, Albert Baldwin, W. S. Woodbridge, O. R. Lippett, Mrs. D. Hood, Miss Mary E. Shaw and Rev. Jeremiah Kimball.

Duluth—Plymouth church, Rev. H. W. Johnson, J. H. Bowne, Mrs. A. C. Cloud and Miss May Fisher.

Walker—Rev. George Michael and Mrs. Michael.

The following were elected corresponding members of the conference: Rev. H. P. Fisher of Crookston, Rev. W. J. Conrad of Park Rapids, Mrs. J. H. Bowne of West Duluth and Rev. Arthur J. Hoag of the West Duluth Baptist church.

The reports of officers were then read and were followed by the reports of churches. The latter reports proved exceedingly encouraging. A better tone than formerly seems to be universal throughout the district and the congregations, according to reports read seem to be feeling and have more and better organizations. The financial affairs of the several church organizations, are also in better shape than they have heretofore been. During the report by Rev. Alexander Milne of Pilgrim Congregational church of Duluth, he told of the Altrurian club organized in his church and of the immense help it has been. His story proved so interesting that the members of the conference asked him to embody it in pamphelt form in order that other churches may profit thereby.

Rev. Henry H. Stutson spoke briefly on "The Young Christian; His Training, Care and Nurture." Mr. Stutson in dealing with the care of the young Christian pointed out the importance of church life in upholding his attempts to better living, and asserted that the church should do all in her power to help him and advocated more social features as akin to religion.

Rev. R. L. Jones of Aitkin, who was to have read a paper on "Do We Need a New Religion" was unavoidably delayed and the conference had to forego the pleasure of listening to his views on this mooted subject.

Two interesting addresses were given which deal with church work along missionary lines principally. One on "The Sabbath School, Its Place in the Church and Kingdom," by Rev. F. A. Sumner of Minneapolis proved highly interesting. Mr. Sumner talked of the Sunday school as a forerunner of the church. The Congregationalists have a society which establishes Sunday schools in places where there is no church and this Sunday school usually proves to be the seed from which the church subsequently grows. Mr. Sumner spoke of the success of this idea and of the great work that is being done in Sunday schools. The other address was by Rev. Herman P. Fisher of Crookston on "Work in Northern Minnesota." Mr. Fisher is well enabled to talk of this as his work is confined to this missionary field, where he assists the state superintendent of missionary work. A devotional service, conducted by Rev. E. P. Kuhl of Brainerd followed, which closed the morning session.

This afternoon's meeting opened at 2 o'clock. The first paper was that of Rev. George Michael of Walker "Some Plain Words on Evolution," and it proved interesting and advanced some new ideas. Then followed an address by Albert Baldwin, the well-known Duluth attorney on "Rockefeller's Gift to the American Board," which will be found in full in another column. The rest of the program for this afternoon and evening is as follows:

3:00. Woman's missionary hour.
Devotional service.
"Mianzara, a Tale of Armenia," Miss Sophia Holt, formerly missionary to Brusa.
Solo.
"The Study of Missions an Essential to Truest Culture."
Mrs. Alex. Milne, Duluth.
"The Value of New Methods."
Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, Duluth.
Discussion.
Closing prayer.
Mrs. S. F. Stewart.
4:10. Final business.
4:30. Adjournment for outing.
6:00. Supper and social hour.
WEDNESDAY EVENING.
7:45. Opening song and prayer.
8:00. "The Sufficiency of the Gospel of Christ."
Address—"The Call of the Hour"
Rev. F. A. Sumner, Minneapolis.
Address.
Rev. Herman P. Fisher, Crookston.

Prayer and benediction.

RAILROAD NEWS

Active Demand For the Low Rate Tickets to Portland.

South Shore Road Announces Dates of Annual Excursions.

Yesterday was the date set for putting in effect the low rates on all railroads to Portland, Or., because of the exposition, which will open June 1. The demand for the special rates was quite active in Duluth yesterday, and many tickets were sold over the different lines, a number of people taking advantage of them so that they might be on hand on the opening day of the fair.

Some tickets are also being sold today, and it is expected that the demand will continue good during the remainder of the summer. Many who have been planning on going West have postponed their trips until the present time, awaiting the fair rates. It is believed that the tourists from Eastern points on their way to the coast will begin to make their appearance in Duluth within the next two or three days. The tourist travel through Duluth should be quite extensive via Duluth during the warm months.

South Shore Excursions.

The South Shore road has announced the dates for the annual excursions East. Low rates, less than half fare in some instances, and none higher than one fare for the round trip, will be in effect June 5, 9, 13 and 18 to Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Buffalo and intermediate points. This will be for both lake and rail transportation, via the South Shore to St. Ignace and then the Detroit-Cleveland line of steamers.

Other excursions to the East will be announced later. Last year an average of 150 people took advantage of the excursion rates every day they were in force, and it is expected that the demand will be even greater the present season.

FRANKLIN PAINE REPLIES

To The Herald's Comments on His Letter.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In stirring up this combine matter over my signature I did not expect to make myself agreeable to you, but I did not anticipate your accusing me of an untruth. To be strictly accurate I will now say that I never offered the proof directly to The Herald, but have stated at least once in the presence of a Herald representative that I had such proof. I thought the paper would follow the matter up if they really wished information. You twist my article into saying that I appeared before the grand jury without result. At the same time the letter upon which you are commenting states that no witness offered by me was called. I have never been before any grand jury. I placed such evidence as I had in the hands of the county attorney but to the best of my knowledge it was never used. We were ready to appear and testify when called.

My statement that you have ignored the situation is substantially correct for while you have, as claimed, "published column after column" I have never seen any evidence of any real effort on your part even to find out whether we have any combines.

Within the past two years a case was tried in the municipal court wherein Judge Windom expressed himself pretty freely as to the methods of one of these combines. If I remember rightly it was brought to recover fines imposed upon the plaintiff for violating combine rules. There were facts proven in open court so flagrant that the judge remarked upon them, and which being public records were accessible to you. I have never seen in The Herald any comment upon those facts nor a disposition to use them for the benefit of the people.

Everything I own is in Duluth. I make my living here and have for twenty years. If for no other reason than these, I want the city to prosper. But I don't believe that it will unless we can get rid of the combines which we believe are dictating prices to those of our population who earn their living by daily or monthly wages, and that means at least two-thirds of us.

As to the charges made, to quote you, "against the city which is affording me a home and bread and butter," I made none. The city is all right. My charges are against those who stand in the way of its prosperity, whether newspapers or people. There is no need of further discussing the combines. The attorney general will no doubt probe those to his satisfaction.

You, as a newspaper, have failed to call to the attention of the attorney general and other officials the common belief that these combines exist which had been prevalent here for years. I don't know of any private axe which I want ground nor have I had any recent communication from Mr. Armour. I have no reason to withdraw any statements made in my communication upon which you comment editorially Tuesday, but I had a right to expect a courteous reply upon the points whereon we differed, not a falsified rehash nor an accusation of untruth. The matter is now in the hands of the citizens of Duluth. If they will rally to the support of the state officials we shall soon know whether we have a remedy. If I have started a full investigation my part is done, and as I am not seeking notoriety in the newspapers or elsewhere I shall trouble you no more. FRANKLIN PAINE.

A Farm for $10 Down and $4.00 a Month! Think of It!

This will give you 40 acres of good fertile land in the big red clover district of Bayfield, Wis.,—as many acres as you like on the same basis for each 40-acre tract at $5 an acre.

Fine Investment for Young Men and Women

Think of the thousands of young people paying over money to the great life insurance companies every month with the expectation that at the end of twenty years or more they may only get their money back and a very small interest. Then think of the development of the United States in the past twenty years, and look on a map at the location of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin as related to the head of inland navigation and the expanding markets of growing nearby cities. Will any reasonable man say that the land in this region will not be worth from three to ten times its present price within twenty years? Reason it out for yourself.

Worth $200 to $300 an Acre.

J. Sterling Morton, ex-Secretary of Agriculture, recently asserted that all well-located land in the United States would be worth that price within 50 years.

"I believe," he added, "that money invested in farms is the best possible investment one can make; even if purchased at what some may term 'boom prices,' one will soon see his investment doubled."

We Will Build You a Comfortable House

On any sized tract that you want, from forty acres up, upon payment of only one-quarter of the value of the land in cash, and spread the balance over several years. For a man who wants to get on a farm at small initial cost, this is a remarkable opportunity. All this land is surprisingly fertile, and it will pay you to investigate its possibilities. The Omaha railroad alone placed 900 families in Northern Wisconsin last year. We have about 60,000 acres to choose from.

Best Farming Land in Northern Minnesota.

We also have about 40,000 acres of the richest farming land to be found in this section of the state, all lying within a reasonable distance of railroads and midway between Duluth and the Twin Cities. We will give it to you for one-quarter its value in cash and the balance to suit your convenience. Runs from $5 to $15 an acre.

GIRL ACCUSES MINING MAN

Minnie Kelley Charges Captain Tallon With Assaulting Her.

Sobbing at times when the realization of the story which she was telling the jury came to her, Minnie Kelly, a bright and attractive-appearing girl of 13 years, residing at the Shenango mine location, in the town of Stuntz, was a witness this morning in the case of the state against Harry Tallon, captain of the mine at the location, who was indicted by the last grand jury for indecent assault.

The details of the case are unfit for publication. In the main the girl, who is secretary of the little Sunday school at the Shenango location, charges Capt. Tallon, who is the Sunday school superintendent, a married man with two children, one a daughter older than the Kelley girl, with having on three different occasions taken liberties with her.

The girl alleges that Capt. Tallon began paying her attentions in this manner last winter, the last time being in March, at which time she told her mother, the parents taking steps to have the matter brought into court.

Questioned by the county attorney, Minnie Kelley testified that she objected to the alleged treatment of Capt. Tallon, but that through motives of shame she was afraid to tell her parents, until one occasion when she refused to longer attend the Sunday school, and to avoid a whipping by her mother she told the latter her reasons for wishing to stay away from the institution.

The girl was under cross-examination when the court adjourned at noon.

CONTINUES TO GAIN

Wheat Is Again Stronger, Making Another Good Advance.

Cash Demand Is Keen—Northwest Reports Not Favorable.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 24.—The upward course that wheat has maintained for several days was continued this morning. The opening was higher and a sharp advance, about 2c, was made in the first hour and a half. After that it fell off somewhat, but closing prices represented a good gain from the day previous. Southwestern crop reports were not so pessimistic, but the news from the Northwest was not encouraging, the Red River valley complaining of too much moisture. The cash demand is very strong. Duluth exporters sold three loads of Manitoba wheat, old crop, to go to England. Some Western wheat in Buffalo was sold at nearly 10c better than could be obtained for it a short time ago.

The Liverpool market closed ⅜d higher, Paris ¼@¾c lower, Berlin ½c lower and Budapest ¼c lower.

The Duluth market gained 1⅜c in the July option, Minneapolis 1⅛c, Chicago ⅝-⅞c, St. Louis ⅛-⅜c, Kansas City ⅝-¾c and New York ⅞c. The September options gained ⅛c in Duluth, ½-⅝c in Minneapolis and Chicago, ⅜c in New York, ⅜c in St. Louis and ¼-⅜c in Kansas City.

Car receipts at Duluth were 4, against 6 last year, and at Minneapolis 153, against 104 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 157, against 109 last year. Chicago received 5, against 20 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 289,398 bus., last year 195,106 bus. Shipments 232,317 bus., last year 230,616 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 35,650 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅝d higher. July corn in the Chicago market closed ¾-⅞c higher. July oats closed ½c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 449,000 bus., last year 472,900 bus. Shipments 160,138 bus., last year 527,929 bus. Clearances were 185,511 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was very dull. The July option opened ½c higher at $1.06⅝, advanced to $1.11¾ at 10 o'clock and fell back to $1.10½ at 11:30. It rallied again to $1.11 at 12:45, but fell off and closed at $1.10⅜, which made the gain for the day 1¾c. The May option advanced ¾c to $1.05½. The September option was also stronger, advancing ¼c to 85c.

Cash wheat was extremely dull, offerings being very light.

Flax was very dull also. The May option advanced 1¼c to $1.44¾ and closed ½c up at $1.44. September and October options were unchanged.

Oats advanced ⅜c for to arrive and ⅛c for on track.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.06½; on track No. 1 northern, $1.06⅝. No. 2 northern, $1.05. Durum No. 1, 91c; No. 2, 90c; May, $1.06½; July, $1.10⅜; September, 85c. Flax to arrive, $1.44; on track, $1.44; May, $1.44; July, $1.44; September, $1.27; October, $1.26. Oats to arrive, 31c; on track, 31c. Rye to arrive, 75c; on track, 75c. Barley—Feed, 30½@34c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 4; last year, 5; oats, 1; flax, 0; last year, 15.

Receipts: Wheat, 4,838; oats, 4,879; barley, 842; flax, 1,028.

Shipments: Wheat, 31,040; oats, 59,200.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

General Tone of Wheat Is a Trifle Easier.

Chicago, May 24.—Influenced by improved weather conditions in the West and Southwest, the general tone of the wheat market here today was a trifle easier. Continued wet weather in the Northwest, however, created considerable nervousness in the pit, causing moderate buying by small traders. Higher prices at Liverpool gave additional aid to the bulls. July opened ¼c to ⅛c higher at 90c to 90¼c. In sympathy with strength at Northwestern markets, the price of July here rose to 90⅝@½c but reacted again to 89½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 138 cars, against 99 cars last week and 129 cars a year ago.

After July had sold off to 89¾c the market became strong on an active demand resulting from revived reports of damage to the crop in the Southwest. For July the highest point of the day was reached at 90¾c. The market closed practically at the top, final quotations on July being up ⅝@⅞c at 90⅜@¾c.

Decreased receipts had a bullish effect on the corn market. The tone of the market was further strengthened by higher prices at Liverpool. July opened ¾c to ⅞c higher at 48⅜c to 48¾c and advanced to 49c. Local receipts were 162 cars, with 52 of contract grade.

Toward the noon hour a sensational bulge occurred in the price of May. A renewal of urgent demand from shorts caused the price to jump to 52c on a very small volume of trading. Just before the close the price touched 67c, a gain of 9¼c from yesterday's final quotations. The close was at 66½c, a net advance of 8¾c. July also closed at the top with a gain of ⅝@⅞c at 49¼@⅝c.

Covering by shorts caused a firm tone in the oats market. Strength of corn was a bullish factor. July opened unchanged to ⅜c higher at 29⅝c to 30c and sold at 30@30⅛c. Local receipts were 75 cars.

Provisions were easier as the result of a 5@10c decline in the price of live hogs. July pork was off 2½c at $12.55. Lard was down 2½c at $7.27½. Ribs were 2½c lower at $7.22½@7.25.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.05⅝; July, 90⅝@¾c; September, 83¼c; December, 82½c. Corn—May, 66½c; July, 49¼@⅝c; old, 49⅝@¾c; September, 48¼@⅝c; old, 48½@⅝c; December, 44⅞c, old, 45⅜c. Oats—May, 31⅝c; July, 30⅜c; September, 28½@⅝c. Pork—May, $12.50; July, $12.60; September, $12.87½. Lard—May, $7.20; July, $7.30; September, $7.47½; October, $7.47½. Ribs—May, $7.15; July, $7.25@7.27½; September, $7.50@7.52½. Rye—May, 78c; July, 60c; September, 60c. Flax—Cash northwest, $1.42; southwest, $1.26; May, $1.26. Timothy—May, $2.90; September, $3.15. Clover—May, $11.75@12.25. Barley—Cash, 42@52c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1.09@1.10; 3 red, $1.05 @1.08; 2 hard, $1.03½@1.04; 3 hard, $1@1.02; 1 northern, $1.13@1.14½; 2 northern, $1.11@ 1.12; 3 spring, $1.03@1.10. Oats—No. 2, 30½c; 3, 30¼c. Corn—No. 2, 59@64¼c; 3, 56@61½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Minneapolis Journal: From answers received by the Daily Market Record from 1,315 inquiries sent out to millers, grain handlers and others interested in the crop situation in Minnesota and the Dakotas, it appears that the spring wheat crops is in a generally good condition, although clear, warm weather is needed for some time in place of the rainy, cold weather that has prevailed during the most of this month so far.

By tabulating the answers it is found that there is an increase of 10.3 per cent in Minnesota, 11 per cent in North Dakota and a decrease of 1.9 per cent in South Dakota, compared with last year's acreage. April reports indicated an intended increase this year of 3 per cent in Minnesota, 8 to 10 per cent in North Dakota, with a decrease of 3 per cent in South Dakota.

Last year the acreage in the Northwest, according to the department of agriculture, was 13,193,655 acres, as follows: Minnesota, 5,339,394 acres; North Dakota, 4,367,294 acres; South Dakota, 3,287,667 acres. The increased area given to wheat this year, figured on the basis of above figures, would give Minnesota 5,889,351 acres, North Dakota 5,069,596 acres and South Dakota 3,224,663 acres. Total, 14,183,550 acres.

Reports on the South Dakota acreage are somewhat lower than figured on by many well posted in the grain trade, most of whom are looking for an increase of something like 10 per cent in this state, and it seems entirely proper to figure the Northwest acreage this year at about fourteen and one-quarter million acres.

The increased acreage this year should naturally give some 12,000,000 bus more wheat than was raised last year, if the crop should finally turn out as satisfactory as it did then. With favorable conditions, the present fine start warrants expectations of a crop this year larger than those of the two years preceding 1904. There are some, more optimistic than others, who are already at work estimating the crop and figuring the outlook as indicating a 250,000,000-bus crop or over.

State crop reports—

North Dakota—The past week was generally favorable for crops. The fore part was cold and damp, but was followed the latter part by considerable warmer, with occasional local showers. Grain and grass that had made but little growth on account of the previous cold, wet weather, was greatly improved by the warm sunshine, and all vegetation made rapid advancement. Wheat seeding still continues in a small way in a few localities, but it is practically finished. That sown early is mostly up, has a good stand, and is growing rapidly, except on the low lands in the eastern part of the state, where too much water has fallen, and where some fields have been drowned out, necessitating reseeding, while that sown lately is germinating rapidly. Seeding of oats, barley and rye is well advanced, while considerable progress has been made with flax seeding in the central part of the state; in other sections it is only fairly well started. In the western and central portions a great deal of breaking for flax has been done, and in the northern portions, it is still in progress. Corn planting has commenced in the central and western parts, but has been delayed in the eastern section, as most of the land is too wet to get on to work in that part of the state. Several local storms during the week did a little damage to grain that was up, but none enough to materially affect the crop.

Minnesota: The rains of last week continued till the 16th, but they were only light or moderate in most places; there were local rains again in northern portions on the 21st. The rivers and streams have fallen somewhat in central and northern portions, and low lying fields have dried up rapidly with much less injury from standing water than was anticipated. In the Minnesota bottoms and in the low lands of southern counties the water is still high. Cloudy weather continued till the middle of the week, but on the 18th, and after that, there was sunny weather which started the grains nicely and improved their color. The temperatures were low early in the week, but on the 19th, 20th and 21st, they were higher. The growth of spring and winter wheat, oats and early barley was retarded by the cool weather, but since the sun came out all growth is much more rapid. Corn planting has been started again and is now nearing completion.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—For a time in today's market prices showed a sagging tendency and it seemed as if the only thing sustaining values was the great strength in the corn pit. The real important item of news today was reports from the Northwest from what was considered conservative sources that conditions in that country is fast approaching the alarming stage. This stimulated the entire market and the pit element hastily covered the stuff sold on the early weak spell. The advance in May reflects the urgent cash demand, but trade in this month is extremely limited. While complaints of damage continue to come from a new territory each day, it must be expected that the market will become excited, but a clear weather map will do much to dispel fears already existing. The market has had a pretty stiff bulge and while it touched its former high price several times today it did not have snap enough to go through the 90¾c mark. The market closed strong enough to expect some little advance at the opening tomorrow, assuming conditions remain unchanged. On further bulges we feel that wheat can be sold for a turn.

Corn—Urgent short covering, alarmed at the slender offerings in the May, gave to this month a very excited market. The deferred futures, as was to be expected, participated somewhat in this strength, but considering the sensational advance in the May, July and September, the advance looks decidedly small in comparison. Conditions seem unchanged. The cash corn in this market is practically all held by the leaders in May, leaving the shorts to get corn from other margets or settle in the pit. Except for corn that will grade contract, there is absolutely no demand in a cash way. We still feel that sales of the new futures will result in profits.

Oats—Trade followed the strength in corn. The volume of business showed slight increase, but was slow. The futures still look like a sale to us.

Provisions—Trade in this market extremely quiet and the action of the market would indicate some little improvement. Hogs closed 5c to 10c lower, and slow at that. We continue to feel friendly to the list on declines.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Closing Strong and In Most Cases Sharply Higher.

Union Pacific and Northern Pacific Difference Settled.

New York, May 24.—International stocks made sharp opening advances, in sympathy with the higher prices in London, and carried the rest of the list with them. Northern Pacific opened 1⅞ higher, Canadian Pacific 1¾, Colorado Fuel 1½, Tennessee Coal 1¼, Union Pacific, St. Paul and United States Steel 1⅛, L. & N., Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Pacific, United States Steel preferred and D. & H. about a point, and a number of others large fractions. The trading showed considerable animation and the demand for stocks was well distributed.

Most of the orders in the market were for the long side of the account and prices were carried further upward after a short setback. Pretty nearly all of the more important stocks were quoted between 1 and 2 points above the previous close. Union Pacific, Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis and Colorado Southern first preferred gained 2 and Tennessee Coal and Northern Pacific 2⅞. Erie second preferred 3½, and Great Northern preferred 8. Peoria & Eastern fell 2¾. The recovery brought the average level of prices to about the top prices of yesterday, before the reaction set in.

Prices continued to advance on exceedingly light buying. The rise in St. Paul and Union Pacific reached 3¾, Northern Pacific 4⅜, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis 3, and New York Central, Erie, Illinois Central, United States Steel, Copper, and Locomotive 2. Peoria & Eastern rallied from 6 to 35. Wisconsin Central preferred lost 2. Bonds were firm at noon.

Moderate declines were made after 12 o'clock when the professionals began to take profits. The market, however, showed such a good absorption that the rise was resumed again by 1 o'clock, although the buying was very small. Advances were established of 6 points in American Snuff, 3½ in United States Reduction preferred, 3 in preferred, 2¾ in Sugar, 2½ in Northwestern and 2 in Ontario & Western.

A succession of small reactions were followed by quick rallies which carried the Western stocks and some of the specialties to a still higher level. The extension over the previous advances did not amount to more than a small fraction.

Prices continued to advance generally on light transactions, stimulated by revived rumors of a settlement of differences in the Northwest railroad field. Great Northern preferred was marked up 1½. Northern Pacific 7, Union Pacific 4⅜, St. Paul 3⅞ and Northwestern 4¾. Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, C. & O. and United States Rubber moved up 2 to 2⅜; United States Steel preferred 2½, Erie, New York Central, Illinois Central, Tennessee Cial, Copper and Westinghouse Electric 3 to 3¾; General Electric 4, Colorado Southern first preferred 3⅜ and Lackawanna 6. There was no appreciable effect from profit-taking and the close was buoyant.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed strong and in most cases sharply higher. All through the session market was strong but not until late in the day did the market get its real bull clothes on and advance sharply. Much of the strength came through what seemed like an authentic report that the difference existing between the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific had at last been amicably settled. The continued strength in Union Pacific badly frightened the large short interests in that and other stocks, and the advance on the curb in Northern Securities added to their distress. The tone of the market seems more cheerful and it looks tonight as if the advance could be carried further.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was a great change from yesterday. There was heavy short covering and prices recovered rapidly. The selling stopped sharply and there was little stock for sale. All the good stocks advanced and under the lead of Union Pacific the advance was held. The afternoon market continued to advance and closed at best figures. Traders were talking bullish.

• • •

Hutton to Paine, Webber & Co.: There is one thing we do know and that is that the strongest financial institutions are buying stocks on a considerable scale and good stocks are down 20 to 35 points, and considering the crops 10 per cent better than the average and 25 per cent better than last year, and the prospect for cheaper money until next winter the securities are a buy.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 24.—Money on call easy, 2@2½, closing bid 2, offered at 2½ per cent. Time money easy, 60 days, 3 per cent, 90 days, 4¼ per cent; 6 months, 3¼@4. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4¼ per cent. Bar silver, 59¼c; Mexican dollars, 46c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 24.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 1@7 points near month's showing the greatest gain in response to much firmer cables than looked for and reports of continued rain in the belt. There was such heavy realizing at the advance, but there was also active buying by local and southern shorts. Liverpool sent buying orders to the local market and during the first hour prices ruled generally steady to firm with the active months advancing to a net gain of about 8@10 points.

Spot closed quiet, 10 points up; middling uplands, 8.65; ditto gulf, 8.90. Sales 900 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 8.38; June, 8.09; July, 8.17; August, 8.16; September, 8.15; October, 8.19; November, 8.22; December, 8.26; January, 8.31; February, 8.33; March, 8.38.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed a distinct rally all through the list. Good buying was in evidence, and this, together with the short covering, advanced prices from 2 to 5 points. There were very few copper stocks offered, especially Osceola, Mohawk and Range. The close was strong and at practically top prices, but we still advise purchases only when the market is weak as we expect a traders' market for the time being, with frequent fluctuations of 2 or 3 points.

SHE FIXED HIM.

In a crowded subway train a pretty young woman of sedate and almost haughty appearance occupied a cross seat with a rather tipsy man who kept leaning over and repeating to her ear:

"I do so love to sit beside a good looking girl."

Her blank stare failed to silence him, says the New York Sun. As he continued his compliments her cheeks grew redder and redder, until she finally rose with dignified disdain and hung on a strap.

Her place was immediately filled by a buxom young woman of the pompadour type. Not in the least daunted by the change of the object of his neighbor, the tipsy man began repeating his speeches in his new companion's ear. The latter turned to him with a decisive twist of the head and said: "Shut up, you old fool!"

The tipsy man subsided into his overcoat and the woman of the pompadour rode in peace to Harlem.

A NEW SCHEME.

The postal clerks, a long suffering group of civil servants, have another kick coming, says the New York Sun.

It arises from the persistent effort of the magazine advertisers to enlist the buying public as Pinkertons to determine the value of the different periodicals at advertising mediums. The beginnings were very simple, a polite request to "mention this magazine" in ordering. But the people neglected the mention. The next step was a suggestion to clip the advertisement and send it with the order. Even that failed to let the advertiser see that it had any concern in the value of any particular medium to the advertiser. The next stage was the keyed "ad." If you saw the "ad" in one magazine you were directed to write for Catalogue D, which in another magazine was Catalogue E, and so on through the alphabet. Still the insensate public wrote for the key and the advertiser had no way of finding out from what magazine his new business was coming. Now the advertiseh has won. He puts his key in the street number of his address, as may be seen by comparing the same advertisement in the different magazines. By that means the advertiser can compel the buyer to do his detective work for him. But it is hard on the postal clerks and the mail carriers, whose duty it is to see that each of these carefully misdirected letters reaches its destination.

PLUNGE OF PALMER

Thrilling Experience of Duluth Man on Ill-Fated Steamer.

Leonard McNamara, Her Engineer, Tells of It.

"The sight presented by the Thomas Palmer as she sank, was one that is never witnessed more than once in a lifetime," said Leonard McNamara, the engineer of the sunken steamer, this morning.

Mr. McNamara is a Duluth man, who was employed on the Palmer this year. He just returned to his home last evening, after escaping from the sinking steamer. Continuing he said:

"The boat went down bow first, and you could see her wheel and rudder and a large part of her keel as the stern rose in the air. The air in the hold wrenched the entire deck and the houses loose like you would sweep some dishes off the table by pulling away the cloth. It was one of the greatest sights I ever witnessed.

"We were bound for Ashland with coal and the Harvard was down-bound with a load of ore. We were about nine miles off the Stannard rock light, about 8 o'clock in the morning. It was foggy at the time the accident happened. It was my watch off, and I was asleep in my berth when the collision occurred. It threw me right out of my berth on to the floor. I snatched a few clothes and ran up stairs as fast as I could go.

"The Harvard had struck us on the port side between the second and third hatch. Our crew saw there was no hope and we piled into the Harvard, running across a ladder that was run out for us. When we all got aboard, the Harvard backed off and within a couple of minutes the Palmer dived to the bottom of the lake.

"None of the men had time to save any of their belongings, but we were thankful to get off with our lives. I lost my entire outfit with the exception of one or two articles I grabbed on my way out. We will probably all get back our money for the clothes, but there will be a lot of red tape about it."

Mr. McNamara was last year employed as engineer on the tug Record of the Union Towing & Wrecking company.

WILL PRESENT CLASS PLAY

Program Decided on For the Class Night Exercises.

After much discussion and investigation the program the senior class will present at the class night exercises has been finally decided upon.

A three act comedy entitled, "Men, Maids and Matchmakers" will form the principal part of the entertainment, as it will take two hours to present it. The personnel of the cast has not yet been definitely announced, but it will be made up largely of those who took part in the annual senior play that was given some time ago with such great success. They have had experience, and a first class production is assured. Prof. Custance will have charge of the program.

The play was decided upon in preference to the series of tableaux that were formerly contemplated as it was thought that a better program would result. At the first of the term it was stated that the old class history and prophecy would be discarded as the class was becoming too large to permit of their being successfully presented without clumsiness. The last will and testament will also be characterized by entirely new features, thus adding a still greater interest to the evening's exercises.

This afternoon the senior class members gathered in front of the east entrance in order to have their picture taken in a group. It is proposed to have one of them enlarged and framed and to leave it in the school.

The Jarvis Concert.

There is a strong and widespread interest in the benefit entertainment to be given at the Lyceum theater, Wednesday, May 31, for St. John's Episcopal church. The musical program is a choice one and promises an evening of rare pleasure to those attending. Harold Jarvis, the famous tenor, who will be heard in Duluth for the first time on that occasion, is the principal attraction. His Scotch songs are especially good. Press notices speak of him in a very flattering manner. Hon. W. J. Nolan of Minneapolis will also be on the program. He has an established reputation as an entertainer.

POLICY UNCHANGED.

Paper Trust Witnesses Decline to Answer Questions.

Milwaukee, May 24.—A change of witnesses in the suit of the United States against the General Paper company today failed to change the policy of the defense.

When W. Z. Stuart, former general sales agent of the company, was asked questions by Attorney Kellogg bearing on the profits of the company and the sales of the individual mills, he was instructed by counsel not to answer. He did say, however, that the General Paper company made contracts with jobbers all over the country to whom paper was shipped direct by the mills.

Just Wanted Furniture.

The attaches at the clerk of court's office were given quite a turn yesterday afternoon when a Duluthian appeared and, after going through the record of marriage licenses issued, announced that the expected that his wife had run away with another fellow and that they would probably attempt to get married. The deserted husband took the desertion with good grace, but he was much put out because his wife took with her, while he was away in the woods, all the furniture. The husband said, when he left the courthouse, that he would go over to Superior to see if he could find the furniture as he would like to get it back.

New Fire Engine.

The new fire engine purchased for No. 4 fire hall is now in use there. The engine was received in Duluth about six weeks ago, but owing to the fact that some repairs were necessary on the engine in No. 3 hall, the new steamer was placed in No. 3 temporarily.

The repairs are now complete and the new engine has been sent out to the East end hall at Fourteenth avenue and Second street.

THE GOVERNMENT MAY LOOK INTO EQUITABLE.

New York, May 24.—William F. King, former president of the New York Merchants 'association has received a reply from President Roosevelt to Mr. King's suggestion, that a national committee to investigate the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society. Mr. King regards the reply as favorable. One paragraph from the president's letter was as follows:

"The department of commerce and labor is now carefully going into the matter, to see whether the government has any power or not."

PRESIDENT URGED

To Take Interest In the Equitable Muddle.

Washington, May 24.—An effort was made today to induce President Roosevelt to take an active interest in the complications which have arisen in the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society. Clarence Whitman, president of the Merchants' association of New York and a conference with the president on the subject. Details of the conference were not obtainable, but it is known that Mr. Whitman urged the president to take up the matter with a view either to ordering a government investigation or to making recommendations to congress on the matter of insurance legislation.

Mr. Whitman's suggestion was not the first of its kind the president has received. In a letter from a prominent New York man, whose name is not disclosed, the president recently was urged strongly to institute an investigation of the Equitable affairs by government officials. It can be said that up to this time, the president has not seen his way clear to the taking of any action in the case of the Equitable company specifically.

ATTEMPTED BRIBERY

Of Juror Alleged In the Whiteman Case.

Buffalo, May 24.—Owing to the continued illness of a juror, the trial of Alonzo J. Whiteman has been put over for the term.

After the case had been disposed of today, information that an attempt had been made to bribe a juror to remain away from the Whiteman trial was given out at the office of the district attorney. Assistant District Attorney Ryan said Juror Faling today submitted to the district attorney's office a letter, addressed to the juror's wife, containing $50. The purport of the letter, according to Mr. Ryan, was that Faling was to receive the $50 for remaining away from the court as long as he had done, and that he would get $50 more if he would stay away another day.

Change In Rules.

An important decision has just been received in the local land office from Washington in the case of Ethel Marjorie McMillan, who sought to prove up on a homestead consisting of lots 5, 6, 9, 10 in 19-12. The local office has been holding that in case the ten days' grace after the day for proving up, ends on a Sunday, proof may be made Monday. SECRET OF SUCCESS.

New York Sun: "Did you ever notice," said the philosopher at the Chinese play, "that every Chinaman who wears whiskers is a magnate? You know, not one Chinaman in a hundred has hair on his face naturally. If a Chinaman has a beard, he cultivates it for all it's worth. I used to think whiskers in a Chinaman were a sort of sign of intellectual superiority, but I've changed my opinion. You've heard it said, I suppose, that the eminent and successful men of the world are more likely to be very tall or very short than medium sized.

"There's a principle in that; it's the same principle that makes a whiskered Chinese successful. The man who has something unusual about his appearance attracts attention. He gets a hearing. That faculty of getting a hearing easily often counts enough in a man's life to turn the scales from failure to success. And that's why the Chinaman with whiskers usually succeeds in life."

WHERE RENTS ARE HIGH.

Fifty thousand dollars a year is too big a lump sum to pay in rent, and even Mr. Whitelaw Reid's exchequer rebels at paying so much for a London roof over his ambassadorial head, says the Kansas City Journal. Everything is a relative matter in this world, but the representative of Uncle Sam's government should set a better example in expenditure to his compatriots, and, from all accounts, he intends to do so. Probably the home of the Reids for the next three years will be rented at a beggarly price, not more than $45,000, to say the worst.

INCREASING HIS CAPACITY.

An East side youngster, who is much of a gormandizer, in dining out some days ago shocked his mother painfully, says the Kansas City Journal. He had eaten with his desert, a large piece of cake, and the hostess, when he had finished, asked if he could not eat another piece of plum cake. Little Johnny looked slyly out of the corner of his eye at his mother, then disregarding her warning frown, turned to the hostess and said: "Perhaps I could, if I stood up."

MURDER MYSTERY IN THE TOWN OF SAVANNA DEEPENS BY SUICIDE OF SUSPECT

Bothwell Pulford, Wealthiest Citizen, Ends Life By Shooting.

Was Believed By People to Have Killed Attorney Berry.

Formerly His Best Friend, Later His Deadliest Enemy.

Savanna, Ill., May 25.—Bothwell Pulford, reputed to be the wealthiest citizen of Savanna, committed suicide today a few moments after being questioned regarding the whereabouts of a revolver with which he was suspected of having slain Attorney Daniel S. Berry, former leading member of the Illinois legislature. Pulford had denied any knowledge of the killing of Berry, but became agitated when questioned concerning the revolver. The story has been widely circulated that Berry was killed as a result of attention paid by him to a married woman. Pulford, on arriving at his store today, found a newspaper man waiting for him with queries as to the revolver. As soon as the interviewer had left, Pulford hurried home, and going to the hay loft of his barn, shot himself dead.

Pulford arose early today and went to his store. He appeared to be working under great strain. After opening the doors of the store and of the safe, he placed the money in the cash register and was leaving by the back door, when a newspaper correspondent stopped him.

"Mr. Pulford, I would like to ask you one question in regard to your revolvers," he said.

"I can't talk to you now," said Pulford. "I am going to the house to get breakfast, but I will be back in just a minute." Mr. Pulford appeared to be in haste and turned quickly and walked towards his home. Fifteen minutes later a report was heard in the street, and when an investigation was made Pulford was found dead. He had ended his life with a single bullet. Climbing to the left of the barn in which he kept his hay, he stood near a window, pressed the muzzle of his revolver against the right side of his forehead, fired, and fell back dead. At the sound of the revolver, Mrs. Pulford became hysterical. When the neighbors reached the house she was wailing frantically, her two daughters at her side. For two months Pulford has shown signs of mental strain.

When Daniel Berry was killed in Pulford's opera house, last Monday, and the authorities began to question Pulford, it was evident to those who knew him best that Pulford's mind was giving away.

"He is not mentally sound," said Chief of Police C. C. Barker, two days ago, "I am afraid he will kill himself."

Similar fear was felt by Mrs. Pulford. After the suicide today she kept reiterating wildly, "I knew he would do it! I knew he would do it!"

Pulford's death ends the life of a man who rose from a poor boy to the position of one of the wealthiest men in this section of Illinois. A tireless worker, he accumulated money fast, and besides owning much of the most valuable real estate of Savanna, he was the president of the Commercial bank and the owner of the electric light system. He lived for his business. He was in his store daily at 7 a. m., and seldom left it until 11 at night.

A remarkable circumstance in connection with the death of Pulford and Berry is a report that Pulford received his first substantial business opening through the influence of Berry.

For nearly eight years Pulford, a man 50 years old, nervous almost to the point of insanity, has been insanely jealous of "Big Dan" Berry. Time and again the men have threatened each other and both men have gone armed for years. Despite this, Pulford has stated that he and Berry were on friendly terms.

It is claimed by their closet friends that the men have not spoken since the day that Pulford, wild with jealousy, openly accused Berry of alienating the affections of his wife. Yet, in spite of this fact, Berry has continued to occupy offices in the Opera House block, owned by Pulford, and in which the druggist has his store.

The woman in the case is Mrs. Sidney Pulford. She was Mrs. Sidney Jinks, and the gossips in Savanna declare that Pulford was the instigator of the divorce that she secured from her first husband. She is a tall, buxom woman, with jet black hair and black eyes, with regular features and beautiful teeth. She was born and reared at Hanover, a small town ten miles from Savanna, and she was the village belle.

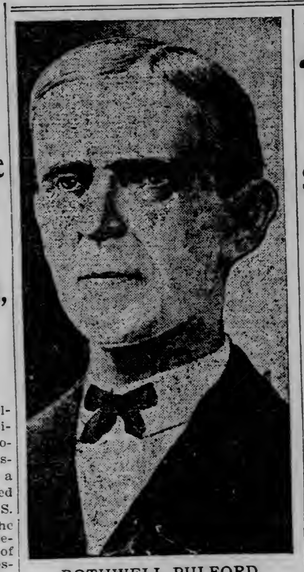
About nine years ago she was married to "Bob" Pulford, then a struggling druggist, having a hard time to keep his head above the financial waters. Pulford was a nervous, excitable man, lithe, and strong as a panther, although bent and shriveled by hard work and worry. He established her in a comfortable home, less than a block through the alleys, from his place of business.

"Dan" Berry at that time was one of the leading politicians of the state, a big, bluff, hearty man, accused of boodling and undoubtedly the leader of the "big four," that controlled the legislative destinies of the state.

Financial troubles came in heaps upon Pulford. He was on the verge of ruin, when he consulted Berry, and the lawyer, by desperate efforts, managed to straighten out the financial tangle and put the struggling druggist on the high road to wealth. From the time that "Dan" Berry straightened things out the monetary affairs of Pulford flourished and his love affairs began to go wrong.

They were close friends for a long time, closer than most men ever get to each other, and the big, bluff, hearty lawyer, a physical giant and a mental power, seemed to be the idol of the nervous, lithe druggist, who, through real estate investments and building ventures, was growing rich so fast.

Then the gossips began to talk. They said that they saw "Dan" Berry slip notes into the hands of the comely grass widow who had become the wife of Pulford. They told of meetings on the street and of conversations in public places. Some of them said they saw Berry walking with Mrs. Pulford.



BOTHWELL PULFORD.

About seven years ago Pulford publicly charged Berry with being too friendly with his wife. Berry, of course, denied the charge and the relations of the two men became severely strained.

Attorneys and business men, employes in the opera house block, declare that they have never known of Mrs. Pulford being inside Berry's office. Yet, after the men ceased to speak to each other and to carry revolvers in fear of trouble, it is known that Pulford on several occasions walked to and fro in the hallway in front of Berry's office for long periods. Once, during this performance, Berry said:

"I'll go out and throw that —— sneaking, skulking cur down the stairs."

Now, during the financial difficulties of Pulford he transferred part of his property to his wife, and, after Berry straightened the tangle out, she declined to sign it back to him, holding what she had. It was commonly reported all over the town that there was serious trouble between the Pulfords, but so far as anyone knows there were few open outbreaks and the man appeared to love the woman almost insanely.

PIG IRON QUIET

Although Consumption Is Going on at a Great Rate.

There Is Fair Volume of Orders For Early Delivery.

New York, May 25.—In all the leading distributing centers, the pig iron market is very quiet, according to the Iron Age. No sales of consequence for forward delivery have taken place, but there is a fair volume of orders for early delivery, and consumers are taking their iron on old contracts steadily. Sharp distinction must be made between the volume of buying and the current or future consumption. Production has been very slightly in excess of requirements, but that does not mean that consumption is not going on at an unprecedented rate. In fact there are some indications that the foundry trade is picking up a little.

Sentiment has changed, however, prices are weaker and buyers are holding off, convinced that a somewhat lower level in pig iron will be reached.

Some reports have been current that the Steel corporation would purchase pig iron for June delivery, but it is authoritatively stated that from present indications such purchases in the open market for June are not probable. The maximum in production evidently has been passed.

Steel billets are somewhat easier, and it is worthy of notice that the leading interest is again offering steel more freely abroad.

As for finished products, the consumption is quite heavy and new tonnage coming up readily. The lighter lines distributed chiefly by the jobbing trade, the merchants bought late last year and early this year in anticipation of the spring demand, tempted by low prices. The mills, therefore, were rushed and are still busy making deliveries or accumulating the usual stocks. The summer dullness has, therefore, been transferred to the spring.

Many of the jobbers overbought and, have good margins below official prices, which had been advanced in the meantime, have made concessions. There are now conflicting reports as to the extent to which they have cleaned up. Some observers state that, notably in tubes, the movement has lately been heavy.

In the rail trade, there has been some new business. One Northern mill has taken 12,000 tons for an Alabama road, and a lot for Michigan, and a number of other orders running up to 5,000 tons have been placed.

ABSOLUTELY NO HOPE FOR EXPRESS DRIVERS

Senator Platt Says the Strikers Will Never Be Re-employed.

Violated Union Contract and Company Contracts As Well.

Cannot Trust Men Who Will Go Back On Agreements.

New York, May 25.—That the express companies will not recede from the position they have taken in connection with the strike in Chicago, was the statement made today by United States Senator Thomas C. Platt, president of the United States Express company. The senator explained at length the attitude of the affected companies and concluded with the positive statement, that the striking drivers in Chicago would not be re-employed.

"The wagon men in Chicago left the express companies service at the demand of the Teamsters' union," said the senator, "and in so doing they not only violated the union contract with the express companies but what is of more importance, they violated their signed agreements with the express companies to obey rules and regulations. Their action materially affected the ability of the express company to discharge its public duties and caused serious loss and damage. Such men cannot, in the very nature of things, be taken back into the express companies, nor is it at all possible for the express companies to discharge their public duties by employing any men in their places who would act in the same manner. It must be understood that the express companies occupy the position of public servants, and they consider themselves under legal obligations to transport the property which is offered them for transportation and under moral, if not legal obligations to deliver it at points where they have delivery service. Manifestly, the express companies cannot entrust its business to men who are liable at the demand of the union to break their agreements with the companies and refuse to discharge their duties. Any such condition of affairs would simply produce chaos. They companies must maintain a purely neutral attitude in all such matters and discharge their public duties without fear or favor."

Chicago, May 25.—Efforts to increase the force of police on active duty guarding wagons for strike bound business establishments were carried on today with the utmost vigor. To such extent was this done that every detective in the city was said to have been assigned to work ordinarily done by uniformed police. Sixty detective sergeants, many of whom had not carried clubs for fifteen years, found themselves marching today from the city hall armed with the regulation hickory. The sergeants were taken to different express company headquarters. Among the sergeants who today on express and other wagons took chances of brickbats and broken glass were a number who had guarded President McKinley and President Roosevelt on gala visits to Chicago.

C. S. Wicke, secretary of the Hines Lumber company said today that inside of a week 100,000 men who work in wood will be out of employment if the tie up of the lumber district continues. The wood working mills are already affected.

F. D. Smith, of the hardwood lumber firm of F. R. Crane company asserted that already 6,000 lumber yard workers have been laid off on account of lack of business. Fifty mills will be forced to shut down within a week. Lumber and sawmills in the northwest are beginning to curtail operations. All orders for delivery of lumber to Chicago have been cancelled.

President Shea of the Teamsters' union held a different view of the prospect for a complete tie up of the wood and building industries. He did not agree with the prophecies of the lumber dealers. He said:

"All this talk of tying up the building industry is idiocy."

Before leaving for Judge Kohlsaat's court, where he was instructed to appear to answer to a charge of contempt, Mr. Shea conferred with several labor representatives, and outlined plans for the carrying on of the strike today and tomorrow. Later, he remarked laconically: "I have only one conference on today. That one is with Judge Kohlsaat."

Referring to his defiance of the court, Mr. Shea said: "I am in contempt of court. They will put me in jail. They may never let me out. If they keep me in jail until I lose my contempt, I don't know how many years I may have to serve. The whole proceeding is worthy of contempt. It was the most outrageous thing in the name of justice I have ever seen anywhere. It did not resemble a court in anyway."

EGG CANDLERS RETURN.

Chicago, May 25.—The egg candlers' strike has been declared off. The demand of the men for an incerase of 2 cents an hour was granted, while several concessions in the way of working conditions were secured by the employers. The contract provides for the settlement of all disputes by arbitration. More than 300 men are affected.

GOVERNOR HERRICK IS RENOMINATED

Ohio's Executive Placed at Head of Ticket By Acclamation.

Columbus, Ohio, May 25.—In a convention almost devoid of striking features, and notable chiefly for the unanimity which prevailed, the Republicans of Ohio today completed the choice of party candidates for the fall election, and adopted a platform of principles covering leading national and state issues. The ticket named has been known, with only one exception, for several months, and for lieutenant governor the contest was so quiet that all opposition was withdrawn and every candidate was nominated by acclamation. Gen. Harris, the candidate for second place, held the same position during the late William McKinley's two terms as governor. The ticket named is as follows:

Governor—Myron T. Herrick.

Lieutenant governor—Andrew L. Harris.

Judge of the supreme court—William C. Davis.

Attorney general—Wade Ellis.

State treasurer—W. S. McKinnon.

Member of board of public works—William Kirtley.

Convention Hall, Columbus, Ohio, May 25.—Temporary Chairman Taft was on hand today ahead of the hour to which the Republican state convention had adjourend, and called the delegates to order without delay. The report of the credentials committee was presented, giving its decision on three contests, and was adopted without debate. That the temporary organization be made permanent was the recommendation of the committee on organization, and its report was unanimously adopted, a burst of applause greeting Mr. Taft as he returned thanks on behalf of the temporary officers. Within ten minutes after convening the report of the committee on resolutions was called for, and Senator Dick, chairman of that committee was cheered heartily as he came to the front of the platform. He read the report as follows:

The Republicans of Ohio, in state convention representing their largest vote, rejoicing with our entire country in the election of President Roosevelt and Vice President Fairbanks, renew their pledge to uphold the principles and policies decisively victorious in November last, which by their success maintain the steady progress of national prosperity.

We reaffirm unequivocally the Republican state and national platforms of 1904. We stand by the principles of protection to American labor and American industries. We believe that congress should so legislate that American ships with American sailors shall carry American products over all seas and through the Panama canal that the United States of America is building. The American navy should be made and kept equal to every need. We are proud of the steady progress in Americanizing our island possessions, and of our country's great and growing power in promoting the peace of the world. The amendments to the constitution are as sacred as the original instrument. The sacredness of the ballot must be maintained and unjust discrimination based directly or indirectly on race, color, or previous condition, must not be tolerated. Always supporting genuine progress, evolution not revolution, liberty not license, the Republican party continues to oppose every insidious device to undermine and destroy the stability of our civil institutions.

President Roosevelt's comprehensive enforcement of the Republican laws against monopolies, combines and trusts in restraint of trade, laws whose validity the supreme court of the United States has sustained, has our hearty encouragement and support. We also endorse every effort for the active enforcement of existing laws to stop all unjust discriminations and special favors in the form of railroad rebates or by any other device, and we favor such further legislation that subject, with adequate penalties as may, Republican congress wise and conservative, yet adequate to prevent unfair advantage to any and to promote and insure the rights of all individuals, in this and other localities.

Both capital and labor will continue to receive the rich rewards of our general prosperity, if they work harmoniously together to maintain existing conditions. Differences there may be, adjustments there should be between employers and employes.

From Lincoln to Roosevelt every Republican elected president was a soldier son of Ohio, and their comrades have had rightful preference in elective and appointive positions at the hands of the Republican party. The Republican pension system and all laws for our nation's defenders and their dependents, should be generously maintained and administered.

Recognizing the rivers and harbors of the country as important factors in the continued commercial growth of our nation, we favor increased and regular appropriations by congress for their improvement.

We favor the thorough revision and strengthening of the banking laws of the state, safeguarding every interest and aiming to make the banking system of Ohio the best in the country in its protection of the public.

In all matters of material and moral development the record of the Republican party proves that, while avoiding extremes, it has ever kept abreast of the best thought and has provided needed legislation as rapidly as public sentiment was prepared to sustain and enforce it. This record is the Republican promise and pledge for the future.

The motion of Senator Dick for the adoption of the platform was adopted unanimously.

Chairman Taft asked the clerk to read the rule regarding the limitation on nominating speeches, and after the reading called for nominations for governor. Paul Howard of Cleveland, who presented the name of Myron T. Herrick to the state convention two years ago, again named his fellowtownsman, and his speech roused the delegates more than anything that preceded it during the day. A storm of "Noes" greeted the chairman's question, "Are there any more nominations."

Congressman Burton's motion that the nomination be made by acclama-

PHILA. COUNCIL MAY IMPEACH THE MAYOR

Such Said to Be Plan of Republican "Organization" Leaders.

Philadelphia, May 25.—It is rumored that the Republican "organization" leaders intend to impeach Mayor Weaver. With this end in view, it is said, a special meeting of select council will be called for tomorrow afternoon for this purpose. In the event of the impeachment of the mayor, President of Select Council Harry C. Ransley, who is the "organization" candidate for sheriff, will act as mayor for sixty days. Meanwhile a special election for mayor will be held and a new mayor chosen for the regular four-year term. Malfeasance in office is the ground upon which the impeachment proceedings will be based. The "organization" leaders claim they have the proof to sustain the charges.

Mayor Weaver has taken forcible possession of the offices of director of public safety and director of public works. Neither Director Smyth nor Director Costello offered serious resistance. Four detectives are now on guard at the offices.

Accompanied by his counsel and four detectives, Mayor Weaver went to the office of Director of Public Safety Smyth. He informed that officer that he had been dismissed and that his presence in the office was trespass. Director Smyth withdrew from the office. The mayor placed two detectives in charge and then went to the office of Director of Public Works Costello, where the same ceremony was repeated. Mr. Costello also quit his office and detectives were placed in charge.

THOUSANDS OF MEN

Sworn In as Special Police and Deputies.

Chicago, May 25.—With the strike spreading each hour in the lumber district and no signs of peace in sight, affairs in the teamsters' strike assumed a serious aspect today.

Unable to meet the demands for police protection, Mayor Dunne issued a call for 1,000 able-bodied citizens to report at Chief O'Neill's office at once and be sworn in as policemen to do strike duty. Sheriff Barrett continued to swear in deputies. The number of deputies sworn in since the beginning of the strike now numbers 4,000, one-fourth of whom are active deputies assigned to protect non-union drivers and wagons. Armed sentries were guarding the various armories located in the city and the officers expected a call to arms at any moment. Fifty thousand rounds of amunition have been distributed among the four regiments in the city and the naval militia.

ROJESTVENSKY'S FLEET IS SIGHTED NORTH OF PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Were Off the Coast of Batan and Sailing In Northeasterly Direction.

Admiralty Says He Is Steaming North to Force Admiral Togo to Fight.

Russians Believe Fight Will Occur Before Fleet Reaches Jap Coast.

Manila, May 25.—Official advices have been received from Vigan that on May 20 over fifty war vessels were sighted off the east coast of the Batan islands, sailing in a northeast direction. It is supposed that the vessels were Russian. The Batan islands are about half way between Luzon and Formosa.

Nagasaki, May 25.—The captain of the steamer Oscar II reports that on May 19, at 9 a. m., he was stopped in the Batan straits by a Russian warship. In that vicinity he saw fourteen cruisers and six torpedo boat destroyers.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—Admiral Avellan, head of the Russian admiralty department, confirms the Associated Press dispatches, saying Vice Admiral Rojestvensky is steaming north to give battle to Admiral Togo. He considers it possible that news that the two fleets have met may be received any day.

In an interesting interview Admiral Avellan reaffirms the official denial of the report that Rojestvensky has broken down and asked to be relieved. Avellan says Rojestvensky sent detailed reports of the condition of his own health and of the health of the crews of his ships. The constant tension and hard work of the past months have been a gret strain on the admiral's health.

"Even before he left," said Avellan, "Rojestvensky was a sufferer from kidney trouble, but his health is no worse. His reports breath a spirit of strength, resoluteness and confidence and other reports show he has inspired his crews with the confidence of their commander. As a matter of fact, it is not Rojestvensky, but Vice Admiral Voelkersam who has suffered from the long stay in the tropics. The appointment of Vice Admiral Birilieff as successor to Vice Admiral Skrydloff at Vladivostok will in nowise affect Rojestvensky's status. The later's mission as chief of the fleet is to take it to Vladivostok. There will be no antagonism when he gets there. The two admirals are on excellent terms, which began long ago when Rojestvensky served under Birileff. Both are iron disciplinarians and Rojestvensky will give his superior the same loyal obedience that he demands of his subordinates."

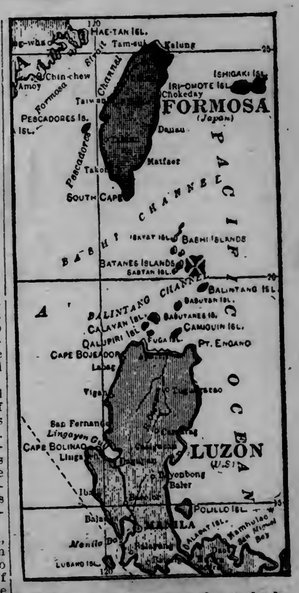
"Do you anticipate a sea fight soon?" the admiral was asked.

He replied: "Certainly. The Japanese cannot afford to allow Rojestvensky to reach Vladivostok without a fight. I expect it to take place in the near future, though I admit the admiralty knows nothing of Rojestvensky's strategy or plans, the emperor having accorded him complete freedom of action. Possibly it is his present purpose to seek Admiral Togo and force a fight, but it is more probable that Rojestvensky is bound for his base at Vladivostok. However, I can say nothing definite on this point."

In response to a suggestion that Togo might intentionally allow Rojestvensky to get to Vladivostok contenting himself with torpedo attacks while the Russians are on their way there and then try to bottle Rojestvensky up in Vladivostok Admiral Avellan smilled and said:

"The story of Port Arthur will not be repeated. Rojestvensky is not the kind of man to allow himself to be locked up in a port. If he gets to Vladivostok he will not rest on his laurels but will seek an engagement. He will try to wrest the mastery of the sea from Togo. There are many ways of compelling Togo to accept battle. Rojestvensky will only have to bombard one of the coast cities to force Togo to appear in its defense."

Admiral Avellan repudiates the reports that a number of chartered colliers sent to Vladivosok were captured by the Japanese owing to the connivance of their captains who arranged to receive half the price of their cargoes for betraying their route and time of departure. The admiral explains that the colliers were lost through delay in the receipts of orders telegraphed to them by the admiralty to go to Vladivostok by way of La Perouse straits instead of through the straits of Korea.



The star on above map shows the location of the Russian fleet near the Batan islands, when last reported. It is evidently bound into the Pacific ocean en route for Vladivostok.

Two of these vessels which passed through La Perouse straits arrived safely at Vladivostok.

A private letter from the commander of one of Rojestvensky's torpedo boat dcstroyers mailed at Saigon, describes the fleets' passage of the Indian ocean.

NO INFORMATION

At Admiralty Concerning Reported Battle With Togo.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—The admiralty has no information confirmatory of the Manila report of the defeat of Admiral Togo, south of Formosa. While it is considered possible that there may have been a brush between scouts, the idea of an open battle with Togo is not credited in the best-informed naval circles where the opinion is expressed that Admiral Togo would not dare to risk bring his battleship division so far south to meet Admiral Rojestvensky. It is believed that Togo will try to keep in touch with the Russians by means of fast cruisers and await his approach off the Japanese coast. According to the admiralty's calculations, Rojestvensky should now be far out in the Pacific almost 1,000 miles northeast of the place where the battle is reported to have occurred.

FREIGHT MEN WORRYING.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 25.—Local freight men are worrying over the shrinkage in east bound shipments, a condition which it is claimed is brought about by the Chicago teamsters' strike. The citrous fruit traffic is the one most affected. As it has been impossible to make deliveries of the fruit for nearly two weeks, the shipments have suddenly been shut off.

RECEIVER FOR BANK.

Goldfield, Nev., May 25.—A. Hirschfield, has been appointed receiver of the Goldfield Bank & Trust company. His bonds have been placed at $200,000. J. H. Boal, cashier of the bank for whom a warrant has been issued, has been located. F. L. Burton, who is under arrest in San Francisco, insists that the bank securities are ample to protect liabilities.

STEEL RAIL POOL IS DISSOLVED

New York, May 25.—Responsible authority is claimed by the Journal of Commerce for a statement that the steel rail pool, the combination of six of the largest mills of the country, to make prices on tonnage had been officially dissolved. The dissolution, it is believed, however, will have little bearing on prices of steel rails for several months at least, as the tonnage of the mills, practically for the entire year 1905, has been aloted and any reduction in price of new business would mean a corresponding reduction on the old contracts. The mills in the agreement were the Illinois Steel company's mills and the Carnegie mills of the United States Steel corportation; the Pennsylvania Steel company, the Maryland Steel company; the Cambria Steel company and the Lackawanna Steel company. The last named has been a member this year only, having last year begun making rails. The mills not in the combine are the Tennessee Coal & Iron company's mills in Alabama, the Colorado Fuel & Iron company mills in Colorado and the Republic Steel company's mills at Youngstown, O.

The official pool price has since 1901 been $28, and in that year the average price was $27.33 and in 1900, $32.29.

The decision of the administration to purchase supplies for the construction of the Panama canal in the cheapest markets is understood to have been partly responsible for the sudden action taken by the manufacturers. There has been no disagreement of moment in the pool and no sign of internal trouble.

FIELD DAY SPORTS

High School Classes Will Hold Annual Meet Saturday.

Team For Big Meet At Ironwood Will Be Picked.

Saturday afternoon the preliminary, interclass field day of the Duluth Central high school will be held at the driving park for the purpose of selecting the men who will compose the track team that will represent the school at the five cornered meet to be held in Ironwood, Mich., on June 10 between the Ironwood, Bessemer, Ashland, Superior and Duluth high schools.

Some likely candidates have been brought out during the preliminary practice, and the students look for some broken records.

In order to qualify for the team it is necessary to win one first and one second place in the meet Saturday. This, however, does not assure him of a place on the team, and he will have to defend it against all comers until June 10.

Robert Smith is captain of the track team and Allan Nelson, the manager.

THE BAPTISTS MAY REVOLT

Against Receiving Donations of Money From J. D. Rockefeller.

Pittsfield, Mass., May 25.—Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren avenue Baptist church of Boston, says the Baptists from Maine to California are about to revolt against accepting contributions of money from John D. Rockefeller. Rev. Mr. Johnson was one of the first clergymen in the country to denounce Rockefeller and his gift-giving. In reply to the question, "Are Baptists to continue to receive Mr. Rockefeller's money?" Rev. Mr. Johnson said:

"While the masses of the Baptists are not affected with the feeling of protest, nevertheless to my knowledge, to my personal knowledge, there are Baptist ministers in all parts of the United States who are ready to unite in a public protest, for they have declared their willingness over their own signatures. I believe this protest will be made. It is not a sporadic uprising, but part of a movement calculated to change the standard of ethics in the churches of the United States.

"These are facts which no newspapers have hinted at before this, because it was not known that such a plan was on. The Associated Press had an interview with me on tainted money and that interview along with the statement of others was telegraphed all over the country. The result has been a flood of letters from every quarter of the continent, and they are all in the same strain.

"Since this agitation began one of the most prominent men in this country, one whose name represents something in the world, sent a business associate of Rockefeller's, a mutual friend, to the king of finance, and said to him in substance: 'You are an old man. Your influence has been very bad. I beseech you either to meet the charges brought against you, if possible, or if not, publicly acknowledge that you sinned in the acquisition of your wealth and you will therefore restore it to the people to whom it belongs. You will soon die. Your duty to humanity demands that you meet the charges or declare your sin.'"

THE HOOP SKIRT

And "Sylph Walk" Must Go, Say Dressmakers.

Chicago, May 25.—The hoop skirt and the "sylph walk" must go. They may go to Paris, to Berlin, to Cochin, China, anywhere, but American cities will have nothing to do with either, provided the edict of the National Dressmakers' association, as expressed at the meeting of the organization, meets with the approval of the great mass of American women.

This, in spite of the indorsement of the hoopskirt by the Chicago Dressmakers' club two weeks ago.

"No self-respecting American woman will walk down an American street in an eelskin skirt and emulate the contortionist," said Mme. Linda Ross Wade, and a chorus of hand-clapping demonstrated that the dressmakers approved her sentiments.

"If the woman who affects the extreme of the 'sylph' gait knew how ridiculous she looks," continued the speaker, "she would hide herself in the first convenient retreat," and the woman with a tendency toward embodiment sighed an approving "hurrah."

"Neither do we approve of the hoopskirt," said Mme. Wade. "The National Dressmakers' association must not sanction this ridiculous fad, for wires are dangerous cages, although we have solved a method of shaping the skirts by the use of a moderate amount of featherbona judiciously distributed. In fact in all things is the common sense method American women should adopt, and we are no longer slaves to Paris styles. Let Paris set the styles for all the world besides, but from this time on America is free from the slavery of Paris fashions. American women have ability enough and sufficient taste to design their own styles, and the association has spent its last dollar for French designs. American men lead the world in everything they undertake, and why is not the American woman just as able in her own province of dressmaking?"

An interesting feature of the evening was the showing of a skirt containing two pockets, so placed that even a man could locate them with the naked eye.

"How handy for car fares," suggested one lady near the door.

"And for pickpockets," suggested a mean man, who had escorted his wife to the function, wherewith the pocketed skirt was laid aside for something else.

DELUGED WITH LETTERS

Asking for Commutation of Williams' Sentence.

St. Paul, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson and the members of the pardon board are being deluged with letters and messages, asking for clemency in behalf of William Williams, sentenced to hang Aug. 9.

Several of the letters were received today and they were supplemented by telephone message. Governor Johnson refused to allow the use of any of the names of the parties.

The tenor of the letters is one of sympathy and a belief that Williams is mentally incompetent. They ask that life imprisonment be substituted for hanging. Several women are included in the petitioners.

Governor Johnson, were he so inclined, could not interfere, and has so informed those writing him. The pardon board is alone empowered to act.

REWARD OFFERED

For Parties Responsible For Mrs. Stanford's Death.

San Francisco, May 25.—The Examiner today gives an account of a reward of $1,000 offered by Welton Stanford of Schenectady, N. Y., for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the parties responsible for the death of the late Jane Lathrop Stanford. Welton Stanford is said to be a nephew of the late Senator Leland Stanford and a beneficiary under his will to the extent of $100,000. Mrs. Stanford in her will made no provision for the blood relatives of Senator Stanford.

The attorney here for Mrs. Stanford's estate, says he can assign no motive for the offer of this reward by Welton Stanford and that nobody in authority connected with the Stanford estate has authorized him to do so.

JUDGE HAS NO POWER TO ORDER DEPORTATIONS.

Toronto, May 25.—The facts in regard to the story sent out from St. Thomas that Judge Winchester had ordered the deportation of certain Pere Marquette railroad officials are as follows:

Judge Winchester, acting as an investigating committee, has reported to the house of commons that there has been discrimination against Canadians in appointment of officials of the Pere Marquette road. He has no power to order the deportation of the officials.

ACQUITS TALLON

Jury Holds Mining Captain Innocent of Grave Charge.

John Erickson on Trial For Manslaughter In Second Degree.

After listening to the closing arguments of the counsel on both sides and the judge's charge, the jury in the case of the state against Capt. Harry Tallon of the Shenango mine location, was only about ten minutes reaching a verdict for acquittal.

Capt. Tallon was indicted for indecent assault, the complaining witness being Minnie Kelley, a 13-year-old girl, who claimed that Capt. Tallon took liberties with her on three occasions.

It was a case of the girl's unsupported testimony against that of Capt. Tallon, who was backed by strong testimony as to the excellent reputation that he has always born in the community and the jury decided to believe him.

The story told by the girl yesterday morning, if no contradictory testimony was offered, was what might be considered very damaging. Capt. Tallon went on the stand yesterday afternoon and denied all the charges in detail and introduced testimony with a view of showing that some of the things Minnie Kelley claimed were highly improbable. In his behalf a large number of prominent people of the location, including the minister and members of the church, testified as to his good character and his activity in church and Sunday school work.

Capt. Tallon's family was present at the trial yesterday afternoon and this morning, and there was evidence of great pleasure among them when the verdict was returned and the court notified Capt. Tallon that he was discharged.

Following the completion of the Tallon case, the action of the state against John Erickson of Eveleth, charged with manslaughter in the second degree, was taken up. Erickson is a young married man from the Spruce mine who it is alleged pushed or knocked Anton Gulas against a stairway in the drying house with such force that three ribs were broken and Gulas received mortal wounds from which he died in the hospital at Eveleth May 4, about five days after the trouble. Erickson is defended by F. L. Bannon of Eveleth.

Mrs. Erickson and her infant son are among the spectators at the trial.

No intimation of the defense has been given out by Mr. Bannon, but it is understood that the direct cause of the death of Gulas was pneumonia. An interesting question is likely to be raised for the medical experts to settle as to whether the pneumonia symptoms might have existed previous to the breaking of the ribs or whether the injuries Gulas is alleged to have received developed the pneumonia symptoms that resulted in death. The indictment alleges that Gulas received mortal injuries when he was pushed against the staircase and had his ribs broken.

THE IMPUDENT RAILWAY LOBBY

Denounced By Governor LaFollette In Message to Legislature.

Madison, Wis., May 25.—Governor La Follette today sent to the legislature a message urging legislation that would destroy secret lobbying. He strongly denounces "the impudent railroad lobby," which, he said, has cost the state millions of dollars in the last six years and has been a nuisance and disgrace on the legislative halls of the state. The railroad lobbyists are described as usually a set of incompetent men, "best fitted for private argument," but whom the railroads "would not trust with a petty damage suit in a justice court." The governor declares members of the legislature were dogged to their hotels and their lives made miserable the past winter by agents of railroads, the book trust and the telephone trust. The senate recently killed the Johnson bill, drawn along the lines of the governor's recommendations, but a new measure will now be presented.

BREWERY CARPENTERS RETURN TO THEIR WORK.

Milwaukee, May 25.—About 150 carpenters employed by Milwaukee breweries, who have been on strike for two months, returned to work today at the old scale of 35 cents per hour, and an eight-hour day. The controversy arose over the charge by the carpenters that part of the work was done by the woodworkers. The terms of settlement provide that the breweries shall be allowed this work done in shops outside the breweries where woodworkers are employed. The jurisdiction of the two unions will be settled at a meeting of the executive council at the American Federation of Labor on June 20.

NO NEED OF TROOPS

Municipal Authorities Are Able to Cope With Strike.

Strike Violence In a Serious Form Continues Absent.

Chicago, May 25.—Troops were not called out today to control the strike situation, and may not be tomorrow. With 3,600 deputy sheriffs on duty today and 2,700 city police energetic in furnishing protection for teaming, the city authorities were a unit with Sheriff Barrett in making the positive statement that soldiers were not needed yet. Responses to the mayor's call for 1,000 citizens to volunteer for special police service were few, but the city's executive did not become discouraged. The absence of any serious form of strike violence in all strike-affected portions of the city did much to keep up the spirits of the authorities.

Spread of the strike in the lumber district, confined chiefly today to the hardwood lumber yards, did not affect as many firms as some of the members of the Lumbermen's association feared. But many thought today was a lull before a storm. Although President Shea of the teamsters made light of fears of employers that the lumber tie-up would soon affect 100,000 men in the cities building trades, the impression prevailed that the action of the carpenters and other artisans, in openly boycotting supplies from "struck" firms would eventually lead to an industrial paralysis that would make the situation there serious for the civil authorities to cope with.

Feverish labor conditions were apparent. Not the least sensational of the day's developments was the reentry of the Union Traction company phase of the situation. Important demands for increased wages and other requests, made by employes to the receivers of the big street railway system today, brought the company again to the verge of a strike. Delivery of "unfair" coal to the traction companies power plant has heretofore caused serious apprehension, but pending the making of a new agreement with the company, leaders of the street car men's union compelled the union firemen to handle the coal. Now the crystalized demands of the employes are:

Increase of gripmen's pay 23 to 24 cents an hour, and reduction of the probation period from six months to three months.

Commitment of President Shea of the Teamsters' union and other labor leaders, for alleged contempt of court was formally asked before Federal Judge Kohlsaat today. The judge, however, decided to hear arguments on both sides before uttering any order.

Five men, said to be union sluggers, attacked Louis Flint, a colored non-union driver today, beat him, kicked him and left him bleeding and unconscious in the street. Dozens of persons who saw the attack made no effort to lend aid or to rescue the negro.

WRIT OF SUPERSEDEAS

Allows Mayor Weaver's Appointees to Take Office.

Philadelphia, May 25. — A writ of special supersedeas was granted today by Chief Justice Mitchell and Justice Potter of the supreme court to former Judge Gordon, counsel for Mayor Weaver in the injunction proceedings brought before Judge Ralston in the court of common pleas to restrain the mayor from removing from office Directors Smyth and Costello.

The writ removes the injunction granted by Judge Ralston yesterday and allows the mayor's new appointees, Col. Potter and A. Lincoln Acker, to assume their duties as directors. In the meantime the supreme court investigates the matter.

Acting on the writ of supersedeas the new directors at once assumed charge of their offices.

MASTER MECHANIC DIES FROM A FALL

St. Paul, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. O. Pattee, for several years master mechanic of the Great Northern and Milwaukee roads, is dead from the effects of a fall down the cellar steps of the house at 603 Marshall avenue.

Mr. Pattee had recently come to St. Paul from St. Louis where he was superintendent of motive power of the Missouri Pacific road. While going into the cellar he tripped and fell, striking on his head. He died within eight hours of the time of the accident.

CAN MAKERS STRIKE.

Davenport, Iowa, May 25.—Five hundred employes of the American Can company struck today. The men demand a 20 per cent increase in wages, and recognition of their union. The company posted a notice that all strikers not returning to work tomorrow will not be re-employed in the future.

TOO MUCH WIND

Four Duluth Men Have Narrow Escape From Drowning.

Yacht Sweetheart Capsizes With Them In Allonez Bay.

Four Duluth men started out for a sail on the bay yesterday afternoon. It was very windy yesterday afternoon. In fact, the breeze was altogether too fresh to allow of the manly sport being indulged in with perfect safety, and members of the party wished they had been content with a launch before they got through, for they met with a mishap, and all were thrown uncermoniously into the tossing waters of the bay.

In the party were George Taylor, Captain Al Long, lumberman and formerly in the United States navy; James Parkhurst, and Joseph McCann. Sweetheart was the name of the boat. Mr. McCann attributes all the trouble to the name. The craft is really a graceful little yacht, but she has been out so few times this season that, it appears, her master wasn't very well acquainted with her various moods.

The four friends had made up their minds to take a sail, and were not to be dissuaded even by the threatening weather, although different people warned them not to venture out on such a wild day. Mr. Taylor had a lot of faith in Sweetheart, and the three friends had a lot of faith in the seamanship of Mr. Taylor, so they laughed at the warnings of the disinterested persons, and started out. All went well for a time. There was no lack of wind, and the yacht scudded along in fine style. It wasn't long before they reached Allouez bay.

Here the trouble began. When they were opposite the mouth of Nemadjii river, they tried to turn around. Sweetheart began flirting with the wind in a most disgraceful manner, greatly to the wrath of her old love. A rude gust of the boisterous breeze fanned her cheek too closely in its ardent love making, and she promptly dipped her sails to escape the daring caress. Maybe it was an accident, or maybe Sweetheart acted on the thought that more than two is a crowd, anyway she dipped too far and dumped her human cargo into the welcoming water of the bay. The yacht tipped clear over, and not one of the four escaped a complete ducking. What was worse, they could not right Sweetheart. She sulkily refused to budge an inch, in spite of their combined earnest endeavors, and they had to rest content with precarious positions on her sides.

The waves wore whitcaps, and were rolling high, so the situation was very unpleasant, but the friends were so thankful that none of them had found a watery grave that they did not at first care so much about this fact. In a few minutes, however, they began to realize that they were really in danger. They looked about for a rescuing boat, but could see none. They were entirely alone on the bay. Then they began to call for help, and to wave their coats about in the air, but all to no avail for some little time. They met with considerable difficulty in retaining their seats, so that none of them dared to stand up to give the signal of distress. After awhile they attracted the attention of workers on the Great Northern docks. A telephone message was sent to Peabody's boathouse at East Superior, and Mr. Peabody promptly started out in his launch Jeanette. Thus was the rescue brought about.

The bold sailors were taken off the swamped craft at 4 o'clock. The accident by which they were precipitated into the bay happened more than three hours before. No evil effects are apparent today.

Canada Not With Us.

It was the general impression that Canada was only awaiting an invitation to become part of the United States, but when the question was presented to 300 of their prominent people, not one favored the plan. This caused great surprise and considerable comment. Another event that has also caused considerable comment is the wonderful cures being made every day by the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Doctors and druggists everywhere have been interested and surprised at its marvelous power, which often affected a cure when other remedies had failed. If your stomach is weak and you suffer from poor appetite, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, cramps, headache, biliousness, female complaints backache or malaria, fever and ague, the Bitters will cure you. Try a bottle today. It will please you.

FOUR MEN CONFESS

To Stealing 600 Hogs From Chicago Yards.

Chicago, May 25.—Four men were arrested by stock yards station police yesterday, charged with having stolen 600 hogs from various companies at the stock yards within the last half year.

The men arrested are Henry Gray, John Kehler, Joseph Cosgrove and Edward Fowler. At the police station they confessed. Fowler conducts a saloon at 3805 Halsted street, and was formerly an employe of the National Packing company. It is alleged that he did the stealing.

According to the other men, who conduct a small commission business at the yards, Fowler would open the gates of other pens and run several hogs into adjoining pens, used by Gray and his partners.

Some carpenters working on one of the pens noticed this procedure and reported it. The men who have been losing the hogs immediately secured warrants for Fowler's arrest, and upon his confession the other men were taken into custody.

ON PORTO RICO

Statement Issued By Department of Commerce and Labor.

Area, Population, Resources and Trade of the Island.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The numerous inquiries for information regarding Porto Rico received by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics has led that department to prepare the following statement regarding the area, populaion, resources and commerce of the island:

The beginning of the present month marked the completion of the fifth year of civil government in Porto Rico, which dates from May 1, 1900. While the governor and the executive council, consisting of six heads of departments and five natives, are appointed by the president of the United States, the house of delegates, consisting of thirty-five members, are elected by the people, the council and the house of delegates together comprising the legislative assembly.

Porto Rico has an area of 3,606 square miles, or about half the size of New Jersey. Its population in 1899 was 953,243, or about the same as that of West Virginia.

Coffee is the staple product of the island, the product in 1903 being 33,450,000 pounds from a cultivated area of 170,000 acres. About 52,000 acres are devoted to sugar, from which 234,000,000 pounds were produced in the year named. Under tobacco there were 14,000 acres, yielding 12,000,000 pounds. Experiments in the cultivation of cotton are under way. Up to this time the mineral resources of the island have not been exploited, although gold, silver, iron, copper, bismuth, tin, mercury, nickel and platinum are found in the island. The annual production of salt averages about 10,000,000 pounds.

The commerce of Porto Rico in the calendar year 1904 amounted to $31,250,000, of which $6,330,000 represented trade with foreign countries and $24,750,000 trade with the United States. Imports into Porto Rico amounted to $14,135,061, of which the value of $2,200,083 was from foreign countries and $11,934,978 from the United States. The exports from Porto Rico aggregated $17,043,332 in value, of which $4,080,449 went to foreign countries and $12,963,483 to the United States.

Porto Rico purchases her imported articles chiefly from the United States, Spain, Canada, France, the United Kingdom, Venezuela, Uruguay and Germany. The principal gains in imports shown by the various countries in the record of the past two years are as follows: United States, from $8,880,274 in 1901 to $11,934,978 in 1904; Canada, from $369,554 in 1901 to $524,410 in 1904; Venezuela, from $3,455 in 1901 to $182,928 in 1904; France, from $151,114 1901 to $230,304 in 1904, and Uruguay, from $2,083 in 1901 to $154,944 in 1904. The principal countries showing losses in their importations into Porto Rico during the past year are: Spain, from $904,462 in 1901 to $556,474 in 1904; United Kingdom, from $358,617 in 1901 to $226,109 in 1904, and Germany, from $151,114 in 1901 to $89,713 in 1904.

Porto Rico finds her best markets in the United States, Cuba, France, Spain, Austria-Hungary, Canada, Germany, and Italy, their relative importance being in the order named. Her exports to the United States increased from $7,013,697 in 1901 to $12,963,483 in 1904; those to Cuba, from $893,729 in 1901 to $1,346,900 in 1904; those to Canada, from $309,692 in 1901 to $329,252 in 1904, and those to Italy, from $155,762 in 1901 to $168,330 in 1904. Decreases occurred in Porto Rican exports to France, $957,133 being the total in 1901 and $348,954 in 1904; Germany, $244,368 in 1901 and $211,292 in 1904, and Spain, $725,224 in 1902 and $618,215 in 1904. Total imports into Porto Rico in 1904 were valued at $14,135,061, as against $13,039,418 in 1903 and $10,155,813 in 1901; and exports from Porto Rico in 1904 aggregated $17,043,932, as compared with $15,549,765 in 1903 and $10,472,270 in 1901.

The advantages occurring to Porto Rico following its establishment as a customs district of the United States on June 22, 1900, and the free admission of its products into our markets following the enactment and putting into operation of a system of local taxation to meet the necessities of the government of Porto Rico, July 25, 1901, will be seen from the following table which shows the value of the merchandise shipped from Porto Rico to the United States compared with the value of merchandise shipped from the United States to Porto Rico in each calendar year from 1898 to 1904:

BUTTE FEARS A DISASTER

Site of the City Honeycombed By the Mines.

Butte, Mont., May 25.—So close to the surface are some of the mining operations being carried on in certain portions of Butte that grave fears are being aroused of a possible disaster in the way of the collapse of buildings above the mines.

A good-sized cave-in about fifteen feet from the foundation of the federal building on Main street was the cause yesterday of general alarm, and it was discovered the surface in that vicinity was slowly settling. The hole was several feet deep and was caused by old workings of the Jackson and Kelly shaft on the Washoe copper lead fifty feet from the federal building. The cavein was immediately filled and the city engineer believes the federal building is in no immediate danger of sliding into the old workings.

These walls of the Gould block, just across the street from the federal building, are supported by large timbers to prevent the sides crumbling and falling on account of the ground sinking.

In the lower part of the city, mining is carried on within ten feet of the surface, causing several dwelling houses to assume a twisted shape and resulting in the street car company complaining to the council that its tracks are in danger of disappearing, as a portion of the street has caved.

The big copper mines extend under the principal business districts of Butte and have miles of underground workings over which are large business blocks of the city. The workings are so deep and well timbered as to cause little fear of danger to the big structures overhead.

According to the engineer, the peculiar phenomenon is witnessed of Butte siding in an uphill direction towards the mines, instead of down hill, as has been the prevailing belief. This statement has been substantiated, it is said, by actual measurements. All deep mining radiates from the famous Anaconda hill, and toward these openings it is claimed the ground is slowly settling, several inches difference being noted in the past four years.

"OUR DUMB ANIMALS"

Criticised President and Its Circulation Prohibited.

Washington, May 25.—A mild sensation was caused in school circles here when it became known that an official order issued by Alexander T. Stuart, superintendent of public schools in Washington, is prohibiting the circulation of the May number of Our Dumb Animals, a publication issued in Boston, because the editor attacked President Roosevelt for killing wild game on his recent hunting trip.

The magazine has of late been distributed among school children in Washington gratuitously by the Washington Humane society. In the current issue there were several articles citicising the president, one in particular being regarded as extremely violent by the public school authorities. It is urged upon pupils not to emulate the example set by the president in killing animals at this time of year when most of them are bearing young.

It was said that the president should not slay any wild beast, and he was called severely to task for setting such a deplorable example."

In speaking of the matter Supt. Stuart said: "The articles in question in my opinion insult the president of the United States, and I regarded it as my duty to call the attention of President Gordon of the board of education to them. He agreed with me that their circulation should be prohibited. I believe I was right. The articles criticised the president and are not such as should be placed in the hands of children to prejudice their youthful minds against the chief executive. The matter may be brought up before the board at its meeting tomorrow night, when official action undoubtedly will be had."

FIELD DAY SPORTS

High School Classes Will Hold Annual Meet Saturday.

Team For Big Meet At Ironwood Will Be Picked.

Saturday afternoon the preliminary, interclass field day of the Duluth Central high school will be held at the driving park for the purpose of selecting the men who will compose the track team that will represent the school at the five cornered meet to be held in Ironwood, Mich., on June 10 between the Ironwood, Bessemer, Ashland, Superior and Duluth high schools.

Some likely candidates have been brought out during the preliminary practice, and the students look for some broken records.

In order to qualify for the team it is necessary to win one first and one second place in the meet Saturday. This, however, does not assure him of a place on the team, and he will have to defend it against all comers until June 10.

Robert Smith is captain of the track team and Allan Nelson, the manager.

Considerable interest centers in the class relay race, which will be the last event on the program. The senior class team is composed of Robert Jaques, Robert Smith, Fred Dutton and Harold Cant, while the junior team is composed of Frink, Moe, Oben and Dunning.

THE BAPTISTS MAY REVOLT

Against Receiving Donations of Money From J. D. Rockefeller.

Pittsfield, Mass., May 25.—Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren avenue Baptist church of Boston, says the Baptists from Maine to California are about to revolt against accepting contributions of money from John D. Rockefeller. Rev. Mr. Johnson was one of the first clergymen in the country to denounce Rockefeller and his gift-giving. In reply to the question, "Are Baptists to continue to receive Mr. Rockefeller's money?" Rev. Mr. Johnson said:

"While the masses of the Baptists are not affected with the feeling of protest, nevertheless to my knowledge, to my personal knowledge, there are Baptist ministers in all parts of the United States who are ready to unite in a public protest, for they have declared their willingness over their own signatures. I believe this protest will be made. It is not a sporadic uprising, but part of a movement calculated to change the standard of ethics in the churches of the United States.

"These are facts which no newspapers have hinted at before this, because it was not known that such a plan was on. The Associated Press had an interview with me on tainted money and that interview along with the statement of others was telegraphed all over the country. The result has been a flood of letters from every quarter of the continent, and they are all in the same strain.

"Since this agitation began one of the most prominent men in this country, one whose name represents something in the world, sent a business associate of Rockefeller's, a mutual friend, to the king of finance, and said to him in substance: 'You are an old man. Your influence has been very bad. I beseech you either to meet the charges brought against you, if possible, or if not, publicly acknowledge that you sinned in the acquisition of your wealth and you will therefore restore it to the people to whom it belongs. You will soon die. Your duty to human duty demands that you meet the charges or declare your sin.'"

THE HOOP SKIRT

And "Sylph Walk" Must Go, Say Dressmakers.

Chicago, May 25.—The hoop skirt and the "sylph walk" must go. They may go to Paris, to Berlin, to Cochin, China, anywhere, but American cities will have nothing to do with either, provided the edict of the National Dressmakers' association, as expressed at the meeting of the organization, meets with the approval of the great mass of American women.

This, in spite of the indorsement of the hoopskirt by the Chicago Dressmakers' club two weeks ago.

"No self-respecting American woman will walk down an American street in an eelskin skirt and emulate the contortionist," said Mme. Linda Ross Wade, and a chorus of hand-clapping demonstrated that the dressmakers approved her sentiments.

"If the woman who affects the extreme of the 'sylph' gait knew how ridiculous she looks," continued the speaker, "she would hide herself in the first convenient retreat," and the woman with a tendency toward embodiment sighed an approving "hurrah."

"Neither do we approve of the hoopskirt," said Mme. Wade. "The National Dressmakers' association must not sanction this ridiculous fad, for wires are dangerous cages, although we have solved a method of shaping the skirts by the use of a moderate number of featherbones judiciously distributed. Moderation in all things is the common sense method American women should adopt, and we are no longer slaves to Paris styles. Let Paris set the styles for all the world besides, but from this time on America is free from the slavery of Paris fashions. American women have ability enough and sufficient taste to design their own styles, and the association has spent its last dollar for French designs. American men lead the world in everything they undertake, and why is not the American woman just as able in her own province of dressmaking?"

An interesting feature of the evening was the showing of a skirt containing two pockets, so placed that even a man could locate them with the naked eye.

"How handy for car fares," suggested one lady near the door.

"And for pickpockets," suggested a mean man, who had escorted his wife to the function, wherewith the pocketed skirt was laid aside for something else.

DELUGED WITH LETTERS

Asking for Commutation of Williams' Sentence.

St. Paul, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson and the members of the pardon board are being deluged with letters and messages, asking for clemency in behalf of William Williams, sentenced to hang Aug. 9.

Several of the letters were received today and they were supplemented by telephone message. Governor Johnson refused to allow the use of any of the names of the parties.

The tenor of the letters is one of sympathy and a belief that Williams is mentally incompetent. They ask that life imprisonment be substituted for hanging. Several women are included in the petitioners.

Governor Johnson, were he so inclined, could not interfere, and has so informed those writing him. The pardon board is alone empowered to act.

REWARD OFFERED

For Parties Responsible For Mrs. Stanford's Death.

San Francisco, May 25.—The Examiner today gives an account of a reward of $1,000 offered by Welton Stanford of Schenectady, N. Y., for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the parties responsible for the death of the late Jane Lathrop Stanford. Welton Stanford is said to be a nephew of the late Senator Leland Stanford and a beneficiary under his will to the extent of $100,000. Mrs. Stanford in her will made no provision for the blood relatives of Senator Stanford.

The attorney here for Mrs. Stanford's estate, says he can assign no motive for the offer of this reward by Welton Stanford and that nobody in authority connected with the Stanford estate has authorized him to do so.

JUDGE HAS NO POWER TO ORDER DEPORTATIONS.

Toronto, May 25.—The facts in regard to the story sent out from St. Thomas that Judge Winchester had ordered the deportation of certain Pere Marquette railroad officials are as follows:

Judge Winchester, acting as an investigating committee, has reported to the house of commons that there has been discrimination against Canadians in appointment of officials of the Pere Marquette road. He has no power to order the deportation of the officials.

ACQUITS TALLON

Jury Holds Mining Captain Innocent of Grave Charge.

John Erickson on Trial For Manslaughter In Second Degree.

After listening to the closing arguments of the counsel on both sides and the judge's charge, the jury in the case of the state against Capt. Harry Tallon of the Shenango mine location, was only about ten minutes reaching a verdict for acquittal.

Capt. Tallon was indicted for indecent assault, the complaining witness being Minnie Kelley, a 13-year-old girl, who claimed that Capt. Tallon took liberties with her on three occasions.

It was a case of the girl's unsupported testimony against that of Capt. Tallon, who was backed by strong testimony as to the excellent reputation that he has always born in the community and the jury decided to believe him.

The story told by the girl yesterday morning, if no contradictory testimony was offered, was what might be considered very damaging. Capt. Tallon went on the stand yesterday afternoon and denied all the charges in detail and introduced testimony with a view of showing that some of the things Minnie Kelley claimed were highly improbable. In his behalf a large number of prominent people of the location, including the minister and members of the church, testified as to his good character and his activity in church and Sunday school work.

Capt. Tallon's family was present at the trial yesterday afternoon and this morning, and there was evidence of great pleasure among them when the verdict was returned and the court notified Capt. Tallon that he was discharged.

Following the completion of the Tallon case, the action of the state against John Erickson of Eveleth, charged with manslaughter in the second degree, was taken up. Erickson is a young married man from the Spruce mine who it is alleged pushed or knocked Anton Gulas against a stairway in the drying house with such force that three ribs were broken and Gulas received mortal wounds from which he died in the hospital at Eveleth May 4, about five days after the trouble. Erickson is defended by F. L. Bannon of Eveleth.

Mrs. Erickson and her infant son are among the spectators at the trial.

No intimation of the defense has been given out by Mr. Bannon, but it is understood that the direct cause of the death of Gulas was pneumonia. An interesting question is likely to be raised for the medical experts to settle as to whether the pneumonia symptoms might have existed previous to the breaking of the ribs or whether the injuries Gulas is alleged to have received developed the pneumonia symptoms that resulted in death. The indictment alleges that Gulas received mortal injuries when he was pushed against the staircase and had his ribs broken.

THE IMPUDENT RAILWAY LOBBY

Denounced By Governor LaFollette In Message to Legislature.

Madison, Wis., May 25.—Governor La Follette today sent to the legislature a message urging legislation that would destroy secret lobbying. He strongly denounces "the impudent railroad lobby," which, he said, has cost the state millions of dollars in the last six years and has been a nuisance and disgrace on the legislative halls of the state. The railroad lobbyists are described as usually a set of incompetent men, "best fitted for private argument," but whom the railroads "would not trust with a petty damage suit in a justice court." The governor declares members of the legislature were dogged to their hotels and their lives made miserable the past winter by agents of railroads, the book trust and the telephone trust. The senate recently killed the Johnson bill, drawn along the lines of the governor's recommendations, but a new measure will now be presented.

BREWERY CARPENTERS RETURN TO THEIR WORK.

Milwaukee, May 25.—About 150 carpenters employed by Milwaukee breweries, who have been on strike for two months, returned to work today at the old scale of 35 cents per hour, and an eight-hour day. The controversy arose over the charge by the carpenters that part of the work was done by the woodworkers. The terms of settlement provide that the breweries shall be allowed this work done in shops outside the breweries where woodworkers are employed. The jurisdiction of the two unions will be settled at a meeting of the executive council at the American Federation of Labor on June 20.

NO NEED OF TROOPS

Municipal Authorities Are Able to Cope With Strike.

Strike Violence In a Serious Form Continues Absent.

Chicago, May 25.—Troops were not called out today to control the strike situation, and may not be tomorrow. With 3,600 deputy sheriffs on duty today and 2,700 city police energetic in furnishing protection for teaming, the city authorities were a unit with Sheriff Barrett in making the positive statement that soldiers were not needed yet. Responses to the mayor's call for 1,000 citizens to volunteer for special police service were few, but the city's executive did not become discouraged. The absence of any serious form of strike violence in all strike-affected portions of the city did much to keep up the spirits of the authorities.

Spread of the strike in the lumber district, confined chiefly today to the hardwood lumber yards, did not affect as many firms as some of the members of the Lumbermen's association feared. But many thought today was a lull before a storm. Although President Shea of the teamsters made light of fears of employers that the lumber tie-up would soon affect 100,000 men in the cities building trades, the impression prevailed that the action of the carpenters and other artisans, in openly boycotting supplies from "struck" firms would eventually lead to an industrial paralysis that would make the situation there serious for the civil authorities to cope with.

Feverish labor conditions were apparent. Not the least sensational of the day's developments was the reentry of the Union Traction company phase of the situation. Important demands for increased wages and other requests, made by employes to the receivers of the big street railway system today, brought the company again to the verge of a strike. Delivery of "unfair" coal to the traction companies power plant has heretofore caused serious apprehension, but pending the making of a new agreement with the company, leaders of the street car men's union compelled the union firemen to handle the coal. Now the crystallized demands of the employes are:

Increase of gripmen's pay 23 to 24 cents an hour, and reduction of the probation period from six months to three months.

Commitment of President Shea of the Teamsters' union and other labor leaders, for alleged contempt of court was formally asked before Federal Judge Kohlsaat today. The judge, however, decided to hear arguments on both sides before entering any order.

Five men, said to be union sluggers, attacked Louis Flint, a colored non-union driver today, beat him, kicked him and left him bleeding and unconscious in the street. Dozens of persons who saw the attack made no effort to lend aid or to rescue the negro.

WRIT OF SUPERSEDEAS

Allows Mayor Weaver's Appointees to Take Office.

Philadelphia, May 25. — A writ of special supersedeas was granted today by Chief Justice Mitchell and Justice Potter of the supreme court to former Judge Gordon, counsel for Mayor Weaver in the injunction proceedings brought before Judge Ralston in the court of common pleas to restrain the mayor from removing from office Directors Smyth and Costello.

The writ removes the injunction granted by Judge Ralston yesterday and allows the mayor's new appointees, Col. Potter and A. Lincoln Acker, to assume their duties as directors. In the meantime the supreme court investigates the matter.

Acting on the writ of supersedeas the new directors at once assumed charge of their offices.

MASTER MECHANIC DIES FROM A FALL

St. Paul, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. O. Pattee, for several years master mechanic of the Great Northern and Milwaukee roads, is dead from the effects of a fall down the cellar steps of the house at 603 Marshall avenue.

Mr. Pattee had recently come to St. Paul from St. Louis where he was superintendent of motive power of the Missouri Pacific road. While going into the cellar he tripped and fell, striking on his head. He died within eight hours of the time of the accident.

CAN MAKERS STRIKE.

Davenport, Iowa, May 25.—Five hundred employes of the American Can company struck today. The men demand a 20 per cent increase in wages, and recognition of their union. The company posted a notice that all strikers not returning to work tomorrow will not be re-employed in the future.

TOO MUCH WIND

Four Duluth Men Have Narrow Escape From Drowning.

Yacht Sweetheart Capsizes With Them In Allonez Bay.

Four Duluth men started out for a sail on the bay yesterday afternoon. It was very windy yesterday afternoon. In fact, the breeze was altogether too fresh to allow of the manly sport being indulged in with perfect safety, and members of the party wished they had been content with a launch before they got through, for they met with a mishap, and all were thrown uncermoniously into the tossing waters of the bay.

In the party were George Taylor, Captain Al Long, lumberman and formerly in the United States navy; James Parkhurst, and Joseph McCann. Sweetheart was the name of the boat. Mr. McCann attributes all the trouble to the name. The craft is really a graceful little yacht, but she has been out so few times this season that, it appears, her master wasn't very well acquainted with her various moods.

The four friends had made up their minds to take a sail, and were not to be dissuaded even by the threatening weather, although different people warned them not to venture out on such a wild day. Mr. Taylor had a lot of faith in Sweetheart, and the three friends had a lot of faith in the seamanship of Mr. Taylor, so they laughed at the warnings of the disinterested persons, and started out. All went well for a time. There was no lack of wind, and the yacht scudded along in fine style. It wasn't long before they reached Allouez bay.

Here the trouble began. When they were opposite the mouth of Nemadjii river, they tried to turn around. Sweetheart began flirting with the wind in a most disgraceful manner, greatly to the wrath of her old love. A rude gust of the boisterous breeze fanned her cheek too closely in its ardent love making, and she promptly dipped her sails to escape the daring caress. Maybe it was an accident, or maybe Sweetheart acted on the thought that more than two is a crowd, anyway she dipped low far and dumped her human cargo into the welcoming water of the bay. The yacht tipped clear over, and not one of the four escaped a complete ducking. What was worse, they could not right Sweetheart. She sulkily refused to budge an inch, in spite of their combined earnest endeavors, and they had to rest content with precarious positions on her sides.

The waves wore whitcaps, and were rolling high, so the situation was very unpleasant, but the friends were so thankful that none of them had found a watery grave that they did not at first care so much about this fact. In a few minutes, however, they began to realize that they were really in danger. They looked about for a rescuing boat, but could see none. They were entirely alone on the bay. Then they began to call for help, and to wave their coats about in the air, but all to no avail for some little time. They met with considerable difficulty in retaining their seats, so that none of them dared to stand up to give the signal of distress. After awhile they attracted the attention of workers on the Great Northern docks. A telephone message was sent to Peabody's boathouse at East Superior, and Mr. Peabody promptly started out in his launch Jeanette. Thus was the rescue brought about.

The hold sailors were taken off the swamped craft at 4 o'clock. The accident by which they were precipitated into the bay happened more than three hours before. No evil effects are apparent today.

Canada Not With Us.

It was the general impression that Canada was only awaiting an invitation to become part of the United States, but when the question was presented to 300 of their prominent people, not one favored the plan. This caused great surprise and considerable comment. Another event that has also caused considerable comment is the wonderful cures being made every day by the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Doctors and druggists everywhere have been interested and surprised at its marvelous power, which often affected a cure when other remedies had failed. If your stomach is weak and you suffer from poor appetite, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, cramps, headache, biliousness, female complaints backache or malaria, fever and ague, the Bitters will cure you. Try a bottle today. It will please you.

FOUR MEN CONFESS

To Stealing 600 Hogs From Chicago Yards.

Chicago, May 25.—Four men were arrested by stock yards station police yesterday, charged with having stolen 600 hogs from various companies at the stock yards within the last half year.

The men arrested are Henry Gray, John Kehler, Joseph Cosgrove and Edward Fowler. At the police station they confessed. Fowler conducts a saloon at 3805 Halsted street, and was formerly an employe of the National Packing company. It is alleged that he did the stealing.

According to the other men, who conduct a small commission business at the yards, Fowler would open the gates of other pens and run several hogs into adjoining pens, used by Gray and his partners.

Some carpenters working on one of the pens noticed this procedure and reported it. The men who have been losing the hogs immediately secured warrants for Fowler's arrest, and upon his confession the other men were taken into custody.

ON PORTO RICO

Statement Issued By Department of Commerce and Labor.

Area, Population, Resources and Trade of the Island.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The numerous inquiries for information regarding Porto Rico received by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics has led that department to prepare the following statement regarding the area, populaion, resources and commerce of the island:

The beginning of the present month marked the completion of the fifth year of civil government in Porto Rico, which dates from May 1, 1900. While the governor and the executive council, consisting of six heads of departments and five natives, are appointed by the president of the United States, the house of delegates, consisting of thirty-five members, are elected by the people, the council and the house of delegates together comprising the legislative assembly.

Porto Rico has an area of 3,606 square miles, or about half the size of New Jersey. Its population in 1899 was 953,243, or about the same as that of West Virginia.

Coffee is the staple product of the island, the product in 1903 being 33,450,000 pounds from a cultivated area of 170,000 acres. About 62,000 acres are devoted to sugar, from which 234,000,000 pounds were produced in the year named. Under tobacco there were 14,000 acres, yielding 12,000,000 pounds. Experiments in the cultivation of cotton are under way. Up to this time the mineral resources of the island have not been exploited, although gold, silver, iron, copper, bismuth, tin, mercury, nickel and platinum are found in the island. The annual production of salt averages about 10,000,000 pounds.

The commerce of Porto Rico in the calendar year 1904 amounted to $31,259,000, of which $6,320,000 represented trade with foreign countries and $24,750,000 trade with the United States. Imports into Porto Rico amounted to $14,135,061, of which the value of $2,390,083 was from foreign countries and $11,934,978 from the United States. The exports from Porto Rico aggregated $17,043,932 in value, of which $1,080,449 went to foreign countries and $12,963,483 to the United States.

Porto Rico purchases her imported articles chiefly from the United States, Spain, Canada, France, the United Kingdom, Venezuela, Uruguay and Germany. The principal gains in imports shown by the various countries in the records of the past two years are as follows: United States, from $8,889,274 in 1901 to $11,934,978 in 1904; Canada, from $369,554 in 1901 to $524,410 in 1904; Venezuela, from $3,465 in 1901 to $182,928 in 1904; France, from $151,114 in 1901 to $230,304 in 1904, and Uruguay, from $2,083 in 1901 to $154,944 in 1904. The principal countries showing losses in their importations into Porto Rico during the past year are: Spain, from $904,462 in 1901 to $536,474 in 1904; United Kingdom, from $358,617 in 1901 to $226,109 in 1904, and Germany, from $151,114 in 1901 to $89,713 in 1904.

Porto Rico finds her best markets in the United States, Cuba, France, Spain, Austria-Hungary, Canada, Germany, and Italy, their relative importance being in the order named. Her exports to the United States increased from $7,018,697 in 1901 to $12,963,483 in 1904; those to Cuba, from $893,729 in 1901 to $1,346,900 in 1904; those to Canada, from $309,092 in 1901 to $529,252 in 1904, and those to Italy, from $155,762 in 1901 to $168,330 in 1904. Decreases occurred in Porto Rican exports to France, $257,123 being the total in 1901 and $218,954 in 1904; Germany, $248,368 in 1901 and $211,392 in 1904, and Spain, $728,224 in 1902 and $618,215 in 1904. Total imports into Porto Rico in 1904 were valued at $14,135,061, as against $13,039,418 in 1903 and $10,955,813 in 1901; and exports from Porto Rico in 1904 aggregated $17,043,932, as compared with $15,549,765 in 1903 and $10,472,270 in 1901.

The advantages occurring to Porto Rico following its establishment as a customs district of the United States on June 22, 1900, and the free admission of its products into our markets following the enactment and putting into operation of a system of local taxation to meet the necessities of the government of Porto Rico, July 25, 1901, will be seen from the following table which shows the value of the merchandise shipped from Porto Rico to the United States compared with the value of merchandise shipped from the United States to Porto Rico in each calendar year from 1898 to 1904:

Year—	Value of shipments to the United States from Porto Rico.	Value of shipments to Porto Rico from the United States.
1898	$2,382,170	$1,404,004
1899	3,416,681	3,677,564
1900	2,443,995	2,813,821
1901	7,018,697	8,889,274

BUTTE FEARS A DISASTER

Site of the City Honeycombed By the Mines.

Butte, Mont., May 25.—So close to the surface are some of the mining operations being carried on in certain portions of Butte that grave fears are being aroused of a possible disaster in the way of the collapse of buildings above the mines.

A good-sized cave-in about fifteen feet from the foundation of the federal building on Main street was the cause yesterday of general alarm, and it was discovered the surface in that vicinity was slowly settling. The hole was several feet deep and was caused by old workings of the Jackson and Kelly shaft on the Washoe copper lead fifty feet from the federal building. The cavein was immediately filled and the city engineer believes the federal building is in no immediate danger of sliding into the old workings.

The walls of the Gould block, just across the street from the federal building, are supported by large timbers to prevent the sides crumbling and falling on account of the ground sinking.

In the lower part of the city, mining is carried on within ten feet of the surface, causing several dwelling houses to assume a twisted shape and resulting in the street car company complaining to the council that its tracks are in danger of disappearing, as a portion of the street has caved.

The big copper mines extend under the principal business districts of Butte and have miles of underground workings over which are large business blocks of the city. The workings are so deep and well timbered as to cause little fear of danger to the big structures overhead.

According to the engineer, the peculiar phenomenon is witnessed of Butte siding in an uphill direction towards the mines, instead of down hill, as has been the prevailing belief. This statement has been substantiated, it is said, by actual measurements. All deep mining radiates from the famous Anaconda hill, and toward these openings it is claimed the ground is slowly settling, several inches difference being noted in the past four years.

"OUR DUMB ANIMALS"

Criticised President and Its Circulation Prohibited.

Washington, May 25.—A mild sensation was caused in school circles here when it became known that an official order issued by Alexander T. Stuart, superintendent of public schools in Washington, is prohibiting the circulation of the May number of Our Dumb Animals, a publication issued in Boston, because the editor attacked President Roosevelt for killing wild game on his recent hunting trip.

The magazine has of late been distributed among school children in Washington gratuitously by the Washington Humane society. In the current issue there were several articles citicising the president, one in particular being regarded as extremely violent by the public school authorities. It is urged upon pupils not to emulate the example set by the president in killing animals at this time of year when most of them are bearing young.

It was said that the president should not slay any wild beast, and he was called severely to task for setting such a deplorable example.

In speaking of the matter Supt. Stuart said: "The articles in question in my opinion insult the president of the United States, and I regarded it as my duty to call the attention of President Gordon of the board of education to them. He agreed with me that their circulation should be prohibited. I believe I was right. The articles criticised the president and are not such as should be placed in the hands of children to prejudice their youthful minds against the chief executive. The matter may be brought up before the board at its meeting tomorrow night, when official action undoubtedly will be had."

FIGHT IS WARM

Interest Running High In Change of Contract Grade.

Thirty or Forty Minneapolis Members May Come to Vote.

Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the members of the Duluth Board of Trade will vote upon the rule submitted by the directors in response to the request of the members, making No. 2 northern wheat the contract grade, deliverable upon the September and all later contracts in this market. At the meeting of members when the submission of the rule was recommended to the directors there were but two votes against it. Since that time, however, more opposition has developed.

A. D. Thomson, one of the heaviest and most influential of the grain men here, is opposing the change strenuously. He asserts that the board if it takes this action will be taking another whack at the farmer and place in the hands of the professional short seller another club to beat down the price of the farmer's wheat.

Champions of the change assert that all exchanges in the country except those of the Northwest have been widening the supply of contract wheat to make manipulation more difficult and that the farmer's wheat does not seem to have suffered very much.

The fight is reaching a strenuous stage. It will require a two-thirds vote of all the members present and voting to carry the proposition. About forty or fifty members of the board are residents of Minneapolis, and a campaign is being made for their presence here on Saturday to vote. Both sides are campaigning and from advices received here there is reason to believe that thirty-five or forty Minneapolis holders of Duluth memberships will be on hand to vote on Saturday.

As to the Minneapolis men, it is understood that the elevator interests are pretty generally for the change. If this is true it will mean that the Minneapolis contingent will be pretty well divided if not actually in favor of the change.

There are eight or ten members of the Duluth board who are residents of Chicago and the fight has grown so sharp that even they are being urged to come from that distance to vote.

The sentiment on the Duluth board is at the present moment heavily in favor of the change, that is, the sentiment of those members who are resident here and in active business on the floor. For a time there were many who favored the delivery of No. 2 northern at a fixed difference and overtures were made for a compromise on that basis but the different interests could not be brought together and it fell through.

BIG PURCHASE

Of Pine Lands In North Carolina Arranged.

Stillwater, Minn., May 25.—A. J. Lammers is back from Duluth, where he went with William O'Brien of St. Paul for a conference over the purchase of 160,000 acres of pine lands in North Carolina. George A. Lammers of this city and Frank Helmick of Duluth are also in the syndicate. The land is now owned by R. E. Johnson of Greenville, N. C.; R. A. Van Gorder of Rochester, N. Y., and others. The two latter men were in Duluth to close the deal, which amounts to $400,000. A. J. Lammers says that the consummation of the transfer has been delayed a week owing to a hitch over title to part of the lands.

NEW KIND OF NERVE

In Man Found By a London Professor.

London, May 25.—The Marshall Hall prize, given every five years by the Royal Medical society, has been awarded to Henry Head for an important discovery in the workings of the nervous system.

Prof. Head had the sensory nerves of his arm divided, then he watched the sensations that followed. Then he had the nerves reunited by stitching and watched the progress of recovery. The result was that he discovered two distinct sets of sensory nerves. One conveys the sensations of pain, heat and cold, and the other sensations of touch, and also enables one to localize senastions accurately. The healing power of the skin depends entirely on the former.

VISIT THE WORK

West Duluth Men Go to Thomson to See Operations.

Congregational Conference Closes—Bakers' Combine Alleged.

Naturally West Duluth people are very much interested in the work going on at Thomson, Minn., in connection with the Great Northern Power company's canal which is being worked on now. The development of this power is believed to mean a great deal to West Duluth, New Duluth and Fond du Lac in particular and to the whole of Duluth in general.

The stories of the work which have been brought in by different ones who have visited the scene of operations has aroused the curiosity of West Duluthians, so today a party of the business men of that end of the city went out to Thomson. They expect to return this evening. They wish to see for themselves the extent of the work being done.

The party consists of Charles Silger, Charles Greve, John M. Lauermann, Peter Gilley, William Good and William E. Kern.

MORE TO INVESTIGATE.

Butcher Says Bakers' Trust Needs Attention.

Regarding the investigation of the grocers' and butchers' associations by the grand jury and which has now been put up to the governor, John Anderson who runs a meat market on Ramsey street in West Duluth, says the governor should also investigate the bakers' trust existing in Duluth. He has sent the following communication to The Herald:

"I notice in the daily papers that Governor Johnson is going to investigate a complaint made against the retail grocers and butchers of our city in regard to alleged trust methods. This set me thinking that the governor ought to also go after the bakers' association of Duluth and see how they do business. For instance: Last October I opened a little place of business in the outskirts of the city and I asked one of the local bakeries to put in a case of bread for me, as is customary, as I would like to sell their goods. There was no objection to this and they asked me no questions. They charged me 4½ cents a loaf and I paid them C. O. D. every day. It went on for some time and they asked me one day if I was selling bread for 5 cents a loaf. I admitted that I was. A few days after this a member of the firm of bakers I dealt with came out to see me in regard to selling the bread for 5 cents a loaf. He told me that if I did not charge 6 cents a loaf he wouldn't sell me any more bread. I told him it was none of his business, so long as I paid him what he asked, it was my affair as to what price I charged for it. He wouldn't have it that way so they stopped selling me bread. I had to look around to see where I could get bread. I am still selling it at five cents but I think the authorities should look into the matter of discrimination as practiced by the local bakeries. They have as much of a trust as any other line of business and are making retailers of bread demand to much for one of the most necessary commodities.

"JOHN ANDERSON."

CONFERENCE CLOSES.

Several Excellent Addresses Finish the Sessions.

The Congregational conference, which was held yesterday at Plymouth church, West Duluth, ended with last night's session. The addresses were excellent and were well enjoyed by the congregation that gathered to hear them. The address of Rev. F. A. Sumner of Minneapolis on "The Call of the Hour," was most interesting. The call, he described as being to the mission field, where there is a large amount of work to be done and not nearly an adequate supply of workers. He urged that more attention be paid to the missions.

Rev. Herman P. Fisher of Crookston spoke on "The Relation of Young Men to the Great Moral and Patriotic Life of the Present." His talk was of such an order that the wish was genera. that he would continue.

Then followed the closing prayer and benediction.

HACKMAN IS SHOT IN FOOT

Shooting Took Place During Quarrel With His Wife.

In a quarrel, which took place yesterday in the Metropole hotel, Max Dreger, a hackman, was shot through the toe with a bullet from a revolver held in his wife's hand.

The revolver was a small, 22-calibre target pistol, which Mrs. Dreger snatched up during the quarrel.

Jealousy is said to have been the cause of the quarrel. Dreger is claimed to have introduced another woman to her a few days ago, to whom she had taken a decided disliking, and frequent quarrels between the two women and Mr. Dreger are said to have resulted.

For some time past Mrs. Dreger is said to have been seeking a separation, but she did not have the means to procure a divorce. The affair was reported to the police yesterday afternoon, but no arrests have been made as yet, and it is not likely that the matter will be prosecuted, as it is claimed Mrs. Dreger was acting in self defense.

Dreger was taken to St. Luke's hospital where the bullet was removed yesterday afternoon. The bone in the toe was found to have been splintered.

ONE JUROR LACKING.

Fifth Special Venire In Shields Murder Case.

Benson, Minn., May 25.—At noon yesterday the fourth special venire was exhausted with eleven jurors selected to try the murder case against Shields. The fifth special venire was ordered before the court adjourned.

The case has attracted wide interest and it is difficult to obtain a jury. The preponderance of public opinion is that the defendant is guilty. The trial will probably consume the remainder of the week, and will be followed by the case of the state against Nagle for murder in the first degree.

Ironwood Veterinary Dies From Taking Chloroform By Mistake.

Ironwood, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. Hotchkiss, a veterinary surgeon of Ironwood, died at his home on McLead avenue, Tuesday, by taking a dose of chloroform. It is said that a number of bottles were on a shelf with the chloroform and Dr. Hotchkiss reached over for a bottle of alcohol and got the chloroform by mistake and did not notice it until he had swallowed the contents. Medical aid was immediately summoned, but he died before the physician arrived. Coroner Houle held an inquest over the remains soon after his death, the verdict of the jury being accidental death.

Mrs. J. Hendrickson, a Swedish lady, who resides on Mansfield street, was struck by a C. & N. W. switch engine on the Lake street crossing, Tuesday morning. Mrs. Hendrickson was driving her cow home from pasture when the cow crossed ahead of the engine and Mrs. Hndrickson tried to do the same, but was struck by the engine, throwing her a distance of thirty feet, breaking her leg and otherwise bruising her. She was brought to the Union hospital where she was placed under the care of a doctor.

Marquette—Laboring under the hallucination that he was being pursued by agents of the czar, Franz Saboto, a Russian army deserter, suddenly became insane while a passenger on a west-bound train, and leaped through a car window and was captured only after a hard chase of several hours.

He was brought to the Marquette county jail, but what disposition will be made of him is not certain. There is a question whether he can be committed to the state asylum, and the fact that he was passed by the medical examiners at New York, as sound bodily and mentally makes it doubtful whether he can be deported. He was on his way to Superior, Wis., where has has a brother.

Newberry—William Embury has been appointed night watchman at Newberry on the petition of the merchants that they would pay half of the patrolman's salary. The cop's hours were fixed at 9 p. m. to 7 a. m.

Manistique—The old Manistique Cornet band has been re-organized with Arthur H. Owen as leader and instructor. More than a dozen members of the old band have joined the new organization, and a number of other musicians will be secured. Mr. Owen, the leader, is a graduate of the Dresden Conservatory of Music.

Menominee—Arrangements have been made at Menominee to put in an industry for the manufacture of a combination house and game table and a whirl-a-gig contrivance, a proposition submitted by the inventor having been accepted by the Commercial club. A company of local capitalists is to be organized, with a capital of $20,000. In all the company will manufacture six patented contrivances.

Sault Ste. Marie—Deputy Game Wardens Botting and Graham of the Soo confiscated six big nets, some of them nine feet long, illegally set in the Pine and Monoskong rivers, last week and destroyed them. The nets were unusually fine ones and the loss to the owners will be considerable. The law is stringent against the fishing with nets in inland streams. The Pine and Monoskong rivers offer fine sport for fishermen, as these streams abound in trout and other game fish.

Wells—As a result of an attempt to interfere in a quarrel between two companions, Nicholas Skucki, an Austrian, was struck on the top of the head with a heavy club by John Bushon, receiving injuries from which he died a few minutes later. The trouble occurred at Wells, Delta county. In the excitement Bushon escaped, but was captured at Gladstone. The parties to the murder and others had been enjoying the customary Sunday revel, and were pretty full. Skucki, the victim, was 25 years of age.

NOT WELL FOUNDED

Are Reports of a Settlement With Dietz.

Ladysmith, Wis., May 25.—It appears from news received from Chippewa Falls that the report that a settlement had been made between the Mississippi Logging company and John F. Dietz, was not well founded. The announcement that another posse of alleged deputies is to be sent to Cameron dam provokes disgust. The common sentiment in Gates county is that if the logging company had any legal rights, it would have enforced them at the start and that the governor would have sent forces to Cameron dam in sufficient numbers to have taken the alleged outlaw.

The pro-Dietz sympathy here is the result of the logging company's tactics and the natural result of such tactics. No one will believe the state of Wisconsin can be successfully defied by one man for a period of over a year.

The slurs cast upon W. W. Dietz, a brother, are not well received here, where he is well known. He is a quiet, but plain-spoken man, of gentlemanly bearing and logical thought. While he is in deep sympathy with his brother, he is very conservative.

Another case similar in some respects to that at Cameron dam arose recently at Shaw dam, where a settler found that one wing of the dam was on his land. A letter was sent to the logging company owning the dam in question and the return mail brought an acceptable offer of settlement.

ELOPERS CAUGHT.

Lincoln, Neb., Girl Promises to Be Good.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 25.—Police officers here foiled the elopement of Maude Banks, a prominent Lincoln, Neb., citizen. Miss Banks was taken from a Rock Island train and the man who was with her was placed in a cell before the wedding bans, which were to have been said in Wisconsin, had bound the two together for life.

According to Miss Banks' story, she eloped Tuesday morning from Lincoln with an instructor in music. The two were in the day coach of the Rock Island train until they reached Des Moines in the afternoon. They had intended to transfer to a Great Western train and go on to Wisconsin to wed.

Miss Banks has tearfully asked forgiveness of her father, who has taken her home, and the lover, robbed of his bride, has been released from his cell on promise that he keep on going eastward and never return to Lincoln.

SLEEPS IN DOG HOUSE.

Chicago Woman Drives Little Daughter From Home.

Chicago, May 25.—That Dell Frame, the 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Maggie Garrity, is accustomed to sleep in a dog house with a St. Bernard dog was stated in the juvenile court by neighbors, who told Judge Mack that the mother neglects her nine children.

Mrs. Maggie Garrity lives in Harvey and is declared by probation officers to be under the influence of liquor a greater part of the time.

Mrs. Garrity has been twice married, having five children by John Frame, her first husband, who she married in 1886, at Knox, Ind. After Frame's death the woman married J. W. Garrity, who is employed in the Pullman car shops.

Neighbors declare the woman is addicted to liquor, and Judge Mack was told how Dell Frame, 10 years old, one of the children by the first marriage, was accustomed to sleep in a dog house with a large St. Bernard dog at the place of David Webster, a neighbor. A thorough investigation of the case will be made.

LOST HER VOICE.

Woman's Larynx Split and Vocal Chords Loosened.

New York, May 25.—Margaret Doyle Jackson, the writer, is suffering from an extraordinary and well-nigh fatal accident which befell her last Thursday night at her home. Her "Adam's apple" was split through a fall against a window sill. Her vocal chords were loosened. There were symptoms of paralysis at first, and it was feared her skull was fractured at the base. This was found not to be the case, but when she recovered her senses she found she had lost her power of speech. It will not be known for a week whether she will ever recover the speaking voice.

Her mother-in-law's newly arrived trunk was the cause of her accident. The porter placed the trunk in front of the window. A few minutes later Mrs. Jackson went toward the window to pull down the shade. She stumbled over the trunk and her jaw came into contact with the window sill with such force as to force the larynx up, thereby splitting it and loosening the vocal chords.

The mother-in-law heard the noise of the fall and, running in, found Mrs. Jackson unconscious on the floor. Dr. Jackson, husband of the writer, and Dr. Bingham, worked over the patient all night.

Last night Dr. Jackson said: "It was a narrow escape from death. If the injury is permanent, she will never be able to talk again."

Margaret Doyle Jackson is an English woman, but has lived in New York for years. Among her works are: "A Daughter of the Pitt" and "The Horseleech's Daughters." Recently she brought out "When Love Is King."

SERIOUS CHARGES

Made Against Fishermen In Northern Minnesota.

St. Paul, May 25.—Serious charges, which may result in sentences to the state prison, confront several fishermen in the northern part of Minnesota. Complaints have been filed with the state authorities that lawless fishermen are responsible for the forest fires that raged in Northern Minnesota recently. The complaints will be investigated, and if they are found to be true, prosecutions will follow.

The fishermen are charged with two offenses, with killing bass in wholesale quantities out of season and with setting fire to the forests. The fine for catching bass out of season is from $10 to $50 per fish or from ten to sixty days imprisonment for each fish illegally caught, the fine in no case to exceed $1,000 and the imprisonment not to exceed one year. The penalty for setting fire to forests maliciously is a fine not exceeding $500, or imprisonment in the state prison not more than ten years. Setting fire to forests through negligence is punishable by a fine not exceeding $100 or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three months.

QUESTION OF TITLE

Property Owners Are Interested In Chambers-Johnson Suit.

Outcome May Determine Question of Ownership of Other Islands.

The position taken by one of the judges of district court that the exact boundary between Minnesota and Wisconsin, on the St. Louis river course at Fond du Lac is a matter of doubt, causes a somewhat peculiar situation at that locality.

Now that Mrs. Chambers has begun an action against Martin Johnson, to compel him to remove his saloon from a small island in the river, known as lot 2, it is likely that by the time the case is completed a definite boundary line will have been established.

Johnson is operating a saloon on the island to quench the thirst of the up-river visitors who have a throat-tickling that water cannot reach, on a liquor license granted him by the board of supervisors in the town of Superior, Wis. This is on the assumption that the island is in Wisconsin.

If it turns out later that the island is in Minnesota, Mrs. Chambers' contention that Johnson is running a blind pig will be true, for no liquor license granted in Wisconsin will afford protection to a person selling booze in Minnesota.

That the residents at Fond du Lac, or at least a majority of them, are opposed to the idea of having a saloon in the river directly opposite the picnic grounds, and separated by only a few feet of water, there can be no doubt, and it is understood that Mrs. Chambers has the support of her neighbors in the action brought to oust the saloon, her contention being that she owns the land, and that it is in Minnesota. Johnson claims Mrs. Chambers does not own the land, and that it is in Wisconsin.

In the memoranda filed by the court yesterday, with the order denying the application for a temporary injunction, and dissolving the order to show cause, one clause which has attracted the interest of the property owners in Fond du Lac locality was as follows:

"The rule is, further, that the true boundary follows changes in the mid-channel caused by a gradual accretion or degradation, but not changes caused by avulsion."

Changes by avulsion mean the sudden removal of lands or soil from the estate of one person to that of another by an innundation or current, or by a sudden change in the course of a river, by which a part of the estate of one person is cut off and joined to that of another. The property in the part thus cut off is separated continues to belong to the original owner.

In the case of lot 2, Mrs. Chambers claims that the small island in question was joined to her property by accretions from the river current which gradually formed a shoal and on which earth and other debris collected until a dry land conection was formed.

In looking up the old records of the local land office regarding the Minnesota-Wisconsin boundary line in the river at Fond du Lac, Register W. E. Culkin, who was subpoaened to bring the books into court, at the hearing, found a dearth of anything definite regarding the same. He found a page on which pasted pieces of some old papers evidently representing some sort of survey, dated as far back as 1858, and the ink had so faded on the entries made in the book that some of the writing was unintelligible. Mr. Culkin stated, however, that a duplicate of the original records could be obtained from the archives of the land department at Washington.

There are said to be several other small islands in the St. Louis river in the vicinity of Fond du Lac the title of which is now and has been for some years in doubt and which conflicting claims place either in Minnesota or in Wisconsin.

As to the matter of affidavits regarding the boundary line, it is alleged that scores of affidavits could be obtained from persons who have long been residents of the locality, but that in cases where the parties affiant had any interest, no two affidavits might agree.

The general opinion seems to be with H. H. Phelps, who was one of the affiants in the Chambers-Johnson case, that the government has never really surveyed the boundary line between the two states, at Fond du Lac, that a line was selected by the early settlers and taken for granted, succeeding changes in the river channels bringing about some change in that boundary line.

PERMIT IS SECURED

Dancing Pavilion In Lincoln Park Will Cost $3,000.

The permit for the construction of a pavilion on the ground adjoining Lincoln park, owned by Mrs. L. A. Cox, was issued yesterday by Building Inspector Kelley.

The building is the much discussed dance hall, against which such a fight is being made by a section of the West end people. The cost of the building, acording to the figures given the inspector, will be $3,000.

The building inspector stated that it was not in his power to refuse a permit, and that if he did he would leave the city liable for damages. He called the attention of Mrs. Cox to the council resolution, however, which stated that the council was opposed to any dance hall adjoining a park.

The question of granting a license for the building to be used as a dance hall will come up again at teh council meeting Monday.

Triumphal Procession.

Telegraphic reports of the progress of the Norwegian Student Singers indicate a veritable triumphal procession. The first concert was given May 17, in Brooklyn, to thousands of auditors and wildest of enthusiasm. From there the chorus went to New York and Boston. Monday they were in Chicago and the city was theirs.

The singing is pronounced fine beyond description and the students are everywhere received with the utmost cordiality and houses are filled to overflow. The students will be in Duluth at the Lyceum next Tuesday evening and the indications are that no seats will be vacant, as not alone the city is interested, but there are large delegations preparing from all range points.

EDITOR IS FINED

For Assaulting a Printer on the Street.

Virginia, Minn., May 25.—William Bennett, formerly of Duluth, a printer who came here from Hibbing a short time ago and who has since been employed in the office of the Virginian, became involved in a quarrel with Ransom Metcalf, editor of that paper, on the main street of the city. Both were arrested and taken before Judge Nelson. Metcalf pleaded guilty to fighting on the streets, and was fined $5 and costs. Bennett pleaded self-defense and was released. Bennett has filed a complaint against Metcalf for biting him in the left arm during the fracas.

WIFE FINED

On the Charge of Beating Her Husband.

St. Louis, Mo., May 25.—Mrs. Edna Vaughn was fined $10 in the police court Monday on the charge of husband beating.

Leroy Vaughn, the hubsand, who appeared as chief witness, was all bandaged up as the result of the severe drubbing he alleged his wife had administered. Vaughn was "dry" Sunday night, and his wife gave him permission to go to East St. Louis to quench his thirst, but cautioned him to be back in two hours. He exceeded the time limit about three hours. Thereupon Mrs. Vaughn seized a club and had not a passing policeman rescued Vaughn he might have been a subject for the morgue.

Nature tells you all about it.

Infrequent or too frequent action:
Any urinary trouble tells of kidney ills.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills

Duluth people testify to this.

Moses Leckey, flagman on the Northern Pacific railroad, living at Seventy-first avenue west, West Duluth, says: "A friend did me a great kindness when he recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to me. He had used them with marked benefit, and on his recommendation I got a box and began treating a bad case of backache and kidney disorder, which had troubled me severely all last winter. There was acute pain in my back and loins, and the irregularity of the kidney secretions was most annoying. It prevented sleep at night. The first box almost rid me of the trouble, but I continued using them until I had taken two boxes, then not a trace or a symptom of the trouble remained. I used Doan's Ointment for itching hemorrhoids with equally fine results, and it is needless to say that I am an earnest endorser of both remedies."

WILL TAKE ACTION

Grocers Roast Franklin Paine and Court Investigation.

Claim His Attack Is an Insult to Business Men.

The meeting of the Duluth Retail Grocers' association, in the Axa building last evening, was an indignation affair.

The members of the association, some thirty-five of whom were present, expressed themselves in not very complimentary terms about Franklin Paine, the Duluth citizen who has been discussing the case of the grocers and butchers, and who is believed to be the person responsible for the complaint made to the governor. The grocers resent what they term is an insult by Mr. Paine, and severely criticised him and his articles which have appeared in the press.

After a long and heated discussion, the association finally adopted a resolution requesting Mr. Paine to select a committee of consumers to confer with a committee from the Commercial club, a committee of jobbers and a committee from the grocers' association, to discuss the "trust" charge.

The matter was first taken up by Simon Clark, who declared that the time had come for the grocers to answer the ridiculous charges filed against them, and that the real facts should be brought to the governor's notice immediately. Mr. Clark suggested that if the attorney general secured a list from the Duluth Produce exchange showing the delinquent grocers for the past week, he would get good evidence that there is no money-making trust in force. He claimed that out of 160 grocers doing business in the city, 123 were on the delinquent list last week, being unable to take care of their deals with the produce exchange. He pointed out the fact that the grocers must make a full settlement with the commission men by Thursday of every week, while they must wait from four to six weeks for their own pay. He characterized the position of the grocers as that of a slave to the commission man, for the reason that the grocer must pay the latter every dollar he owes, on time, or else get blacklisted.

Mr. Clark sarcastically remarked that if Mr. Paine had taken the same pains to secure facts about the Duluth grocers as he has to study snaps advertised in Chicago papers and sending to Chicago for his groceries, he would have discovered a different condition of affairs.

W. B. Logan also resented Mr. Paine's attitude toward the grocers, and ridiculed the idea that the Duluth grocers are making a profit of from 30 to 40 per cent.

A. Borgen said Mr. Paine might examine his books and if he found a business paying 20 per cent profit any time during the last twenty years, he could have the business as a present.

A. L. Kingman went even further and declared that if any person would pay him as much as he had expended in erecting his building, he would throw in the store fixtures and a good stock of up-to-date groceries.

Richard Dinham called attention to the fact that the Duluth grocers are taxpayers contributing to municipal expenses and the expense of running the schools, also that they donated $300 to the Commercial club for the entertainment of visitors. Mr. Dinham wanted to know if any of the Chicago houses selling goods to Duluth citizens ever contributed a cent to this city or county.

The grocers were without exception against what they termed was an unjustified attack on Duluth business men, and some of them intimated that the Armour interests are back of the agitation.

Deputy State Dairy and Food Inspector H. Bennett was present at the meeting and talked to the grocers for the enforcement of the pure food laws.

Simon Clark, Henry Folz and W. B. Logan were appointed a committee to draft a suitable letter of thanks to State Secretary Fred Mason for the splendid work he has done for the state organization, and to express the regrets of the Duluth association that he has tendered his resignation from the office he now holds.

The grocers discussed at some length their coming annual picnic, admitted two new members and discussed the alleged attempt of stveral wholesale houses to operate a retail grocery without joining the association.

PRESBYTERIANS

Hear Report on Publication and Sabbath School Work.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 25.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church yesterday heard and discussed the recommendations incorporated in the reports of the committees on foreign missions and Sabbath school work; appointed a committee to investigate and report upon the feasibility of the plan of Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court for the erection of a central Presbyterian cathedral at the national capitol and indorsed a project which proposes the construction of a permanent fund of $10,000,000, the income from which is to be expended in annuities for aged ministers of the Presbyterian church and their families. The committee on sustenance was commissioned to undertake the work of establishing this fund.

The report of the committee on publication and Sabbath school work stated:

The Sabbath school missionaries of this board have labored during the year in nearly every state in the Union, with the exception of the New England states, and in the island of Cuba. They have organized 737 new Sabbath schools, and reorganized 316, a total of 1,053, into which have been gathered 3,484 officers and teachers, and 33,297 scholars, making a total membership of 36,781. They also have cared for and nurtured 2,405 Sabbath schools which they had organized in previous years. The membership of these schools is 92,906.

The number of churches developed by the missionaries from their schools was 100, of which eighty-two are Presbyterian and the remainder of other denominations. Sixty-one buildings, valued at $96,750 were erected during the year as the outgrowth of the labor of Sunday school missionaries. Thus, through the efforts of the Sabbath school missionaries, over 66 per cent of the entire cost of the Sabbath school and missionary work was returned to the Presbyterian church in the money value of the buildings erected.

Encouraging progress has been made in our missionary colporteur work among foreigners. During the year we have had twenty-two such missionaries laboring among foreign peoples in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Illinois, West Virginia, Ohio, Texas and Nebraska. Under the wise direction of the presbyteries in which they have labored, effective work has been accomplished.

The total sales of bibles, testaments, books, tracts, etc, by the missionary colporteurs, amounted to $1,643.

The report of the board of missions for Freedman contained the following:

The income from church collections exceeded that of last year by $2,904 and the amount received from other regular sources exceeded that of the previous year by $4,659.

The total receipts from all sources were $189,664, being $6,639 more than the previous year.

The amount given in church work towards self support was $42,884 and the total amount for both church and Sunday school work was $106,155. The total expenditures were $175,984.

The work of the year has been carried on along the same general lines, and substantially on the same basis as last year. We have been compelled for lack of funds to adhere rigidly to the plan of starting no new work for which the necessary expenses were not previously provided. We have, however, considerably enlarged our school work by urging many of the ministers who are in charge of small churches to open small parochial schools in connection with their pastoral work.

The church work apparently advances more slowly then the school work; but we believe it is moving along on safe and conservative lines, and that much good is being done by the more than 200 trained and consecrated ministers that are serving the 336 churches and missions under their care. More than 1,700 additions to their churches are reported. The total membership of these churchs is 22,189 with 21,576 children in their Sabbath schools.

FORGED CHECK DISAPPEARS

One of the Documents In Whiteman Case Gets Away.

Buffalo, May 25.—A check for $200 which figured in the first trial of Alonzo J. Whiteman, has disappeared. Joseph Boothman testified that he forged the check under Whiteman's direction and that the latter passed the check at the Lafayette hotel. The check was on the Fifth Avenue bank of New York and was signed "W. H. Twombly." After the first trial Manager Spaulding of the Lafayette secured the check from the district attorney's office on the representation that he wanted it for auditing purposes. When the return of the check was demanded by the district attorney yesterady Spaulding reported that it was gone. Spaulding told the district attorney that a man whom he had seen with Whiteman called at the hotel and offered to get money to pay the check.

"On May 7th," said Spaulding, "a woman dressed in black and heavily veiled, called at the hotel. I could not see her features. She asked me if I had the check. I handed it to her. She paid over the money and took the check away. That is the last I saw of her."

The district attorney made a careful tracing of the check before it was turned over to Spaulding.

CREEK INDIAN MAIDEN CHOSEN

As Maid of Honor For Confederate Veterans' Reunion.

Muskogee, I. T., May 25.—Miss Harriet Crabtree, a Creek Indian maiden of this city, has just been selected as sponsor by Brigadier General William E. Gentry of Checotah, I. T., to serve as a maid of honor in the forthcoming reunion of the United Confederate Veterans to be held in Louisville, Ky., from the 14th to the 16th of June.

Miss Crabtree is one of the most beautiful young women of the Indian Territory. She is an accomplished musician, an artist and extremely popular. In a recent contest held in this city she was awarded a piano as the most popular young lady of Muskogee.

She is about 21 years old and the daughter of a Creek citizen, whose father was a wealthy cattleman before the white man's invasion.

Miss Crabtree, on her mother's side, is distantly related to ex-President Benjamin Harrison, and her mother's brother married a sister of United States Senator Berry of Arkansas.

Miss Crabtree received her education at Harold Institute, in this city, and the finishing touches were added at the North Texas Female college, in Sherman, Texas, and later at Monticello, Ill., and Potter College, located at Bowling Green, Ky.

Miss Crabtree is an example of the highest type of the modern maiden of the Southwest, and her laughter is as the dancing of moonbeams upon an enchanted sea. She is a petite brunette.

"People in the East have an idea that girls of Indian blood are wild, untamed creatures," said Miss Crabtree, "and I am afraid Indian maidens are considered as jokes."

Owing to her Indian ancestry Miss Crabtree draws money from the Creek tribe of Indians, and she is the proud possessor of 120 acres of land in the fertile and productive Creek country. She has an allotment of forty acres near the town of Henryetta, which is underlaid with deposits of coal, and in addition she is the owner of 120 acres of land adjoining the City of Muskogee, which is very valuable. Miss Crabtree is wealthy in her own right and lives with her mother and sister in one of the finest homes on the outskirts of this city.

The young lady will be attended by maidens of honor from each Confederate camp in the Indian country and will represent the Creek and Seminole Nations.

SOUTHERN BEAUTY

Her father just prior to his death was the chief owner of the Atlanta Constitution. Mr. Scully is a son of Gen. James W. Scully of the United States army.

In her petition Mrs. Scully alleges that soon after their marriage, June 18, 1901, Scully became an habitual gambler; that he has failed to support her or her child; that while drunk he struck her, and that also on one occasion he pinched her until she was black and blue.

Mrs. Scully has published an advertisement that she will not be responsible for Scully's debts. He is said to be en route to Manila.

MINNESOTA MACARONI

RAILROAD NEWS

General Passenger Agent For South Shore Not Yet Named.

Railroad Officials From States Being Deported By Canada.

W. F. Fitch, president of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, is in the city today from Marquette. When approached on the subject of who would be appointed to succeed G. W. Hibbard as general passenger agent, he had nothing to say, further than that the appointment would be made public as soon as the slate was made up, and that the matter had not been fully decided. Neither would he express himself as to whether the general offices of the road would be transferred from Marquette to Duluth, as rumored. Whether Mart Adson will be promoted to the the position of general agent remains an unknown quantity.

DEPORTING THEM.

United States Railroad Men Not Welcome In Canada.

Detroit, May 25.—Railroad circles here were deeply stirred today by news from St. Thomas, Ont., that Judge Winchester had ordered the deportation of some of the officials of the Pere Marquette railroad in Canada. The decision came as the result of an investigation into charges that the railroad had been following a policy of replacing residents of Canada and men of unquestioned competency with officials brought from the United States.

The men ordered deported are: Supt. J. S. Pyeatt, Trainmaster E. Cain, Chief Dispatcher J. R. Gilhulla, Assistant Master Mechanic J. McMananiny, General Foreman Greening, Assistant General Foreman Shoemaker, Assistant Engineer O. C. Laseur, Foreman Osborne of the interlocking plants and signals, Private Secretary O'Laughlin of the superintendent's office and Storekeeper Hunter, all of St. Thomas, and Edgar Britton, district pasenger agent at London, Ont.

The officials affected are allowed time to arrange their affairs and for the railroad to carry an appel to the government authorities at Ottawa. It is understood that steps have already been taken toward an appeal, General Counsel Frederick W. Stevens of the Pere Marquette road holding that the alien contract labor law of Canada does not apply in this case or in any case involving such skilled labor as is required of the officials in question.

It is stated in behalf of the railroad that a arge number of citizens of St. Thomas have signed a petition favoring the railroad's attitude in the matter, and that the board of commerce and the city council of St. Thomas have taken formal action recommending that the position of the railroad be sustained.

In the investigation which has been proceeding at London and St. Thomas, Judge Winchester has been acting under a special commission of the Dominion government. The order of deportation bears the authority of the department of labor. The railroad's appeal to have the order rescinded will probably be submitted to Charles Fitzpatrick, solicitor general for Canada.

Ringlings Coming.

Local railroad officials have received inquiries from Ringling brothers, which would indicate that the management of the big circus contemplate a visit to Duluth this summer. What day the show will be here has not yet been announced.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Railway Mail Clerk Sentenced to One Year In Reformatory.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—In the United States court Wednesday afternoon Judge Amidon sentenced H. L. Shipley, a young railway mail clerk, to one year and one day in a reformatory school in Wisconsin. The defendant pleaded guilty to abstracting money from letters in mail cars. The court deplored the practice of the postal department in employing very young men in such tempting positions.

Williston—While running horses into a corral on his uncle's ranch, Charlie Perry was struck by lightning and instantly killed. He was 22, and came from Missouri to take a homestead a year ago.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Judge Carland in the United States court dismissed the receivership case of Fremont Hill against the South Dakota Central Railroad company, an important concern which built a line of road between Sioux Falls and Colton. Hill claimed to be a resident of New Jersey, but in applying for a marriage license, he swore his residence was in Minnehaha county, S. D. The case was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Pierre—The Indians on the Cheyenne River reservation have come to the conclusion, after giving it a trial, that the leasing of their reservation lands for pasturage has not been advantageous for them. While it brings them an annual rental which is large as a lump sum, when divided among 5,000 Indians it appears small. Before making the leases many of them had good-sized herds of cattle, and while the lease provisions provide that they shall have the privilege of grazing their stock inside the pastures, it is said their herds have annually grown less instead of greater and that they are retrograding instead of building up under the system.

Agent Hatch has notified all the Indians over 18 to come to the main agency for their June payments, at which time Indian Commissioner Leupp will meet with them to discuss matters of interest. It is supposed the principal matter to be presented is that of taking allotments as rapidly as possible.

The law in relation to vital statistics will soon go into effect. It requires the registration of all births and deaths with the state bureau of vital statistics, most of the work being done through justices of the peace, while undertakers, ministers and attendants at births are supposed to look after the proper filing of facts before such officials. Under the same law all parents of children must decide upon names for them within sixty days from birth and register the names with the bureau.

A contract has been let to a Chicago firm for installing a steam laundry plant at the Indian school in this city, the cost of the plant to be about $1,650. An additional building will be erected at the institution this year.

Aberdeen—The May term of the circuit court for Brown county opened on Tuesday. There are seventy-one cases on the calendar. A committee, consisting of J. H. Hauser, L. W. Crofoot, E. W. Taylor, E. T. Taubman and C. M. Stevens, was appointed by the members of the bar to represent the Fifth judicial circuit to act in conjunction with committees from other judicial circuits to compile a uniform set of court rules for the entire state.

While fishing in the Elm river, P. C. Watters and R. E. Rasmussen caught a snapping turtle which measured 43 inches from tip to tip, 24 inches across the back, and weighed 55 pounds. Its age is estimated at 300 years.

Mrs. Matilda Keeler of Oneota township was fined $20 in justice court for beating Mrs. H. O. Millspaugh with a stick. She appealed the case to the circuit court.

Mayor A. N. Aldrich, in a special message to the city council, urged upon that body the necessity for devising some way to improve the city bookkeeping. Under the prevailing system no separate account is kept of the expenditures for the water and sewer departments and the receipts from the latter, and the mayor thinks the system should be changed, and the water system, if not found self-sustaining, placed on a self-sustaining basis.

FEDERAL LICENSES

For Railway Engineers, Firemen and Train Crews.

Washington, May 25.—The senate committee on interstate commerce will inquire very carefully into the merits of a suggestion made by James J. Hill in his testimony several weeks ago to the effect that loss of life and property due to railroad wrecks could be greatly reduced through a system of federal licenses for railway engineers, firemen, members of train crews and dispatchers.

Mr. Hill gave it as his opinion that such a system would reduce wreck losses in the United States 80 per cent, and perhaps more. It is known that Senators Elkins, Dolliver, Keane and Clapp regard this suggestion as of great importance, although, of course, it comes incidental to the main purpose which the senate committee had in conducting the late hearings.

The committee has closed the hearing on the regulation of rates, but will devote the remainder of the week to considering the plan of a report and other propositions to facilitate proceedings when congress meets. The present hearings began April 17, and thirty days have been devoted to actual hearings, besides which a large amount of documentary evidence has been submitted.

CASES OF INTEREST

RIGHT TO TERMINATE CONTRACT MADE FOR INDEFINITE TERM.—In the case of Hickey v. Klam, 83 Southwestern Reporter, 716, the court passes upon a contract made by a letter and accepted by a telegram, in which a position was offered at a certain salary, and the statement was made that if the services to be rendered were satisfactory the employe could have the position as long as she wished to keep it. The employe was afterwards dismissed without notice and without any reason being given. The court holds that such a contract is not enforceable unless the employe fixes the period over which his services are to extend at the time he presents himself for work.

MENTAL ANGUISH.—The question as to whether damages can be recovered for mental anguish caused by the failure to deliver a telegram has been, no doubt, before nearly every appellate court in the last few years, and, with few exceptions, has been uniformly answered in the negative. In the case of Green v. Western Union Tel. Co. 49 Southeastern Reporter, 165, the supreme court of North Carolina joins the minority, and holds that damages under such circumstances may be recovered. In the case before the court the plaintiff, a girl of 16, arrived in a strange city at midnight, and found no one to meet her, because of the nondelivery of the telegram. Judge Douglas carefully considers and answers the statement made by the telegraph company that to permit a recovery in such a case would let down the bars to all sorts of actions for mental anguish as the alleged result of any disappointment, annoyance, or unnecessary alarm occasioned by a delayed telegram.

"RETAILING" INTOXICATING LIQUORS.—It is held in Friedman v. Commonwealth, 88 Southwestern Reporter, 1040, that where a licensed wholesale liquor dealer makes an agreement with his agents to give them one quart of whisky for each sale by the agents of five gallons, such a transaction is, as to such quart given to the agent, a retailing of liquor without a license therefor. The court points out that instead of paying money for the liquor the agent performs services in order to pay for it.

PUBLCATIONS LIBELOUS PER SE.—Upon authority of the Triggs case (71 N. E. 742), recently before the court of appeals, the appellate division, first department, holds in the case of Woolworth v. Star Co., 90 New York supplement, 147, that the publication in a daily paper of a news item to the effect that plaintiff's wife had left him because he neglected everything, herself included, in his absorbing pursuit of millions, was libelous per se, in that it held up the plaintiff to the contempt and scorn of the public. It is interesting to note that the paragraph was part of an article published in the defendant's newspaper relating to the plaintiff, and to his great success in establishing his business, evolving interest of great magnitude from very small beginnings.

DEGREE OF CARE REQUIRED OF INN-KEEPER.—In the case of Clancy v. Baker, 131 Federal Reporter, 161, the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit discusses the question as to whether innkeepers are to be held to the same degree of care as is required of carriers, or, in other words, whether they must exercise the "utmost care" for the protection of their guests. In this case a 6-year-old boy, the son of a guest of the hotel, was injured by one of the hotel's servants while the latter was not on duty, and it was sought to hold the hotel management liable in damages. Relief was denied by a divided court, however. Judge Thayer dissenting in an opinion.

INITIATION INTO FRATERNAL SOCIETIES—PERSONAL INJURIES.—The supreme court of South Carolina, in the case of Mitchell vs. Leech, 48 Southeastern Reporter, 290, holds that a recovery may be had for an injury received during the initiation of a member of a fraternal society, provided it is shown that the local lodge is acting as the agent of the supreme lodge or council. In this case such agency was shown, and the court holds it immaterial that the mechanical goat, by means of which the injuries were inflicted, was not authorized by the ritual prescribed by the supreme council.

USE BY CORPORATION OF THE NAME OF INDIVIDUAL.—In Dodge Stationery company vs. Dodge, 78 Pacific Reporter, 879, the supreme court of California holds that where a person whose name was used as the corporate name of a corporation of which he was at one time president, and whose surname was used as the popular name of that corporation, engaged in the same business after the termination of his connection with the corporation, an injunction was properly issued to restrain the new corporation from engaging in business in the same city and from using signs similar to those used by the old corporation, and which were misleading and intended to represent to the public that the business being carried on was that of the old corporation. The effect of this decision is to withhold from the paintiff the use of his own name in his business.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR PUBLIC NUISANCE—CONFLICT OF AUTHORITIES.—The cases of West Muncie Strawboard company vs. Slack, 72 Northeastern Reporter, 897, decided Dec. 29, and Watson vs. Colusa-Parrot Mining and Smelting company, 79 Pacific Reporter, 14, decided Jan. 10, become of more than usual interest when the first syllabus paragraph of each case is compared. Arising out of substantially similar circumstances, it is held by the Indiana court that where a party deliberately places himself in opposition to the entire community, by performing an act which, in combination with the independent wrongful acts of others, viclates an express statute and creates a public nuisance, he is not in a position to assert that he should be held responsible to individuals specially damaged for only the actual loss he has occasioned them, but can also be held for the damages caused by similar acts of third persons which independently concurred in causing the injury complained of. In the Montana case the court says that "under the facts disclosed by the record it is apparent that the nuisance complained of arose from individual acts of different mining and reduction companies, and that the injury was not caused by the joint acts of defendant and any other corporation or person. Under the following authorities the defendant is liable for whatever damage it caused by its own wrongful acts and none other." Then follow a large number of authorities.

MISREPRESENTATION IN APPLICATION FOR LIFE INSURANCE.—In Winn vs. Provident Life and Trust company, 91 New York suppement, 167, where prior to making an application for insurance the insured was treated at a sanitarium for alcoholism until a complication of diseases required that the treatment be discontinued, whereupon the insured left the hospital, his nervous and physical condition such that he remained in bed most of the time, it was held that representations in his application for life insurance that he had never been seriously ill were false and fraudulent, where it appeared from his application for treatment at the sanitarium that he had stated that he had drunk for fourteen years, to the extent of twenty-five drinks per day.

CONTRACTS RELEASING EMPLOYERS FROM LIABILITY FOR INJURIES.—The supreme court of New York, in Johnson vs. Fargo, 90 New York Supplement, 725, declares the usual contract releasing an employer from liability for injuries which may befall the employe to be void as against the public policy. It is stated that contracts breaking down the common-law liability, and relieving persons from just penalties for their negligent and improper conduct, are not favored by the law, and will not be given an enforcement beyond that demanded by their strict construction. The court distinguishes the case from the Express Company Cases, 20 Supreme Court Reporter, 385, and points out at some length the evils which would result from upholding such a contract. This is the first case involving this class of agreements which has been passed upon by the appellate courts of New York.

SALES OF STOCK IN BULK—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF LAW.—The supreme court of Indiana, in disposing of the bankruptcy case of Sellers v. Hayes, 72 Northeastern Reporter, 119, questions the constitutionality of the Sales in Bulk Law passed in that state in 1901. Similar enactments have been made within the past few years in many of the states, and the Indiana decision casts a doubt upon the constitutionality of all of them. The court states that if the law must be construed so as to permit the creditor to subject the whole stock to liability to satisfy the indebtedness to him, no matter how small a remnant of the original stock sold by him may remain, the law is repugnant to the federal constitution, prohibiting the state from denying to any person the equal protection of the laws and guarantying due process of law.

STATUS OF CONTESTING CANDIDATE AT A VOID ELECTION.—In the case of Nelson v. Sneed, 83 Southwestern Reporter, 786, a bill in equity to contest an election alleged that the contestant was in fact elected, and the election returns were false and prosured by corrupt practices, rendering the election in certain districts void, and requiring the returns therefrom to be disregarded. The supreme court of Tennessee holds, in the first place, that the suit must be considered as one by the contestant, brought in his own right, to recover the office. It is then held that because of the irregularities alleged in the bill no valid election was held, and, this being the case, the contestant was not entitled to the office. The court then points out that the statute provides that a suit by a citizen to have an election declared void must be brought within twenty days after the election. The net result of these holdings appears to be that in spite of the void election the other candidate retains the office.

DEFINITION OF "PAPERS READ IN EVIDENCE."—In Chicago & J. Electric R. Co. v. Spence, 72 Northeastern Reporter, 796, which was a personal injury case, an X-ray photograph was admitted in evidence, and the expert who made it testified that he had taken and developed the negative, and that it was an accurate and correct representation. Another X-ray expert, called by the opposition, expressed the opinion that the picture was of little or no value. The point was made that it was error to allow the jury to take the skiograph or X-ray picture with them when they retired to consider their verdict. The law in Illinois permits "papers read in evidence, other than depositions," to be carried by the jury into the jury room. The court holds that skiographs produced in evidence, within the definition of the word "read," as given by Webster, viz., to discover or understand by characters, marks, features, etc.; to gather the meaning of by inspection; to learn by observation.

MISS MARMARA HENRY,
5036 Forrestville Ave., CHICAGO.

"Miss Henry says: "Before I began using Danderine my hair was falling out in great handsful, and I am pleased to say that Danderine not only stopped it at once, but has made my hair grow more than twice as long as it ever was."

Mrs. Eloise Atherton, Little Rock, Ark., says: "It is surely remarkable the way Danderine improves the hair. It has made my hair grow ten inches longer in five months and it is getting thicker and longer all the time. I believe in giving praise where it is due, and you can use my name as reference if you so desire."

FLORENCE RUSSELL,
Age 6 years,
215 Mohawk Street, CHICAGO.

Since it has become generally known that Danderine causes hair to grow just as abundantly on the heads of children as it does on those of matured persons, many truly marvelous cases are coming to our notice. Little Miss Russell, whose photograph appears above, is certainly one of the remarkable ones. Her beautiful hair is over thirty inches long and her mother says that "DANDERINE GREW EVERY BIT OF IT."

MISS SELMA HASSELL,
2728 North 42d Court, CHICAGO.

Miss Hassel says: "My hair would not reach below my waist when I began using your Danderine. It was also faded and splitting at the ends. Now it is over 2½ feet longer than it ever was and it has regained its original rich blond color. I used the tonic about four months all together."

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Morton L. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN DULUTH

TO SUBSCRIBERS:

It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed, to give both old and new addresses.

BRAVO, MR. MAYOR!

The report of the meeting yesterday with the street railway people, published in The Herald last night, made very pleasant reading to the people that have to stand around on street corners waiting for cars, and vent their feeling against the management upon the listless air.

For the mayor of the City of Duluth displayed commendable backbone and spirit, and gave back to the street railway magnate just as good as he sent, and a little better. The street railway magnate, peering icily over the ramparts of his exclusive franchises, more or less politely told the city officers and the citizens that they could take it out in wanting; that they would get very little, and, in fact, no more than they were able to force out of the company.

Whereupon the mayor said: "We propose to have these things if we have to fight for them, and when your attorneys examine into this matter and give us your answer, we would like to have you tell us just what you will do and just what you won't, so that we may know what we will have to make you do."

Bravo, Mr. Mayor!

From the impregnable heights of the exclusive franchise fort, the street railway magnate appears to have been faintly heard to announce that they would look into one or two things, and that some things, such as the West Duluth extensions, they would not do.

Now it appears that by some sort of oversight, among the several franchises that the company procured in its wondrous way, there is one with some strings to it. Out in West Duluth, there is a village ordinance which requires certain things of the company. These things were considerations for the village franchise. If the city is bound by the franchise, the company is bound by the ordinance. The city officers have an opportunity to compel the company to live up to the letter and spirit of the law, and they should neglect no such chance. They should be as insistent upon the exact pound of flesh as any Shylock could be. The company appears to have taken the position of defying the city to do its worst. The city should show that it is a little more of a factor in the situation than the company thinks it is, and perhaps later the company will be found to be in a more amiable and conciliatory frame of mind. If the ordinance says the company shall give adequate car service with modern cars to all the people of West Duluth, that should be enforced. If it says the company shall pay $to per car per year to the city, that should be enforced, too, not only in the future, but back as far as the statute of limitations permits. If the ordinance says the company shall sprinkle between the tracks, it should be compelled to do so.

In short, the company should be trained, if that be possible, into a condition of mind where there is room for some regard for the wishes, the needs and the rights of the public.

THE PROPER SPIRIT.

Last Sunday the settlers west of Ashawa, one of the newer settlements in this county, got together at a neighbor's homestead and before the meeting had closed they had decided what roads were absolutely necessary and had arranged to have them built. Every man present, with one or two exceptions, according to the Ashawa Northland Farmer, subscribed two weeks of his time, and many more that were unable to come have since followed their example, so that ample labor is available to complete the necessary work.

This is mentioned, not because it is an extraordinary incident, but because it is a conspicuous example of the kind of public spirit that can be expected to hew new homes out of the wilderness, and turn the waste places into garden spots. There are many communities that would have turned that neighborhood gathering into an indignation meeting, which would have contented itself with saying things about the county commissioners because they did not come out and build those roads, and which would have continued to bewail the fact that the county board was derelict in its duty instead of turning in and building them in the time consumed in wailing.

No doubt there are many other communities in St. Louis county like this one, and it is to be hoped that all of them are like that. If they are they will be turning this big county into an agricultural empire very shortly.

SECOND CLASS MAIL.

After Sept. 1 you will get no more sheet music, paper dolls, calendars and similar rubbish with the newspapers that are mailed to you, because the postoffice department has decided to put an end to this palpable abuse of the second class mail privilege. And this decision all reputable newspapers, who can depend upon their merits to attract circulation without bribing subscribers with petty toys, will cheerfully applaud.

The second class privilege, by which newspapers, magazines and similar publications are mailed for the low rate of 1 cent per pound, was wisely adopted by the federal government not only to encourage the publication of such journals, but by affording cheap distribution to encourage the diffusion of knowledge and enlightenment among the people. The result has been enormous good, and it is to be regretted that the privilege has ever been abused. It is due entirely to the abuses that the expense of handling second class matter has eaten up the profits of handling other classes of mail, and made the postal service an expense. By cutting out all such abuses, it is believed that the service can be made self-supporting, and ultimately, cheaper letter postage and—if the senate loses some of its express company senators—a parcels post will result.

In 1901 a step in this direction was taken when an order was issued prohibiting the sending of books and novels through the mails as second class matter, throwing out of the class tons upon tons of matter that had been sent cheaply because it was claimed to be issued periodically. This change effected a marked saving, and the recent order will effect a larger one.

The Herald has never found it necessary to burden the mails with toys in order to build up its circulation, which has had a steady and healthy growth solely on its merits. As a matter of fact, any expenditure for premiums must necessarily be at the sacrifice of something in the quality of the newspaper that does it.

THE AUTOMOBILE.

As the number of automobiles of various shapes, makes and odors increases in Duluth, there is apparently a corresponding increase in the number of complaints about the way they are run, assertions being made that the speed attained by some of them involves danger to life and limb.

It is barely possible that, as an owner tells The Herald, some of these complaints are due to the natural feeling of the man who has to walk or take a nickel ride in a street car toward the man that can afford an automobile. Granting that there is such a cause, the automobilist, on the other hand, will have to admit that part of it is due to a natural desire on his part to see how fast his machine will go, accompanied sometimes by a slight disregard of whether the time and place chosen for such speed bursts is proper.

It is not necessary to tell a man intelligent enough to earn or inherit enough money to buy an automobile with that when his machine is going twenty-five miles an hour or so it is likely to be awkward if he strikes a pedestrian with it. Nor is it necessary to caution him that when he makes a sudden turn about a corner, or shoots down an avenue into a street, he may unexpectedly find a pedestrian walking around in the way.

The feeling between the public and the Duluth automobile owners is pretty cordial, in spite of a few grumbles here and there, and this is intended simply to caution the latter that they ought to use every honest effort in their power to keep the feeling as warm as it is, without permitting its getting warm enough to hurt. They can do this by observing the lawful limit of speed, by paying more attention when they round a corner to looking out for pedestrians than to seeing how fast they can do it, and by generally observing the demands of ordinary care and paying proper respect to the rights of others.

AN HONEST MOTTO.

"If you never do more than you are paid for, you will never get paid for more than you do."

That is the motto adopted by the girls of a trade training school in Boston. It has a homely, Poor Richard twang, but if you will sit down and think it over, there is a lot in it. It is a mighty good motto, not only for that class of girls, but for every class of young people in the country. Indeed, for that matter, there are a lot of old people, too, that never seem to have realized the truth in it.

Many a clerk who is sitting at the same desk and drawing the same salary year in and year out, and who sits up nights hating his employer because he does not get promotion, would find the secret of his failure in that motto. There is too much of the disposition of the hod-carrier who carries his load of bricks down again from the seventh story when the noon whistle strikes. Maybe there never was such a hod-carrier, but there are thousands of clerks and employes who are so afraid that they will give an effort more than they are paid for that they do things almost as ridiculous.

It is never the employe who confines himself absolutely to the routine of the task set before him who is promoted and favored. It is always the fellow that isn't afraid to do more than his share of the work, to look up something else to do if his set tasks are done, and to show that he is interested in the success of his employer and in the work that he is engaged in. It is not often that the man who keeps in mind the motto of that Boston class of girls will be found sitting around in a sulk because his genius is not recognized by his employers. The man that does what is given him to do and then quits, can hold himself fortunate in this day of activity and competition if he manages to hold his job.

Hotel Gossip.

"The forest fire report in tonight's paper reminds me of an experience I had up in this section of the country about ten years ago," said R. E. Scott of Chicago at the St. Louis. "In those days my father was interested in logging operations in Northern Wisconsin, and, with other parties, was operating a logging camp in the white pine forests. I spent one whole winter at the camp, and had such a good time that I gained the consent of my father to remain during the summer at the home of a settler near by. The settler had some sons about my own age, and I expected to have a pretty good time with them knocking around in the woods.

"The season was a very dry one. Even earlier in the year than this forest fires began to break out in that section of the state, and we could see smoke of distant blazes of this kind almost daily. This did not worry us any, however, for all of them appeared to be so far away that we seemed to be out of the danger zone. But one day we noted a large column of smoke off to the Southwest. It so happened that the wind was coming from that direction. The smoke drew rapidly nearer, and it soon became evident that if the wind did not change we would be up against it in style. And we were. The fire came on with almost incredible speed, and we scarcely had time to fill all available tubs and barrels with water from the creek near by before it was upon us. Fortunately the clearing covered a couple of acres of ground, which had been freshly plowed. This helped a lot, but for two hours the bunch of us had to work for all there was in us to save the house, for as the fire drew nearer the wind appeared to grow stronger, and blazing brands were blown clear across the clearing, and many landed on and about the house, so that we were compelled to keep a very close watch to see that the flames did not get the start of us. The smoke was something awful. I wasn't able to sleep for two nights, my eyes hurt so. We saved the house all right, but the barn, located a hundred yards distant, was burned with the cow in it. Three settlers' homes were burned within a quarter of a mile of where we were."

"Within recent years the increase in the number of wild animals in the Yellowstone National park is very noticeable," said A. C. Erskine of Livingston, Mont., at the Spalding. "The careful protection now accorded them causes them to multiply, and besides large numbers of bear, deer, mountain sheep, antelope, etc., there are a number of buffalo and many thousands of elk roaming the park. The animals are harmless and offer to molest no one. They come in for about as much of the tourist's attention as do the other features of the park.

"The elk and deer have become quite unconcerned regarding human beings and are frequently seen near the roadside and grazing in the vicinity of the hotels. The tourist season in the park is the annual feast time or vacation period for the bears. Morning and evening they frequent the garbage heaps and wax fat and sleek on what the hotels throw away. Then the tourists flock out to watch and kodak the animals.

"Early in the fall the animals come down from the hills and remain in the valley during the winter and spring. The buffalo are in two herds. Those native to the region are found in a remote part of the park and number about twenty-five. Recently a fresh lot of these animals has been brought by the government and placed in the park and these are to be seen in the large pasture at Mammoth Hot Springs. It is hoped that with the proper care the late arrivals will multiply."

"Settlers along the north shore are still agitating the good roads question," said A. W. Walker of Two Harbors at the St. Louis. "The greatest drawback to the more rapid settlement of the north shore country is the lack of good roads. It would be no more than right for the state to make some appropriation to help out in this direction. Better roads are certainly urgently needed. Some of those now used are an insult to civilization, but even the bad ones do not reach all districts.

"I suppose it will be only a matter of time before the desired improvements are made, but the shorter the time the better it will be for the whole of this north country, and Duluth in particular, for that whole region must depend upon Duluth almost entirely for its supplies. Of them, is road now running from Two Harbors up Grand Marais way, but that skirts the shore, and there are few branches turning into the interior. Even along the shore the travel is very poor, particularly in the spring of the year. There is a lot of good farming land in the Grand Marais district that would soon be taken up if the farmers had any way of getting in and out, without packing their supplies on their backs, the way the most of them do now who are located a few miles from the lake. There is still a wealth of timber in that part of the state, and when that is logged it will help in opening up roads into the country."

The Other Barrel.

Records of the ancient city Georgeana, founded in 1640, better known at the present time as York Harbor, Me., contain many quaint and unusual stories of the early life of the town.

At the entrance to York Harbor a bold promontory, known as Stake Neck, extends some distance into the sea, from which formerly in stormy weather a temporary light, in the form of a lantern hoisted upon an upright pole, was displayed as a warning to mariners.

One dark winter night a sloop was wrecked on these rocks. A survivor, on being questioned about the catastrophe, said:

"The vessel struck, turned over on her side, and the skipper and another barrel of whisky rolled overboard."

Second the Motion.

Brooklyn Eagle: Let us give Niagara to the nation for a park, just as California transferred its Yosemite. So doing, we shall remove a perpetual temptation to our legislators. Let us also remember those legislators who yielded to temptation.

The Weather.

"There's that dratted east wind again," growled Mr. Kicker, as he pomed a discontented visage out of the front door this morning.

It wasn't really an eastwind, and it wasn't much to kick about, but according to the weather man Mr. Kicker will have something to talk about tonight, for there is going to be frost, and the northwesterly winds are going to shift to the east and become brisker.

Therefore, it is pleasant to linger as long as possible in the memory of last evening. The showers and winds the weather man predicted came, but after their brief visit a rarely delightful evening followed. The slight wind was soft and balmy, and it was possible to luxuriate on the front porch, bathing all over in the ineffably delightful air of the evening. Today it wasn't bad at all, Mr. Kicker to the contrary notwithstanding. The wind was fresh, clean, bracing and wholesome and its coolness was by no means unpleasant.

There were frosts this morning in the Red River valley, where the wheat comes from, and in some places they were of the "killing sort." Scattering rains fell over the Central valleys, the Western lake region and throughout the Northwest. The Eastern states are warmer and the Western ones are cooler.

In the maximum temperatures recorded during the past twenty-four hours, note that Duluth was warmer than either Boston, New York, Norfolk, Va., Spokane or San Francisco:

The Magazines.

Judge: I've seen the Wide World—been Everywhere, and am something of a Critic. On the Four-Track News I studied Public Opinion and got a better Outlook on Town and Country. I came from Out West and marry a Housekeeper. She had kept a Ladies' Home Journal, was a good Writer, Cosmopolitan, Elite, and Everybody's Friend, and I thought her an American Queen; but our marriage wasn't a Success—she had too much System to make the Housebeautiful. When I demanded Good Housekeeping I got Physical Culture with a Vigor and Vim. That was bad for my Beauty and Health. She was one of these Harper's on the New Thought and Woman's Sphere and Human Life, and not at all a Home Companion. Her Home Talk was about Art de La Mode, the Lion Ton and Cassell's Little Folks, though Babyhood to her did not come under the head of Items of Interest. Our Times Outdoors, in The Motor, The Garden or The World's Work made me Quiver. So I made up my Mind I'd quit my Sis Hopkins and seek Recreation and a Quiet Hour in Smart Set. I'd be a Bohemian, go in for The Stage and try to Cheer Up in the Public View on Broadway. But she cooked my Gray Goose with an Ad. in The Police News. I was sentenced by Judge, who gave me a Century. I hadn't a Nickell left, and didn't feel Independent enough to fight the Metropolitan authorities in Open Court, or consult an American Lawyer, so I was given an Outing to help make Good Roads. Now I feel like a Philistine and talk like an Iconoclast, am tired of Life, and haven't the time for Something to Read.

Hard Work.

Gee whiz,
What a job it is Trying to make this town
Suitable for the heavenly crown.
One man
Has a plan—
Warranted to wash,
And the others give him the josh;
And then
Several men
Combine
Into something divine,
And before
They can do anything more
There's a wreck
And they get it in the neck.
In the meantime Vice
Rakes off its usual slice,
And those out of politics
Begin to throw bricks
At those who are in
For monkeying with sin,
And there's the devil to pay
All the way
From the Battery to The Bronx.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Charity begins by getting a contribution out of the other fellow.

A woman can whine away a man's love surer and quicker than any other way.

If a woman can't find anything else to be jealous about she will be it over an old pipe.

Next to fooling a man the easiest thing for a girl is to make him feel sure she is not.

A girl can change a name she doesn't like whenever she pleases by marrying but a man is stuck to his hard and fast.

Had the Symptoms.

Years ago Tom Reed, then speaker of the house of representatives, went into a barber shop in Washington to be shaved. After the darky barber had scraped his chin he began to cast about for further work or for a chance to sell hair tonics.

"Hair purty thin, suh," he said, fingering the two or three stray locks that fringed Mr. Reed's bald plate; "been that way long, suh?"

"I was born that way," replied Reed. "Afterward I enjoyed a brief period of hirsute efflorescence, but it did not endure."

The barber gasped and said no more. Later some one told him he had shaved the speaker. "Speakah," he exclaimed. "Don' I know dat? I should say he was a speakah, sure 'nuf."

Cheerful News.

Pittsburg Press: Buoyancy of spirits is one of the chief traits in the character of the Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, head of the Armour institute in Chicago.

A watchful newspaper reporter overheard the famous preacher ask at a hotel office for Dr. Lorenz, the hip specialist. Thinking that here was a story, the reporter waited until Dr. Gunsaulus came down, then approached him with the question: "Was there anything of public significance in your call on Dr. Lorenz?"

"Oh, no," said Dr. Gunsaulus, "I consulted him about this affliction in my walk. But he said, 'Cheer up. There's no hope for you. You'll never be any better.'"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Mankato Free Press: A fellow in the East was kidnaped because he was pretty. Joel Heatwole had better employ a body guard.

Hinckley Enterprise: Recently ex-President Cleveland described the ideal wife as "a woman who loves her husband and her country, with no desire to run either." Since this sage but not original remark, the air has been full of rolling pins, mops, and broomsticks, and he has had to duck.

Wadena Pioneer Journal: Up at Warroad, running on the Lake of the Woods, is a steam boat named Knute Nelson. If it is anything like the original, it is a plain, steady going and reliable old craft, which will weather well most any storm.

Delano Eagle: The movements of the Japanese and Russian fleets reminds us very forcibly of that delightful little ditty sung on the last editorial excursion: "A mother was chasing her boy 'round the block."

Mankato Free Press: An exchange says that "they will not let any barefoot boy in the New York schools." But the American people have put barefooted boys into the White House and made presidents of them.

Walker Pilot: The Iroquois club of Chicago have apparently accepted the invitation extended by J. Adam Bede in his maiden speech at congress, asking the Democratic party to come over and join the Republican forces.

Abusing the Flag.

Washington Star: There are two kinds of abuse of the flag, and both are objectionable. One abuse consists in using the flag to advertise goods, enterprises or occasions, without arousing a wholesome patriotism. Against this form of misuse the American people have raised their voices in emphatic and effective protest. But there is another abuse which arises from an impropr conception of public duty, and such a case occurred the other day in Minnesota. There has been a local agitation around the city of Hutchinson against Sunday baseball, but no court processes have availed to prevent the games, the managers of the sport having won their cases. Finally, aroused to a pitch of high indignation, a woman, who is prominent in the community as a temperance reformer, sought to put an end to the practice by unusual methods. She attended a Sunday game with a large flag draped around her gown, displaying a placard with the words: "To attack the flag of the United States while it is being used in the enforcement of law is, according to the statutes, high treason." When the game was started she advanced to the center of the diamond and stationed herself, thus attired, between the pitcher and the batsman, in an effort to have the flag hit by the ball. After a ridiculous performance, the players trying to avoid striking her, and she dodging to and fro in order to get in the line of fire, the spectators, tired of the unusual sport, took a hand and swarmed into the field, surrounding the determined woman and forcing her off the field. The game then proceeded without molestation. This woman's purpose was to enlist the Federal authorities in the crusade against the Sunday ball players, but, of course, she would have failed to do so, even if she had succeeded in getting the flag hit by a ball. In thus invoking the aid of the national emblem she made not only herself, but to some degree the flag itself, ridiculous.

THE LIBERTINE.

A banquet's a wonderful thing,
And the toasts of the folk who respond,
And the glittering lights and the blossoms that swing;
But out of the hall, and beyond,
Out of the glitter and out of the glare,
Out of the perfume and out of the glow,
Is a curving seat on an oaken stair
And a hall where the lights are low;
And a brown-eyed girl,
And a perfumed curl,
Way back in the long ago.

Way back of the toasts and the talk,
And the clinking of glass and the lights
There are low-hung boughs and a moonlit walk
And a wonderful night of nights!
Way back of the napery, back of the years,
Way back of the vases and goblets tall,
Way back of all sorrowing, back of all tears,
Is a perfumed fountain whose waters fall,
And a brown-eyed girl,
And a perfumed curl,
Back, away back of it all.

Yea, aback, way back of it all,
Of the glitter and jest and the joke,
Are the eyes ashine and the lilting call
Of a maiden whose heart was broke!
Way back of the wassailry back of the jeer,
Way back of the laughter and tales you tell,
Way back of the ages the eyes shine clear
On you of a maiden who loved you well;
Of a brown-eyed girl
With a perfumed curl;
They are lighting your road to hell!

Educational Advertising.

Saturday Evening Post: Advertising is one of the greatest educational forces. Education means rousing the spirit of inquiry. The easy and the sensible way to rouse this spirit in any human being is to tell him of something which he does not know and which it will be clearly to his advantage to know. The man with something good to sell is therefore in a position to increase the sum of human comfort and happiness—and the more he benefits himself the more does he increase that sum. A few years ago advertising was in a very crude state; it is still not quite the exact science it is going to be. For an exact science it must be—just as any other form of teaching. Commerce is the great civilizer; advertising is to commerce what the teacher is to learning.

Commercial Club Treats Boat Club In Generous Manner.

Prizes For Fours, Doubles and Cup For Eight.

Twelve handsome medals and a beautiful silver cup have been presented to the Duluth Boat club by the Commercial club, to be given as prizes in the regatta which will be held here in July.

The medals will be given to the members of the winning junior and senior fours, and the winning junior and senior doubles, while the cup will be awarded to the winning eight to be kept in the possession of the club represented by the eight.

The Duluth oarsmen have now settled down to work in earnest. A dummy has been rigged on the float in front of the clubhouse, and stationary rowing will be practiced by candidates for the crew, under the supervision of one of the volunteer coaches. The new men will be taught the stroke in this manner before going out in the shells.

At least twenty men will be required to represent the club in the regatta, as an eight, three fours and two doubles will be entered in the races.

The committee in charge of the regatta has a list of sixty members of the club who are likely candidates for the crews, and the twenty men will be selected from this list, on the showing made during the next few weeks.

DID NOT COUNT.

Sunday's Game at Fargo Was Exhibition Contest.

The game played last Sunday between Fargo and Crookston was not a scheduled game, but was merely an exhibition contest to test the Sunday baseball question in Fargo. It was won by Fargo and was credited to the Farmers in the standing. The correction is made in today's standing taking a victory away from Fargo and a defeat from Crookston's record.

It is likely that Sunday baseball will be allowed in Fargo this summer. No objection was made to last Sunday's game, although trouble was expected. The fans were requested to be as orderly as possible, and make no more noise than was necessary. This disarmed much of the criticism and the opposition was dropped.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Word has been received here that the Canadian Pacific bridge at Cransbrook collapsed Wednesday while undergoing changes, and that eleven men were injured. It is reported that four of them will die and that five others are badly hurt.

F. E. Davis of Los Angeles, who said he owned a majority of the stock in the wrecked bank at Goldfield, Nev., said that he would proceed to that place and endeavor to effect an equitable settlement with the depositors. He asserted that they would not lose a cent. Mr. Davis, who is a well-known lawyer, has lived at Los Angeles for fourteen years. He will lose about $20,000 by the failure.

Santa Fe passenger train No. 558, northbound on the Hutchinson branch, collided with a bunch of freight cars at Hutchinson, Kan., Wednesday afternoon on account of an open switch. Mail Clerk C. D. Wolf of Kansas City was killed. Engineer John Snyder and Fireman A. C. Vaughan, who jumped, received probably fatal injuries. Five others were slightly hurt.

William H. Berry of Delaware county, was nominated for state treasurer, and J. B. Head of Westmoreland county was selected for superior judge at the Pennsylvania Democratic state convention. Head's nomination is equivalent to an election.

GRAEME STEWART HAS ATTACK OF INDIGESTION.

Chicago, May 25.—Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, and Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the Panama canal commission, were the guests of the Chicago Bankers' club at a banquet here last night. Just as Secretary Morton had taken the floor to commence his speech, Graeme Stewart, former national committeeman of the Republican party in Illinois, fell forward in his chair unconscious. He was quickly carried to a sofa at the side of the room, and several physicians who were present worked over him for several minutes before they were able to restore him to consciousness. He was afterward taken home much improved. His illness was an acute attack of indigestion, coupled with a slight congestion of the brain.

GAMES TODAY.

St. Cloud-Brainerd at Winnipeg.
Grand Forks at Fargo.

Winnipeg, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harry Claytor's crippled team managed to check Duluth's winning streak in the game played here yesterday morning, although the visitors won the afternoon game, thus breaking even on the doubleheader.

The morning game went only seven innings and was a rather poor exhibition of baseball. The weather was disagreeable, rain having fallen up to the moment of starting the game, but in spite of this over 800 fans turned out.

Bennett was put in to pitch for the White Sox, and the Maroons found him without difficulty, but costly errors on the part of the home team allowed the visitors to pile up seven runs. The score:

Over 3,000 fans crowded into the park to witness the afternoon game, in spite of disagreeable weather. Manager Van Praagh was among the spectators.

Potts, the Duluth pitcher, was batted hard in the second and third innings, but during the remainder of the game he was a complete mystery to the Winnipeg hitters.

Green essayed to pitch the afternoon game also, and for three innings he held the visitors safe. In the fourth they commenced to find him, and in the fifth, sixth and eighth piled up enough runs to win the game.

The Winnipeg team is crippled by the absence of Howells, who is ill with typhoid fever, and the lack of a good catcher and second baseman. Lines are out for some new men to strengthen the team. The score:

THE TIGERS WIN.

Defeat Fargo Team In One Sided Game.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Tigers got revenge yesterday for the defeat which they suffered Tuesday at the hands of the Fargo bunch of ball tossers. On account of the high wind the game did not start until 4:15. The threatening weather kept many from the game. It was a game full of sensational plays. The Tigers got three double plays, and Spanton made a home run, sending in three men ahead of him. Traeger or Fargo made a sensational catch in the first inning.

Fargo went to bat, and Traeger fell a victim to Houch's curves. Hisey drew a pass, and Rose reached for a two-bagger. Fitzgerald got a single, and scored Hisey, and Rose. French drew a pass, and Mehl hit to short. Caldwell sent the ball to Hanrahan on second, who doubled it down to first, making the first double play of the season on the home grounds. Chandler for the Tigers failed to reach first. Caldwell went to first by being hit by the pitcher, but was caught trying to steal second. Anderson made a long drive for the left garden, and sent the little sphere nearly over the fence, but by a sensational catch Traeger drew the ball in with one hand.

In the second inning Fargo sent three men to bat and Donovan and Alberts failed to get even a piece of the ball. Berigan sent a long drive to Anderson at center and was thrown out. The Tigers did much better during their time at bat. It was a merry-go-round for a while, and the Tigers sent no less than six men across the plate. Hanrahan was the first man to bat, he sent a liner to the shortstop, who fumbled it. Then Spanton got a hit. Smith flew out to Mehl, and Sonders flew out to Muller. With two men out the Tigers sent all their scores home. Muller drew a base. Houch sent a speedy one into center field. Hisey ran up on the ball and it passed him. The bases were cleared, consequently, and Houch made a home run. Chandler went on an error, by Donovan, and stole second and third. Caldwell got a base on balls, and Anderson got a hit, scoring Chandler and Caldwell. Hanrahan, who started the inning at the bat, got a life on an eror by Donovan. Spanton hit to second and was thrown out on first, thus ending the comedy.

In the third inning Fargo tried hard to score. Traeger sent a fly to center and was caught out. Hisey got a life on an error by Caldwell. Rose drew a base. Fitzgerald got to first on a fielder's choice and Rose was caught on second. "Fitz," stole second, but French was unable to locate the curves of Houch and the side retired. The Tigers got a couple of hits but failed to score. Smith the first man up was thrown out on first. Sonders got a hit, and so did Muller. Houch went to first on a fielder's choice and Muller was thrown out on second. Houch stole second. Chandler sent a grounder to short and was thrown out on first.

In the fourth Fargo sent three men to bat, but none reached first. The Tigers got started scoring again and it was quite a puzzle for the visitors to stop them. Caldwell and Anderson started the ball rolling by each getting a hit. Hanrahan sacrificed. Spanton got a long swing and sent the ball over the fence for the first "over the fence" home run made by the Tigers. Smith struck out and Sonders failed to get the sphere past the pitcher.

In the fifth there was something doing again on the Fargo side. Berigan led off with a hit, and he was followed by Traeger who reached for a three-bagger. Hisey got a life on an error by Caldwell, Rose gave the Tigers another chance to make a double by hitting the ball to Caldwell, who sent it to Hanrahan, and then it sailed to first in time to get Rose, making the second double play of the game. Traeger scored. Fitzgerald sent a liner to Muller, who stopped it and put the runner out on first. The Tigers failed to get a man on the initial bag during their half of the inning.

In the sixth Fargo got their last score, and that was after two men were out. French and Mehl each were thrown out on first. Donovan got a hit, and Alberts got a two-bagger scoring Donovan. Berigan struck out. Grand Forks failed to do anything in their half. Berigan was replaced by Smith in this inning, and he allowed the locals but one hit during the remainder of the game.

In the seventh Traeger reached for his second three-bagger, and Hisey struck out. Rose drew a pass and stole second. Fitzgerald went on a fielder's choice, and Traeger was caught out trying to make home. French hit to Houch and was thrown out on the initial sack. Sonders, for the Tigers, hit to Mehl, and was thrown out on first. Muller drew a base on balls, but was caught trying to steal second. Houch sent a grounder to first.

In the eighth Fargo got two hits but failed to score. Mehl led off with a hit and Donovan sent a fly to Houch, who caught it and then doubled it down to Spanton for the third double of the game. Alberts got a clean hit over third. Smith retired the side by hitting to Houch. The Tigers got busy again and sent three men home. Chandler led off with a hit, and Caldwell got a life on an error by Alberts, who threw wild to first and then fell down. Anderson went out from Mehl to French. Hanrahan struck out. Spanton got to first on an error by French, and Chandler and Caldwell scored on the same error. Smith went to the initial sack on an error by Donovan, and Spanton came home. Sonders sent a fly to Donovan and was thrown out.

In the ninth Fargo made a feeble effort to win. Traeger drew a base. Hisey sacrificed. Rose hit to Sonders and was caught out. Fitzgerald ended the slaughter by hitting to Caldwell and was thrown out on first. The Tigers didn't bat in the ninth.

CROOKSTON WINS.

Turns Tables on St. Cloud—Brainerd Team.

Crookston, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a rather uninteresting and slow game of ball here yesterday the Crookston team played even with the St. Cloud-Brainerd aggregation for the stinging defeats which characterized the two previous games of the engagement here. The visitors lacked the pitching power, having Kelly in for the first four innings, during which frequent hits were made and four scores piled up by the Crookston bunch. In the fifth Eddie Near was put in for the remainder of the game, but pitched a ragged game and sent a liberal number along to first on balls. In the fifth inning Crookston got the visitors on the hip and by a series of happy hits and quite a number of muffs and errors by the St. Cloud-Brainerd men piled up four scores. In the eighth and ninth, Mullen, who did excellent pitching for the Crookston team, fagged out considerably and allowed the visitors to fill the bases on balls. Two runs were brought in in the two innings by the visitors, but no spectacular plays were made, Crookston scoring a goose egg each inning. Near made a speedy line stop in the ninth, which won him the applause of the entire crowd of rooters from Crookston.

The weather was cold, windy and disagreeable, a terrific sand storm sweeping the city yesterday morning from the northwest and obscuring the sun and sky. Few fans attended the game and those who did were compelled to wear overcoats and do vigorous rooting in order to keep warm. The grounds were wet, play slow and the players of both teams in a rather indifferent mood throughout the entire game. In the first inning Schlatter for the Crookston bunch made a sensational over the fence hit scoring a home run and bringing in a man on first. Schlatter's hit started the fire works and the Crookston players kept in spirits during the remainder of the game. Mullen, who pitched the game for the locals is a brother of the Detroit American's famous Mullen, and yesterday's game, in which he covered himself with glory, was his first attempt at league game pitching. TAMPA WINS RICH STAKES

Harry Whitney's Three-Year-Old Filly Runs Well.

New York, May 25.—More than 20,000 persons saw Harry Payne Whitney's 3-year-old filly, Tanya, ridden by Hildebrand, win the rich Belmont stakes at Belmont park yesterday, defeating the best 3-year-old colts and fillies in the East. August Belmont's Blandy, winner of the Withers stakes, was second, and J. E. Madden's Hot Shot, third. Tanya was a heavily played favorite, closing at 11 to 5, having been backed down from 3 to 1.

The Belmont stakes is one of the oldest stakes run in the East, this being its thirty-ninth running, and numbered among its winners are some of the best horses foaled in America. The stakes is for 3-year-old and has a total value of $20,210, of which $16,680 is to the winner and in addition a plate valued at $1,000.

A high class field of horses faced the starter for this stake. The start was good and Hildebrand at once sent Tanyan to the front, followed by Wild Mint. These two raced away from the field and at the end of the first quarter had a lead of eight lengths. They ran head and head for one-half a mile, where Wild Mint quit. Meanwhile Hot Shot, Blandy and Merry Lark were alternating in third position. In the run through the stretch, Tanya began to tire and Blandy closing very strong under Davis' hard drive, forced Hildebrand to ride the filly out to win by half a length. Blandy was three lengths in front of Hot Shot. The others were strung out.

Louisville, Ky., May 25.—Kurtzeman and English Lad, the Cook entry, quoted at the prohibitive odds of 1 to 10, ran first and second in the handicap at Churchill downs yesterday, covering the mile in 1:40 2-5. The race showed that English Lad has rounded into form as he could have easily beaten his stake companion had the necessity arisen. Ebony was the good thing of the day and won with ease after thousands of dollars had been thrown into the ring on him, forcing his price from threes and fours to 6 to 5.

Kansas City, May 25.—Ascot Belle finished first in the handicap, the feature at Elm Ridge, yesterday, but was disqualified to rfoul and Bondage given the race. Meadow Breeze and Granada were the winning favorites.

Last evening the "Merchant of Venice" was presented at the Lyceum by John Milton and a company of local players under Mr. Milton's direction. The affair was under the auspices of the Women's Council to further the work of the school gardens and the summer school of domestic science, but the audience, which was not a very large one, was made up in the greatest part of those who were deeply interested in the play itself. The audience was not marked by the large attendance of club women, who are the backing of the council.

The play was well worth the interest and attention of playgoers and was especially interesting as produced by a company the majority of whom are not professionals. Throughout the five acts the dignity and worth of the wonderful play were apparent and the intelligence displayed by each person in the reading of the lines was a joy to those who know the play and its wealth of exquisite imagery.

Mr. Milton appeared as Shylock and his interpretation of the Jew of Venice was a delightful one. He gave to the character a great dignity and pride of race that is consistent and appealing, not over emphasizing the natural hate which he bore for one who had constantly spurned him, called him misbeliever, cut-throat, dog and subjected him to other insults because of his race and dealings with money which was his own. Mr. Milton's Shylock was not the humped and cringing and fawning money merchant that is often seen. In the street scene after his daughter's flight with Lorenzo and his meeting with Lorenzo's friends, who had helped in the elopement, Mr. Milton was particularly fine and the climax of the fourth act was worked up splendidly, Mrs. Milton as Portia and Antonio, William Coughlan, contributed greatly to the spirit and smoothness of that act.

The remaining characters were well assumed. William Coughlan made an extremely good looking and despondent Antonio and the part was well played. Louis Dworshak was at ease as Bassanio, friend to Antonio and suitor for Portia. His reading of the lines was especially clear and pleasing. Dr. D. H. Day appeared as old Gobbo and his scene with Launcelot, as played by H. H. Howell, was very good. Dr. Day also appeared in the court scene as was also Tubal, the Jewish friend of Shylock. The parts of Gratiano, Salarino, Solanio and Lorenzo, the friends of Bassanio, were taken by Charles Dorrance, Walter Harris, William Lamson and James Carkner.

The part of the wonderful, almost perfect Portia, was played by Mrs. John Milton and her scenes were given with a pleasing manner. As Nerissa, the dainty companion of Portia, Miss May Wylie was altogether charming. Miss Adele McClaran appeared as Jessica, daughter of Shylock, and was entirely satisfactory.

MORNING BREAKFAST.

Annual May Function Is to Take Place.

Tomorrow morning the annual May morning breakfast will be given at the rooms of the Young Women's Christian association, and it is hoped that this will be the most successful of like affairs in the history of the association. The breakfast is served from 7 to 9 o'clock, and in former years many little breakfasts parties have been formed and the daintily served meal is always enjoyed, particularly after a walk in a lovely spring morning. The weather on the two former years was ideal and the members are hoping that the warm sunshine and sparkling lake will greet them all tomorrow morning.

The tables are always decorated in what spring flowers may be secured at this time of year, and at the different tables the following hostesses will preside: Mrs. W. G. Hegardt, Mrs. H. S. Ely, Mrs. Alexander Milne, Mrs. C. A. Duncan, Mrs F H White, Miss May Sherwood, Mrs W. N. Hubbard, Mrs. R. G. Dunlop, Mrs. F. C. Bowman, Miss Ruth Roberts, Miss Ella Roe and Mrs. W. S. Bishop.

The May morning breakfast is one of the affairs of the year at which the presence of men is welcomed, and it is hoped a large number will be in attendance tomorrow.

GYM FROLIC HELD.

Jolly Affair Takes Place at Y. W. C. A. Rooms.

Last evening the annual gym frolic of the gymnasium classes of the Young Women's Christian association took place at the rooms on West Superior street, and was as much of a lark as one can imagine when some dozens of young women, who have for some years foregone the pleasure of below-the-knee dresses, have endured the presence and loss of hairpins, and have with trouble maintained the dignity demanded of everything in skirts over 13, suddenly and without warning dons short, skirts, plaster their hair back in uncompromising pig tails, or fluff it up, adorned with monstrous big bows, and declare they don't care a whoop for dignity. Something was doing in the way of unadulterated fun. After all sorts of gambols on the green, known because of the signs forbidding walking on the grass, the picnic supper was eaten off the ground, which, to unseeing eyes, was simply the gymnasium floor. And no time was wasted in screaming over the presence of bugs, for there were no men to be impressed, and a centipede might have walked among them unchallenged, so reckless were they with the new found bravery of childhood. And then, as said before, there were no men to be impressed with the charming dependableness and dainty fear of women.

In a booth in one corner of the picnic grounds, all day suckers and popcorn and lemonade were sold to add to the delight of the sometime children. And one could not help wondering if they would not awaken with nightmare or colic, for even children have been known to protest through the warning signals of nature, after consuming a certain amount of half-popped corn.

The frolic was, however, a genuine success. The members of the classes last evening elected Miss Harriet Raw delegate from the classes to the annual conference of Y. W. C. A., which will be held during the summer at Lake Geneva. Miss Marie Cameron was elected alternate.

Of General Interest.

Miss Louise Lowe, assistant librarian of the public library, entertained informally last evening at her home on Park Point. The guests were the other librarians. Miss Lowe will leave the first of June for Cloquet, where she will be librarian in that town. Her guests last evening were:

ON THE ROAD TO GLORY

By Annie Hinrichsen.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Oh, this abominable fire." She blew vigorously on the smoking sticks, and ashes flew into her eyes. "Why doesn't it burn, I wonder," she said crossly.

"Don't get made about it," said the man. "Here, let me." He knelt and demonstrated his own lung capacity and the flames broke forth. "There," he said proudly. "How's that?"

The girl's irritation increased. "That's the way with everything in this house."

"The way with everything?" repeated the man.

"Yes, the way with everything; common, vulgar, provincial."

The man looked dazed.

"How I hate it all. It's an awful life for a girl with a love and longing for the beautiful."

"What's the matter with it?" he asked. "You've got a good home."

"The house is good enough, I suppose, but the way we live is vulgar and countrified. There is nothing ennobling or uplifting in our daily life."

"Why—what—"

"I have esthetic tastes. The unlovely jars upon me and everything around me is unlovely. I am not in accord with my surroundings. That fire is one instance. A caller comes. A maid in a white cap and apron should admit him, tell him Miss Hastings is in and usher him into the drawing room where a bright fire is burning on the marble hearth. Instead, a frowsy, hired girl, who has to be treated as a member of the family, goes to the door, tells him to walk into the parlor and make himself at home and she'll call Jennie. The room is stone cold, for we don't have a fire in here unless we have company. There is kindling, paper and wood in that hideous stove and I light it and coax it to burn while my caller walks up and down to keep warm. Just such things I contend with every day and the commonness of it all is unendurable."

"I don't mind the cold room, Jennie; don't let that worry you."

"It's the principle," she said impatiently. "Can't you understand?"

"Not exactly."

"Nothing is done here as I think it should be. I have ideals and no one appreciates them or sympathizes with me. I crave cultured environments and I can not adapt myself to uncongenial ones. The difference between what I want and what I have makes me wretched. I dream of beautiful rooms lighted by softly shaded electric bulbs, but every day I go to the village store with an empty coal oil can in one hand and a dozen eggs in the other, trade the eggs for the coal oil and come home and fill smelly, ugly lamps.

"Household tasks disgust me, but I have to do them. Three times a day I set the table and put on it the same things, knives and forks, plates and glasses, cups and saucers, bread and butter, water and milk, meat and vegetables. If I ever go mad I know I shall sit and mumble, 'knives and forks, plates and glasses, cups and saucers, bread and butter, water and milk, meat and vegetables.'

"A handsome dining room, a mahogany table with rich damask, heavy silver and French china, servants gliding noiselessly about, would gratify my artistic sense. Our dining room smells of pork and cabbage. The hired man and the girl sat at the table with us and shovel in their food with their knives. Oh, why should one with a soul be so haunted?"

"You don't have to stay here, Jennie," said the young man. "If you were in a home of your own you could run things to suit yourself. You can tear my house upside down and inside out. Won't you try it, dear?"

"I'd be better off in your house, Joe, than I am here. You and your father are just alike, and after a while I'd be just like mother. I'd degenerate in a 'female' and you'd speak of me as 'she' and 'my woman.' Besides, matrimony does not appeal to me. I shall carve for myself a career."

"What are you going to do?" asked the puzzled Joe.

"I shall join the noble army of women, who, by the power of intellect, have risen to heights of fame and wealth. I feel that I have the ability to do as they have done. My nature demands a wider sphere. I must go out into the world of men and women who work with their brains instead of with their hands. Contact with such people will develop my talents and I shall become one of them. That is my ambition—to be one of those famous, brilliant women of the world. I yearn to scintillate, to be the wit and the central figure of a salon, the associate of artists, poets, statesmen. And since chance has placed in a little country village, I shall be compelled to achieve fortune by my own unaided efforts."

"How do you begin?"

"Every successful man and woman began at the bottom. I am willing to begin there and work very, very hard. Oh, Joe, you don't know how hard I shall work."

"What kind of work?"

"I have thought a great deal about the line I should follow. First, I considered painting, but one must study for years with the best masters, and father says he won't waste his money that way. I should like to write, but what can I write about? Nothing that would make a story ever happens here. Newspaper work is fascinating, and I tried, just for the practice, to be the correspondent from here for the Prattville Prattler, but the editor said he wanted more news than I sent in. I wrote good items too—that father had been to the county seat on business, that Uncle James had bought a new team of horses, that Aunt Minerva was ill with rheumatism, that Cousin John was building a new barn.

"I have decided to teach. No profession is more respected than that of teaching, and it is the only thing father and mother will allow me to do. Father is one of the directors of the school here, and he says I can be appointed teacher. I shall have to take a teacher's examination and tomorrow I shall commence reviewing the common branches. That will be a simple matter, and in a few days I shall take the examination. This little country school will be a stepping stone and I shall not despise it, humble as it is."

The next morning Jennie hunted up her old school books. Studying the common branches seemed a trifle and quite unworthy of the energy she wanted to expend in her great work.

It would not be necessary to spend any time on arithmetic. A glance would be sufficient. Addition; she could add correctly—if she was not in a hurry; subtraction, multiplication, division, she was wasting her time in looking over such familiar subjects. Fractions—um—er—division of fractions, she remembered, was somewhat complicated. Which fraction must be turned upside down, the dividend or the divisor, and why? Decimals, United States money, linear measure, surveyor's measure. She turned the pages less rapidly. Square measure, cubic measure. Must she learn all those tables? Liquid measure, Troy weight, apothecary's weight, why was there not one weight for all? Over and over she repeated the tables. She worked some of the problems, added bushels and pecks, gallons and pints, sold calico, estimated the size of a field and weighed sugar, gold and quinine. She compared her answers with those on the last pages of the book. Less than half were correct.

The dinner bell rang, but she worked on. Circular measure, longitude and time; Angles, she had forgotten there was such a things as a tapezoid; she would learn those another time. Proportion; square and cubic root, she had never studied them. She laid down her arithmetic. She would finish it later.

Grammar would be easier, she thought. But grammar was not easier. Rules and definitions were as troublesome as tables. The parts of speech mixed themselves up and she could not separate them. Clauses, phrases, adverbial modifiers, subordinate conjunctions, became unintelligible words. The grammar followed the arithmetic.

Georgraphy, United States history and physiology were full of facts which she had forgotten or never learned.

Late in the afternoon she put aside her books. There was so much to be learned. For many weeks she would have to work as she had worked today and then she would be only at the first stepping stone, the one she had thought so humble. She remembered reading that the man and woman who worked with their brains worked all the time and with all their strength and knew no rest. She had dreamed of being one of them, of living in their great, beautiful world. But now that world seemed far away and not beautiful, and the workers were no longer envied.

The farmhouse seemed very peaceful. No one in it worked hard and everyone was contented and happy. Father and the hired man were sitting on the back porch smoking and the hired girl was singing in the kitchen.

Joe was at the gate and she went to meet him.

"You look tired, little girl," he said gently.

"I am tired," she said with a little quiver in her voice. "My head's tired, Joe."

He drew the tired head to his shoulder. "Tired of knives and forks, plates and glasses, cups and saucers?"

"No, I am not tired of them, Joe, dear. I love them. They are so—so comfortable."

NOT FOREIGNERS.

According to Rev. Delancy Townsend of All Angels' Episcopal church, a member of his congregation, who has started to teach her small son the catechism, received a somewhat unexpected response to her first question, reports the New York Press.

"Who was the first man, Bobby?" she asked.

"George Washington," answered the young patriot promptly.

"Why, no, Bobby, it was Adam."

"Oh, well," said Bobby, who never fails to prove himself in the right, "I wasn't counting foreigners."

POWERFUL POWDER.

Maj. Shimose's smokeless powder is a Japanese invention, and is acknowledged to be far more powerful than the English lyddite or the French Melinite. Indeed, this powder is by actual test five times as strong as the European powder, says the Detroit Tribune. When a shell filled with lyddite or melinite is fired it breaks into ten or fifteen pieces, whereas the same shell filled Shimose' smokeless powder when exploded bursts into 2,000 or 3,000 pieces. It is the most powerful smokeless powder ever invented, and its inventor is a major in the Japanese army.

HERO MEDALS ARE AWARDED

Carnegie Commission Acts Favorably In Nine Cases.

Pittsburg, May 25.—At the May meeting of the Carnegie hero fund commission, which was held in the board rooms of the Carnegie Steel company yesterday afternoon, the initial awards were made. Nine cases were favorably acted upon by the commission. Three silver medals and six bronze medals were awarded. Three widows, whose husbands lost their lives in the performance of acts of heroism, were cared for by the commission, and in one case a money grant was made to a heroine for educational purposes. The commission made a grant of $10,000 to the general fund for the relief of the dependents upon the victims of the Brocton, Mass., disaster, which occurred March 20, 1905.

A total amount of $12,200 was disbursed by the commission. After holding two contests for the designs for suitable medals to be awarded to heroes, the commission decided to place the matter in the hands of J. E. Caldwell & Co. of Philadelphia.

Since the establishment of the fund on April 15, 1904, to May 15, 1905, a total of 407 cases have been received. Of these 239 have been refused as not within the scope of the fund, 159 are awaiting investigation and nine have been granted.

The awards, as made, are in brief, as follows:

Ernestine F. Atwood, aged 17, a student of Melrose, Mass., for saving from drowning Harry M. Smith, 36 years old, of Quincy, Mass., on Aug. 22, 1904. Miss Atwood was awarded a silver medal and the sum of $500 to be devoted by her to educational purposes. Alexander Cameron, a painter, aged 27, of Lindsay, Ont., was awarded a silver medal for rescuing George H. Bryans, an 8-year-old school boy, from the flooded Scugag river on April 24, 1904.

Gideon King Marshall, aged 39, a carpenter, lost his life at Springdale, Allegheny county, Pa., on May 25, 1904, while attempting the rescue of Arthur Truby, a laborer, and Fernand Pilette, a glass worker, who were overcome by gas in a well. Marshall left a widow and three children. The commission awarded Mrs. Marshall a silver medal and $500 for the liquidation of a mortgage on her home.

Seymour J. Leighton, aged 41, a machinist, was drowned in the Merrimac river while trying to rescue two school girls on July 4, 1904, near Lawrence, Mass. Leighton's widow was awarded a bronze medal and $900.

Thomas H. McCann, aged 32, a draw tender on a bridge at Portland, Me., tried to save an 8-year-old school boy from drowning on June 19, 1904, but was carried under by the lad. Mrs. McCann was awarded a bronze medal and $600.

Lavinia Steele, aged 25, a library cataloguer of Des Moines, on Dec. 19, 1904, saved the life of George E. Hill, a law student at Iowa City, Iowa, by skating to where Hill had broken through the ice and dragging him to safety. Miss Steele was awarded a bronze medal.

Louis A. Bauman, Jr., a farmer, was awarded a bronze medal for saving the life of a companion while swimming near Renningtown, Pa., on July 13, 1904.

John J. Riley, aged 44, a ticket seller, for rescuing a would-be suicide who jumped into the ocean at Coney Island, near New York, on Aug. 15, 1904, was awarded a bronze medal.

John J. Healy, aged 24, hospital attendant at Ellis island, was awarded a bronze medal for saving the life of a servant girl who jumped into the water, May 16, 1904, with suicidal intent.

BARNEY OLDFIELD HURT.

Chicago, May 25.—Barney Oldfield, the well-known autoist, had a narrow escape from death yesterday while speeding his machine in a tryout preparatory to the races of the Chicago Automobile club. While he was going at a high rate of speed one of the tires exploded and the machine plunged through the fence. Oldfield was picked up unconscious, but no bones were broken.

A BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

Brought Against New York Clubman By Mrs. Katherine Poillon.

New York, May 25.—Damages aggregating a quarter of a million dollars as compensation for alleged breach of promise of marriage are asked by Mrs. Katherine Poillon, in a suit against W. Gould Brokaw, the millionaire clubman, which was begun in the supreme court here yesterday.

Eminent counsel, scores of witnesses, many of them men of prominence from distant parts of the country and a packet containing more than 200 letters, alleged by the plaintiff to have been written by Brokaw, will figure in the case. The authenticity of the letters, upon which the suit is largely based, is denied by Brokaw's counsel.

At the opening session of the trial not a seat was vacant. Former Governor Black and Former Judge Olcott appeared for the plaintiff in the suit. Justice Gildersleeve presided. Several of the letters in the case are addressed: "My Dear Wife to Be."

Mrs. Poillon came here from Troy, N. Y., a few years ago after being divorced from her first husband, Joseph P. Smith, to whom she was married in 1897, while she was a student in a seminary. When the court adjourned only one juror had been selected.

MONEY APPROPRIATED FOR THIRD KOCH TRIAL.

New Ulm, Minn., May 25.—On request of Gen. H. W. Childs, special prosecutor for the state in the case against Dr. G. R. Koch, charged with having murdered Dr. L. A. Gebhardt on the night of Nov. 1 last, the board of county commissioners made an appropriation of $1,400, necessary on the third trial of the case. Of this amount $200 is for the services of a detective. Inasmuch as the state has not heretofore employed a detective in this case, the presumption is that the state has new evidence which it desires to investigate. The third trial of the case will begin July 6 at Mankato.

HILL AND HARRIMAN INTERESTS IN HARMONY.

New York, May 25.—Announcement was made from an official source yesterday that a final settlement of all the difficulties growing out of the old corner in Northern Pacific Railway company stock had been reached, and that henceforth there would be harmony between the Hill and Harriman forces. It is said that the details of the harmony agreement were worked out at a conference held between the representatives of the various interests involved, and of which also some principals, including E. H. Harriman, were present.

The deal is said to be in the form of a joint agreement between the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific Railway companies for the construction of a connecting road between the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific roads in the Clear Water district, to be operated jointly by the two companies. There was a pronounced advance in the Northern Securities group of stocks yesterday as well as a rise in the Union Pacific and Harriman stocks.

SAVES THE TARIFF

Secretary Shaw's Drawback Is a New Protection Buttress.

It Prevents Attacks By Giving Free Raw Material.

Washington, May 25.—One of the latest articles to get the benefit of Secretary Shaw's "drawback" is the two-gallon "imperial" can of the Standard Oil company. It is made of an imported tin and solder containing foreign lead. In 1904, 63,318,414 cans got the benefit of this drawback, some of the principal beneficiaries being the Standard Oil company, the big packers, and the fruit and salmon canning combinations. The new allowance will add considerable to the drawback account.

Other recent additions to the drawback list are manufacturers of "refined butter" from imported "butter grease," who combine it with American salt and American glucose and ship it out of the country mixed with domestic butter. Heretofore drawbacks were allowed only when the precious mixture was not combined with domestic butter.

These are two minor instances of the march onward of the drawback. In fact, the drawback is the little implement with which Secretary Shaw seeks to solve, or rather has practically solved, the problem of furnishing manufacturers with free raw material without asking congress to "tinker" the tariff. The drawback is a new buttress of protection of the standpat order, the importance of which seems to be little understood or appreciated by the average American voter. Recent decisions of the treasury department and the attorney general have wonderfully liberalized the drawback law.

Under decisions by Former Attorney General Olney, drawbacks were allowed upon articles manufactured in part of foreign and in part of domestic material and exported, only when physical or chemical analysis would disclose the ingredients. Recently Attorney General Moody has upset this interpretation of the law by declaring that the drawback may be allowed when by any means—by bookkeeping or otherwise—the foreign material can be traced to the manufactured article declared for export. Secretary Shaw is giving the most liberal interpretation to this opinion in the granting of drawbacks.

Several months ago the milling interests of the country became so insistent in demanding a supply of Canadian wheat that they frightened the standpatters. These latter resolved to start a propaganda for tariff revision in the direction of free raw material, so as to remove the duty upon all foreign wheat. In fact, the agitation was started in connection with the New England agitation for Canadian reciprocity and free leather. About the the time that congress met last fall this movement seemed to be of proportions worth considering.

Secretary Shaw gave thought and came to the rescue with his little drawback implement. He found that a drawback on Canadian wheat mixed in milling with domestic wheat intended for export in the form of flour would have an especial quieting effect upon the millers. It was then that he applied to Attorney General Moody with such happy results.

Senator Hansbrough's protests led to a polite correspondence of an edifying character between the senator and the secretary—nothing more. The millers got the free Canadian wheat to the extent to which it was indicated by their profit accounts and the tariff revision agitation ceased in that quarter.

New England has not secured its Canadian reciprocity nor its free leather, although it is difficult to see why it cannot get the latter through diligent use of Secretary Shaw's drawback. Even if New England is not entirely satisfied, standing alone it can scarcely cause lasting woe to the tariff standpatters.

There is little probability that a demand for free raw material alone will ever again threaten protective tariff interests. The great majority of manufacturers now have free raw material. Theoretically the drawback system as now interpreted will give free raw material to every manufacturer of all articles intended for export. Since this places him on an equality with all manufacturers in foreign business and on an equality with American manufacturers in domestic business—so far as the raw material is concerned, there seems to be no reason why he should ask for a change. The tariff as it stands protects him from the foreign manufacturer in the domestic markets. Out of the imported material used by manufacturers in 1904, amounting to $477,620,224, an aggregate of $330,800,767 was entirely free from duty. Of this about $265,000,000 consisted of crude material and about $65,000,000 of material partially manufactured.

Duty was paid in the first instance on $146,324,857, a great deal less than one-third of the imported raw materials used by American manufacturers. The rest was free raw material. There are no exact figures to show what portion of the remaining dutiable raw material was benefited by the drawback, but the very large amount paid in drawbacks indicates that a considerable amount of the dutiable imported raw material intended for the use of American manufacturers paid its full proportion of tariff duties on a value basis, it would have paid but about $60,000,000 out of about $250,000,000 in 1904. Since the tariff upon this imported raw material as a rule is much less than upon imported manufactured goods, it paid much less than $60,000,000 in tariff. In the meantime the drawback amounted to about $5,000,000 a year.

It is quite certain that the larger propotrion of the imported dutiable raw material is used in goods manufactured for American consumption. The $5,000,000 drawback, therefore, remitted the duty on a very large proportion of the dutiable imported raw material manufactured here and afterward exported. Theoretically, it is difficult to see why 99 per cent of the duty paid by American manufacturers on imported raw material entering articles for export should not be repaid. Secretary Shaw is doing much to bring the practice up to the theory in this respect.

The theory upon which free raw material is wanted by American manufacturers who uphold the protective policy is to enable them to compete in the markets of the world. The drawback system as administered by Secretary Shaw practically gives free raw material for this purpose. But a fraction of the $5,000,000 was paid, amounting to 99 per cent of the duty paid on the dutiable raw material used in the export.

With a tariff wall against his foreign competitor in the American market, and the incident power of shifting on the consumer any duty paid on imported raw material used in manufactures for home consumption, this concession placing him on an equality with the foreigner as to raw materials of manufactures for foreign markets, is all that the American manufacturer cares to ask.

It is, therefore, the opinion of congressmen who have looked into the tariff situation, that the free raw material advocates among American manufacturers can no longer be regarded as allies of the tariff revisionists. If there is still a pressure of this sort for free raw materials, Secretary Shaw and his drawback are expected to relieve it.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Reynolds says that the demand for the drawback is growing rapidly. One manufacturer learns that another has secured a drawback, and he immediately applies for a drawback upon a similar line of manufactures.

Of course these manufacturers must go to some trouble to get the drawback. The foreign materials must be traced to the satisfaction of the treasury officials. The treasury department has made certain rules which must be followed in tracing this material, and these must be complied with in order to secure the drawback. A different set of rules applies in each case. Each case stands upon its own merit. Still, the rules are not difficult to comply with. Drawback material may be traced through the books of the manufacturer, or other means furnishing satisfactory evidence as to the identity of the goods. The drawback amounts to 99 per cent. of the duty paid.

The drawback may be secured whether the goods are exported by the manufacturer or his customer. The burlapping it used by other manufacturers and exporters. Drawback is paid upon tin cans, although the manufacturer may not be the canner who exports them. The system is sufficiently broad in theory to solve the free raw material question.

In that way, it is the opinion here, the tariff revisionists have been deprived of the support of the only force capable of present effective organization. While the revenue situation is somewhat threatening to the standpatters, in some respects they are in a stronger position than ever before, and Secretary Shaw is entitled to whatever credit is due for such a happy state of affairs.

FEDERAL BOARD

Gives a Few Pointers For Spelling Bee.

Washington, May 25.—The United States board on geographic names has corrected the spelling of a number of old-world proper names. The function of this board is to lay down the law in regard to the proper spelling of names and places in the United States, but occasionally it extends its rules to apply to towns in foreign lands.

The board has decreed that it shall be Mukden and not Moukden nor Moukden. The spelling of the place variously designated as Nganh-Wei, Ngan-Hwei, Ngan-Hoei, Ngan-Hui, NganHwuy, has been simplified to plain Anhui. The famous gulf in China will hereafter be spelled Chihli instead of Pechili, Pe-Chili, Chih-Li and Chi-Li. It will not longer be Kiang-Si nor Kiang-So, but Kiangsi. Shan-Tung and Shantung have been changed to Shantung.

The board has also decreed that the final "e" in Clarke shall be dropped, so that the famous explorer who, with Lewis opened up the Northwest, will hereafter be referred to as Clark.

Malta-Vita
"The Perfect Food"
Same Big Package
Same High Quality
Now 10 cts.

Malta-Vita "The Perfect Food," malt life, as its name implies, stands for that intense vitality that results from the daily use of a food skilfully prepared from the whole of the wheat, of which, after being cooked, each kernel has been subjected to the searching digestive action of the diastase and other enzymes of barley malt. This makes it a "predigested" food of highest nourishment value, which explains the remarkable results obtained in cases of nervous debility, deranged stomachs and constipation. Besides, it is the best food to eat.

"We have used several boxes of Malta-Vita and think it the finest food we have tried yet. Having used different kinds, we find Malta-Vita has a flavor which excels all others. We had almost despaired to find something our baby could eat without being distressed. He had, since birth, been a constant sufferer from constipation and a general derangement of the stomach and bowels. Since we began feeding him Malta-Vita he has improved wonderfully in health and is entirely cured of constipation. In fact, myself and husband realize a great benefit since using the food, as we have suffered from general debility. We find it gives life and tone to the entire system." Name given on request by Malta-Vita Pure Food Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MALTA-VITA is a food with a "taste." It does not belong to the tasteless variety of "flaked foods" and too great credit cannot be claimed for Malta-Vita on account of the fact that it contains its own sweetening agent—maltose always being present in a proportion exceeding eight per cent and sometimes ten per cent. This is a healthy, digestible sugar, formed by the action of the malt diastase upon starch and it causes the stomach no inconvenience. This is not the case with flaked foods that are sweetened by cane sugar, beet sugar, maple sugar, boiled cider, glucose or grape sugar, as all these cause acidity in the stomach and are seriously injurious.

HOMER DAVENPORT AS AN ORNITHOLOGIST

Famous Cartoonist Preparing To Ship His Costly Collection of Rare Birds and Beasts To Portland For Exhibition and Scientific Tests During Lewis and Clark Exposition—Mr. Davenport a Native of Oregon.

Portland, Or., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Homer Davenport, the famous caricaturist, has turned ornithologist. Instead of drawing cartoons of important men and happenings, he is devoting all his time to the study of animals and rare birds of many varieties and species. Since his retirement from active newspaper work, a couple of years ago, Mr. Davenport has been delving deep into this important subject of birds and animals. Now he has broken out as a full-fledged ornithologist, and is negotiating with the Lewis and Clark exposition to give a series of lectures on the subject in the Auditorium on the exposition grounds.

In addition to this he has all the local scientists and aspirants for ornithological lore agog over a series of intensely interesting experiments which he has arranged to conduct in connection with the exposition this summer. Under his direction it has been decided to conduct daily and nightly investigations into the habits of many strange birds which Mr. Davenport has in his own aviaries. Local scientists are to take shifts in watching the traits of the different denizens of the aviaries at all hours, and it is expected that much valuable information will be added to the accumulation of animal lore already recorded.

To facilitate the experiments Mr. Davenport will bring to Portland the entire collection of birds and beasts from the famous Homer Davenport farm at Morris Plains, N. J. He is now at that place arranging for the shipment of his collection, which includes thirty-six varieties of pheasants, nineteen varieties of wild geese, all kinds of water fowl, storks and cranes.

In the meantime his friend George Baker, the well-known theatrical manager, who, also, has acquired the ornithological fever, is directing a force of exposition carpenters in constructing a replica of a typical Western ranch on the exposition grounds, wherein the colony of fowl and animals may be kept to the very best advantage for study during the exposition. For the greater part of the day the farm will also be open to the public, and while quiet will be insisted upon in order that the normal habits of the denizens may not be disturbed, everyone who so desires will be allowed to see the specimens which Mr. Davenport has spent ten years of his life in collecting, and which have cost him the neat sum of $85,000.

There are a number of perplexing problems which students hope to settle or learn more of as a result of the summer's observation. One of these problems has been bothering students for a good many years, and a settlement will be a welcome thing. The problem is whether or not birds of the same general type are of different species or merely geographical varieties of the same species.

Another thing which Mr. Davenport and his associates are anxious to learn is the cause of certain peculiar traits in various birds. For example, a reason is needed for a pugnacious tendency in the Soemmerring's pheasant, a native of Japan. The male bird of this species or variety is born for a fight all the time, and will fight anything that comes within reach, when it is in a fighting mood, which is at least once every day. If there are no other male birds about, the ungallant fowl will assail a female, and precautions have to be taken to prevent the extermination of the weaker birds. This is done by clipping one of the male bird's wings and providing high perches. Thus, when the belligerent cock becomes ferocious, the female bird can soar gracefully upon her high perch out of harm's way.

A theory has been advanced that there is some quality in the atmosphere of the Island Kingdom of which the bird is a native, which causes this pugnacity. The peculiar fighting qualities of the Japanese is pointed out in substantiation of this theory, which really has some color, although we have been generally used to accrediting Japanese prowess in battle to the native temperament as influenced merely by Japanees social conditions and religious views.

That there is something to be absorbed from the atmosphere of one geographical section which is not common to all localities is not so hard to believe after all, for it is an established fact that people vary widely according to the climates in which they reside. Therefore, the experiments on the simple little Soemmerring's pheasant in the Davenport farm may result in some valuable light being shed upon the question. A number of the Soemmerrings will be placed amid varying environs and the effect will be observed closely. Many other tests will be made, including breeding tests.

In addition to his great collection of fowls, Mr. Davenport will bring his Angora goat herds and his five Arabian horses. As is generally known, Arabian horses are a rarity in the Occident. The sultan of Turkey many generations ago published an edict that no pure-bred Arabian steeds be allowed to leave their native strand and this edict has survived many hundreds of years and is still in force. The sultan twelve years ago was induced to send a band of these horses to the great World's fair at Chicago. They came in charge of imperial representatives and were returned to Arabia immediately after the fair. However, the sultan's representatives got mixed up with some money sharks and his horses were sold off to make good the money borrowed. Mr. Davenport secured five of the very finest animals. They will be exhibited in a special stable at the Lewis & Clark exposition and their remarkable aptitude for learning things will prove a revelation to horse fanciers.

The Davenport farm, like all other portions of the Portland exposition, will be ready in every detail for opening on June 1. As president H. W. Goode recently said: "What is not ready on June 1, when the exposition opens, will not be ready on Oct. 15 when the fair closes, as we do not intend to have anything incomplete at the start, but rather are determined to set a precedent in expositions, being ready on time."

Mr. Davenport will spend the summer in Portland, personally looking after his birds and beasts. Much local interest attaches to his presence here, inasmuch as he is a native Oregonian. He was born and reared at the town of Silverton, Ore., and his first newspaper cartoon work was done in Portland. It is reliably promised that many artists and literary people from the East, who are personal friends of the cartoonist and ornithologist, will visit the exposition as a special honor to Homer Davenport and in order to see the noted Oregonian on his native heath.

CREDITORS WILL SUE

To Recover From a Deceased Wife's Estate.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 25.—Depositors who had money in the private bank of John S. Beach when it failed twelve years ago will try to recover $50,000 from the estate of his wife, who died recently a few hours before his death, on the ground that under the law he inherited one-third of her estate. She made a will giving all to her two daughters.

The point is made that the law requires a husband to declare acceptance of the will or to take a third of the estate. He was dying at the time of her death and could make no declaration.

When the bank failed more than 200 depositors who had $134,000, disvovered that the real estate which had been prominently identified with his name belonged to his wife.

The failure was a bad one and many stories of distress were told. Beach was indicted, but the judge instructed the jury to return a verdict of acquittal. On appeal the higher court reversed the decision. The depositors who were pushing the prosecution were settled with and there was no second trial.

THREE SISTERS

Brave Face the Fate That Is Certain.

Vancouver, May 25.—Away in the interior of Japan there is a leper settlement known as Kumamtu. Thither Sisters Luke, Adelid and Martha are going. They arrived from Quebec and left this week by the Empress of India for Japan.

The sisters are young, healthy and strong, and nature has dealt kindly with them in the matter of face and figure; yet they go bravely to their field of labor with no other aim in view than nursing and caring for Christ's afflicted.

They have turned their backs on the world they knew, and bravely they are setting their steps for that field of labor which knows but one end—a death so slow and repulsive in form that the stoutest hearts shrink from the mere contemplation of it.

NAN PATTERSON'S CASE

Caused Breaking Up of a Chicago Home.

Chicago, Ill., May 25.—Nan Patterson has disrupted one Chicago family, and W. H. English is hunting for his wife, who disappeared a year ago after a quarrel over the Florodora girl's escape from punishment in connection with the shooting of "Caesar" Young.

The quarrel, however, was not between Mrs. English and her husband, but between the wife and her mother-in-law. Mr. English's mother, who is 80 years old, declared that Nan Patterson should have been hanged.

When Mrs. English, Jr., declared that the juries had the best chance to determine Nan's deserts the mother-in-law, it is claimed, asserted that any one who defended the show girl was "low-minded." Thereupon Mrs. English, Jr., packed up her personal belongings and departed.

HIGHEST AWARD ST. LOUIS, 1904.

HERO MEDALS ARE AWARDED

Carnegie Commission Acts Favorably In Nine Cases.

Pittsburg, May 25.—At the May meeting of the Carnegie hero fund commission, which was held in the board rooms of the Carnegie Steel company yesterday afternoon, the initial awards were made. Nine cases were favorably acted upon by the commission. Three silver medals and six bronze medals were awarded. Three widows, whose husbands lost their lives in the performance of acts of heroism, were cared for by the commission, and in one case a money grant was made to a heroine for educational purposes. The commission made a grant of $10,000 to the general fund for the relief of the dependents upon the victims of the Brocton, Mass., disaster, which occurred March 20, 1905.

A total amount of $12,200 was disbursed by the commission. After holding two contests for the designs for suitable medals to be awarded to heroes, the commission decided to place the matter in the hands of J. E. Caldwell & Co. of Philadelphia.

Since the establishment of the fund on April 15, 1904, to May 15, 1905, a total of 407 cases have been received. Of these 249 have been refused as not within the scope of the fund, 159 are awaiting investigation and nine have been granted.

The awards, as made, are in brief, as follows:

Ernestine F. Atwood, aged 17, a student of Melrose, Mass., for saving from drowning Harry M. Smith, 36 years old, of Quincy, Mass., on Aug. 22, 1904. Miss Atwood was awarded a silver medal and the sum of $500 to be devoted by her to educational purposes. Alexander Cameron, a painter, aged 27, of Lindsay, Ont., was awarded a silver medal for rescuing George H. Bryans, an 8-year-old school boy, from the Rapids Scugag river on April 24, 1904.

Gideon King Marshall, aged 39, a carpenter, lost his life at Springdale, Allegheny county, Pa., on May 25, 1904, while attempting the rescue of Arthur Truby, a laborer, and Fernand Pilette, a glass worker, who were overcome by gas in a well. Marshall left a widow and three children. The commission awarded Mrs. Marshall a silver medal and $500 for the liquidation of a mortgage on her home.

Seymour J. Leighton, aged 41, a machinist, was drowned in the Merrimac river while trying to rescue two school girls on July 4, 1904, near Lawrence, Mass. Leighton's widow was awarded a bronze medal and $600.

Thomas H. Meehan, aged 32, a draw tender on a bridge at Portland, Me., tried to save an 8-year-old school boy from drowning on June 19, 1904, but was carried under by the lad. Mrs. Meehan was awarded a bronze medal and $600.

Lavinia Steele, aged 25, a library cataloguer of Des Moines, on Dec. 19, 1904, saved the life of George E. Hill, a law student at Iowa City, Iowa, by skating to where Hill had broken through the ice and dragging him to safety. Miss Steele was awarded a bronze medal.

Louis A. Bauman, Jr., a farmer, was awarded a bronze medal for saving the life of a companion while swimming near Renningtown, Pa., on July 13, 1904.

John J. Riley, aged 44, a ticket seller, for rescuing a would-be suicide who jumped into the ocean at Coney Island, near New York, on Aug. 15, 1904, was awarded a bronze medal.

John J. Healy, aged 24, hospital attendant at Ellis island, was awarded a bronze medal for saving the life of a servant girl who jumped into the water, May 16, 1904, with suicidal intent.

A BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

Brought Against New York Clubman By Mrs. Katherine Poillon.

New York, May 25.—Damages aggregating a quarter of a million dollars as compensation for alleged breach of promise of marriage are asked by Mrs. Katherine Poillon, in a suit against W. Gould Brokaw, the millionaire clubman, which was begun in the supreme court here yesterday.

Eminent counsel, scores of witnesses, many of them men of prominence from distant parts of the country and a packet containing more than 200 letters, alleged by the plaintiff to have been written by Brokaw, will figure in the case. The authenticity of the letters, upon which the suit is largely based, is denied by Brokaw's counsel.

At the opening session of the trial not a seat was vacant. Former Governor Black and Former Judge Olcott appeared for the plaintiff in the suit. Justice Gildersleeve presided. Several of the letters in the case are addressed: "My Dear Wife to Be."

Mrs. Poillon came here from Troy, N. Y., a few years ago after being divorced from her first husband, Joseph P. Smith, to whom she was married in 1897, while she was a student in a seminary. When the court adjourned only one juror had been selected.

MONEY APPROPRIATED FOR THIRD KOCH TRIAL.

New Ulm, Minn., May 25.—On request of Gen. H. W. Childs, special prosecutor for the state in the case against Dr. G. R. Koch, charged with having murdered Dr. L. A. Gebhardt on the night of Nov. 1 last, the board of county commissioners made an appropriation of $1,400, necessary on the third trial of the case. Of this amount $200 is for the services of a detective. Inasmuch as the state has not heretofore employed a detective in this case, the presumption is that the state has new evidence which it desires to investigate. The third trial of the case will begin July 6 at Mankato.

HILL AND HARRIMAN INTERESTS IN HARMONY.

New York, May 25.—Announcement was made from an official source yesterday that a final settlement of all the difficulties growing out of the old corner in Northern Pacific Railway company stock had been reached, and that henceforth there would be harmony between the Hill and Harriman forces. It is said that the details of the harmony agreement were worked out at a conference held between the representatives of the various interests involved, and of which also some principals, including E. H. Harriman, were present.

The deal is said to be in the form of a joint agreement between the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific Railway companies for the construction of a connecting road between the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific roads in the Clear Water district, to be operated jointly by the two companies. There was a pronounced advance in the Northern Securities group of stocks yesterday as well as a rise in the Union Pacific and Harriman stocks.

SAVES THE TARIFF

Secretary Shaw's Drawback Is a New Protection Buttress.

It Prevents Attacks By Giving Free Raw Material.

Washington, May 25.—One of the latest articles to get the benefit of Secretary Shaw's "drawback" is the two-gallon "imperial" can of the Standard Oil company. It is made of an imported tin and solder containing foreign lead. In 1904, 63,318,414 cans got the benefit of this drawback, some of the principal beneficiaries being the Standard Oil company, the big packers, and the fruit and salmon canning combinations. The new allowance will add considerable to the drawback account.

Other recent additions to the drawback list are manufacturers of "refined butter" from imported "butter grease," who combine it with American salt and American glucose and ship it out of the country mixed with domestic butter. Heretofore drawbacks were allowed only when the precious mixture was not combined with domestic butter.

These are two minor instances of the march onward of the drawback. In fact, the drawback is the little implement with which Secretary Shaw seeks to solve, or rather has practically solved, the problem of furnishing manufacturers with free raw material without asking congress to "tinker" the tariff. The drawback is a new buttress of protection of the standpat order, the importance of which seems to be little understood or appreciated by the average American voter. Recent decisions of the treasury department and the attorney general have wonderfully liberalized the drawback law.

Under decisions by Former Attorney General Olney, drawbacks were allowed upon articles manufactured in part of foreign and in part of domestic material and exported, only when physical or chemical analysis would disclose the ingredients. Recently Attorney General Moody has upset this interpretation of the law by declaring that the drawback may be allowed when by any means—by bookkeeping or otherwise—the foreign material can be traced to the manufactured article declared for export. Secretary Shaw is giving the most liberal interpretation to this opinion in the granting of drawbacks.

Several months ago the milling interests of the country became so insistent in demanding a supply of Canadian wheat that they frightened the standpatters. They threatened to start a propaganda for tariff revision in the direction of free raw material, so as to remove the duty upon all foreign wheat. In fact, the agitation was started in connection with the New England agitation for Canadian reciprocity and free leather. About the the time that congress met last fall this movement threatened to be of proportions worth considering.

Secretary Shaw gave thought and came to the rescue with his little drawback implement. He found that a drawback on Canadian wheat mixed in milling with domestic wheat intended for export in the form of flour would have an especial quieting effect upon the millers. It was then that he applied to Attorney General Moody with such happy results.

Senator Hansbrough's protests led to a polite correspondence of an edifying character between the senator and the secretary—nothing more. The millers got the free Canadian wheat to the extent to which it was indicated by their profit account, and the tariff revision agitation ceased in that quarter.

New England has not secured its Canadian reciprocity nor its free leather, although it is difficult to see why it cannot get the latter through diligent use of Secretary Shaw's drawback. Even if New England is not entirely satisfied, standing alone it can scarcely cause lasting woe to the tariff standpatters.

There is little probability that a demand for free raw material alone will ever again threaten protective tariff interests. The great majority of manufacturers now have free raw material. Theoretically the drawback system as now interpreted will give free raw material to every manufacturer of all articles intended for export. Since this places him on an equality with all manufacturers in foreign business and on an equality with American manufacturers in domestic business—so far as the raw material is concerned, there seems to be no reason why he should ask for a change. The tariff as it stands protects him from the foreign manufacturer in the domestic markets. Out of the imported material used by manufacturers in 1904, amounting to $477,620,224, an aggregate of $230,800,767 was entirely free from duty. Of this about $200,000,000 consisted of crude material and about $65,000,000 of material partially manufactured.

Duty was paid in the first instance on $146,824,857, a great deal less than one-third of the imported raw materials used by American manufacturers. The rest was free raw material. There are no exact figures to show what portion of the remaining dutiable raw material was benefited by the drawback, but the very large amount paid in drawbacks indicates that a considerable amount of the dutiable imported raw material intended for the use of American manufacturers paid its full proportion of tariff duties on a value basis, it would have paid but about $60,000,000 out of about $250,000,000 in 1904. Since the tariff upon this imported raw material as a rule is much less than upon imported manufactured goods, it paid much less than $60,000,000 in tariff. In the meantime the drawback amounted to about $5,000,000 a year.

It is quite certain that the larger proportion of the imported dutiable raw material is used in goods manufactured for American consumption. The $5,000,000 drawback, therefore, remitted the duty on a very large proportion of the dutiable imported raw material manufactured here and afterward exported. Theoretically, it is difficult to see why 99 per cent of the duty paid by American manufacturers on imported raw material entering articles for export should not be repaid. Secretary Shaw is doing much to bring the practice up to the theory in this respect.

The theory upon which free raw material is wanted by American manufacturers who uphold the protective policy is to enable them to compete in the markets of the world. The drawback system as administered by Secretary Shaw practically gives free raw material for this purpose. But a fraction of the $5,000,000 was paid, amounting to 99 per cent of the duty paid on the dutiable raw material used in the export.

With a tariff wall against his foreign competitor in the American market, and the incident power of shifting on the consumer any duty paid on imported raw material used in manufactures for home consumption, this concession placing him on an equality with the foreigner as to raw materials of manufactures for foreign markets, is all that the American manufacturer cares to ask.

It is, therefore, the opinion of congressmen who have looked into the tariff situation, that the free raw material advocates among American manufacturers can no longer be regarded as allies of the tariff revisionists. If there is still a pressure of this sort for free raw materials, Secretary Shaw and his drawback are expected to relieve it.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Reynolds says that the demand for the drawback is growing rapidly. One manufacturer learns that another has secured a drawback, and he immediately applies for a drawback upon a similar line of manufactures.

Of course these manufacturers must go to some trouble to get the drawback. The foreign materials must be traced to the satisfaction of the treasury officials. The treasury department has made certain rules which must be followed in tracing this material, and these must be complied with in order to secure the drawback. A different set of rules applies in each case. Each case stands upon its own merit. Still, the rules are not difficult to comply with. Drawback material may be traced through the books of the manufacturer, or other means furnishing satisfactory evidence as to the identity of the goods. The drawback amounts to 99 per cent. of the duty paid.

The drawback may be secured whether the goods are exported by the manufacturer or his customer. The burlapping used by other manufacturers and exporters. Drawback is paid upon tin cans, although the manufacturer may not be the canner who exports them. The system is sufficiently broad in theory to solve the free raw material question.

In that way, it is the opinion here, the tariff revisionists have been deprived of the support of the only force capable of present effective organization. While the revenue situation is somewhat threatening to the standpatters, in some respects they are in a stronger position than ever before, and Secretary Shaw is entitled to whatever credit is due for such a happy state of affairs.

FEDERAL BOARD

Gives a Few Pointers For Spelling Bee.

Washington, May 25.—The United States board on geographic names has corrected the spelling of a number of old-world proper names. The function of this board is to lay down the law in regard to the proper spelling of names and places in the United States, but occasionally it extends its rules to apply to towns in foreign lands.

The board has decreed that it shall be Mukden and not Mookden nor Moukden. The spelling of the place variously designated as Nganh-Wei, Ngan-Hwei, Ngan-Hoei, Ngan-Hui, NganHwuy, has been simplified to plain Anhui. The famous gulf in China will hereafter be spelled Chihli instead of Pechili, Pe-Chili, Chih-Li and Chi-Li. It will not longer be Kiang-Si nor Kiang-So, but Kiangsi. Shan-Tung and Shantung have been changed to Shan-tung.

The board has also decreed that the final "e" in Clarke shall be dropped, so that the famous explorer who, with Lewis opened up the Northwest, will hereafter be referred to as Clark.

Malta-Vita

"The Perfect Food"

Same Big Package
Same High Quality

Now 10 cts.

Malta-Vita "The Perfect Food," malt life, as its name implies, stands for that intense vitality that results from the daily use of a food skilfully prepared from the whole of the wheat, of which, after being cooked, each kernel has been subjected to the searching digestive action of the diastase and other enzymes of barley malt. This makes it a "predigested" food of highest nourishment value, which explains the remarkable results obtained in cases of nervous debility, deranged stomachs and constipation. Besides, it is the best food to eat.

"We have used several boxes of Malta-Vita and think it the finest food we have tried yet. Having used different kinds, we find Malta-Vita has a flavor which excels all others. We had almost despaired to find something our baby could eat without being distressed. He had, since birth, been a constant sufferer from constipation and a general derangement of the stomach and bowels. Since we began feeding him Malta-Vita he has improved wonderfully in health and is entirely cured of constipation. In fact, myself and husband realize a great benefit since using the food, as we have suffered from general debility. We find it gives life and tone to the entire system." Name given on request by Malta-Vita Pure Food Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MALTA-VITA is a food with a "taste." It does not belong to the tasteless variety of "flaked foods" and too great credit cannot be claimed for Malta-Vita on account of the fact that it contains its own sweetening agent—maltose always being present in a proportion exceeding eight per cent and sometimes ten per cent. This is a healthy, digestible sugar, formed by the action of the malt diastase upon starch and it causes the stomach no inconvenience. This is not the case with flaked foods that are sweetened by cane sugar, beet sugar, maple sugar, boiled cider, glucose or grape sugar, as all these cause acidity in the stomach and are seriously injurious.

HOMER DAVENPORT AS AN ORNITHOLOGIST

Famous Cartoonist Preparing To Ship His Costly Collection of Rare Birds and Beasts To Portland For Exhibition and Scientific Tests During Lewis and Clark Exposition—Mr. Davenport a Native of Oregon.

Portland, Or., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Homer Davenport, the famous caricaturist, has turned ornithologist. Instead of drawing cartoons of important men and happenings, he is devoting all his time to the study of animals and rare birds of many varieties and species. Since his retirement from active newspaper work, a couple of years ago, Mr. Davenport has been delving deep into this important subject of birds and animals. Now he has broken out as a full-fledged ornithologist, and is negotiating with the Lewis and Clark exposition to give a series of lectures on the subject in the Auditorium on the exposition grounds.

In addition to this he has all the local scientists and aspirants for ornithological lore agog over a series of intensely interesting experiments which he has arranged to conduct in connection with the exposition this summer. Under his direction it has been decided to conduct daily and nightly investigations into the habits of many strange birds which Mr. Davenport has in his own aviaries. Local scientists are to take shifts in watching the traits of the different denizens of the aviaries at all hours, and it is expected that much valuable information will be added to the accumulation of animal lore already recorded.

To facilitate the experiments Mr. Davenport will bring to Portland the entire collection of birds and beasts from the famous Homer Davenport farm at Morris Plains, N. J. He is now at that place arranging for the shipment of his collection, which includes thirty-six varieties of pheasants, nineteen varieties of wild geese, all kinds of water fowl, storks and cranes.

In the meantime his friend George Baker, the well-known theatrical manager, who, also, has acquired the ornithological fever, is directing a force of exposition carpenters in constructing a replica of a typical Western ranch on the exposition grounds, wherein the colony of fowl and animals may be kept to the very best advantage for study during the exposition. For the greater part of the day the farm will also be open to the public, and while quiet will be insisted upon in order that the normal habits of the denizens may not be disturbed, everyone who so desires will be allowed to see the specimens which Mr. Davenport has spent ten years of his life in collecting, and which have cost him the neat sum of $85,000.

There are a number of perplexing problems which students hope to settle or learn more of as a result of the summer's observation. One of these problems has been bothering students for a good many years, and a settlement will be a welcome thing. The problem is whether or not birds of the same general type are of different species or merely geographical varieties of the same species.

Another thing which Mr. Davenport and his associates are anxious to learn is the cause of certain peculiar traits in various birds. For example, a reason is needed for a pugnacious tendency in the Soemmerring's pheasant, a native of Japan. The male bird of this species or variety is born for a fight all the time, and will fight anything that comes within reach, when it is in a fighting mood, which is at least once every day. If there are no other male birds about, the ungallant fowl will assail a female, and precautions have to be taken to prevent the extermination of the weaker birds. This is done by clipping one of the male bird's wings and providing high perches. Thus, when the belligerent cock becomes ferocious, the female bird can soar gracefully upon her high perch out of harm's way.

A theory has been advanced that there is some quality in the atmosphere of the Island Kingdom of which the bird is a native, which causes this pugnacity. The peculiar fighting qualities of the Japanese is pointed out in substantiation of this theory, which really has some color, although we have been generally used to accrediting Japanese prowess in battle to the native temperament as influenced merely by Japanees social conditions and religious views.

That there is something to be absorbed from the atmosphere of one geographical section which is not common to all localities is not so hard to believe after all, for it is an established fact that people vary widely according to the climates in which they reside. Therefore, the experiments on the simple little Soemmerring's pheasant in the Davenport farm may result in some valuable light being shed upon the question. A number of the Soemmerrings will be placed amid varying environs and the effect will be observed closely. Many other tests will be made, including breeding tests.

In addition to his great collection of fowls, Mr. Davenport will bring his Angora goat herds and his five Arabian horses. As is generally known, Arabian horses are a rarity in the Occident. The sultan of Turkey many generations ago published an edict that no pure-bred Arabian steeds be allowed to leave their native strand and this edict has survived many hundreds of years and is still in force. The sultan twelve years ago was induced to send a band of these horses to the great World's fair at Chicago. They came in charge of imperial representatives and were returned to Arabia immediately after the fair. However, the sultan's representatives got mixed up with some money sharks and his horses were sold off to make good the money borrowed. Mr. Davenport secured five of the very finest animals. They will be exhibited in a special stable at the Lewis & Clark exposition and their remarkable aptitude for learning things will prove a revelation to horse fanciers.

The Davenport farm, like all other portions of the Portland exposition, will be ready in every detail for opening on June 1. As president H. W. Goode recently said: "What is not ready on June 1, when the exposition opens, will not be ready on Oct. 15 when the fair closes, as we do not intend to have anything incomplete at the start, but rather are determined to set a precedent in expositions, being ready on time."

Mr. Davenport will spend the summer in Portland, personally looking after his birds and beasts. Much local interest attaches to his presence here, inasmuch as he is a native Oregonian. He was born and reared at the town of Silverton, Ore., and his first newspaper cartoon work was done in Portland. It is reliably promised that many artists and literary people from the East, who are personal friends of the cartoonist and ornithologist, will visit the exposition as a special honor to Homer Davenport and in order to see the noted Oregonian on his native heath.

CREDITORS WILL SUE

To Recover From a Deceased Wife's Estate.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 25.—Depositors who had money in the private bank of John S. Beach when it failed twelve years ago will try to recover $50,000 from the estate of his wife, who died recently a few hours before his death, on the ground that under the law he inherited one-third of her estate. She made a will giving all to her two daughters.

The point is made that the law requires a husband to declare acceptance of the will or to take a third of the estate. He was dying at the time of her death and could make no declaration.

When the bank failed more than 200 depositors who had $134,000, disvovered that the real estate which had been prominently identified with his name belonged to his wife.

The failure was a bad one and many stories of distress were told. Beach was indicted, but the judge instructed the jury to return a verdict of acquittal. On appeal the higher court reversed the decision. The depositors who were pushing the prosecution were settled with and there was no second trial.

Brave Face the Fate That Is Certain.

Vancouver, May 25.—Away in the interior of Japan there is a leper settlement known as Kumamtu. Thither Slaters Luke, Adelid and Martha are going. They arrived from Quebec and left this week by the Empress of India for Japan.

The sisters are young, healthy and strong, and nature has dealt kindly with them in the matter of face and figure; yet they go bravely to their field of labor with no other aim in view than nursing and caring for Christ's afflicted.

They have turned their backs on the world they knew, and bravely they are setting their steps for that field of labor which knows but one end—a death so slow and repulsive in form that the stoutest hearts shrink from the mere contemplation of it.

NAN PATTERSON'S CASE

Caused Breaking Up of a Chicago Home.

Chicago, Ill., May 25.—Nan Patterson has disrupted one Chicago family, and W. H. English is hunting for his wife, who disappeared a year ago after a quarrel over the Florodora girl's escape from punishment in connection with the shooting of "Caesar" Young.

The quarrel, however, was not between Mrs. English and her husband, but between the wife and her mother-in-law. Mr. English's mother, who is 80 years old, declared that Nan Patterson should have been hanged.

When Mrs. English, Jr., declared that the juries had the best chance to determine Nan's deserts the mother-in-law, it is claimed, asserted that any one who defended the show girl was "low-minded." Thereupon Mrs. English, Jr., packed up her personal belongings and departed.

GOVERNMENT RATE MAKING

Professor Meyer of Chicago University Expresses His Views.

Chicago, May 25.—"When the practical ratemaker of a railroad attempts to fix a rate, he first asks himself what the traffic will bear and when the agent of a government attempts to tinker with a rate, he concerns himself with distance alone."

These were the words of Professor Hugo R. Meyer in an interview today. He had just returned from Washington. He is the assistant professor of political economy at the university of Chicago and had been called to Washington to appear before the senate committee on interstate commerce. His position there was unique. He was without financial interest and his statements were without bias.

"The difference between rate-making by an experienced railroad man whose bread and butter as well as the profit of whose employer depends on the volume of business he is able to get, and rate-making by government officials, is simply this," continued Prof. Meyer. "The government invariably takes the position that the only fair way to guage freight rates is by the distance the freight is carried. The practical railroad man, when he undertakes to fix freight rates, does it on the basis of what the traffic will bear, which a moment's thought shows is the only common sense point of view.

"In the first place, no man living knows or can find out exactly what it costs to move a ton of freight a mile. A rate fixed by distance that made no pretense of being fair, would have to be calculated on the basis of exact cost, naturally. But if you could find out what it cost to move a ton of freight a mile, you would not then have found what the man at either end of the mile could afford for moving it. In a great many ways a traffic manager makes money by charging less for moving a ton of freight one hundred and fifty miles than he would for moving it a hundred miles over precisely the same road. This is because in the former case, he may be opening the way to moving a great many more tons; he may be making it possible for the producer to get into a market that he would otherwise be shut out of, and compete there on fair terms with producers elsewhere; and if he is doing these things he is certainly building up a market and a shipping point both, attracting immigration and capital, making it likely that more buggies, pianos and things of that sort which go to make up freight traffic, will be brought in.

"Germany gives some splendid examples of how the attempt to do away with discrimination by setting up a hard and fast rate-schedule collapses. There has always been a great wrangle among the iron interests at different German centers as to whether they were being fairly treated by the government rate maker or not. Yet having once fixed a rate, the rate makers could not go back on it. For instance, when the Ruhr district wanted to get lower rates on Alsace-Lorraine iron ores, they were refused on the ground that the government was unwilling to prefer the Ruhr to other iron producing centers; that it would not do to give one district rates which would allow it to grow more rapidly than another. In other words, the jealousy of the several districts was such that none of them could be helped in any way without calling down the wrath of the others of which the government was thoroughly afraid.

"After a number of years of investigation, von Thielen, minister of railways of Prussia for many years, said that the claims of the Ruhr had been on the whole substantiated, yet a year later no action had been taken and he cited the state of affairs as a significant illustration of blocking of government action by sectional jealousies.

"Well, now, how long do you suppose any American railroad would stand that sort of nonsense? Don't you imagine that rather than allow one community to destroy another, which would simply mean cutting into its own business, the American railroad would, if for only selfish reasons, make sure, that each place got its due? Sometimes it is hard for a man, who is so wrapped up in his business that he can hardly believe there is anything worth while outside of it, to be convinced that he does not deserve just a little bit better show than ay one else. What has always saved the United States, however, and put it so far along in the industrial progress of the world, so that it is getting into everybody's market as well as taking care of its own, is the good sense and fair intention of its business men. If this question of regulating freight rates were to be decided by the great body of American business men with only proper regard for the complaints of the few, I don't think there would be very much of a question as to how it would be decided nor would the decision be very long in coming."

KILLED BY A CAT.

Baby Lacerated and Succumbed to Its Wounds.

Evansville, Ind., May 25.—On Monday afternoon while the infant child of Preston McIlmaine was asleep in its crib a large house cat leaped upon the breast of the child, sank his paws in its cheeks and began to gnaw away on the head and face of the infant.

The mother was at work in an adjoining room, and hearing a peculiar noise, rushed in and pulled the feline from the crib, but too late to save the life of her loved one. She hurriedly snatched up the infant, and, running across the street to a neighbor's house, had a physician called, but when he arrived the infant was dead.

The cat badly lacerated the face of the child and ate several large holes in its tiny head. The mother is overcome with grief. The father of the child is a laboring man.

The cat that attacked the child was always a favorite with children, and was considered harmless. The supposition is that it suddenly became mad.

FITGER BREWING CO. DULUTH, MINN.

PRESIDENT SENT

Greetings Through Governor Johnson to Northwest Scandinavians.

Interesting Speech at Gustavus Adolphus College Dedication.

St. Peter, Minn., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the chief features at the dedication of the new building at Gustavus Odolphus college on Tuesday was a speech by Governor Johnson, after the buildings had been received by the Minnesota conference through its president, Rev. J. A. Krantz of Duluth, and the regular dedication services had been performed by the clergymen present. Governor Johnson spoke, in part, as follows:

"This is an extraordinary occasion, an epoch in the history of Gustavus Adolphus college, of the state, and of the nation. Every effort which tends to regenerate manhood and to lift up morality marks an epoch in any state, any nation. There is glory, indeed, for the Minnesota conference this morning, and it is a great day for the Scandinavian people of our state. It is a great day for Scandinavia—that nation that has given more than it full measure of great men to the fields of science, art, religion, education, and I think that it is most appropriate to quote from President Roosevelt's message to the Scandinavian people of the Northwest, transmitted through me on the occasion of the celebration of Norway's natal day. That great man said: 'Permit me, through you, to express my very sincere regret that I am not able to be present. May I, through you, extend to those present, to the American citizens of Norwegian and Swedish extraction, my cordial good will and my hearty and sincere regard? It is but the bare truth to say that there are no better citizens in our land than those of Scandinavian birth or extraction. Their honesty and industry, their high sense of civic duty, their independence, and their profound patriotism give them so high a position that all must feel that the country is to be congratulated upon having them here. Every good American must look at his fellow-Americans of Scandinavian origin with the heartiest regard and respect, for they have in the highest degree those qualities which make us proud of the name of American. I wish them well here, where they are engaged in doing their full duty as American citizens. Of course, I also wish their kinsmen well in their homes, and I earnestly hope that they may there dwell together in a spirit of brotherly love and mutual forbearance. We here have found our fellow-citizens, alike of Swedish and Norwegian birth, to be such good citizens, so loyal in their duty to their neighbors and to their state, that we are certain that all they need is to know each other in their own homes to make each appreciate to the full the good qualities of the other, and to make all alike resolute to prevent any growth of the spirit of discord or uncharitableness.'

"I think all of us, Americans and Swedish-Americans, can remember when the Scandinavian emigrant cut a sorry figure in the body politic. There was a time when he did not stand as he stands today. But he has advanced, he has fought his way to the front, and so fair has been the fight that he was won universal and lasting respect. This is because our country has given a people who have met the standard of American citizenship in America, a people who for morality, integrity, and love of the things that are best in life, have no superiors. We, of Minnesota, are not better than the men of any other state, but they are no better than we. Sometimes, and in some countries where there has been suffering from overtaxation, education has been looked upon in the light of a burden, but education never was a burden to anything. If there be a load or burden it is borne by the men engaged in spreading education, and no college more appreciates the truth of this than Gustavus Adolphus. It has had its days of adversity, it weathered a stormy pioneer period, but a better time is coming and let us all hope that its era of prosperity has begun."

Short speeches were also made by Col. C. A. Smith and Prof. J. S. Carlson, Ph. D., of the University of Minnesota. The former president of the institution Rev. M. Wahlstrom, Ph. D., of Chicago, Ill., made a very impressive speech in which he traced the development of the institution from a very small beginning to one of the foremost institutions of learning in the state. It was very touching to see the warm reception that Dr. Wahlstrom received from the students at the college and especially from those who had studied under him during the past years.

Yesterday the new elected president of the college, Rev. P. A. Mattson, was officially installed in his office by the president of the Minnesota conference Rev. J. A. Krantz. The following program was carried out on that occasion:

LOWERING OF LAKES

Newly Discovered Cause Is Brought Forward In Investigation.

Alleged to Be Due to Cutting of the Forests.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 25.—(Special to The The Herald.)—What seems to be a newly discovered cause for the lowering of the levels of the Great Lakes, which is commonly believed to have taken place during the last half of the century, is brought forward in an investigation by Mr. Robert E. Norton of the United States Geological Survey.

It is well known that Michigan was at one time almost completely covered with heavy forests. These have gradually been cut away and the land cleared for agriculture. In the early days many marshes existed. Many of these were the result of beaver dams blockading the passages of the streams. These dams have been cleared out and drainage canals aggregating thousands of miles in length have been excavated.

Mr. Horton has collected statistics showing the extent of deforestation, drainage and cultivation of land, and its progress from year to year over the state of Michigan. It is found that the changes which have taken place have been sufficient, according to the estimates of different authorities, to decrease the average flow in the streams from five to twenty per cent per year.

It is possible that in some sections of the state the cutting off of pine timber has actually increased instead of decreasing the anual flow of the streams available for water power and other purposes. Balancing the different elements it has been found that a decrease in the depth of that portion of the rainfall, which runs off in the streams, of at least one inch per year, has probably taken place over the state of Michigan in the past fifty years. The importance of this fact will at once be seen when it is understood that a decrease of one inch in the run-off of the streams tributary to the lakes means an average lowering of the lake levels from Lake Erie to Lake Michigan and their connecting channels of at least seven inches, or over half a foot.

* * *

The water levels of the Great Lakes and the changes which have taken place during the last few decades are a matter of great public interest. Lake carriers commonly believe that the lake levels have lowered considerably and that the changes are attributable to the deepening of the connecting channels, and perhaps, also, to diversion through the Chicago drainage canal.

The engineers of the United States geological survey have been investigating the inflow to the Great Lakes, while the United States lake survey has measured the outflow from the lakes. It is found that when the rainfall on the lake surface is taken into consideration there is a material loss or difference between the outflow and the inflow. This loss is attributed to evaporation from the lake surfaces. In order to determine this more definitely, a set of instruments for measuring evaporation, wind velocity and the temperature of the air and water, will be placed on Beaver Island, in the northerly part of Lake Michigan. The instruments will be placed near the village of St. James, and as they are near the center of the width of the lake, they will be fully exposed to the wind and will give a record of the rainfall, wind direction and velocity, and evaporation over the lake itself, which could not be obtained from a similar station on the mainland.

Beaver Island, where the station is to be placed, was settled by the Mormons in the middle of the last century, and one of the Mormon leaders had himself crowned as king and maintained an absolute monarchy for a time, until he was deposed by the authorities of the State of Michigan; but, nothing daunted, he continued virtually his monarchy and had himself elected to all the important offices in the county, including that of member of the state legislature. About 1870 the group of islands, of which Beaver Island is the most important, was divided between Charlevoix and Lelanau counties, and the self-styled monarch was finally forced to abdicate and was later murdered by one of his confederates.

The evaporation record at St. James is kept in connection with the signal display station of the United States weather bureau and is under the direction of Robert E. Horton, hydrographer, of Utica, N. Y.

SAT DOWN ON OIL CAN

And Sued Man Who Put It There.

Baltimore, Md., May 25.—Rose Snyder and Morris Bernstein were co-laborers in a garment-making establishment. When Rose got up from her seat at a sewing machine one day Bernstein placed a sharp nozzled oil can on her chair, with the result that when she sat down again the oil can did her much injury. She sued Bernstein for alleged assault, claiming $5,000, but the jury who tried the case found a verdict for the defendant, as it could not be proven an assault.

MOTHERS-IN-LAW

Blamed By Judge For Divorce Proceedings.

Fairmont, W. Va., May 25.—"Mothers-in-law cause nine tenths of the divorce proceedings in the courts," shouted Judge U. S. Kendall here in the hearing of the habeas corpus proceedings of Bartholomew Long vs. Anna Long.

Long had sued his wife, who had left him, for possession of their infant daughter, and during the trial the judge said that the trouble was caused by the mother of the plaintiff. The court ordered the couple to go into his room and see if they could agree to live together. Fifteen minutes later they returned with smiling faces, which told that their differences had been settled.

Judge Kendall heaved a sigh of relief as the parties to the suit left the courtroom each holding a hand of their child.

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. Regular price, 50c per bottle.

DISCUSS PLANS

Methods of Reaching People Discussed By the Ministers.

German Methodist Conference Hears Some Interesting Papers.

The opening paper of the German Methodist conference this morning, was read by Rev. H. Knauff, of Maple Grove, Minn., on the topic, "What Can Be Done to Bridge Over the Gulf Between the Church and the People." This was followed by another paper on the same subject by Rev. E. P. Christ of Browntown.

The subject was one that stirred up some lively discussion among the ministers and the general sentiment was that every minister would hereafter do all in his power to bridge the gulf.

Among the methods advocated as among the best was to cultivate a feeling of good fellowship, to create a better spiritual life, with a greater degree of sympathy among the church members, and to approach everybody regardless of their past or present condition, the feeling to be, "this is our fellow man and he can be saved by grace." The value of the press in reaching the masses of the people with a view of bringing them closer to the church was also commented on.

Another thing that brought out quite a general discussion was a review of the new catechism by Rev. C. Biermann, Princeton, Minn., and Rev. C. A. Thiel of Hatton, N. D. The catechism is an old established institution of the church and while it is not meant literally that a new one is to be substituted for it, there has been an attempt toward simplifying it. It is said that the attempt toward simplification meets with general approval, although as is natural with long established things, there are some who would urge that a tendency toward changes proceed very slowly.

Last evening Rev. G. Gamoline of Willow City, N. D., opened the conference, and the session was presided over by Rev. E. P. Christ of Browntown. An interesting address on Sunday school work was delivered by Rev. W. O. Boemmel of Valley City, who said that the Sunday school work is of the utmost importance to the church, for from the recruits for church work are drawn from the schools.

Rev. Dr. C. Hohn talked entertainingly of the Epworth league and the work it is and and should accomplish.

Rev. E. P. Christ delivered a stirring sermon relative to the general work of the church. He claimed there was ample field for all the churches, and that it behooved the church workers to be up and doing with a cheerful spirit.

Songs were rendered during the evening by the choir, a duet being sung by Misses Ida Steiner and Lydia Schultz and a quartet by H. Knauff, C. Bublitz, C. P. Christ and W. O. Boemmel.

Rev. Dr. C. Schultz pronounced the benediction.

Rev. J. F. Preine of Minneapolis has been chosen secretary of the convention, and the Rev. W. Koenig, F. Bublitz and H. Knauff have been selected as the financial committee.

Linevitch, in a dispatch to Emperor Nicholas, dated from the front, May 24, reports that the Russians, May 22, attacked the village of Nantchendzy and the Japanese position of the heights on the left bank of the Liao river, southward of Chandaohe. The Japanese abandoned Nantchendzy after the loss of several score in killed or wounded, and were dislodged from a village in front of the position, southward of Chandaohe.

London, May 25.—The second edition of the London Times today publishes a dispatch from a correspondent with the Japanese army as follows:

Harbin, Manchuria, Tuesday, May 16. (Presumably held up by the censor.)—There is immediate promise of most important events since the Russian retreat from Mukden. The Japanese, who are preceded by Chinese bandits in their employ, are making a series of demonstrations along the trade route north of Takoman.

UNKNOWN OFFERS

To Return the Tiffany Diamonds For $10,000.

New York, May 25.—Tiffany & Co. have been approached with an offer to return their three $90,000 stolen diamonds upon payment of $10,000 and assurance of immunity from arrest of the thief or the person through whom he is willing to conduct the negotiations. The police know this and are devoting their attention to this clew. While there is nothing to indicate whether the proposition is genuine, those trying to recover the gems are inclined to take it seriously. President C. T. Cook has believed from the first that if the diamonds were restored it would be in such a manner.

AMERICAN YACHT IS EIGHT HOURS IN LEAD.

New York, May 25.—A two-masted schooner yacht, hull down to the northwest, so far away that her identity could not be established, was sighted at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of May 21, about 830 miles off Sandy Hook lightship by the steamer Haversham Grange, which arrived today from Barry. The exact location of the yacht was Lat. 40.24; Long. 55.42. In addition to top sails, the schooner was carrying a spinnaker of a peculiar shape, from the description it is believed the yacht was the German schooner, and the probable American leader is very close, for at 7 a. m. on the day this unknown was sighted the Atlantic was reported by the steamer Bremen to be about twenty miles west and an equal distance north of the position of the supposed Hamburg, ten hours later. This would give the Atlantic a lead of approximately eight hours over the German craft.

And Girl Get Into Trouble at Bemidji.

Bemidji, Minn., May 25.—J. M. Brisbane and Annie Olson, the former from Park Rapids and the latter a stranded show girl, were arrested by the police and arraigned in justice court yesterday, the girl on a charge of disorderly conduct and the man on charge of carrying a concealed weapon which the police took from him last night. The couple has been in Bemidji for several days past and during their stay here their actions have been suspicious. Tuesday night they entered a downtown roominghouse where they were taken in by the police, both being in an intoxicated condition.

They were fighting, and the girl claims that the man threatened to shoot her. The young woman was fined $5 and costs, which was paid, and Brisbane was given his choice of paying a fine of $25 and costs or serving thirty days in the county jail. Brisbane's sentence was suspended until this morning, when he left the city for Park Rapids.

A SWEET REWARD.

Senior Received 288 Kisses From Twelve Co-Eds.

Columbus, O., May 25.—Sunday night, Clyde Dudy, the only male member of the senior class in the Gloucester, O., high school, nailed the class colors to the spire of the school building belfry, and for twenty-four hours remained on guard in the belfry, repelling the assaults of the juniors, who were bound to remove the colors within twenty-four hours or acknowledge defeat. Once they almost succeeded, but a female member of the senior class came to Dudy's help, climbing by a roof and a lightning rod to the belfry. When at the end of the twenty-four hours' watch Dudy descended to the ground he was received with cheers by the twelve girl members of the class and rewarded with twenty-four kisses from each girl, one for each hour he had remained on guard.

EX-MAYOR ELOPES.

Flees to Europe With a Young Woman.

Baltimore, Md., May 25.—Robert C. Davidson, former mayor of Baltimore, until a few months ago president of the Baltimore Trust and Guarantee company and for many years prominent in financial and mercantile circles, has disappeared. His wife says she has information that he sailed for Europe on a Hamburg-American line steamer last week and that he was accompanied by Miss Laura B. Noyes, formerly of Port Deposit, Md., in whose company he had frequently been seen of late.

Mrs. Davidson further said that her husband had converted all his securities into cash to the extent of about $175,000. It is supposed he took all the money with him. When asked if she would apply for a divorce she replied she would not, but that she would make every effort to compel him to support her.

Miss Noyes was a trained nurse and Davidson first met her at Nantucket two years ago. His attention to her had been marked and caused considerable gossip.

For a number of years Davidson was prominent in the councils of Eutaw Place Baptist church.

BOER WAR HERO,

Convicted of Manslaughter, Granted New Trial.

Chicago, May 25.—Charles H. Carter, a Boer war hero, who was convicted of manslaughter some time ago, was granted a new trial by Judge Barnes.

At the trial of Carter for the killing of William Chandler in a saloon at Fifteenth and State streets, it was shown that Carter, instead of being the bartender he pretended, was really a well-known soldier of the British-Boer war, who had been decorated three times for bravery in action. Carter lost all his property in the war, and came to this country, finally reaching Chicago, where he procured a position as a bartender for Michael Clifford, in whose saloon the shooting occurred.

It has been rumored around the jail that a wealthy Englishman of Chicago has been interesting himself in Carter's behalf, and that he has furnished the money necessary for a new trial.

RECOVERY DOUBTFUL.

Woman Seriously Burned In a Kerosene Fire.

St. James, Minn., May 25.—Mrs. Floyd Hall was so seriously burned Tuesday afternoon that hope for her recovery is very small. She was building the kitchen fire with kerosene and was pouring the fluid over the hot ashes and coals in the stove. This created a gas, which exploded.

In her excitement she dropped the can, and the kerosene was poured over her skirt and feet. This also caught fire, and she ran screaming from the house, a mass of flame.

The jury in the trial of John Kiel, charged with arson, returned a verdict of not guilty. He was charged with burning the Butterfield creamery. On his release he was rearrested and charged with burning a saloon at Butterfield some years ago.

BRIDGE IS OPENED

Great Structure Across Mississippi at Thebes, Ill., Dedicated.

Only Bridge Crossing River Between St. Louis and Memphis.

Thebes, Ill., May 25.—There was opened here today, to the North and Central West, a new "gateway" for commerce and traffic and human intercourse with the South and the "Great Southwest." The only bridge crossing the Mississippi river betweeen St. Louis and Memphis, attended by ceremonies in which the governors of Illinois and Missouri and prominent railroad officials, representing the proprietary roads, participated, was formally opened to traffic and dedicated to the uses of five great railroad systems and the business of two great sections of the nation. There were present also, as invited guests, a number of well-known railroad and business men from different parts of the country, who had come to Thebes in special trains from Chicago and St. Louis. The invitations issued by the Southern Illinois and Missouri Bridge company for the occasion, numbering about one thousand, are exceedingly handsome and elaborate, containing several rich photo-type views and a history and description of the bridge.

Two special trains, one from Chicago, the other from St. Louis brought to Thebes officials of the five railroads interested in the bridge. Accompanying the officials were 500 guests. The dedicating exercises took place upon a platform at the east approach of the bridge. Governor Folk of Missouri made the dedicatory address. Other addresses were made by W. J. Calhoun of Chicago, Col. S. W. Fordyce, Prof. Woodward of Washington university and Vice President Cochran of the Missouri Pacific.

The effects of the opening of this great double track bridge will be far-reaching. It begins its part in the course of progress by doing away with the slow and tedious car ferry, which has been the method employed in crossing the river since the Illinois Central and the Chicago and Eastern Illinois made their way to the Mississippi to exchange business with the Cotton Belt system. Thebes bridge is so fortunate in its location that its approaches are on a most gradual and moderate incline, making it possible to run trains of great length over it, which fact tends both to great expedition and economy in operating, freight trains especially. This, added to the fact that Thebes is a natural gateway for Southwestern business, makes certain that Thebes bridge will have an instant quickening effect upon the upbuilding of a vast and naturally rich and still thinly settled territory. It will give immediate impetus to shipments of freight to the South and the Southwest, by relieving the freight congestion which always has existed at St. Louis and Cairo, for the reason that, as the bridge will constitute a part of the general trackage of the several roads using it, through freight trains in both directions will be run and the necessity for switching, as is the case at St. Louis, will be obviated.

Thebes bridge is also a step in the direction of added through passenger trains between Chicago and New Orleans. The first effect along passenger lines will be through trains between Chicago and Memphis, which the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, by means of the completion of this bridge, will install by fall of this year; and within a year thereafter it is the expectation of this road to install a through passenger service between Chicago and New Orleans by means of the road it is now pushing to completion from Menphis on South.

The site of the Thebes bridge for many years has been considered the most advantageous location for a bridge at any point on the Mississippi south of St. Louis. When the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad company decided to extend its road to a connection with the Cotton Belt lines, it located its Southern terminus at Thebes, with the expectation that that point would be selected as a bridge site.

The Southern Illinois and Missouri Bridge company was organized on December 6th, 1900, in the interest of the Illinois Central and the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroads on the east side of the river, and the Missouri Pacific, St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern and St. Louis-Southwestern Railway companies on the west side of the river. The capital stock of the bridge company was divided equally between these five companies. Bills were immediately introduced in both houses of congress to authorize the construction of the bridge, and on January 20th, 1901, the act was approved by the president.

For several months before the organization of this bridge company there had been pending in congress a bill to authorize the construction of a railway bridge at Cape Girardeau in the interest of the companies which now compose the St. Louis, Memphis and Southeastern railroad. Those interests opposed in every possible way the bill for the bridge at Thebes, but congress was not willing to authorize a bridge at each location and the advantages of the Thebes location from an engineering standpoint were so apparent that they overcame all opposition, and the bill finally was passed by unanimous consent.

Ground was broken for the bridge on July 8, 1902, and the first train passed over it on April 18th of this year. The cost of its construction was, approximately, $3,000,000.

Thebes bridge is a magnificent structure of double-track width, and, owing to its prominent location, presents a most imposing appearance. Its location is a particularly fortunate one, because of the high bluffs on each side of the river which obviated the necessity of long approach trestles. The bridge proper consists of a continuous steel structure of five spans built on teh cantilever system and weighs about 23,000,000 pounds. The central or channel span is 617 feet long, each of the other spans being about 521 feet long. The approaches to the bridge are of concrete, made of Portland cement, as are also the piers upon which the spans and arches rest, and this concrete, of which nearly one million cubic feet were used, constitutes the chief peculiarity of the bridge. Except the face stones of the piers, which are of buff Romona Oolitic stone, and the bridge seats and nose stones for the upstream cut water, which are granite, there is no solid stone work in the entire structure.

The steel bridge is approached at both ends by a series of concrete arches. The total length of the bridge proper, including the concrete approaches, is 3,817 feet, and the total length of the entire double-track construction, including grade approaches, is 4.7 miles. The total height of the bridge, from the bottom of the lowest foundation to the top of the highest point on the superstructure, is 251 feet.

Thebes bridge was designed by and built under the direction of Messrs. Ralph Modjeska of Chicago, who is the son of Mme. Modjeska, the actress, and who had charge of the construction of the Merchants' bridge at St. Louis, and Alfred Noble, who now is in personal charge of the construction of the Pennsylvania Railroad tunnel under East river.

DES MOINES NEXT YEAR

General Presbyterian Assembly Will Meet In Iowa City.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 25.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church today took up consideration of the affairs of the Young People's society with especial reference to the problems of how to better stimulate their work and keep their funds more directly in Presbyterian channels. The committee report showed that only 135 presbyteries had made reports and the numerical strength of the young people's societies could not be given. The report urges that some step be taken to awaken interest in these societies. The report recommended that instead of withdrawing the societies from the general Christian Endeavor movement, that organization should be encouraged.

C. McCullough, secretary of the committee, said there are 17,900 young people in various Presbyterian societies who last year gave $184,000 to the church work. He urged the concentration of subordinate departments into one organization.

The committee appointed to select the meeting place for next year reported in favor of Columbus, Ohio. An Iowa commissioner made an earnest appeal for his state. A number of speeches were made for each city. Des Moines received a majority of the votes and secured the next assembly.

This afternoon the general assembly considered the report of the committee on church action.

CANADIANS INSIST

That St. John River Shall Be Considered.

Washington, May 25.—Gen. Ernst, the president of the American side of the international deep waterways commission today presented the Canadian members to Mr. Loomis, the acting secretary of state. The commission later met in the office of Gen. Ernst, where it organized and commenced an informal exchange of views on the probable program to be adopted for future deliberations. Until the question of the inclusion of the St. John river in the scope of the commission's inquiry has been decided, none of the deliberations can be more than tentative, for the Canadians' insistence that this river shall be included is firm, and they are acting under instructions from their government. This point will be finally decided when Secretary Taft returns to Washington early next week.

STRENGTH IS HERE

Northwestern Markets Are Leading In Advance In Wheat.

Minneapolis May Option Touches Highest Point —Flax Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 25.—Wheat started off with a rush this morning and in the first half hour scored a further advance of about a cent. After that it dropped off somewhat but throughout the morning held strongly and never got down to yesterday's closing prices. Northwestern markets are leading and while there is a tendency in the Chicago market in the July option to follow, the strength is nothing compared to that in the Northwest. Minneapolis May wheat this morning touched its highest point, closing at $1.23.

The weather reports were again unfavorable, telling of too much rain. The cash demand shows no abatement and shippers are getting their prices and have been advancing their premiums.

The Liverpool market closed ¼@¾d higher and Paris ¼@¾c lower.

The July option gained 2½c in Duluth, 1¾c in Minneapolis, and ⅛-⅜c in Chicago and St. Louis. In New York it lost ⅜c and in Kansas city ⅝-¾c.

Car receipts at Duluth were nothing, against 15 last year, and at Minneapolis 200, against 99 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 200 against 114 last year. Chicago received 5, against 12 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 291,000 bus., last year 217,000 bus. Shipments 206,000 bus., last year 292,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 22,000 bus.

Corn in Liverpool market closed ½@⅝d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed a shade higher. July oats closed ¼c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 315,000 bus, last year 545,000 bus. Shipments 262,000 bus, last year 261,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 26,000 bus.

The Duluth market was very strong, but the trading was limited, very little changing hands. The July option opened 1⅝c higher at $1.12, sold at $1.13 twenty minutes later, fell back to $1.10¾ at 10:05, advanced to $1.12⅛ at 10:15 and fell off to $1.12 at 10:35. It then bulged to $1.12⅜ at 11:50, and after holding quiet for a half hour, sold at $1.13. The close was at $1.12½. This was a gain for the day of 2½c. The May option advanced 2¼c to $1.12 and closed at $1.11⅞. The September option advanced 1c to 86c and closed at 85⅞c.

No cars were received at Duluth today and cash wheat trading was nothing.

Flax was stronger, though there was little increase in the volume of trading. The May option advanced 2¼c, July 2c and September ½c. The October option sold 1c up to $1.27 and closed at $1.26⅞.

Oats advanced ⅜c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive No. 1 northern, $1.11½; on track No. 1 northern, $1.11½. No. 2 northern, $1.07. Durum, No. 1, 91c; No. 2, 90c; May, $1.11½; July, $1.12½; September, 85¾c. Flax to arrive, $1.46½; on track, $1.46½; May, $1.46½; July, $1.46; September, $1.27½; October, $1.26⅞. Oats to arrive, 31¾c; on track, 31¾. Rye to arrive, 75c; on track, 75c. Barley: Feed, 39½@41c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 0; last year, 21; barley, 2; flax, 0; last year, 15.

Receipts: Wheat, 857; oats, 1,769; barley, 7,625; flax, 4,193.

Shipments: Wheat, 55,000; oats, 265,290; flax, 25,000.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Unfavorable Weather Gives Wheat a Strong Basis.

Chicago, May 25.—Unfavorable weather conditions in the Northwest and Southwest formed the basis of a strong wheat market today. Frosts were reported in Dakota. Weather bureau advices from Missouri and Kansas indicated heavy rains throughout that section of the country. In addition to the domestic situation the market was affected by strength at Liverpool. July opened ½@⅝c to 1@1¼c higher at 91¼c to 91¾c. On liberal selling by several prominent longs part of the advance was lost, July declining to 91c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 265 cars, against 101 last week and 132 a year ago.

Sentiment late in the session was less bullish. On selling by one of the bull leaders the price of July eased off to 90¾c. The market, however, was quite firm at the close, July showing a net gain of 1⅛@1¼c at 90⅞c.

Interests of traders in the corn pit centered around the May delivery, but owing to scarcity of offerings, the actual business transacted in that option was small. At the opening the price of May touched a new high record mark for the year, initial quotations being up 1c to 1¼c at 67½c to 68c. On moderate selling by some of the smaller holders, the price soon reacted to 66¾c. July opened ¾@⅞c to 1⅛@1¾c higher at 49¼@49⅝c and sold off to 49¼c. Local receipts were 270 cars, with 10 to contract grade.

Additional profit taking carried the price of May down to 66c, a decline of 8c from the highest point of the day. In the meantime July sold off to 49c. Later some recovery was made on fresh buying by shorts. At the close May was off 2½c at 63c. July was up ⅛c at 49⅜@⅝c.

Oats were firm in sympathy with the strength of wheat and corn. July opened a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 30⅝@⅞c to 30½@⅝c. After touching 30⅜c, the price reacted to 30⅛@⅜c. Local receipts were 78 cars.

A 5c decline in the price of live hogs caused an easy undertone in the provisions market. Packers were moderate sellers. July pork was off 5c at $12.55. Lard was off a shade at $7.27½@7.30. Ribs also were down a shade at $7.25.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.06; July, 90⅞c; Sept., 85¼c. Corn—May, 63c; July 49⅝@½c; old, 49⅝@50c; Sept., 48¼c; old, 48⅝@49c; Dec., 45¼c; old, 46¾c; May (1906), 45½c. Oats—May, 31⅝c; July, 30⅝c; Sept., 28⅝@28¾c; May, (1906), 30¼c. Pork—May, $12.42½, July, $12.52½; Sept., $12.77½. Lard—May, $7.17½; July, $7.27½; Sept., $7.45; Nov., $7.30. Ribs—May, $7.10; July, $7.22½; Sept., $7.47½. Rye—May, 78c; July, 60c; Sept., 60c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.40; southwestern, $1.38; May, $1.38. Timothy—May, $2.80; Sept., $3.15. Clover—May, $11.75@12.25. Barley, 42@56c. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.09@1.10; 3 red, $1.02@1.07; 2 hard, $1.06@1.06; 3 hard, $1.06@1.06; 1 northern, $1.12@1.15; 2 northern, $1.09@1.11; 3 spring, $1.06@1.10. Corn—2, 66@64¾c; 3, 65@66c. Oats—2, 30½@31c; 3, 30½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Our market today was extremely nervous, being weak and strong by turns, finally ending the day with a very small advance. Trade on the whole shows continued broadening out. The cash demand is still one of the strong features of the situation. Crop damage reports are still coming in, reports from the Ohio Valley being somewhat more general. It is a big trading market, acts well and exhibits quite a bit of strength. On the bulges there has been considerable profit-taking but wheat thus sold has been well absorbed.

Corn—The action of this market especially in May seems to indicate that some one is getting scared of the large receipts and running away from the cash stuff. Receipts of contract stuff today were extremely large with 460 cars estimated for tomorrow. It is reasonable to suppose that much corn is now headed this way. We doubt under these conditions and especially if the May should peter out if present prices for the futures, especially the new kind, can be maintained.

Oats—The little advance we have had in this market seems to have increased the volume of shipments to this center. The cash situation shows very little improvement.

Provisions—Some very good selling at the opening shaped price-making in the provision pit. The selling looked altogether like profit-taking. Conditions as we now see them are unchanged. The market is purely a scalping affair, but we feel purchases made upon set-backs will result in moderate profits.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Another sensational advance in wheat today. Reports from Kansas continue conflicting, but average a little more encouraging. As might have been expected, the high price brought about profit taking, and largely on realization sales prices worked lower. Wheat had a good advance and might be well to take profits on all quick bulges.

• • •

Charles E. Lewis, Minneapolis: September oats looks like a cinch to me as a purchase. The season is two weeks late and the weather very backward yet, especially in the Northwest where the largest part of the crop was raised. If anything happens to shorten the crop this year we expect oats will sell at 35c, and if we raise an average crop farmers won't fall over each other to sell them around 20c on the farm. I advise you to buy September oats.

Chicago Record Herald: There is an unsettled short interest of about 5,000,000 bus in May corn. At the beginning of the month it was 8,500,000 bus, but it has been cut down by deliveries since. There were about 2,500,000 bus of contract corn in store at the beginning of the month, and there have been about 1,000,000 bus more produced since. All of it is now owned by the Bartlett-Frazier house, which took in 280,000 bus, comprising the tail end of the Wrenn holding yesterday and 35,000 bus more that came from Armour. At a rate of 300 cars average per day for the remainder of the month and of corn running about at as present in quality, there could be easily 1,500,000 bus of corn turned out by the cleaning and mixing houses. Unless there should be a severe and protracted change in the weather sufficient to prevent shelling, the receipts might easily run double the 300 cars average. With the wide advertising that the deal has had it is more than probable that with good weather the shorts could find corn enough in any event to deliver 2,000,000 bus of contract. Receivers were flooded yesterday with inquiries from country shippers as to the placing of corn here. The answers were invariably of a sort to hasten consignments, nobody being willing to make bids anywhere near the May basis, which the owner of the corn could, of course, easily get if the corn were here.

• • •

Cincinnati Price Current: Corn situation irregular. Some uncertainties of promise not distinctly discouraging. Few days good weather would lessen uncertainties. Oats generally doing fairly well. Winter wheat situation good except limited areas heretofore unfavorable. Spring wheat indications generally favorable.

• • •

J. A. Patton, Chicago: From what we can gather it looks as if the amount of old oats back in country elevators and in farmers hands were very light. It looks to me as though we are going to see higher prices for these old oats before the new crop is gathered. It is probable that July oats would sell two or three cents per bushel higher under these condition.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Very Strong at Opening But Soon Turned Weak.

Closing Heavy and Only Fractionally Above Low Prices.

New York, May 25.—Opening prices showed wide advances over last night and there was an active demand distributed throughout the list. Great Northern preferred opened up 4 points, Northern Pacific, Ontario & Western 1½, Smelting 1¼ and Union Pacific, Lead, Colorado Fuel, Tennessee Coal and Iowa Central a point. There were many gains of a large fraction amongst prominent railroad stocks and specialties.

Liberal offerings curbed the rise in many of the representative stocks, but special stocks continued to advance. Dealings became smaller when the market developed hesitation. Ontario & Western was heavily bought up to 50⅝. Great Northern preferred got up 5½, Realty and Central of New Jersey 2¼, Twin City Rapid Transit, Ice preferred and Peoria & Eastern 2 and Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Erie preferred, Canada Southern, Southern Pacific preferred, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Metropolitan Street Railway, Pressed Steel Car preferred and Pacific Mail 1 to 1⅝. Rubber Goods declined 1¼. Some of the leaders were brought to last night's level or below at 11 o'clock.

With the dying out of the demand prices became almost motionless for a time. Stocks then came upon the market and carried the average level back to below last night. Great Northern preferred extended its rise to 6¼, and there were some further advances in minor stocks before the reaction. Union Pacific fell a fraction below last night, and the decline, which became general, ran to a point in New York and a large fraction in Reading and a number of other leaders. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Further progress was made downward on nominal dealings. Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Pacific preferred, Tennessee Coal, Pressed Steel Car and Tobacco preferred suffered losses of 1 to 1¼ and Corn Products preferred 2⅝. Fluctuations in the general list were very narrow.

Declines were effected during the afternoon equal to previous advances in a large number of stocks that had been advanced between 1 and 1½ points in the morning. Scarcely any of the active speculative favorites escaped sharp losses, the selling being large and general in character. St. Paul, New York Central, Reading, Locomotive and Smelting fell 1½, and Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Erie, United States Steel preferred, Copper, Colorado Fuel, American Car and Sugar 1 to 1¼.

After a fractional rally stocks dropped again, carrying St. Paul 2 points down, Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific 1½, C. & O. 1¾, Delaware & Hudson and Wisconsin Central preferred 1¼, and Louisville & Nashville and Brooklyn Transit 1. There was a fall of 6 in Nashville, Cattanooga & St. Louis. Prices generally did not yield below the previous low level. Lackawanna gained 1. The demand to cover shorts proved meager and the closing was weak and very dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed weak and lower. On the announcement of the failure of a Cincinnati firm and rumors that the Jap fleet had been defeated gave courage to the bear element. Late in the session th failure of a Boston house, liabilities large and assets uncertain, caused more unsettlement. The market seems to be running into a series of disasters and does not act well. The fact that yesterday's strength petered out so soon with the market closing right at the bottom leaves traders generally very much discouraged.

• • •

C. B. Macdonald to Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: We believe that the purchases of good securities at this level will draw good profits at an early date. The lull in the iron trade, for such it has proved to be, is pointed to as being of short duration. Pig iron is already beginning to improve. Structural steel is at record price. Steel rails are booked for months ahead and the new factor in the steel industry, the making of steel ties, is beginning to be appreciably felt by the Steel corporation's earnings, several large orders of late having been filled for early delivery. It is unnecessary to expatiate upon existing conditions, here alone. Our crops are all that could be asked for, our foreign trade is steadily increasing, railway earnings are growing larger weekly, and the clearings of the large cities' trade sheets show a handsome improvement over the past few years, with promise toward even better figures. The bear party has practically exhausted all its ammunition and with the appreciation by the public that the country is not yet on the brink of ruin, and that a condition offering rare advantages to investors and speculators presents itself, an enchantment values seems imminent. We should not be greatly surprised to see Union Pacific close to 130 before the expiration of this month. We are particularly bullish on this stock and on the coalers. Delaware & Hudson, Illinois Central and American Smelting and are advising our customers not to hesitate at present figures to invest in these properties.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was very strong again for a time after the opening this morning, but before the end of the first hour it became evident that stocks were being well supplied, and that shorts were the principal buyers. The market turned weak and sagged during the rest of the session. The afternoon trading was very dull and the closing was heavy and only fractionally above the low prices. Another Lawson threat and two failures were the unfavorable developments of the day. Foreign houses bought in this market.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today opened very strong and active and with better London quotations and there was some good buying. Prices did not hold long and soon some long stock came out. In the afternoon all the early gains were lost and the market became quite weak. There was not much activity in the afternoon and the close was nervous and irregular. We look for an irregular market tomororw.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The course of the market today showed that the rally yesterday was due to short covering. The bear party offered stocks down all day and the market was very erratic for most of the session. The buying power seems very limited except at the lowest prices and as soon as the market rallies it becomes absolutely dead. In Boston Greene Consolidated was steadily sold all day. This is a good trading market with improbable fluctuation of three points every few days and should be treated accordingly.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 25.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 6@11 points under realizing and selling for short account in expectation of a further reaction owing to heavy rains in the South. Lower cables and rumors that the Russian fleet in the Far East had defeated the Japanese. There was a good demand at the decline, however, and after increasing the loss to a matter of about 13@18 points, the market rallied to within 6@8 points of last night's finals. Later the market was less active and ruled steady on covering by yesterday's sellers and moderate support.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 15 points decline; middling uplands, 8.50; middling gulf, 8.75. Sales, 4,900 bales. Futures closed barely steady: May, 8.05; June, 7.85; July, 7.96; August, 7.93; September, 7.96; October, 8.03; November, 8.07; December, 8.12; January, 8.16; ebruary, 8.18; March, 8.23.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 25.—Money on call, easy, 2¼@2½ per cent; closing bid, 2 per cent; offered at 2¼ per cent. Time money easy and dull, sixty days, 3 per cent; ninety days, 3½ per cent; six months, 3¼@3½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange, firm, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87.15@4.87.20 for demand, and at $4.85.15@4.85.20 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.83¾c. Bar silver, 65½c. Mexican dollars, 46c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, irregular.

BROOKLYN HANDICAP

The Picking of a Winner an Exceedingly Hard Problem.

Ntw York, May 25.—Favored by beautiful weather and a fast track, the nineteenth Brooklyn handicap will be decided today at Gravesend track. It is the first of this season's great handicaps at one and one-quarter miles for 3-year-olds and upwards, and is worth $20,000, of which the winner's share will be $16,000.

Twelve horses are on the over-night list, and the picking of a favorite will be an exceedingly hard problem. According to many experts, the contestants this year are not quite up to the standard of class which usually prevails in this rich classic. Many of the noted thoroughbreds eligible to start and whose names have hitherto given glamor to great equine struggles, went wrong this year in training. Among these are Hermis, Stalwart, Beldame, Irish Lad and The Picket—last year's winner.

Nevertheless, there remain horses who have made records for fast time on the American turf, which are still unbroken. Of these the most noteworthy is Broomstick, who will carry the colors of Capt. S. S. Brown, the Pittsburg millionaire.

Delhi, from the stables of James R. Keene, vice chairman of the Jockey club, also has the credit of many splendid victories last year at distances up to one mile but his only public appearance this year was a disappointment.

Among horsemen who haunt the training tracks the race is generally thought to lie between Proper Dainty, Colonial Girl, Graziallo and Lord of the Vale.

NEW STEEL PLANT

Will Furnish Ore Cargoes For Many Vessels.

Ottawa, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Canadian Tinplate and Sheet Steel company, which has been organized with a capital of $1,500,000 will at once begin the erection of its plant at Morrisburg on the St. Lawrence. The enterprise is backed by J. Wesley Allison and C. H. Meldrum of New York and other Americans, beside a number of Canadians. The new industry is of great importance to vesselmen, as a large amount of iron ore will now be shipped from the upper lakes to meet its requirements. With the decline of the lake grain trade, a large fleet, built expressly to fit the locks in Welland canal, have been deprived of the trade for which they were constructed. They will now find a lucrative traffic in carrying iron ore to the new plant. At present, sheet steel and tinplate to the value of $5,000,000 are imported into Canada annually. It is believed that within a few years that most of this will be manufactured within the Canadian border.

AHEAD OF TARIFF

President to Call Extra Session on Rate Regulation.

The President Places This Question Before Tariff Revision.

Chicago, May 25.—Walter Wellman, in a Washington special to the Record-Herald, says:

An extraordinary session of congress will be called to assemble next autumn. It will be called for the express purpose of securing legislation regulating railway charges. The president places railway regulation ahead of tariff reform in importance to the people. He wants tariff reform, but not at the expense of action concerning the railways.

These statements have been made at the White House authoritatively and with great positiveness.

They set at rest the rumors which have been in circulation and which have to some extent found their way into print, that President Roosevelt is undecided as to whether there should be a special session of congress, and as to whether it should be asked to take up the tariff question, even at the expense of railway legislation.

Mr. Roosevelt has many irons in the fire. He is interested in a large number of questions and subjects. His eager mind runs on ahead of the development of public opinion. He foresees needs before they have become apparent to a majority of his fellow-citizens. If he could have his way he would have set in motion a dozen important reforms and constructive policies, and hasten them all to completion.

At the same time, he is learning that, as a rule, the people will think of but one big thing at a time. He is learning that the way to secure results from congress is to keep everlastingly at an issue till it is disposed of, and disposed of rightly.

The president does not know what he can get from congress in the way of railway legislation, but he does not intend to fail to secure what he wants and what he believes the country wants through lack of effort, nor by permitting the railroads and the public men who are friendly to their side of the case to shift the issue to something else. More than one hint has been conveyed to the president that if he were to drop the railway subject, or to permit it to be sidetracked without any collision between the rival forces, the tariff could be taken up.

The president is exceedingly eager for economical progress. But he has learned his lesson. One thing at a time.

GOVERNOR HERRICK IS RENOMINATED.

tion was carried with cheers. A committee was appointed by the chair to notify Mr. Herrick of his nomination.

While waiting the return of the committee, Judge Elam Fisher presented the name of Gen. A. M. Harris for lieutenant governor.

The nomination of Harris was made by acclamation.

The committee escorting Governor Herrick appeared and, after the applause had subsided, Mr. Daugherty, in a few words, presented to the convention its candidate for re-election as governor, who spoke as follows:

Last November the thundering voice of the people of this state spoke for Theodore Roosevelt and the Republican party. Great as was the popularity of our courageous president, the body and strength of that majestic tidal wave were the enduring principles of the party of Lincoln and McKinley. Are we Republicans of Ohio prepared a year later to allow our state to speak in feebler tones for this party, that stands as no other party ever stood, for prosperity, for honest government, for greater America? We want it distinctly understood that the campaign this year begins where we left off last year. We Republicans of Ohio stand for Theodore Roosevelt and we stand for everything he stands for. We purpose to discuss national questions in the coming campaign. We intend to drive home to every voter, the patriotic duty he owes in sustaining and strengthening the splendid fight the president is now making for the observance of law, not only by public officials, but by the great corporations as well—the corporations that control the transportation facilities and the food supply of our people.

In Ohio today, and in all states, there is a growing evil which gravely threatens to destroy the freedom of action which is the most important concern of the representatives of the people in the legislative department of the government. I refer to the professional lobby. The people of Ohio, in the making of their laws, are entitled to the best judgment of all their representatives in the general assembly as well as that of their chief executive and they are entitled to this judgment free and untrammeled by any importunities from special interests. I care not what the purpose of the lobbyists may be, nor whether their object be good or bad, it is subversive of the basic principles upon which American institutions are founded, to permit a few men to direct or control legislation, and to put their judgment as to what is best for the people against that of the representatives of the people, elected for the sole purpose of registering their will. I must not be understood as criticising those who appear before legislative committees in proper and legitimate ways to advocate or oppose legislation, for in this way the general assembly is often very materially aided in its work.

But the professional lobby should go, and the general assembly of Ohio must be free from its interference, free from the interference of those who have only personal or selfish ends to serve, whether good or bad, and free to be what the constitution intends—the agent and servant of the people in shaping into the form of law the expression of their sovereign will. I purpose to recommend to the next general assembly such action as will forever clear the chambers of the senate and house, and the capitol itself, of this baneful influence, for I want to see that day come in Ohio when all responsibility for the enactment and approval of laws shall rest with those upon whom the constitution imposes the duty, and with no one else.

ATTACKED BY BEAR.

Boy Seriously Injured at New York Zoo.

Philadelphia, May 25.—William Kyle, aged 7, suffered a broken leg and otherwise was seriously injured Tuesday afternoon by a polar bear at the zoological garden. Kyle was one of a number of pupils chaperoned by their teachers while on a park outing and, as he was picking up a ball near the bear cage the animal seized him by thrusting its paw between the bars. The animal's claws cut deep into the flesh, one blow laying open his scalp. His clothing was torn to shreds. Keepers beat off the animal with iron bars. The teachers, overcome by the sight, fainted.

STRIKE RIOTING BREAKS OUT ANEW IN LUMBER DISTRICTS OF CHICAGO

Mob Attacks Police Who Finally Control at Point of Revolver.

Manufacturers Insist That Troops Should Be Called Out.

Sympathetic Strike of Workmen Likely to Complicate Matters.

Chicago, May 26.—Strike riots have begun in the neighborhood of the lumber district. At Thirty-fifth and Morgan streets, twenty lumber and shaving wagons, fourteen of which belonged to the Rittenhouse & Embree company, and guarded by upwards of forty police, were attacked by a crowd of more than 400 strike sympathizers with bricks, stones and sling shots. While the police confined themselves to clubs, the fighting waged indecisively. Finally the police drew revolvers and charged the crowd. The sight of the firearms quickly quieted things, the mob fleeing wholesale. No arrests were made. At Thirty-fourth street, nearby, police on guard were later forced indoors. Many of the strike sympathizers armed themselves with small air rifles, and from behind lumber piles and buildings fired intermittently at the police, a number of whom were struck without being able to see the assailants, and were finally forced to take refuge in offices and nearby buildings.

The building industry of Chicago faced a fresh complication today in sympathetic strikes among carpenters and other workmen. At a dozen buildings the contractors encountered the alternative of sending back lumber delivered by non-union teamsters or having strikes to deal with. In a number of instances the lumber was accepted by the contractors, whereupon the carpenters and other workmen promptly laid down their tools and quit. While the carpenters' district council has refused to authorize a strike, the members of the union declare there is a tacit understanding that they are not required to work under police protection or with the lumber delivered under police protection.

The first lumber mill to shut down because of the shortage in supplies was that of the J. W. Landis Mill company. Fires were drawn today and the workmen laid off.

"It is no use trying to do business under present conditions," said Mr. Landis. "The police canont give us adequate protection. We tried to send out five wagons with ten policemen, but failed. Fifty policemen would not have been enough. I believe the troops must come to Chicago. I do not believe their presence here will injure Chicago. They are required to give the unions a lesson."

The board of business agents of the Building Trades' assemoty will hold a meeting tonight to take formal action with reference to handling or refusing to handle the product of the lumber firms affected by the strike. The meeting of business agents will be composed of delegates from the various divisions of the Building Trades' association throughout Chicago and surrounding suburbs. Carpenters are not included in this organization, but there are 60,000 union men who will be involved should the delegates take a stand against working where non-union teamsters deliver material. As yet the carpenters' district council has taken no action against the so-called unfair lumber.

STRIKE WILL BE LONG.

Union Men Prepare to Solicit Large Funds.

Chicago, May 26.—The teamsters' strike is running along like a flood tide, no barrier appearing in any direction to keep it within definite bounds, and while it has been spreading interest has shifted temporarily from the strife between employers and labor unions to differences between the business interests involved and the local administrative authorities. In the face of declarations by the employers that the police department of the city is absolutely inadequate to afford protection to property, as a result of conditions brought about by the strike's spread to the lumber district, Mayor Dunne announced that there will be no necessity to call for troops this week.

The lumbermen, the latest interests to be affected by the strike, are not so optimistic. They seem to be living in terror of riotous uprising in the vast area embraced by their yards and plans—a district peculiarly inviting to incendiarism.

In anticipation of trouble in the lumber district, the mayor instructed Chief of Police O'Neill to close all saloons there between the hours of 1 and 7 p. m. in cases where crowds were permitted to gather inside or outside the premises.

In preparation for a protracted strike siege, the teamsters' joint council has arranged to send agents to all parts of the country for the purpose of gathering funds. It is the ambition of the strike leaders to raise $1,000,0000 by July 1.

Solicitors probably will start from Chicago next week on their mission. They will visit every local union in the United States, according to the plan, and in addition to urging financial assistance will strive to arouse organized labor everywhere to sympathize with the present struggle. One of the first moves of the strike leaders to keep the men in line will be to increase the weekly strike benefits. The drivers on strike now receive $10 a week. The Express Drivers' union has arranged, according to the officials, to pay its 900 members $12 weekly, beginning next Monday. If sufficient funds can be raised the benefits paid to other strikers will be increased in proportion.

BARON ROTHSCHILD IS DEAD AT PARIS

Alphonse, Head of French Branch of Bankers, Passes Away.

Paris, May 26.—Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, head of the French branch of the banking house bearing the name of Rothschild and governor of the Bank of France, died at 4:30 this morning from acute bronchitis, aggravated by gout. The eminent financier had been sinking slowly for many days, but there was no apprehension that his death was imminent. He first took to his bed two weks ago. Several rallies gave promise of his recovery. Two days ago the baron began to fail rapidly and his condition assumed a disquieting form. Although he kept up an animated conversation with members of his family and the old servants, the patient became very weak, and last night entered upon a comatose state and passed away this morning peacefully, surrounded by his family. The announcement of the baron's death caused widespread regret, for beside his position in the financial world, Baron Alphonse was known for his lavish charities, one of the latest being the gift of $2,000,000 for the erection of workingmen's homes.

The news of the baron's death caused a deep impression among financiers generally. It was said that his death would probably momentarily influence the extensive interests in which the house is concerned, but that it would not have a lasting effect on the markets.

The deceased, who was born in 1827 will be succeeded as head of the Paris banking house by Baron Lambert de Rothschild of Brussels, whose business capacity has earned him a world-wide reputation.

The burial of Baron Alphonse will be most simple, according to the strict rule of the Rothschild family, including a plain coffin, without mourning tributes. The funeral, the date of which has not yet been fixed, will be the occasion of a notable tribute of respect.

A member of a French-American banking house said:

"Baron Alphonse was the leading spirit of the Rothschilds in their relations with practically all the governments of Europe. Besides the colossal task of financing the indemnity which France paid to Germany after the Franco-German war of 1870-71, he actively carried on relations with other governments. In Italy these included both the government and the Vatican finances. The house also has large interests in Spain, largely controls Austria's railroad development, and held considerable parts of all the old Russian loan issues. The house, however, has not exercised a controlling influence in the new Russian loans. The large industrial interests of the house in Russia include the petroleum fields of Baku. The house has also had considerable dealings with American securities through the Belmonts, J. P. Morgan and John W. Gates, including Louisville & Nashville and the Atlantic Coast Line tranasctions, and also has extensive interests in mines in California."

Baron Alphonse was a member of the academy of fine arts, a member of the French institute, and a commander of the legion of honor. He leaves two children, Baron Edouard and Baroness Beatrix. He has two surviving brothers, Baron Gustav and Baron Edmond.

CHANGE OF FORMS

For Church Worship May Be Adopted By Presbyterians.

Report of Committee Before General Assembly For Discussion.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 26—Whether the Presbyterian general assembly should depart from the laws and traditions of the church in America and adopt a form of worship, even to the exten of saying the churches might use this form or not as they like, was the principal question which came before the general assembly here today. That many speakers would take the floor for and against the proposition was indicated when the time for the report of the special commitie on forms of service arrived, and the stated clerk cleared the way so that the speakers could use most of the day.

Before the report of the committee was formally presented to the assembly the report of the finance committee was adopted, showing the expenses for the general assembly last year at Buffalo to have been $34,525, with the receipts of equal amount. The trustees of the assembly hold $964,000 in securities. Rev. Francis Rostan of Italy presented a message of greeting from the presbyteries of his country.

In the report on church alliances, Stated Clerk W. H. Roberts said the Presbyterian church in the United States for years has been in secret correspondence with the Presbyterian element made up of 2,000,000 native Russians, who have finally won their religious freedom.

The report of the committee on forms of service was read.

The report reviews an extensive investigation which was made by the committee following its appointment by the General Assembly of 1903. Of this investigation the report says:

"Historically, the use of forms of service was practically universal among the early Calvanistic or Reformed Churches. In most of the Reformed churches, holding the same faith and order with us, the sue of these ancient service books, modified to meet present needs, still continues. Coming to the consideration of the present condition and needs of worship in our Presbyterian churches the opinion is prevalent that there has been a movement among Presbyterians in the direction of a more thoughtful and beautiful worship; and that this movement, beginning in the Sabbath schools with various exercises, and proceeding among the churches with 'order of service' and more or less elaborate forms, has become so widespread as to need recognition, wise guidance, and some measure of prudent restraint.

"Letters of inquiry to the churches as to the extent of this movement brought replies showing that the movement toward an order of service with responsive features is already going on in three-fourths of our churches; second, that nine-tenths of our ministers desire improvement and better order in the conduct of worship generally in our church; third, that almost all of our ministers wish the people to take part in the service; fourth, that nearly nine-tenths of our ministers wish for more unity in Presbyterian worship, if it can be voluntarily brought about; and finally, that more than four-fifths of them feel the need of a book of forms."

Continuing the report says: "These results encouraged the committee to begin the preparation of 'A Book of Simple Forms and Services which shall be proper and helpful for voluntary use in Presbyterian churches in the celebration of the Sacraments, in marriages and funerals, and in the conduct of public worship.'

"To make a book merely to suit our own personal tastes would have been easy. But our desire was to make a book which would suit others and the work of the sub-committee was subjected to the most minute and searching criticism. The abundance of the material increased the difficulty of the choice. It was not possible to include all of the beautiful prayers which have become familiar in different parts of the church.

"We found it necessary also, in some cases, to abbreviate or to amend certain forms, in order to bring them into closer harmony with the living faith and the practical needs of our churches. For example, the spirit of missions, the evangelistic impulse, the interest in civic and social welfare and temperance, the desire for the triumph of the kingdom of Christ, demanded a clearer and stronger expression than we could find in the historic liturgies. It is to be added that 'Prayers For Our Country,' as we found them, were evidently adaptations of ancient prayers in which a fundamental distinction between 'the rulers' and 'the people' was taken for granted. It seemed to us needful to write new prayers recognizing God's goodness to our country in establishing the commonwealth according to the people's will and giving us officers whose authority is a public trust. Adaptations of this character are vital; and in our judgment necessary to express the true spirit of the Presbyterian church.

"Suggestions which came to us from many parts of the church were gratefully received and thoughtfully considered. In many cases they were most valuable. To give a small illustration: It was pointed out to us that the proportion of prayers beginning with the address 'Almighty God' was too large; the words became monotonous; they emphasized unduly a single attribute of the divine nature. The changes necessary to correct this fault have been made. We were asked also to add a number of prayers suitable for use in family worship, and to prepare a brief form which could be used by a company of Christians desiring to worship together where there was no church service or no minister present. Both of these additions seemed to us likely to be useful, and they have been made.

"The book as now submitted contains forms and services for the following occasions:

"Morning and evening worship on the Lord's day.

"Public worship on land or sea (where there are no regular church ordinances).

"The Lord's supper.

CONFESSES MURDER

Inmate of Prison Says He Killed Man In Dakota.

Investigation Leads Officers to Think He Is Telling Truth.

Stillwater, Minn., May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Otto Keller, an inmate of the state prison, wrote a note to Warden Wolfer, a few days ago, confessing to killing a fellow tramp in a double deck sheep car at Larimore, N. D., two years ago last September or October. He says he killed the man with his own revolver, after robbing him of $40.

The warden advised Richard Fadden, chief of police of Larimore, on May 17, by letter, of the confession, and received a reply from him a few days ago, stating that a murdered tramp was found in such a car on its arrival at Devils Lake from Larimore, and that the murder had remained a mystery.

The matter has been referred to District Coroner Winemann for investigation. Both Warden Wolfer and Chief of Police Padden say that the circumstances are detailed so accurately, and in compliance with known facts, that it is believed the confession is true. It seems probable that the murder craze that is prevalent throughout the country, acting on the conscience of Keller, has prompted him to confess. Keller was received at the prison, March 3, 1904, under a sentence of five years for burglary in Houston county, and his term will expire, allowing for good behavior, Oct. 10, 1907. He is about 35 years of age. He has been an orderly and good working prisoner, until lately, when he became morose and seemingly conscience-stricken.

MAYOR IN CONTROL OF THE SITUATION

The Next Move In Philadelphia Gas Plant Grab Is Awaited.

Philadelphia, May 26.—It is the general opinion that Mayor Weaver, for the present,. controls the situation in his fight with the Republican leaders over the proposed lease of the city gas works. There is much speculation as to what will be the next move. Developments today are expected to come from the "organization." Insurance Commissioner Durham and his lieutenants were in conference late last night and their deliberations were resulted today soon after Mr. Durham reached his office. Later he repaired to the office of United States Senator Penrose and was in consultation with him for some time.

There is still some talk of impeachment proceedings against the mayor and there is no longer any denial that the course has been seriously considered by the leaders and their legal advisers. Those who advise against this step, argue that any attempt to impeach Weaver at this time would only serve to strengthen his position with the public.

Just now the attitude of the members of the council is giving the leaders almost as much concern as any other feature of their contest with the mayor.

Both sides are preparing for next Thursday's meeting of the councils, when, unless something intervenes, the mayor will forward his veto of the new gas works lease ordinance to both branches. The "organization" leaders, Mr. Durham and State Senator McNichol, have announced confidently that there would be no trouble whatever in passing the lease over the mayor's veto. The mayor and his friends are becoming more confident every day that the veto will stand. To accomplish this end every effort is being made to induce councilmen who voted on May 18 in favor of the lease to sustain the veto. In this they have the active co-operation of citizens in every ward. Extraordinary pressure is being brought to bear wherever a councilman shows signs of weakening. In one instance a committee of determined citizens in a suburban ward hunted nearly all night for a member of select council who obviously was avoiding them. Early in the morning the committee appeared at the man's house, routed him out of bed and, while he stood barefooted in his night clothes, read their resolutions to him and extracted a promise from him to change his attitude and sustain the mayor's veto. Anonymous letters, some of them threatening in character, are received in every mail by councilmen. In addition they are deluged by letters signed by their constituents urging them to stand by the mayor. It is claimed that since last Thursday five members of select council and nine members of the common branch have been induced to avow their willingness to change their vote and sustain the mayor's veto. There are forty-two members of select council and nine votes are thus far claimed to sustain the veto. Should the mayor succeed in winning nine more to his side, the opposition will not have the necessary three-fifths vote to defeat the veto.

Those opposed to the mayor are working equally hard to prevent breaks in their ranks and they claim that next Thursday the vote will defeat the mayor.

BELIEVES IN RESTRICTION OF JAPS

San Francisco, May 26.—Count Kinjiro Hirosawa, a member of the Japanese house of peers, has arrived in this city, accompanied by several Japanese naval officers.

Speaking of the recent anti-Japanese immigration agitation in America, he expressed himself in favor of some rigid restriction. The best plan, in his mind, would be to establish an international bureau in Japan for the purpose of passing upon the desirability of would-be emigrants.

Count Hirosawa and party are on their way to the Woolwich arsenal in England, to make an investigation of modern European naval affairs, with the idea of benefiting their own navy. They expect to remain in England about eighteen months.

In regard to the effect of the war upon Japan, Count Hirosawa stated that his country is by no means at the end of her resources.

"We have plenty of men, arms and food, and money enough to last for two years," he said. "The patriotism of the people is still at high tide, and there is no sign of internal discontent."

ALABAMA MAN ROBBED AND SHOT

Birmingham, Ala., May 26.—The body of Isaac Walters, secretary of the Mississippi Coal company, was found today in front of his home at Woodlawn, a suburb. He had been shot in the head. Nearby lay two revolvers, one of which was identified as that of the murdered man.

Mr. Walters' pistol had one chamber empty, indicating that he had fired before he was killed. He had been robbed of his watch and money. He started for home from the city last night on the midnight car and this was the last seen of him until a neighbor stumbled over the body in the street about daylight.

DISCOVER A "PLANT"

The Minneapolis Police Locate Many Stolen Goods.

Discovery Made Through Complaint of the Thieves.

Minneapolis, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The theft of a box of jewelry from the residence of Oliver F. Bougie, 622 Adams street, northeast, resulted in the discovery of a big "plant" of stolen goods by the Minneapolis police late Thursday. Mrs. Bougie reported to the central station that during a fire at her house a box of jewels has disapepared.

Detectives went to examine the place and in doing so located a quantity of alleged stolen goods, ranging from fur ccats tnd cash registers to trinkets.

Bougie was arrested charged with being implicated in robberies during last winter in Minneapolis.

BARBERTON, OHIO, BANK FAILS.

Washington, May 26.—The First National bank of Barberton, Ohio, has been ordered closed by the comptroller of the currency on the ground that the bank is insolvent. The capital stock is $50,000. National Bank Examiner George T. Cutts has been appointed receiver.

THE RUSSIAN ADMIRAL HAS DIVIDED HIS FLEET FROM ALL INDICATIONS

Seventeen Vessels Were Seen at Anchor at Sanddle Islands.

Another Section of the Fleet Is at Wusung Near Shanghai.

Japs Believe Rojestvensky Is Trying to Draw Off Ships.

Shanghai, May 26, noon.—There are indications that Rear Admiral Rojestvensky has divided his fleet. Seventeen vessels of the Baltic fleet anchored at Saddle islands last night. It is believed that they coaled there and that from that point they will proceed north.

Nagasaki, May 26, noon.—Three steamers, which were loaded with coal at Moji (terminus of the Kiushiu railway, Japanese) for Hongkong, have been detained under orders from the government.

Tsingtau, May 26.—The whole Russian fleet is assembling near Wusung, and the German squadron at Tsingtau is preparing for eventualities.

The report from Tsingtau, the port of the German concession at Kiaochou, Shangtung peninsula, is in all probability a magnified version of the dispatch of the Associated Press from Shanghai yesterday saying that it was credibly reported there that certain Russian vessels had arrived at the mouth of the Yangtse river yesterday afternoon. Both Wusung and Shanghai are situated on branches of the Yangtse river. Five steamers of the Russian volunteer fleet, three colliers and one Russian cruiser were the vessels reported to have arrived off the Yangtse river. Later, the cruiser put to sea and three of the volunteer fleet vessels went to Wusung. It is quite probable that the Chinese ashore exaggerated this report, making a statement that the whole Russian fleet was assembling off Wusung. No news has been received from any other point tending to alter the facts cabled to the Associated Press yesterday from Shanghai, and there is no doubt that if the Russian fleet really had assembled off Wusung such important news would have been flashed from Shanghai, which is only eleven miles south of that place.

Chefu, May 26, 3 p. m.—All Japanese steamers arriving at this port today have been ordered held here pending further instructions.

Tokio, May 26.—It is believed here that the action of the Russians in sending some vessels to Shanghai is part of a diversion plan to draw off a portion of the Japanese fleet. It is thought that possibly the Russians intend to interne the slower craft, but the visit and withdrawal of the faster vessels is regarded to be without purpose, unless as a diversion.

The whereabouts of Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet is not reported, and opinion is divided as to whether it has entered the Pacific or returned to the lower Chinese coast.

The location of Admiral Togo's fleet continues to be secret. Popular feeling is undisturbed and the Japanese public is confident that Admiral Togo is prepared to meet any situation.

DARING ATTEMPT

Made By Japs to Cut Russian Railroad.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—The daring attempt of the Japanese, May 23, to cut the railroad and blow up the bridge over a tributary of the Tungliao, twenty miles south of the Russian main line from Kuanchengtzu to Kirin, which are now connected by field railroad, bears a striking resemblance to the blowing up of the bridge over the Kainskai river, 160 miles north of Mukden by Maj. Nanganuma of the Japanese army, just before Field Marshal Oyama undertook the advance against Gen. Kuropatkin at Mukden Another parallel of the raid of May 23 occurred while Gen. Rennenkampff's cavalry recently was working around the Japanese left, south of Fakcman, just as Nanganuma's exploit coincided with Gen. Mistchenko's raid on Newchwang, in September last. According to reports the raid of May 23 was launched from Mongolia.

LAND TACTICS PUZZLING.

Japs Give Way at Slightest Pressure on Center.

Gunshu Pass, Manchuria, May 26.—The Japanese tactics are puzzling. They give way at the slightest pressure against their center on both the railroad and the Mandarin road. The Chinese explain the retirement to trouble among the reserves some of whom they say are almost in a state of revolt because the government has not kept its promise to return them to Japan.

The retirement of the Japanese center is interpreted by some of the Russian officers as a postponement of Field Marshal Oyama's offensive because of the bad state of the roads, but this view is not shared by all the officers.

In order to prevent wrangling over the question of reward or censure, arising from reports forwarded by the commander-in-chief through the army corps commanders, General Linevitch in an order of the day has directed that copies of the original reports of all encounters and individual exploits be transmitted to his staff as well as briefer reports through the ordinary channels.

FINANCIAL CAPABILITY

Of Japan Has Completely Surprised the World.

Tokio, May 26.—Baron Komura, minister of foreign affairs, Baron Sone, minister of finance, and Baron Shibusawa addressed the clearing house association today. Baron Komura said that the financial capabilities of Japan had completely surprised the world. He was glad that Japan was showing a financial and productive ability as well as strength on the battlefield. The war, he said, would last long and he trusted much in the commercial ability of the nation after the war ended when a greater prospect would be opened before the country. He expected, he said, further that the commercial interests would do their utmost to develop and extend commerce. He also expected the introduction of foreign capital and he counseled his hearers to facilitate this introduction by inspiring foreign capitalists with confidenc in the country.

Baron Sone thanked the financial and commercial interests for their great assistance in financing the war.

Baron Shibusawa said that the commence and productive capacity of the nation was growing despite the war. The bank clearings, he said, for 1904 exceeded $2,060,000,000 which amount was unprecedented. He expected that the bank clearings for 1905 would exceend $2,500,000,000.

HAMBURG LEADS THE ENDYMION AND AILSA

New York, May 26.—The German racing yacht Hamburg led the Endymion and the Ailsa by 136 miles in the trans-Atlantic race for Emperor William's cup on May 22. All three of the yachts were sighted by the steamer St. Louis on that day, the Endymion and Ailsa at 1:36 p. m. mear Greenwich time (about 8:40 a. m. New York time,) and the Hamburg at 7:50 p. m. mean Greenwich time (about 2:46 p. m. New York time). The Ailsa was leading the Endymion about two miles. A light southeast breeze prevailed. The Hamburg had light variable winds.

This information was sent to the Associated Press by Marconi wireless telegraph from the St. Louis by a roundabout route, which resulted in considerable delay in its transmission. From the St. Louis, it was given to the steamer Campania, by the Campania to the Marconi station at Slasconsett, and thence to New York. The message follows:

"S. S. St. Louis, May 24, via S. S. Campania, via Marconi station, Slasconsett, May 26.—May 22, 1:36 p. m., G. M. T., Lat. 39.57, Lon. 52.24, Endymion and Ailsa, latter leading two miles, light southeast breeze. Same day 7:50 G. M. T., Lat. 39.59, Lon 52.25, Hamburg 136 miles ahead of Endymion and Ailsa, light variable winds.—ST. LOUIS."

New York, May 26.—The Cunarder Carpathia, which arrived today from Mediterranean ports, brought news of the yachts. On May 22, in Lat. 40.46, Long. 52.02, a wireless message was received from the American liner St. Louis, from New York for Southampton, as follows:

"At 12:33 a. m. (Greenwich time), Lat. 39.52, Long. 55.24, passed yachts Endymion and Ailsa, at 7:50 a. m. (Greenwich time), Lat. 39.59, Long. 53.25, passed Hamburg."

The Carpathia, the same night, May 22, at 11:20 (noon meridian), Lat. 40.44, Long. 53.13:15, passed a sailing craft bound east, showing coston lights, red, blue followed by one red ball. Capt. Dow of the Carpathia says that the blue light might have been white. When the coston lights were displayed the craft showed an immense spread of canvas and was sailing northeast at great speed.

The night signals of the Endymion are coston light, red, white followed by one red star. Those of the Atlantic are coston light red, blue, red. No yacht in the race was ordered to show coston lights red, blue followed by one red ball.

HIBBING MAN IS MISSING

Oney Comeau Is Being Sought By Wife and Police.

Oney Comeau of Hibbing is missing, and his wife fears that he has met with some accident or foul play.

Mr. Comeau left Hibbing Tuesday, May 10, to come to Duluth for the purpose of consulting a physician and entering a hospital here for treatment for an ailment from which he was suffering. Since then his wife has heard nothing from him, and at her request the Duluth police have instituted a search for him.

The missing man is said to have been seen a week ago at the corner of Sixth avenue West and Superior street, but since then no trace of him has been found. He did not visit any of the hospitals in either Duluth or Superior and as far as can be learned did not consult a physician here.

Mrs. Comeau returned to Hibbing yesterday much discouraged at the outlook.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

Two File Articles With Register of Deeds.

Atwood-Larson & Co., a local concern organized to conduct a general hay, grain and produce business, filed articles of incorporation with the county register of deeds yesterday. The incorporators are Herbert J. Atwood, Frank A. Noble and John A. Keyes. The capital stock is $50,000.

The Duluth Brass Works company has incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are Edward C. Hilliard, Clyde W. Stilson and Martha Kerr. The company purposes to manufacture and repair machinery and tools of iron, brass and copper.

NEED WORKMEN.

Government Engineers Look For Timber Men.

Assistant United States Engineer Clarence Coleman, who has charge of the construction work of the concrete pier at Superior entry, under Maj. Charles L. Potter, says that the crib work for the protection dike is well underway, but that the engineers are hampered owing to a lack of men who are familiar with crib timber work. The work needs men who are familiar with the use of the adz and saw and in handling large timbers rather than finished carpenters, and at present there seems to be a dearth of that class of workmen. If the government could secure several more such workmen, the crib work construction would go forward much faster.

FOUR STRUCK BY TRAIN AND KILLED.

Canton, Ohio, May 26.—Mr. and Mrs. Gust Miller of Louisville, Ohio, and Mrs. Howell and daughter, Anna, of South Bend, Ind., were struck by a passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad while out riding late last night and all were instantly killed.

The accident occurred just outside the village of Louisville, a few miles south of the city. Mrs. Howell was a sister to Mrs. Miller and she and her daughter were visiting at the Miller house. Miller was 65 years old and his wife 60. All the bodies were badly mutilated.

FAIL TO CONVICT INSPECTOR.

New York, May 26.—The jury in the case of Henry Lundberg, the former inspector of steamboats, charged with having failed to properly inspect the steamer Gen. Slocum, prior to the burning of that vessel, entailing the loss of more than 1,000 lives, last night reported a disagreement after being out ten and one-half hours. This is the third time a jury has disagreed and it is said now he will be released on his own recognizance.

THE YALE SENIORS FAIL TO "TAP" YOUNG SHEVLIN.

New Haven, Conn., May 26.—The Yale senior society elections were held yesterday afternoon, according to the historic "tap" day custom, and as usual there was a great crowd on the ncampus during the tapping of the sixty-five men taken into the three societies. It would have been an unusual day if there had been no surprises, as the result of the election, the name of some prominent man of the university generally being omitted from the list. Yesterday Thomas L. Shevlin of Minneapolis, captain of the university fotball team and one of the greatest all around athlets that ever attended Yale, was not tapped. After the skull and bones and scroll and keys list had been filled and there remained two nominations for wolf's head, Shevlin left the campus and whirled away in his automobile.

LAKE BED LEASES.

Vexed Question Up to Attorney General Again.

St. Paul, May 26.—State Auditor S. G. Iverson is making one more effort to settle the state's right to grant mineral leases for mining ore under lake beds. He has referred the question to Attorney General E. T. Young.

There are about 150 applications on file for leases under lake beds. W. B. Douglas, when attorney general, gave an opinion upholding the right to lease the lake beds, and last year Mr. Iverson granted a lease in order to get a decision from the supreme court. The court refused to take jurisdiction. An attempt was then made by the Hugo bill to get authority from the legislature but the bill failed to pass, and the problem is right where it was before. It hinges on whether the state's right over meandered lakes is one merely of control or of absolute ownership.

CHINESE JEWS.

There is said to be a Chinese-Jewish colony in the Yang-tse-Klang valley in China. This colony has existed since 200 years before the Christian era. Its people have a synagogue in which they attend worship, extract the sinews from flesh before eating it, erect tablets to Moses and Abraham, and are called by some "blue-capped Mohammedans," because of their blue head-dress. Otherwise they are little different from other Chinese citizens, hold high offices in the land at times, and because of Chinese tolerant principles have never been persecuted or oppressed.

AN INGENIOUS DEFENSE.

A man was arrested in England not long ago for begging. He had a trained bear, and the two went about the country, the bear dancing and the man collecting the money. When the man was taken into court he told the judge that he was not begging, but that the bear was earning an honest living, and that he was just going about with it collecting the money for it and acting as treasurer. The court refused to hold the man.

PICTURE FORGERIES.

Police seizures are being made in a consecutive series at one of the best-known picture marts in Paris, where auction sales and works of art are conducted—the Hotel Drouot, says the London Globe. The seizures include "examples," forged or suspect, of nearly all the great names of the Barbizon school, such as Corot, Daubigny, Courbet and Harpignies. Oddly enough, for some of these forgeries sums of from $2,000 to $3,000 have been offered by "connoisseurs." They are slipped into the sales among genuine examples by a most ingenious system which baffles both police and auctioneers.

Urgent Invitations Are Sent Out For Engineers' Convention.

Duluth Commercial Club Includes Interesting Leaflet of Attractions.

If the annual convention of the American Society of Civil Engineers in 1906 is not held in Duluth it will be through no lack of effort by the local members of that prominent association comprised of the representative civil engineers in this country.

The society has some eight or ten members at the Head of the Lakes, and these are bending every energy to capture the honors for Duluth in 1906. In this effort they are being ably supported by the Duluth Commercial club.

Urgent letters of invitation are now being sent out to every member of the American Society of Civil Engineers that it is possible to reach. With a cordial invitation, signed by every one of the society's members in Duluth, is a neat and carefully composed leaflet, sent out by the Duluth Commercial club, not only reiterating the invitation, but explaining briefly and comprehensively why Duluth is entitled to the honor of the 1906 convention.

In this invitation it is pointed out that it has been a long period of years since the society held a convention in the Northwest, the last time being at St. Paul. It is also pointed out that no other place in the country has any more features interesting from the engineers' standpoint, features that are either found right here at the Head of the Lakes, or within easy distance by the railroads. The Commercial club letter cites the aerial bridge, the only one of its kind in this country, the concrete pier work at Superior entry, with its complete equipment in the way of a concrete plant, and an assembling plant, all of which will be in actual operation during the time the engineers are here, if the convention is secured for Duluth. Attention is called, also, to the great commercial and shipping interests, the coal and ore docks, the sawmills, the development of the St. Louis river water power, the iron ore mines, with their different systems of mining, and if they should come up here by boat, the copper mining district of Michigan, which can be visited by the engineers or which can be quickly reached by rail from Duluth if they come by some other route.

Ample entertainment and facilities for holding a convention are guaranteed by the Duluth engineers and the Commercial club, the local engineers promising that they will devote their personal attention to making the visit a pleasant and interesting one for every member of the society.

With the letters of invitation is mailed a voting coupon, designating Duluth as the place of meeting in 1906, to be signed by the person receiving it and mailed in an addressed envelope to the secretary of the association.

With this voting coupon is the suggestion, if the person receiving it has already designated his choice of another place for meeting, that he reconsider the matter and change his vote in favor of Duluth.

The 1905 convention will be held at Cleveland, this coming summer. The Duluth representatives went after it at St. Louis, but were too late in getting the invitation before the engineers. To get a convention of the American Society of Civil Engineers it is necessary to begin the canvass about two years in advance.

FINANCED TOO MANY ROADS

Cause of Failure of Big Banking Firm of Boston.

Boston, May 26.—Seventy-one banks and trust companies, most of them in Massachusetts, but several located in various parts of the country, are among the creditors of the banking firm of Burnett, Cummings & Co., of this city, which yesterday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court, with liabilities placed at $1,174,248. The assets are stated to be uncertain.

The creditors have been given to understand that they will not exceed $200,000, if, indeed, they prove to be of any value whatsoever. The bankruptcy petition is the heaviest ever filed in this district.

Attorney J. T. Auebach, counsel for the bankrupt firm, said that the cause of the failure was the building and financing of the Concord and Street Railway company, the Middleboro, Warham and Buzzard's Bay Street Railway company. These roads were in thinly settled districts and were unable to make suitable connections with roads running to Boston. The four companies were placed in the hands of receivers and their notes became valueless.

Furthermore, the Massachusetts Securities company's bonds, which were secured by obligations of the railroads, lost value and entailed losses upon the firm.

Lawyer Auebach stated also that the buying of the Hampden Trust company of Springfield, and of the Taunton Safe Deposit and Trust company of Easton, both of which unknown to the firm, were in serious financial straits and which were placed in the hands of receivers, has tended the firm, a financial embarrassment.

The refusal of extension of credits by banks then made a continuance in business impossible.

The secured creditors number eighty-seven and the unsecured eight-one. There are thirty-two Massachusetts savings banks in the list of creditors, and thirteen Massachusetts national banks.

It is understood the securities given the banks for their loans were bonds of the Massachusetts Security company which in turn were secured by notes of the bankrupt electric railways. The largest unsecured claims is that of the Worchester Five Cent Savings bank, Worchester, for $80,500. Other banking institutions creditors are the Danvers Savings bank of Danvers, for $26,700; the Milbury Savings bank of Milbury, for $26,600, and the Interrational Trust company of Boston, for $44,495. All these claims are in the secured list.

Among the Western institutions affected are the Chicago Savings bank, Chicago, $30,390; the State Savings bank, Ann Arbor, Mich., $20,314; the Western Trust and Savings bank, Chicago, $11,896; Fort Dearborn National bank, Chicago, $7,866 and the State bank of Chicago, $10,425.

The firm of Burnett, Cummings & Co., is composed of Archie C. Burnett and Charles C. Cummings, Jr.

The firm has been in business three years and a half, succeeding the firm of C. S. Cummings & Co.

In connection with the bankruptcy proceedings the state savings bank commissioners said that so far as their investigations have gone, the savings banks which have loaned money upon the affected bonds have not evaded any law.

POLICY OF CORTELYOU

Regarding Organizations of Postmasters Outlined By Postmaster General.

Washington, May 26.—The National Association of Postmasters of the second and third class, which met here yesterday in second annual convention, was addressed by Postmaster General Cortelyou, who outlined his policy in regard to organizations of postal employes and the part employes play in politics. He said:

"Organizations within the department, to receive its sanction in any degree, must have for their objects improvements in the service, or be of a purely fraternal or beneficial character. With any other purpose in view they are detrimental to the service, to their members and to the public.

"My duty as head of the department is to insist upon loyal and efficient service from every employe, as an individual, without any thought of his affiliations with any organization. I recognize every employe as an individual, to be appointed, advanced, transferred, and in all respects treated upon merit. It must be clearly understood that the officials of the department, and not the officials or members of any organization, are the proper persons to present the department's needs to congress. If I find that any class of employes are inadequately compensated I will do whatever I properly can to secure increased compensation. On the other hand, I will recommend curtailment in any branch of the service where the compensation seems out of proportion to the work done, and this applies not only to all class of employes, but to individuals. They would be unfit for their positions if they did not take proper interest in public affairs, but a proper interest in as a matter of course, bars them from participation in factional differences, or any other political action that will bring discredit upon the service or show a lack of appreciation of their relationship to it.

"Efficient as the postal service is, there is still a sad lack of good business in some of its branches, and many years of routine methods have brought about an inertia that is difficult to overcome. I think we have altogether too much red tape in the department. I think we go around too many corners instead of making straight cuts to results. But these weaknesses and difficulties should be but incentives to every man and woman in the service to raise its standard, that it may be made the great business department the public have a right to expect it to be."

The postmasters were received at the White House by President Roosevelt.

WITHOUT COST

No Assessments Levied For Improvements of Certain Streets.

Work Was Paid For From Public Works Fund.

Complaints have been heard on many sides during the last few days of the manner in which Seventh avenue East between First and Second streets is being repaired by the board of public works, at no expense to the property owners.

West First street between Twenty-first and Twenty-second avenues West is also being repaired in the same manner, and in both cases the work amounts almost to a repaving of the streets, the cost being charged up against the taxpayers throughout the city.

Other property owners are objecting claiming that the abutting property owners should stand the expense, as they are made to do in other parts of the city.

President Olson of the board of public works was questioned this morning regarding it.

"We realize that these property owners are getting more than they are entitled to," he said, "but in a way it can't be helped. The work was commenced last year by the old board, which ordered some crushed rock, which had been broken up by the prisoners, to be dumped on these streets. The result was that they were absolutely impassable this year and something had to be done with them. We had to put a top dressing over the rock to make it passable for teams.

"The work on West First street was ordered by the council last year. The motion only called for a few loads of crushed rock to fill in the holes, but before they got through there were several inches of rock dumped on the street. The board then had to put some kind of a dressing over it.

"The same will be done with Michigan street between Twenty-first avenue West and Twenty-fourth avenue West. The Scott-Graff Lumber company paid for hauling rock to this street last year, the city supplying the rock from its crusher, but the street has never been used and can not be unless some top dressing is placed over the rock."

FOUR ARE FINED

Police Arrest Dog Owners Neglecting to Pay Licenses.

House to House Search For Dogs Is Being Made.

Despairing of getting the dog licenses rounded up by persuasion, the police department has adopted stringent measures, and this morning four Duluth citizens were arrested and brought before Judge Windom on the charge of keeping an unlicensed dog.

All four men pleaded guilty to the charge, and they were assessed $2 and costs apiece, with the alternative of spending five days in jail.

The fine and costs amounted to $4.50 and as each man had to take out his dog license in addition to the fine, the total cost was $5.75 in place of $1.25, which is all the license costs.

The four men were G. Asher, Andrew Sandstrom, Fred Phillips and John E. Chaloner. They all paid their fines and were released.

There are now no less than four officers at work collecting the licenses, and as there are also two or three cases of sickness on the force, the police department is rather badly crippled at the present time.

Officer Stewart has charge of the work in West Duluth, Officer Bradley in the West end, Officer Barber in the central part of the city, and Officer Bartlett in Lakeside.

The policemen are making a house to house canvass of the entire city and they have power to arrest any person who has an unlicensed dog. The licenses were all due May 1 and the person who has not yet secured one is violating the city ordinance.

The policemen will be kept at the work for two or three weeks, or until the canvass of the city has been completed and every dog that can be discovered has a license.

The delay and trouble in getting in the license fees this year has caused no little agitation for a city dog catcher who will be on duty during the entire year and who would have power to impound any dog found running the streets without a tag.

SHARP FIGHT IN BELTRAMI

Three Candidates to Succeed Loud as County Attorney.

Bemidji, Minn., May 26.—A fierce fight is being carried on by the different candidates for county attorney to succeed County Attorney Loud, resigned. The candidates are E. E. McDonald, Henry Funkley and John F. Gibbons. All are attorneys of this city.

McDonald represents the element which set in motion the recent investigation which resulted in the removal of County Commissioners Sibley and Wright. He is supposed to have pledged two of the three remaining members of the board, so that if one of the commissioners now to be elected to fill the vacancies is favorable to his candidacy, his election will be assured. Gibbons says he has one vote on the board, and to be elected he must have the votes of both of the new members.

The election of the new commissioners is causing much speculation. The vacancies will be filled by the chairmen of the town boards and the presidents of the villages, in each commissioner district, at a meeting soon to be held in Bemidji. There are but three votes in the Bemidji district, consisting of the villages of Bemidji and Nymore and the town of Bemidji. The commissioner who is elected to succeed Sibley, must be elected, however, by the chairmen of the thirteen towns and the president of the village of Solway.

JURY COULD NOT AGREE

No Verdict In Dorion Case —Twenty Hour's Deliberation.

Unable to agree, after about twenty-hours' deliberation, the jury in the personal injury case of Philip Dorion against the contracting firm of Butler Bros., was this morning discharged by Judge Dibell. This is the first instance in some time that a jury in a personal injury case has been unable to agree. In this action Mr. Dorion claimed that the injuries which he received to his spine, by reason of being struck by an ore train locomotive were due to the negligence of his employers, and he sued for damages in the amount of $25,000. The final vote of the jury is understood to have been nine to three, but it was not learned in whose favor.

Dorion was represented by Marshall & Whipple, and Butler Bros. by C. S. Wilson.

In the damage action brought by Dan Larson against Alex. Watson and James Butchart, to recover for the alleged wrongful seizure of goods, a sealed verdict, returned last night and opened this morning, gave Larson judgment for $225.64. He sought redress in the sum of $775.

A stipulation was filed in district court this morning for the settlement and dismissal of the case of Erick Saatala against the Great Northern Railway company. The case has been settled by the company with the payment of $25. The action was one brought to district court on an appeal from the justice court at Chisholm.

FRONTIER TOWN

Of Bonesteel Real Dizzy Now From Society's Whirl.

It No Longer Makes Saloons Its Social Headquarters.

Bonesteel, S. D., May 26.—Bonesteel has been born again.

The first Bonesteel came into the world amid the whir of roulette, the whoop of the cowboy, the chink of dollars, the rattle of pistols—all the travail of a great land lottery.

But the new Bonesteel is coming into existence to the accompaniment of the rustle of silk skirts, the gaiety of the dance, the polished conversation of the drawing room words.

For the women farmers are coming. From a dozen states, from the schoolroom, from the business office, from the drawing room, women are flocking here with trunks of clothes and boxes of dishes and crates of farming implements, to claim their prizes in the government lottery of last summer. For the government says the women must establish their residence on the Rosebud reservation claims.

Not alone is Bonesteel taking lessons in the ways of gentle society, to court the favor of the newcomers, women such as have never been known in the reservation country.

For, stacked in the office of J. D. Keller, United States commissioner, in the Bonesteel postoffice and the offices of all the small towns hereabout, are some 1,409 letters, every one from a bachelor pining to make one of these young women his wife and her farm his own.

News of these attractive matrimonial opportunities was certain to crop out. Commissioner Keller chanced to mention the young woman to a newspaper and forthwith he was bombarded by marriage proposals, to be delivered to the women with farms. Now about 10 per cent of Mr. Keller's mail relates to his business, the remainder of his letters are from men offering themselves as candidates in the matrimonial market.

It has been cynically said that marriage is a matter of money. And anyone looking over the letters that have come for these young women must conclude the marital state is indeed to be considered only from the financial standpoint. From the southern borders of Mexico to the Canadian line, from New York to San Francisco, in half a dozen different languages and a thousand different styles of spelling these letters have come, and all of them show plainly that only wives with farms are wanted.

Every state of society is represented in these proposals. Many letters are crudely written; others are penned in choicest English. One man offers Mr. Keller a commission of $25 if marriage results; another refers to the governor of Virginia as his sponsor. Some have money—or say they have; but the greater part declare they are industrious individuals who want only a wife and a start in life.

One man, a resident of Arkansas, writes that he wants a wife from among the lucky number, not from any mercenary motive, but "becos the Arkansaw gulls ain't wuth chucks." He then devotes a paragraph to the peculiarities of Arkansas young women and advises Mr. Keller never to marry one of them. Another man, from a small town in California, wishing to be businesslike, used a typewriter, as follows:

"Dere $ur, I HAVE HEARD that YoU hAV Sum gurlis you WAnt tOO get married so I thOt i woulD rite YOu to tell WuN THat i wILL HAVE her. I'm 35 (thurY-FiVe) yearRs ols aNd a Hard wudKer. Plese rite Quick."

There will be many romances as the result of these letters. For some enterprising individuals here are preparing a "Cupid's Calendar," containing the much-desired addresses of the young women who drew choice farms, and these will be sent to all inquiries. The farms of the young women will be real prizes, for they are among the first 500 drawn and are worth an average of at least $5,000.

Last summer gambling houses ran open and the tables were even taken out into the street. Saloons were social centers and thugs came from everywhere. And finally there was a pitched battle between the lawabiding and the lawless and a dozen or more were shot.

But now it is all changed. All the young women farmers come from better society than Bonesteel has afforded. And with their arrival, a new social set is springing up. Whist clubs have been formed, dances given and social meetings of all kinds held. But not many of the young men of Bonesteel and of the farms in the reservation will draw these prizes. For the law says that two people having claims cannot marry and retain both, so the young men who have farms must give them up if they wish to wed a prizewinner.

When the young women—many of them girls who have never seen farms—arrive at this crude little town to take up their abode on their land, far from friends or even associates, they are usually dismayed. After their luggage has been bundled off the train they timidly inquire how far it is to their farms. When told it is thirty or thirty-five miles many of them give way to tears right there.

Out on their farms, lonely and isolated as they are, these young women are making neat homes for themselves. On most of the claims a two-room house and a barn have been built. Lumber has been hard to get and it has been necessary to haul it many miles. So there are no elaborate dwellings. Often the young women bring mother or sister to live with them. Of course, many of them will hire a man to run the farms, but it is equally true that they are all ambitious to learn farming themselves.

One of the "near" farms of the women is located eighteen miles from Bonesteel. It was nearly dark, after a hard ride, before this place was reached. The woman was standing in the doorway of her shack, gazing at the long line of prairie stretching to the horizon and dotted at long intervals with little frame houses like her own.

It seems dull, monotonous and lonely—appallingly lonely. The intense eventide silence of the prairie had settled over the land. A chill wind sighed over the small grass covered hillocks and whined and whistled as if the spirits of the departed Indian braves were sighing for the land which has passed to the palefaces.

The girl walked out as she saw the riders and in her face, too, there seemed to be depicted the joylessness of her surroundings. She was living alone, she said, and was not afraid. B. Mary Carter was her name, and she had been a Missouri schoolteacher.

"In the daytime it is grand," she said, "but in the evening it is so still and the nights are so terribly dark."

In her house was an easy chair, a laden bookcase, a dainty lamp, scores of pictures. It looked even elegant in contrast with the exterior.

In response to a question she laughed. "Married!" she said. "No, I think not. The prince has not come yet, and, besides a prince would not look good in overalls."

AN 8-CENT JOKE

Was Nucleus of Fund That Has Reached $200,000.

Movement to Establish Home For Widows of Drummers.

Eldora, Iowa, May 26.—Eight cents contributed as a joke to buy a Sheldon, Iowa, traveling man a shave at Sioux City, Iowa, four years ago has formed the nucleus for a fund which will build a national home for the widows and orphans of the knights of the grip. The building will be erected in Iowa, inasmuch as the national body bestowed upon the state the privilege in recognition of the planning and promotion of the original scheme. A number of the cities of the state are clamoring for the location of the home, and at the coming meeting of the order, to be held at Cedar Rapids next month, this will be decided. It has been decided to spend at least $200,000 for the establishment of this national home, and, having the patronage of the national association, it will be the pride of every traveling man in the nation.

F. W. Houck of Sheldon is the famed traveling man for whom the original eight pennies were subscribed. Houck struck Sioux City four years ago with a draft of $150 in his pocket and not a penny in money. The fellow-traveling men learned of his predicament early in the day, and, for a joke, paid for the purpose of having some fun at his expense, spread the rumor around at the various hotels that the draft was bogus and that anyone who cashed it would be swindled. The banks and some of the Sioux City stores were also notified and poor Houck found himself unable to obtain money for his draft.

To add to his predicament members of the order suggested that a penny collection be subscribed at the morning session of the state meeting to buy their Sheldon friend a haircut. Eight cents were contributed, and Houck refused to accept the purse and the sum was turned over to the secretary. C. Olmstead, who guarded the 8 cents all through the year, and at the next state meeting laid particular stress in his annual report about the 8 cents "Houck" fund in the treasury. Houck, in a rather bantering manner, told the members of the order, in convention assembled, that the 8 cents was not enough to pay for a haircut and suggested another collection be taken at once. This was done and with a good will many more pennies were added to the Houck fund.

Secretary Olmstead carefully guarded this addition to the fund for another twelve months and then at the annual meeting at Cedar Rapids last year the members became somewhat serious about the fund. It was suggested that the money be used for some good purpose, a basis of a fund for a home. A resolution was presented and adopted to the effect that a delegation be sent to the national meeting, asking that a national home be built in Iowa. The proposition at once met with a hearty and unanimous approval by the national council. A third collection was then taken and this time dollars took the place of pennies, drafts commenced to roll in to Secretary Olmstead and throughout the last year the local lodges over the state have contributed to the Houck fund and now a big deposit is in the hands of the treasurer credited to the national building fund. The traveling men all over the state are enthusiastic over the prospects of a new building in the state and the chief interest at the Cedar Rapids meeting in June will be centered about the location of the home.

CAMPAIGN IS TO BE WAGED

Against Violators of State Food Laws and Milkmen.

St. Paul, May 26.—E. K. Slater, dairy and food commissioner, has decided to wage a campaign against dealers in oleomargarine and renovated butter on the iron range. Mr. Slater has left for Hibbing, where he has one or two cases. It is charged that considerable quantities of renovated butter are sold on the range in violation of the state law. The law requires dealers in imitation butter to label it and also to put a sign in the shop that "renovated butter is for sale."

The commissioner will soon report the results of the investigation into whisky sold on the iron range. Several samples are being analyzed by the state chemist, and if they are found to be impure, prosecutions will follow.

Mr. Slater has announced that he will bring prosecutions against milk dealers in Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul who do not pay their licenses within the next five days. The licenses are due May 1, but under the law the dealers have thirty days in which to make the payments. There are approximately 2,100 milk dealers in Minnesota and only about 1,000 have paid their licenses.

STATE LANDS

On Which Interest Is Due to Be Resold.

St. Paul, May 26.—At the state land sales to be held this fall by State Auditor S. G. Iverson, thousands of acres, the interest on which has not been paid by the original purchasers, will be offered for sale. These lands, many of which are among the most productive tracts in Minnesota, are located in St. Louis, Lake, Todd, Wadena, Wilkin and other counties.

These lands were sold to purchasers who paid 15 per cent down and were given forty years' time on the balance at 4 per cent interest. On many tracts the interest has not been paid for from three to eighteen years, and the state auditor has notified the purchasers that, if they do not pay the interest within two weeks, the tracts will be placed on sale.

GAMES TODAY.
Grand Forks at Fargo.
St. Cloud-Brainerd at Winnipeg.
Duluth at Crookston.

The Duluth White Sox will be given a royal welcome home next Thursday, when the opening game will be played on the home grounds.

The team has been making a record for itself on the present trip and there is now little doubt but that it will come home at the head of the league as it did last year.

President E. H. Kent and the other officials of the league will be in the city for the opening game, and the pennant won last year, will be presented to the champion White Sox.

A forty-foot flag pole will be erected opposite the grand stand and the pennant will be run up on that.

An enthusiastic woman fan has made a beautiful silk flag for the team, and it will also be raised on the opening day.

Mayor Cullum will throw the first ball over the plate and will make an introductory speech in front of the grand stand.

Previous to the game there will be a procession starting from the city hall. The members of the Winnipeg and the Duluth teams, the aldermen, Mayor Cullum and other prominent citizens will occupy seats in the carriages that will be provided. Flaaten's band will head the procession.

The team is proving its strength on the present trip and is well worthy the support of the fans.

The drawing for the automobile, for which tickets are now being sold, will also be made at the opening game.

TIGERS WIN.

Defeat Fargo Term In an Interesting Game.

Fargo, N. D., May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Inability to hit the ball when men were on the base lines was Fargo's worst failing yesterday. Smith had a very bad time in the eighth, where he issued his only pass and this was followed by three safe singles. Fargo got men on the bases in every inning except the fifth and had a total of twelve to die around the circuit. When hits were needed Bond was invincible and the alleged heavy sluggers of Fargo would either thresh the atmosphere or knock out flies.

Grand Forks got busy right off the reel and Varco, the first man to the bat, hit a nice single and reached second on Traeger's boot. He was sacrificed to third by Chandler and scored on Hanrahan's safe one.

Fargo did nothing till the lucky seventh, when with one down, Traeger hit safely and swiped the second corner. Hanrahan booted Mehl's dinky one and Caldwell's error on Rose's grounder let the local manager across the plate. Things looked bright for the locals after tieing the score, but Grand Forks had all the luck when in the eighth the disaster happened to Twirler Smith, scoring a pair of tallies, one of which was earned. Fargo could do nothing with Bond after that and the final score was 3 to 1 in favor of the enemy.

Umpire Long was hit by a foul tip when Donovan was up in the second. His mask was broken and a bad gash cut in his forehead. The blow put him down and out for the count and "Lefty" Hanson of Fargo and Converse of Grand Forks finished the game to the satisfaction of both teams.

Failure to bunt at the proper time lost Fargo the game.

and nobody down, Rose swung in the third and got a long fly to right, both base runners being held. Again in the eighth Donovan led off with a nice single and French doubled him up. In this case the signal was evidently to hit it out for enough runs to tie the score, but the results were just as disastrous.

In the fifth, Spike Anderson attempted to prevent Smith from fielding the ball by throwing his bat, but was nailed and got a roast from the spectators for dirty work. Traeger had three flies in left, all from Pitcher Bond's bat. Donovan's stop of Hanrahan's hot one in the fourth and Mehl's pretty catch of Caldwell's fly in the eighth were the spectacular features.

Manager Traeger had his troubles with the ground balls in left and Shortstop Fitzgerald tried to stand on his ear a couple of times on some fast ones.

TWINS LOSE AGAIN.

Winnipeg Takes First of Series From "St.-Brain."

Winnipeg, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Maroons won an easy game from the St. Cloud-Brainerd aggregation here yesterday. "Lefty" Sporer had the twins shut out up to the ninth inning, when he let up for a moment and one man crossed the plate, after two men were out.

Davidson was batted freely, but the wretched support accorded him was enough to take the heart out of any pitcher.

Tripp, a catcher who has been playing with local nines, was tried out with Winnipeg and made good.

MARKSMEN SHOOT

Duluth Trap Shooters Make Good In Twin Cities.

Policemen Make Good Scores at Revolver Target Practice.

Several members of the Duluth Central Gun club who attended the two days' state tournament held by the Minneapolis Gun club Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, returned yesterday very much pleased with the showing made by the Duluth marksmen. Of the six who went down representing the Central club, all came out even in the matter of winnings, while some of them were several dollars ahead over and above all expenses.

In the team shoot for the state trophy, the Hirshey cup, the Duluth Central Gun club team, comprised of Storey, Loud, Adams, Berry and Nelson, came within three points of winning the prize, finishing with 87 birds to 90 birds by the Minneapolis team, which latter won the cup.

In the individual shooting the Duluth marksmen made an excellent showing. A. W. Loud, shooting under the name of "Noisy," was high man on the second day's shooting, having an average of 181 birds to 180 by Moulton, the next highest. On the two days' shooting Noisy beat Storey out by just one point.

Storey shot with characteristic steadiness during the two days' event and tied the score of Guptil, who won the last year's grand American handicap.

Noisy finished for the two days' shooting with seventh average and Storey with eighth average. The highest average went to Moulton, who finished only nine points ahead of Noisy.

Following are the average individual scores for the two days, on the basis of 400 birds shot at:

Noisy	350
Storey	349
Adams	336
Jackson	315
Nelson	322
Berry	344
Fulton (Superior)	317

ON THE TURF.

Hoi Polloi Wins Juvenile Stakes at Louisville.

Louisville, May 26.—In a terrific drive Hoi Polloi, at 12 to 1, won the Juvenile stakes, the feature event at Churchill Downs, by a nose from Hermitage. The sensation of the day was the defeat of Apple, at 1 to 5, in the last race, by Curate, a 20 to 1 shot. Golden Link, favorite in the steeplechase event, fell at the first jump and Jockey J. Carter's collar bone was broken, his head was injured and he was internally injured, but he probably will recover.

Kansas City, May 26.—Owing to the heavy track, there were so many withdrawals in the fourth and fifth races at Elm Ridge yesterday that both races were declared off and two other races were substituted, Bellindana, second choice in the betting, won the first race after a mild drive from Loretta M, the favorite. Clovcr Hampton was a distant third. Goldie was much the better in the third race and won easily.

St. Louis, May 26.—The feature of the American Jeckey club offering yesterday was a mile race for gentlemen riders. The weights were all equal at 155. Moderator, with Mr. Nichols up, won after a hard finish with Dr. Kier and E. L. Rey.

A heavy rain storm, which lasted for more than an hour, converted the fair ground track into a mud puddle and, under the conditions, the match race between Dishabille and Fireball was postponed. The regular card of six races was run off, Beknighted, 4 to 1, winning the feature, an event at a mile and seventy yards.

WILL KEEP READY

Water Board Orders Endion Pumping Station Put In Condition.

The board of water and light commissioners yesterday afternoon, directed Manager L. N. Case to place the Endion pumping station in readiness for immediate service should it ever be required. This action was deemed necessary by the board because it is felt that the time is not far distant when a duplication of the Lakewood line will be necessary, the idea being that the Endion pumping station should be in readiness to serve temporarily if any difficulties should ever be experienced with the Lakewood line.

Mr. Case reported to the board that with the installation of a new system of valves and pipes the Endion pumps may be kept in motion without discharging any water into the mains. This idea of testing the plant is claimed to be advisable because of the objections that some consumers raise to the taking of water through the Endion pumping station, although a recent chemical analysis of the water showed it to be excellent in quality. The intake pipe is 55 feet below the surface and extends 676 feet out into the lake.

The first consignment of iron pipe for main extensions is expected today. Next Monday the work of laying the Park Point main will begin. The pipe will be laid under the canal piers to the water's edge, after which the department will lay the connections from either side, reserving the work of crossing the canal until the close of navigation.

Richardson & Day, agents for non-resident property owners in Lloyd's addition to Duluth notified the board that their clients would not consent to any plan for the new West Duluth reservoir that will necessitate the occupancy of any portion of the streets by the big tank.

City Engineer McGilvray gave an estimate of the cost of a 5,000,000 gallon reservoir, 20 feet deep, extending into two streets, at $29,000. Another estimate of the cost of a reservoir on land purchased by the city was $44,000, the cost of blasting out the rock in the excavation work for which would be about $24,000. In view of the heavy cost of excavation work the board directed that, subject to the approval of the council and the city attorney, enough more additional land be purchased to obviate the necessity of occupying streets, and so much blasting, the idea being to have a reservoir covering more ground and with less depth than first planned.

MAY GO TO JAIL

People Getting Saucy With Enumerators Liable to Imprisonment.

Work of Taking State Census Will Begin Next Thursday.

R. D. Haven, supervisor of the state census in St. Louis county, left for Tower and Ely today with outfits for the range enumerators. The work of taking the census will be started in all parts of the city and county next Thursday, June 1, and will be completed before the end of the month. Some of the enumerators will require the full thirty days in which to complete their work, while others will get through in less time than this, all depending upon the size of the districts they have to handle and the difficulties they have to contend with.

Included in each outfit is a book of instructions. These instructions take up several pages. Those of the most interest to the general public pertain to the penalties which may be levied for failure to comply with the requests of the enumerator. The individual is a personage of some importance when engaged in his official duties, and it behooves the people with whom he comes in contact to treat him with consideration and respect, and to do what they can to assist him in his work, otherwise they may find themselves in trouble, with a jail sentence facing them, provided their offense be serious enough. It will not pay to "get saucy" with the men who have been appointed to see that the census of the great commonwealth of Minnesota is correctly taken. The legislature has enacted laws for their help and protection.

For example, if the head of the house is not at home when the enumerator calls, the person next in importance, who is at home, is supposed to give all necessary information, provided such person is more than 20 years of age. Failure to do this may land the person, either man or woman, in the county jail, if the enumerator feels inclined to press the case and to report the unwillingness of the offender to the higher authorities. If this is done the unwilling one is liable to imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than sixty days. If no one is at home the enumerator has a right to get such information as he can from the nearest neighbor, and is supposed to receive courteous treatment at the hands of the latter.

Provision is also made for punishing the enumerator if he does not live up to his instructions in all particulars, or if he in any way falsifies, or attempts to falsify, his accounts of the number of people in his district. If such an offense he proved against him he is guilty of a misdemeanor, and is liable to ninety days' imprisonment in the county jail. If his work is not satisfactory, those higher in authority have the right to revoke his commission at any time they may see fit.

In the cities of Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis the enumerator must make a daily report of his work to the supervisor of census, and the supervisor is supposed to report once each week to P. E. Hanson, superintendent of census, at St. Paul. Daily reports will be required from none but the enumerators in the three leading cities of the state.

BAND CONCERT AT OATKA.

Splendid Concert Arranged For Sunday Afternoon.

Park point is gaining every year in popularity, and this summer promises to outdo anything ever attempted in the past. The refreshing lake breezes, mixed with the healthful breath from the pines, concerts, boating, the aerial bridge and the new comfortable double truck cars will all unite to make Park Point the summer resort for Duluthians.

Sunday, May 28, will be the opening of the regular Sunday afternoon concerts by LaBrosse's Military band. It has always been Mr. LaBrosse's policy to please his patrons, and this season will be no exception. The band will be as it was last season, under the direction of Otto Muhlbaur and will have as a special feature George H. Sumner, solo cornetist, late of Springfield, Mass., who played with some of the most renowned organizations in the East. Don't forget next Sunday's "first concert."

DAME NATURE HINTS

When the Food Is Not Suited.

When nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food; the old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried all kinds of breakfast foods, but they were all soft, starchy messes, which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods and use Postum Coffee and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have any headaches. I have gained twelve pounds in weight and feel better in every way. Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum Coffee is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

JUDGE PARKER MAKES SPEECH

At Chicago on "The Lawyer In Public Affairs."

Chicago, May 26.—Judge Alton B. Parker of New York addressed the Illinois State Bar association at the Chicago Beach hotel today on "The Lawyer in Public Affairs."

Judge Parker was greeted by hearty applause as he arose to speak. After returning thanks for the cordiality of his reception, he said, in part:

"While we inherit from the mother country the great rights and functions which have inhered to the bar, we have in this, as in many other respects, bettered upon the original teaching. In England, even at the present time, division between barrister and solicitor is so sharp that only the former is eligible to any judicial offices other than those of the most insignificant character. But, in practice, the distinction is carried still further. All the great offices of the British cabinet—administrative as well as legal—have, until the last few years, been looked upon as the special privilege of the barrister. It was a great surprise, almost a shock, when, a few years ago, a single solicitor was able, by reason of great ability and conspicuous service, both to his profession and to politics, to attain cabinet rank. Even this experiment, has not since been repeated. So that, in British politics, the barrister still retains the dominant position that tradition and long wont had conferred upon him. But, in this country, every post, not only that which is the incident of his profession, but that belonging to his country, is open to the lawyer. The door of opportunity is so wide open to all, that the obligation has been as widely distributed as is the authority which created it.

"As a natural corollary of this freedom, so careful has been the preparation of men for the bar, so effective has been their training and the discipline after they have entered upon the practice, so keen and intelligent has been their interest in public questions and so high the character that if, upon a given day, the president of the United States should receive the resignation of every judge of all the federal courts, of every member of his cabinet and all other officials the performance of whose duties required a legal training, he could fill their places with full regard to the interests of the public service, and with popular acceptance, without drawing a single appointee from any one of the great centers of population.

"In other words, what is sometimes known as the country lawyer, is so well grounded in his profession, so completely a student of his country, so deeply interested and so well instructed in its politics, and of such high character, that, by intelligent selection, it would be possible to carry out such a plan in its completeness and with safety. Nothing could speak better for the modesty and reserve of the lawyer, or show more thoroughly how sound are the foundations of our legal training or the safety of the conditions which inhere in our life and society."

Judge Parker and Governor Deneen will respond to toasts at the association's annual banquet at the Chicago Beach hotel this evening.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Highway Robbery Case Dismissed By Court at Aberdeen.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—In circuit court the case against Gust Walter, charged with highway robbery, was dismissed on a technicality, the defendant's attorneys raising the point that he had been tried and fined for petty larceny for the same offense, and under the South Dakota statutes, providing that a man could not be twice placed in jeopardy for the same offense, he could not be tried for the greater crime.

R. L. Kirk, who recently resigned as principal of the high school, has been induced to remain, the board of education agreeing to increase his salary to $1,250.

George B. Narregang of this city secured the contract for the erection of two brick business buildings on Main street for B. C. Lamont. One will be a two-story structure and the other one-story. The contract price is $8,224.

Sioux Falls—Judge Carland late Wednesday afternoon dismissed the complaint in the case instituted by Fremont Hill against the officers and directors of the South Dakota Central Railroad company, an independent concern which constructed a line between this city and Colton.

Hill claimed to be a resident of New Jersey and sought to have a receiver appointed for the company. The defense was able to show that the plaintiff, when applying for a marriage license in this city some months ago, swore that his residence was in Minnehaha county, S. D., and Judge Carland dismissed the suit on the ground of lack of jurisdiction.

The ambition of Bishop O'Gorman and Father Nolan for the erection in this city of a Catholic parochial school is about to be realized. Catholics have just awarded the contract for the erection of such a school on the church grounds. It will be three stories, with basement, and on the ground will be 80x60 feet in size.

A marriage which resulted from a newspaper advertisement has just been dissolved by Judge Jones. The principals were John Henry Ryan, an eccentric and wealthy resident of Sioux Falls, and a widow who was formerly a resident of Davenport, Iowa. The woman answered an advertisement which Ryan had placed in a local daily newspaper. Although Mrs. Ryan applied for the divorce, the decree was granted to Ryan, who is not required to pay alimony.

Preparations are being completed by the members of Granite Lodge No. 18, Knights of Pythias, for the entertainment of the grand lodge of the order which will convene in Sioux Falls on June 7. The visiting knights will be given an informal reception and smoker on Tuesday evening, June 6. The evening of the 7th the visitors will be guests at an entertainment, and the following evening there will be a reception and ball.

It has been discovered by William Fitzgerald, a liveryman, that it is an infraction of the United States statutes to place slugs or imitation lead coins in automatic cigar machines. Fitzgerald has been held for appearance before the next Federal grand jury. Until his arrest it was not generally known that there is a special United States statute protecting vending machines.

Pierre—Governor Elrod has appointed as game wardens J. R. Cruson of Custer, for Custer county; H. H. Callard of Mitchell for Davison county; James G. Bump of Rapid City, for Pennington county; George Deindorfer of Wessington Springs, for Jerauld county.

Belle Fourche—Artesian well-drillers in this vicinity report finding the artesian flow at from 900 to 1,000 feet, and several wells are being sunk. This ought to be evidence of the possibility of securing the artesian flow in the high country between Pierre and the Black Hills.

Clark—The Jackson case is probably one of the most stubbornly fought cases in the history of the county. Dr. Yates was called and his will probably finish the states' rebuttal testimony. The defense examined twenty witnesses. Dr. Ramsey, the defendant's physician, was on the stand about six hours. The case commands immense interest, the courtroom being packed at both day and evening sessions.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Starkweather—Earl Grant of Hurricane Lake, Benson county, shot a chicken hawk of large size, and found a wire wound around the bird's body, which held a small purse under one wing. In the purse was a piece of paper, yellow with age, upon which was written. "Berkshire, England, July 8, 1856. Finder return to Lord St. Clair and receive a large reward.

Wahpeton—At a meeting attended by members of the Science school board, the Red River Valley university building committee, and a committee from the Commercial club, an agreement was reached by which the science school will lease the university building, the debts of the latter institution will be paid and the citizens of Wahpeton reimbursed in part for money given the Methodist school.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the university at Fargo last week, it was voted to close the school here and establish a Wesley college at Grand Forks. After this decision, the creditors of the school, whose claims amount to about $20,000, began to figure out ways and means of getting their money. The assets of the university consist of the building, furniture and about seventy acres adjoining the city. The property cost about $60,000, but the building is worth little or nothing except for school purposes.

The science school has never had a building, and no funds are available with which it can buy, but an agreement was reached by which the building will be leased for two years, and if an appropriation is made by the legislature two years hence the building and fifteen acres will be bought for the amount of the present indebtedness plus 6 per cent interest.

The remaining fifty-five acres are to be deeded to the city and the proceeds from it used for building a library, gymnasium or city hall.

Jamestown—C. M. Gorman, former agent of the Soo Railway company at Courtenay, was arrested on the charge of selling intoxicating liquors contrary to the law. The report is current that the Soo company was instumental in securing his arrest, and that he was warned against permitting the sale of liquors; also that the company's detective secured the necessary evidence which led to the arrest.

Since the trial in the United States district court last fall of the government case against the Western Express company, and the evident intention of the authorities of the state to enforce the law regarding the sales of liquor through express agents, the Soo company has stopped traffic of this kind.

The Northern Pacific has commenced the erection of a bridge across the James river at this place.

BUTTER IS LOWER

Increased Receipts of Grass Butter, Brings Lower Prices.

Rains Affect Strawberry Receipts—Other Michigan Street News.

Increased receipts of grass butter during the week have forced the price down several notches, and it is now the lowest it has been for several months.

The price is not expected to go much lower than it is at the present time, as storing will be commenced if any further decline in price is likely to result from the heavy receipts.

The creamery prints are now quoted at 23 cents, the dairies at from 18 to 20 cents and the renovated at 20 cents.

The butter market is very active at the present time, with a heavy demand from dealers who have been waiting for lower prices to stock up.

• • •

Eggs are firm at 16 cents. The receipts continue very heavy, but the demand is keeping pace with it, and any surplus supply is being placed in cold storage by the dealers.

No decline in the price is looked for by the dealers, although it may weaken a point or so.

• • •

The cheese market continues very firm. Receipts are light, and a fairly good demand keeps the price at the high mark which has been quoted for several weeks past. Wisconsin flats are quoted at 15 cents, and the No. 1 brick cheese at 15½ cents.

• • •

Continued rains in Arkansas and Southern Missouri have made the week an unsatisfactory one in the strawberry trade. Lower prices were looked for this week, but the rains have materially interferred with the shipments of berries, and the receipts have been lighter than usual. The result is that the market is firm and a little higher than last week.

The berries that are being received are of an excellent grade. The Missouri crop, which will be on the market next week, is reported to be very large and of a fine quality, and the dealers state that from reports they have received, the berries coming in next week will be finer than any that have yet been seen on the Duluth market this year.

If the rains in the South are over, the price should drop to 10 cents or perhaps three boxes for a quarter next week.

• • •

The large size, California, naval oranges will be out of the market after next week. Owing to the approach of the warm weather the dealers are cleaning up their stocks of the large, thick skinned oranges, and will handle chiefly the smaller, thin skinned, seedlings and Mediteranean sweets.

The stock of these varieties which has been received up to the present time, is of a high grade.

• • •

The apple market is very firm, and is advancing each week. New York state, cold storage Baldwins are now about the only high grade apples on the market. They are quoted at from $3.75 to $4 per barrel.

• • •

Messina lemons are reported to be scarce this year, and were it not for the fact that California is reported to have a large crop, the prices might be expected to advance. As it is the market is firm at $2.75 for the Californias, and $3.50 for the Messinas.

• • •

The trade in green vegetables is one of the features of the market this week. There is a steady and increasing demand for all kinds of Southern vegetables, and as the season advances lower prices may be expected.

New potatoes are now cutting some figure in the market. They have fallen under the $2 mark, being quoted at from $1.90 to $2 per bushel, and within the next two weeks a further decline may be expected. As yet the demand for them is small, but if the price declines during the next two weeks as it has done during the last two weeks, they will replace the old stock to a large extent.

The principal demand at the present time for the old potatoes is for seeding purposes, and the market in them is very dull at 28 cents.

• • •

Some Belgian hot house grapes were imported into Duluth last week, and are now for sale at some of the local groceries. They are not likely to cut much figure in the grocery business, however, as they are quoted at $1.50 per pound.

• • •

Lovers of tomatoes will be able to gratify their taste from this time forward. The price, while hardly within reach of the average purse as yet, is nevertheless at a point where it may be considered as a possible purchase for the Sunday dinner. The Florida tomatoes are quoted at from 45 to 50 cents a basket.

• • •

All other green vegetables, such as beets, beans, celery, lettuce and radishes are plentiful and the price a little lower than last week.

• • •

No change has taken place in the poultry market during the week. The trade is chiefly in hens, and geese and ducks are practically out of the market for the present. Hens are quoted at 16 cents a pound.

• • •

Meat prices are also practically unchanged from last week, with the exception of veal, which is a trifle firmer.

• • •

Business in all lines is reported good, along Michigan street. The warmer weather has brought a revival in trade, and the houses have all assumed their regular summer air of activity.

NEW BANKS STARTED

By the Kansas Farmers at a Very Rapid Rate.

Seem to Be Itching to Establish Small Banks.

Topeka, Kas., May 26.—"Almost anybody can start a bank in Kansas now," said Capt. W. S. Albright, who has just retired from the state bank commissionership and become a deputy in the office.

"A man of reputable stading, with $200, can easily organize a $10,000 state bank almost anywhere. The farmers will furnish the rest of the capital. In fact, they will furnish all of it if necessary and give a man who promotes the enterprise the cashiership at a good fat salary. Money is so plentiful that the farmers seem to be itching to establish small banks.

"A short time ago a young man came into the office and said he wanted to start a bank in a certain little Kansas town," continued the captain. "I asked him how much money he had. He said he didn't have any. I asked him about his backing. He said he didn't know a soul in the locality where he proposed to start a bank. He had some letters from a friend of his to a couple of business men in the town.

"I figured that he would have a hard time making a go of the enterprise without any money of his own, or any acquaintance with the people. In a few days I received an application for a charter for his bank. He had skirmished up $10,000 capital among the farmers. He went to the little town, got the two business men to give him a list of the prominent farmers, and he soon rounded up enough to start in business. Not a single farmer knew him, but they were so anxious to branch out as stockholders of a bank that they were against his game; and his bank has started out well."

Another thing that stumps the banking department is the fact that the establishment of a new bank never runs down the deposits of the old banks in a neighborhood. The new banks get a new line of capital and deposits. It must be money that is hidden. At least it doesn't come out of other banks.

"While there is no way of getting at the figures," said Capt. Albright, "I believe there is as much money hidden in socks and under carpets, or buried or carried, as there is in the banks. The deposits of the state and national banks exceed $100,000,000 in Kansas. This means, if I am right in my conclusions, that there is $200,000,000 of cash in the state, or about $140 per capita."

Two years ago the legislature passed a law fixing the minimum capital of state banks at $10,000. Prior to that, the minimum was $5,000. The same law gave all $5,000 banks two years in which to increase their capital to $10,000. At that time there were 169 $5,000 banks in the state. They have all increased their capital as required by law. Today there is not a $5,000 state bank in Kansas. And the remarkable thing is that more than 50 per cent of those banks increased their capital from the surplus fund. In other words, aside from paying the usual 6 per cent dividends on old stock, they had made enough to issue a stock dividend to double their capital. Not a single small bank went out of business as a result of the law.

New banks are being organized rapidly. Thirty-one have been established since Jan. 1. Twelve more have been chartered and are waiting for the state bank commissioner to institute them.

INDIAN WOMAN INFLUENTIAL

Is Highly Educated and Has Good Business Judgment.

Holdenville, I. T., May 26.—Mrs. A. B. Davis, a Seminole woman who is assisting the government enrolling party at Wewoka to enroll Seminole babies, is one of the most influential women of the tribe, and her advice and counsel is heeded by them almost as sacredly as is that of John Brown, who was recently elected governor of the nation. She is a highly educated woman and has keen business judgment. Her home is at Sassawka and she has two little sons who are natural musicians.

Several months ago Mrs. Davis accompanied a party of Seminole Indians to Mexico, and among the party was Halputta, the chief, who died since their return. It was mainly on his account that the trip was taken at the time it was, in hopes of benefiting his health, and on his account the party returned sooner than it was intended, and it was but a short time after their return that his death occurred.

Mrs. Davis speaks in glowing terms of that country, and says that while the party left snow and ice here in February, when they arrived in Mexico everything was spring-like. It has not yet been fully decided as to whether a Mexican colony will be organized or not.

The Indians there are blanket Indians, and, in speaking of her trip, Mrs. Davis said: "We arrived at a little station about sundown and had to take the stage for our final destination. It was about 9 o'clock when we arrived there and the Indians were holding some sort of a ceremony, sitting around a big fire. It looked very weird and was not a little interesting. During our visit they had a sort of feast, and all sat around a big bowl containing some kind of gruel, and they all ate out of one big ladle or spoon. Our party, however, was not included in this, but later we were served with a nice meal. I enjoyed the trip immensely, but on acount of Halputta's condition, and feeling in a measure responsible for others of the party, was anxious to get home. It was about two weeks after that Halputta died.

URIC ACID GRAVEL

IS CAUSED BY THE KIDNEYS BEING UNABLE TO CARRY THE POISONOUS WASTE MATTERS OUT OF THE BLOOD.

The urine of persons suffering from uric acid or gravel is generally scanty, and after it has stood awhile, a reddish, sediment like brick dust forms in it. In advanced stages the uric acid sometimes appears as fine sand, or large crystals.

Those who pass gravel in any considerable quantity are usually troubled with inflammation of the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs, sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, gout and rheumatism.

CURED BY WARNER'S SAFE CURE.

"I have used Safe Cure for chills caused by uric acid poison in my system and I have been perfectly cured. It has done for me what I have never known any other medicine to do. It cures people in the South who suffer much from malaria, which always affects the kidneys. If all the doctors would prescribe Safe Cure instead of quinine, for cases of malaria, there would be less bad after effects, as quinine does not remove the disease germs from the system like Safe Cure. I take 'Safe Pills' when I need a gentle laxative."—Mrs. M. E. DEAN, Treas. Lotus club, Chattanooga, Tenn.

THIS TEST WILL TELL:

Put some urine in a glass or bottle. After it has stood 24 hours, if it is cloudy, or contains a reddish-brown sediment, or if particles float about in it your kidneys are diseased and unable to do their work, and if not attended to at once Bright's Disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gout, uric acid, inflammation of the bladder, gallstones or urinary troubles will develop and prove fatal in a short time.

Safe Cure is the only absolutely safe and certain cure for all these forms of kidney, liver and blader diseases. It is purely vegetable, free from harmful drugs found in so-called kidney cures, contains no sediment and is pleasant to take.

For sale at all drug stores, or direct, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

ANALYSIS FREE.

If after making this test you have any doubt as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine to the medical Department, Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and our doctors will analyze it and send you a report, with advice and medical booklet, free.

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES AND IMITATIONS

They are worthless and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it will cure you.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

CURIOUS COLLECTION

Is Reported By a Missionary In Korea.

New York, May 26.—A curious church collection is reported by the Rev. Graham Lee, a missionary of the Presbyterion foreign board at Lew Chun, Korea. He is telling of a training class for native workers held in the place named. At one session of the class the topic was "Our Debt to the Heathen." A number of the natives spoke to their fellows on the subject and afterwards there was a collection not of money or goods, but a collection of days of gratuitous preaching. Mr. Lee writes: "The first man contributed fifteen days; fifteen days that he would go about preaching the Gospel to the heathen. Others followed, almost as fast as their names could be recorded. The least time offered was four days; the most one hundred and fifty. The collection amounted, in all, to six hundred and twenty-five days; almost two years. It will have far greater effect on the people than would the work of one paid worker for two years." There were seven hundred members of the class reported by the Rev. Mr. Lee, and all the expenses of the class were borne by the natives themselves.

EX-EMPRESS EUGENIE

Takes Great Delight In Shopping In Paris.

Paris, May 26.—Few persons lead a quieter and more thoroughly unconventional life than the ex-Empress Eugenia and her guests, Princess Henry of Battenberg and her daughter, at present staying at the former's beautiful villa in Cap Martin. Shopping is the great delight of all three, and teh other day the empress was observed standing examining attentively the wares displayed in a jeweler's window in Mentone, and at last she exclaimed: "I must have that beautiful cross for Ena!" She is quite devoted to her pretty, golden-haired namesake. Naturally there are many meetings between Princess Henry of Battenberg and her daughter and their cousins of Saxe-Coburg. Princess Victoria Melita and Princess Beatrice are constantly out motoring, the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia acting as their chauffeur.

Tuxedo Park, N. Y., May 26.—The marriage of Miss Griselda Volston Hull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Hull, to Capt. Hobson, was best man.

YERBA MATE FEEDS BRAIN

It Also Soothes the Nerves and Prevents Hunger.

Washington, May 26.—Yerba Mate, the South American tea, is just now attracting the attention of Uncle Sam, and the herb may be introduced into this country as a substitute for ordinary tea and coffee. Yerba mate is a food as well as a stimulant, and its praises are sung by many of our consuls, who were asked to tell the department of commerce all about it.

"Its medicinal action," writes Consul Flagg, from Rosario, Argentine, "is to arrest the rapid consumption of tissue and the consequent feeling of weariness that comes from excessive labor of mind or body. It certainly does prevent hunger.

"The Paraguayan retires to sleep after having eaten his heaviest meal, and in the morning he takes no breakfast, as we understand it, nothing but yerba mate, and on that alone works till nearly midday, doing his hardest work of the day.

"All of us may be subject to demands upon brain or body when both are more or less exhausted. If we take alcohol, there is danger of acquiring a bad habit; if we take coffee, there is danger of bringing about a bilious attack, and tea, though less dangerous, still has its victims; but here is a plant that millions of human beings resort to every day, and yet it is rare that one can find a person injured by its use."

It is said that more than 20,000,000 people in South America drink mate daily. It promotes digestion, soothes the nerves and gives activity to the brain.

The jury in the case of Joseph Johnson, who on April 8, shot and killed John H. Fox, a prominent citizen, in the lobby of the postoffice at Trinidad, Colo., returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. The death penalty applies.

The supreme assembly, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, now in sixth biennial convention at Indianapolis, decided to hold the next national encampment of the uniform rank in New Orleans, in September, 1906.

A severe wind storm struck the oil field at Humble, Texas, Thursday afternoon, wrecking a number of derricks. One of the flying timbers struck Mrs. Campbell and injured her badly; her son was also struck and died from his injuries shortly after.

Sheriff Poll was shot and instantly killed Thursday night at Ironton, Mo., while attempting to make an arrest. Bill Spaugh, whom he was trying to place in custody, disappeared and is being sought on the charge of having shot the officer.

While returning to his home at Trenton, S. C., in a carriage, Senator Benjamin R. Tillman was driven over an embankment and painfully injured, sustaining two ugly cuts on the top of his head and was otherwise bruised. His daughters, who accompanied him, were unhurt.

Consequent upon the fact that Cashier Kahn of the Oakdale bank of Stockton, Cal., shot himself, the directors of the institution of which Thomas B. Dorsey is the president, have suspended business indefinitely. The state bank commissioners have been sent for. The condition of the cashier, which is somewhat improved, is still precarious.

WORKMEN'S COTTAGES

At $1.25 a Week Planned In London.

London, May 26.—The alluring prospect for the London workingman of having a cottage in the country at a rental of $1.25 a week, and within an 8-cent return journey of the city, may soon be realized at Feltham, one of the most charmingly situated districts in Middlesex.

It is the Feltham district council which has undertaken to grapple with the question, and they have decided to draft new building bylaws which will enable them to achieve this object.

Though the council is almost unanimously in favor of the general scheme, there is considerable difference of opinion as to whether the cottages should be constructed of brick or corrugated iron. It is felt that if iron buildings are permitted, they must be limited to certain areas, or otherwise they will depreciate existing property.

FIREMAN LOSES LEG

In Collision at the Burt-Poole Mine.

Hibbing, Minn., May 26.—John Flynn, aged 28 years, employed by Porter Bros., stripping conractors at the Burt-Poole mine, as fireman on a dinky engine, was caught between his engine and an ore car yesterday and sustained a crushed leg which it was found necessary to amputate. He is now at the Rood hospital and his condition is said to be serious. Ray Westaway, of Duluth, the engineer, was also injured in the collision but not seriously. He will go to his home to rest for a time before resuming work.

James Carney, employed at the Morris mine, while at work yesterday, was caught in the machinery of one of the shovels and his foot was badly lacerated, the tendons being torn and a few of the smaller bones broken.

RATHBONE

Is Again Back In the Postal Service.

Denver, May 26.—After having been sentenced to from three to eleven years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $102,947, Estes G. Rathbone, former fourth assistant postmaster general and director of posts in Cuba, is again in the employ of the postoffice, according to a report current here. Rathbone left for the East yesterday, after paying an official visit to this city and checking up the books of the postoffice here.

Inquiry at Washington, however, failed to bring any confirmation of the report that Rathbone has been given a place with the postoffice department.

TRAGEDY AT WHEATON.

Young Man Dead and Girl Badly Wounded.

Wheaton, Minn., May 26.—A young man named Herman Speff, from Cokato, working near here for Mrs. Deal and a young girl, about 15 years old, named Sidensticker, whose father resides near here, were found three miles south of here, near the railway tracks, yesterday afternoon, the young man being dead, having been shot in the mouth with a revolver and the girl seriously wounded with two or three bullets in the abdomen. The girl is still alive and claims that she had killed the man and shot herself and that she wished to die, as they had decided to die together. She borrowed the revolver from a hardware store here yesterday forenoon. It seems to be a complicated love affair.

SHE FACED DEATH DAILY

To Please Her Father and "Amuse" the Public.

Paris, May 26.—"The Whirlwind of Death" was not long in justifying its title. "Le Tcurbillon de la Mort" is a development of "looping the loop" idea; a vehicle, a little motor car for choice, with machinery removed, coasts down an inclined plane. At the foot of the incline the plane tilts up rather suddenly, the car is shot forward, mounts in the air, turns a somersault, coming down on its four wheels on another plane farther on, where it is stopped.

As you may guess, a human being is placed in the car; and, to make the spectacle still more taking, the occupant is a young woman.

Every evening at the Casino de Paris Mlle. Marcelle Randal shot "le tourbillon de la mort." On stopping she untied herself and stepped out to make her bow to the public. She fainted twice in the course of a few days, and had to be untied by those near her and lifted out. But the more distant spectators never suspected how much she suffered and could not see below the deceptive rouge on her cheeks.

They had seen her advertised as an Iphignia who risked her life every evening for a motive of filial affection. To some degree this was true. Her father, an old man, poor and broken-down in health, had invented this "tourbillon de la mort," but could not find anyone who would risk it for a season for less than $25,000.

The daughter, who had supported her father, said one day that she would do it. He had such utter faith in his discovery, as he called it, that he accepted her offer, and, when she recoiled, persuaded her. She had a terrible misgiving on taking her seat in the motor for the first time, and at the close of the somersault fainted outright, and was taken for dead. Then she steeled her nerves and fainted only twice since then until the last "trip" last week. But her health visibly ran down, and she confessed that she hated the horrid thing, and felt unutterable disgust at the public, which seemed worse to her than the negroes of savage, wild Africa.

The most trying moment was when the car left the ground. Just then a powerful spring, acting on the back wheels, was released to bring about the dreadful somersault. Every time her neck bumped against the back of the car, and she wondered if the experience was like being guillotined. Sometimes the shock was intolerable, sometimes it was bearable.

But a moral or nervous state had been induced that was worse than any physical pain. She died a hundred deaths between the trips. This is the state of gymnasts who, when muscle is giving way, have to perform desperate trapeze leaps. They now say that Mlle. Randal had a weak heart. Possibly. But she must have had a noble spirit.

SMASHED INTO KINDLING WOOD

Trolley Car Hit By Coal Car—Two Dead, Many Injured.

Augusta, Ga., May 26.—Two men were killed, one fatally injured, two probably fatally and three slightly injured in a collision last night between a passenger trolley and a Louisville & Nashville coal car on the Augusta-Aiken railway in a stretch of woods some miles from Augusta on the South Carolina side of the Savannah river.

The dead:

J. E. HOLMAN, motorman.

FELIX BODDIE, employe of the railway, who was riding with the motorman.

The injured: A. D. Hill, conductor, skull fractured, will die; C. W. Cheatham, McCormick, S. C., head and chest smashed, will die; A. W. Roberts, head cut, arm and leg broken, may die; S. W. Long, Troy, S. C., head injured, badly bruised; Calaude Alkinson, injuries not serious; A. E. Kearns, Knoxville, Tenn., head and leg bruised, not serious.

The accident occurred at the foot of a steep grade near Clearwater, S. C. The coal car which was being conveyed to the power house, broke away from the motor car at the top of the hill and swept downward for several hundred yards, acquiring such momentum that when it collided with the passenger car returning to Augusta it ground the lighter car almost into kindling wood.

Physicians were sent from here in a special car and the injured were brought to this city, where they were transferred to the city hospital.

PREFERRED DEATH

To Taking Drink of Medicine With Brandy.

La Porte, Ind., May 26.—Aaron S. Vail, prominent Indiana prohibitionist and well known member of an old Quaker family, is dead of pneumonia, though the attending physician states that his refusal to take medicine that contained brandy, which had been prescribed, was the underlying cause of death.

Three weeks ago Mr. Vail, who owned a large sawmill, was injured by the buzzsaw coming off the shaft and striking him in the back. The right shoulder blade was sawed through, six ribs were cut off, and the right lung was horribly mutilated. It was then not expected that the injured man would live twenty-four hours, but he survived the shock and was in a fair way to recovery when he discovered that he was being given liberal quantities of brandy. He rebelled and refused to take any kind of medicine that contained brandy. Complications set in, pneumonia developed, and the doctor told him that unless he took the medicine prescribed he could not hope for recovery. So strong was his prohibition principles, however, that he absolutely refused, though he knew that it meant death. He was 50 years old and wealthy.

INDIANA FEUD

Is Due to a Mixture of Politics and Whisky.

Terror Reigns In the Little Town of Wallace.

Wallace, Ind., May 26.—A bitter feud, arising through the joint agency of whisky and politics, may lead to staining with blood the streets and highways of this little town. Neighbors are shooting at neighbors and old-time friends are throwing missiles through the windows of each others' homes. The outlook for peace is anything but bright.

For two years the state and county papers have been publishing accounts of attempts on the lives and property of citizens living in Wallace and nereabout. It is becoming a frequent pastime to fire shots from ambush. There are citizens here who dare not venture from their homes after nightfall unless heavily armed. And wnisky and politics are the cause of it all.

Wallace, with its population of 200, is well known to the older folk of Indiana. It is familliarly called "Jackville," an abbreviation of its old name, Jacksonville. During the term of Governor Wallace there were two towns of Jacksonville in Indiana and the postoffice authorities named this little Fountain county town Wallace in honor of the governor. But, to the old inhabitants, it remained "Jackville," and as such made a history for itself.

"Jackville" was made the center of a recent story by James B. Elmore, known as "The Bard of Alamo," and last summer, during the first visit to Wallace after the story appeared, he was the victim of an outburst of public indignation. Rotten eggs were thrown at him and he hurriedly left the town.

"Jackville" has always been called tough. It was for the purpose of washing away that stain that a number of the better citizens of the town began a crusade on the saloons here five years ago. They wished "Jackville" to be called Wallace, and to have their town respected instead of abhorred for its "general cussedness." And in seeking the respect they met the opposition of the disturbing, or whisky, element. The whisky fight became a political fight, and now Wallace has a feud.

Five years ago a physician named C. A. Caplinger moved into Wallace from Parke county. Dr. Caplinger is a firm believer in law and order and, soon after his arrival here, he expressed to some of the more timid citizens a determination to clean out the bad element in Wallace.

He gradually gathered encouragement from the peace seekers and began a fight on the saloons and "blind tigers" that were running in the town in defiance of law. The liquor interests opposed him, but by hard work he succeeded in securing enough signatures on a remonstrance to prevent the granting of a saloon license to an applicant who appeared before the county commissioners at Covington.

The saloon element swore vengeance. A gang of toughs began making things disagreeable for Dr. Caplinger and the other anti-license citizens. The town marshal manifested no desire to prevent disturbances. Made desperate by the conduct of the toughs, Dr. Caplinger appeared before the town board and asked that he be appointed marshal. The board readily acquiesced, and from that moment he was called "The Fighting Doctor."

Caplinger donned the badge of authority and began making things warm for the gang. He also held the saloons that remained in Wallace under his hand. About the time that he was made marshal the saloon men filed applications for renewal of license. The anti-saloon element, headed by the town marshal, defeated them with remonstrances.

Then the defeated saloon keepers started "blind tigers." One of them opened a pool and billiard hall and ran his "tiger" in the basement. An elaborate system of signs and passwords was invented by the proprietor to prevent any person except those "in good standing" getting access to his basement.

"The Fighting Doctor" went boldly to his task of breaking up the secluded barrooms. The harder he fought, the more bitter became the feeling against him and his allies. Finally the "blind tigers" closed, and Dr. Caplinger was practically in possession of the cups of Wallace.

But the closing of the saloons did not end the feeling that grew out of the fight; in fact, the hatred for the anti-saloon element seems to be growing. So serious has the situation become that Dr. Caplinger, in order to gain a stronger hold on the reins of law, has resigned as marshal and obtained appointment as justice of the peace. He had one of his friends appointed marshal.

"I am going to break up this lawlessness," declares Dr. Caplinger, "if I have to sacrifice everything that I possess. The toughs of Wallace can't bulldoze me. They must be decent or go to jail. I don't care for their threats. If they dance they will have to pay the fiddler, and the fiddler will be the school fund, to which the fines go."

AMERICAN ENGINEER

Caught By Wife at Tryst With Sister.

Budapest, May 26.—An American engineer, Joseph Bulls by name, employed in the large iron works at Breslau, came to Budapest a few days ago, took a room at the best hotel, and told the porter that a veiled lady in black, who would ask for him, must be shown to his room.

In a short time a cab drove up and a young woman answering the description asked for Mr. Bulls. She was shown to his room. A few minutes later another cab drove up and a second woman in black, also veiled, and bearing an extraordinary resemblance in figure, voice and manner to the first, also asked to be shown to his room. The porter hesitated but dared not refuse and she soon disappeared behind the engineer's door.

Then a frightful noise was heard, the engineer rushed from the room and down the stairs into the street without even a hat. He jumped into a cab and drove away.

Meantime waiters and maids entered the room and found the two women in black fighting viciously. The police arrived and ascertained that the women were sisters, one of whom was Mrs. Bulls. She was suspicious, and, by close surveillance, she succeeded in finding out that he had a rendezvous at Budapest. She followed him hither and discovered him with her sister.

When the women had cooled down the disappearance of their one man gave them such a shock that they joined forces and drove about in an open carriage together to look for him. They discovered him dining outside a fashionable restaurant. There was a reconciliation on the spot and they all left Budapest together after the husband bought both women new bonnets.

RUSSIAN WOMEN

Are Spending More Than Ever In Dress.

Paris, May 26.—Do not imagine that the war has restricted the outlet for Paris fashions on the banks of the Neva. It has created a demand for them on the banks of the Sungari and at Vladivostok.

There are ladies, as well as rich officers and generals, at the seat of war. Prince Kilkoff refused to let Prince Leopold of Prussia take with him to the Far East 500 trunks and boxes filled with clothing, perfumery, and other small luxuries, but he has not interfered with the consignments of finery for these ladies.

Paris' most fashionable forewoman says that the house she serves is hardly able to execute the orders that have crowded on it since the war began. The luxury of the underskirts and robes de chambre is, another forewoman tells me, greater than ever.

Grand duchesses could not, of course, lag behind cafe concert singers and such like, and womanfully keep up the ball of Paris rolling at St. Petersburg. The absence of the empress dowager and the domestic event in the family of Constantine Constantnovitch does not affect the modes, though the Sergius tragedy has banished for a short time gay colors from elegant assemblies.

The long feet-hiding skirts remain modish. The "smoking" and "trotteur" tailor-made suits are no exception, save when the wearers prefer convenience and a straightforward walk to the concealment of boots or shoes, and a shuffling stumbling gait.

Antoine and Humbert have now a place for smoking garments for women, which just now are the thing here. Women take to cigarettes just as an excuse for wearing them.

Duchet obtained the order for the dresses of M. Henriette and Mme. Jantel in Capus' "Monsier Piegois." The costumes, as well as the wearers, are nightly applauded by Nationalist or patriotic playgoers. Mme. Leroux stands first this season in inventiveness, elegance, chic, and the Vandyke talent for hiding defects and giving relief to good points. We see this instinct of Sir Anthony in his portraits of Charles I, who would have been insignificant without the soft leather boots that hid knock-knees, and the hat, feather and Venice lace collar.

SOCIETY WOMAN

Furnishes Cafes With Pure Milk and Cream.

Chicago, May 26.—Chicago society is interested in news from Lake Forest that Mrs. Scott Durand, author and social leader has sought the simple life, and, as an earnest of her intentions, is about to open a modern dairy and sell pure milk and thick cream to the most select of the city's restaurants.

"I am opening this dairy because I want relaxation," said Mrs. Durand to one friend. "For years I have given much of my time to literary work and to Christian Science, and I find I need a change. I am heartily interested in this new business and have decided to go into it on a scientific and commercial basis. It is a new thing in this section and is much needed, I think."

Mrs. Durand said that the first carload of cows came in from Wisconsin last week and within a short a short time sixty Jerseys, Holsteins and Guernseys of highest breed will be tied in the Crab Tree dairy stanchions. J. E. Thomas, a graduate of the university of Wisconsin Agricultural college and an expert in dairying, is to be in charge.

Sanitary buckets of the latest design will be used at milking time, and when each is filled it will be removed to the testing room, where its richness will be recorded and each "Bossy's" showing faithfully kept. After the testing the milk is to go to the main dairy house via overhead trolley. Here the cleansing and cooling will be done, and when completed the pails will be switched into a room of white tile, where the fluid is to be bottled, sealed and dispatched to the consumer.

COURT GOSSIP

Tells of an Operation on King Edward.

London, May 26.—The Post-Dispatch correspondent hears that before his recent trip to the Mediterranean, King Edward was again suffering consilerably from his throat, in which a growth reappeared similar to that which was removed in Scotland before the coronation. He was laid up for more than a week at Buckingham palace before going South.

Rumor has it that his illness was not influenza, as stated officially, but that he underwent an operation for removal of the growth. His original intention was to accompany the queen to Copenhagen for her father's birthday, a celebration which she never before missed; but during his alleged attack of influenza, it was announced that this plan had been changed and that both the king and queen would go for a tour in the Mediterranean. The cold in Denmark would certainly have been most unfavorable to the patient after a delicate operation on the throat.

According to another report in court circles, the king was sent away to build up his strength in view of a possible operation which has yet to be performed. Since his return he has been going about as usual, but is specially careful about his throat, which he had well muffled up at the Newmarket races this week, as the wind blew keenly across the heath. It is said his affection is not malignant, but its recurrence is a bad symptom.

His daughter, Princess Victoria, who underwent an operation for appendicitis before going with the queen to the Mediterranean, is still in a very debilitated state, suffering greatly from mental depression. It is on her account that the queen has prolonged her stay in the South, although the season is now in full swing here.

The May morning breakfast which was held this morning at the Young Women's Christian association was a most delightful affair. The dining room was prettily decorated with the spring flowers that are obtainable about Duluth at this time. The center piece of each table was a bowl of loosely arranged marshmarigolds and the glow of color made by the pretty little wild flowers made the dining room most attractive. Presiding at the different tables were Mrs. W. G. Hegardt, Mrs. H. S. Ely, Mrs. Alexander Milne, Mrs. C. A. Duncan, Mrs. F. H. White, Miss May Sherwood, Mrs. W. N. Hubbard, Mrs. R. G. Dunlop, Mrs. F. C. Bowman, Miss Ruth Roberts, Miss Ella Rose and Mrs. W. S. Bishop.

The morning was a delightful one and a number of business men walked down town and had breakfast at the association. A delightful success was the May morning breakfast of 1905.

BRAINS OR FACE.

Which Is of Most Value, Ask the Models.

Does it pay to be pretty? This is the question which the professional models are asking each other. Which is better, to be born with a beautiful face or with a fine set of brains? If you could have one and not the other, which would you take, judging it commercially? asks the Chicago Tribune.

Does it pay to be a beauty? If you are thinking of becoming a professional model you must settle this question in your mind before starting.

First, you must decide if you are pretty enough to be a model. There are various tests for this, and unless you can pass them you might as well give up. You must be able to "hold the expression." So few can hold expression. They can smile, but they cannot hold the smile. It turns to a sickly grin. They can frown, but when the picture is taken the frown looks like a grimace.

Next, if you are going to be a photographer's model, have you the features for a photograph? They must be clear cut and your profile must be good. Unless your features are strong and sharp; unless your eyes are large and full; unless your chin is oval and your forehead and eyebrows correct, you will not take a good picture.

• • •

Here are the things that do not count in the picture. Your complexion does not count. A yellow skinned girl takes just as good a picture as a peaches and cream girl. The brightness of your eyes is no aid. It often happens that a girl will go into the model business because she has sparkling eyes. But the sparkle does not show in the le and her eyes are no prettier than those of any other girl when the pictures are finished.

Girls who blush, sparkle, lisp and scintillate are no better models than any other. Frequently there is a beauty who "lights up well." She thinks she can be a model. But her features, when the camera gets through with them, are not pleasing.

A girl wandered into a photographic studio to get a job as cashier. She had a straight nose, large full eyes, an oval face, and a little, smiling mouth. "We do not want a cashier," said the photographer, "but we are in need of good models, and I should think you were one." He took a picture of her and it was a brilliant success.

Are you young enough to be a model? In photography this makes all the difference in the world. If there are lines around your mouth, if your nose is set in deep wrinkles that look like parentheses, if there is a scowl between your eyes, and if your forehead has lines and your hair has streaks of white, you are too old to be a photographic model. The camera is relentless.

Have you the right temperament? Are you good natured? Are you easily jarred? When you have settled all the other points in the right way, and have decided that you are pretty enough to be a model, the next question is, Does it pay? Is it a good profession to take up? How much can you earn? Is it as well paid as the other professions?

Does a girl model in New York, in Paris, or in any other city receive as much as a girl in any other profession?

"I don't think much of it for a girl," said a veteran artist, "for the reason that her beauty soon fades, and then her business is gone. It is only a makeshift, a tideover, a something to keep her in pin money until such time as she can get married."

But, supposing a girl thinks otherwise; supposing she thinks she is clever enough to continue to earn money at the artist profession, in one branch or another, is it, as a business, one that pays? It looks easy, but, like acting, it may be a good deal harder than it looks. Is the studio-struck girl as likely to make a good living as the stage-struck girl? And how will she come out in the long run?

Take the famous girl models. There is Ray Gilmore, the prettiest model, many think, in the world. Miss Gilmore began to pose in 1901. She was then 17 years old. She had a picture face, and she timidly volunteered to pose as a flower girl. She posed all the afternoon, and received $5.

The next time she posed it was for ideal heads. There has been scarcely a day since that she has not been busy. She has posed for more book covers, magazine covers, for popular music than any other girl alive. Her picture face is always in demand.

Ray Gilmore get $5 for an afternoon's work, be it short or long. Once she is before the camera she is as willing to pose fo rtwenty pictures as for ing to pose for twenty pictures as for one.

Probably the most popular model in the studio now is Dora Bonn. he has a sweet face—one of those girlish faces without a trace of the classic, but wonderfully winsome. Miss Bonn is busy all the time. She poses mostly for hats, but she is also a good gown model. She gets $5 a day, $3 for half a day. Miss Bonn has been called the Christmas card girl, because the Christmas card is her specialty.

A girl whose face is everywhere is Miss Lester, a New England girl with a plentiful supply of dimples. She is an actress, but finds plenty of time to pose.

Does it pay to be a professional model? Ask Maude Thomas, and she will tell you "Yes." She is of the big, splendid type, fully 5 feet 10, broad of shoulder, and closely suggesting 175 pounds of weight. She takes the most gorgeous pictures of a stunning tpye in handsome gowns, and, if she were so inclined, she could pose every minute of every hour in fine clotehes. She often gets $10 for a single pose.

What kind of work pays best is a question that is asked. Is there a well paying branch of the business? The best paying branch by all odds is the newspaper end. The fashion pages are full of high class, well-paid models, and there are physical culture pictures for which the girls get all the way from $2 to $10 a pose.

A splendid model is Viola Schenck. She is nearly six feet tall, slender as a willow, sweet of face, and full of expression. There are some who think her the prettiest girl in the world. Miss Schenck will not think of posing for less than $10. She has received as high as $15 for a cigar label. She has posed for dozens of labels, and she has made a success of every picture.

Adjectives Qualifying Kiss.

Some individual with oceans of time on his hands has conceived the idea of hunting through the works of English novelists for the purpose of finding all the adjectives used to qualify the word kiss, relates London Tid-Bits. The result is as follows:

Cold, warm, icy, burning, chilly, cool, loving, indifferent, balsamic fragrant, blissful, passionate, aromatic, with tears bedewed, long, soft, hasty, intoxicating, dissembling, delicious, pious, tender, beguiling, hearty, distracted, frantic, fresh-as-the-morning, breathing fire, divine, satanic, glad, sad, superficial, quiet, loud, fond, heavenly, execrable, devouring, ominous, fervent, parching, nervous, soulless stupefying, slight, careless, anxious, painful, sweet, refreshing, embarrassed, shy, mute, ravishing, holy, sacred, firm, hurried, faithless, narcotic, feverish, immoderate, sisterly, brotherly and paradisaical. The task seemed interminable and he gave up at this stage.

SLIGHTLY UNCONVENTIONAL

By George Fred Lawson.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Mrs. Lambert didn't really mean anything by it. She was not a flirt—at least not now, that she was a married woman. She had left all that behind her two years ago. Not that she was a flirt even then; oh, no. But she had been the possessor of the average amount of coquettishness inherent in most girls of nineteen—perhaps the least little bit more.

But he looked so decidedly lonely and gazed at her so often, as if he wished to speak and didn't dare, that she really wished he would for he looked quite like a gentleman and a handsome one at that; one who would know just the limitations of a chance acquaintance with a very pretty woman at a hot, stuffy, little out-of-the-way station, and with the prospect of a two hours' wait for the last train of the day before her.

Yes, she wished he would speak or do something else. But he didn't. She would have smiled, had she dared. Even at that he gave her little enough chance. She could feel him staring at her and once in a while could catch a glimpse of his face in the dusty little window opposite her. But when she turned carelessly in his direction ostensibly to gaze out upon the dusty stretch of track, he was always gazing interestedly at a forlorn "Sapolio" sign over her head, or was flicking a bit of imaginery dust from his immaculate sleeve.

And then she did it. You must remember that she was not a flirt. She was just a pretty girl stranded at a country station, the only occupants of which were, besides herself and the sleepy station agent, a prim old maid and—a man. It was hot, and dusty, and the prospect of two long hours of weary weary waiting was quite too awful.

She swept by him toward the door with airy grace and sparkling eyes, and turned suddenly with reddened face at his:

"I beg pardon."

They stared at each other and he, too, reddened. "You dropped your handkerchief," he said.

"Oh, thank you. How careless of me," she replied, accepting the proffered bit of linen and lace—the little vixen. She smiled and tucked it into her corsage and turned to go.

"I—"

Her heart beat fast as she turned, with the old-time feeling of coquetry.

"I beg pardon," he continued, "I—that is, it is very lonely here."

She agreed that it was with just the right degree of embarrassed inflection, and the correct angle to her drooped eyelids.

"You—" he proffered a card which she, little rascal, neglected to notice—"you might care to take a stroll through yonder field. It's two hours to wait, and it's very hot here, and stuffy. It looks cool and nice over there."

She hesitated and elevated her little brown head in a manner as much to say, "Well, I hardly know whether to feel insulted or not." She didn't say it, though, she wished he wouldn't back down now, just when he was doing so nicely. Then her brown eyes met his blue ones, and surrendered.

"Perhaps I am too bold, Miss ——" She took particular notice of the significant pause after the "miss" but, so far as was concerned, utterly ignored it.

"I beg—"

"Don't, please," she said smiling. He was going to beg her pardon again! Oh, he was too polite, and made it all the more difficult for her. If he would only say, "Come on. Let's take a walk and get away from this miserable hole," she felt sure she would have replied, "all right, come on."

At her "don't please," he had started toward her when she supplemented this by adding:

"There is nothing to pardon, I'm sure. I'm only too well pleased to escape this horrid place."

"Thank you, Miss ——" Again the pause. She bit her lip.

"Miss Wakeley." She tossed her head defiantly as she said it, that is, she meant it to be defiant. It may have been so, but he took no apparent notice of it. Anyhow the ice was broken and she stifled all thoughts of outraged propriety that arose in her mind and actually smiled at the old maid, who glared as they made their way across the glimmering tracks to the field beyond.

It was every pleasure to stroll about. He didn't attempt to quiz her to find out all about who she was; he simply accepted her company thankfully and seemed to thoroughly enjoy it. Finally they found a gurgling stream and toiled upon its grassy banks, she with her back propped against the trunk of a tree and he spread out at her feet. The touch of his hand and the gentle pressure of it as he had helped her over a stone wall lingered in hers, and the look in his eyes as he slowly lighted his pipe tingled her heart.

"Much more pleasant than that dingy station," he vouchsafed.

"Decidedly," she agreed, flirting down the hem of her skirt which a teasing breeze had fluttered back displaying shapely ankles modeled in black silk, "and it's so sweetly unconventional. It adds to the charm."

"I—I'm so glad you look at it in that way. I wanted to speak to you all the time, but you looked so deucedly offish I didn't dare."

"I?" She cast one of those old-time college-day glances at him and he edged nearer and neglected his pipe, which went out.

"Um—m, yes, you did. Looked kind as if you'd bite a fellow's head off if he so much as dared. I could have yelled with delight when you dropped your handkerchief. Wasn't it lucky?"

"Lucky? Oh, yes, wasn't it?" She smiled queerly. The wind was again playing tricks with the ruffles at the bottom of her skirt and she didn't appear to notice it this time. Besides, she was conscious of certain facts. He edged still closer till she laughed gaily and tucked her feet under her.

He spoke. "I don't believe in too much conventionality, especially when it makes no particular difference. You see, there was no one at the station to know," he added hastily noticing a look of alarm on her face.

She was sitting bolt upright, her head held rigidly against the trunk of the tree, and was staring straight ahead of her and over his head. She smiled somewhat painfully as he spoke. "It's my hair," she explained, "it's caught on this plaguey tree, and I can't move, and—ooh, it hurts!" She reddened as he hastened to relieve her. His face approached very close to hers, and his arms all but enfolded her. The hair had become provokingly tangled about a tiny twig and baffled his efforts to loosen it. She felt his hot breath upon her face and looked up at him. Perhaps it was unfortunate that, just at that moment, the hold on her hair gave way and she swayed toward him. At any rate, she felt herself crushed tightly to him and felt his impassioned kisses rained upon her face and lips. She was powerless to resist even if she would. She could struggle but weakly and lay like a fluttering bird in his strong embrace. She listened to his passionate words of love and felt supremely happy, and she wondered at it in spite of her joy.

Finally he released her and held her off at arm's length. "Oh, Editha!" he exclaimed tremulously, "did you think I didn't know you, even if it has been five years? It seems a long time dear. Has it changed you?"

She gazed at him and smiled happily. "You look much the same, Jack—only the beard changes you."

"I know, dear. I allowed it to grow this summer. You see, I'm summering here and something seemed to draw me to the station today. Editha, say you——"

"Oh, Editha!"

"It was more a family affair than anything else, Jack. His folks wished it, and mine wished it. I married him on his sick bed. Poor Mr. Lambert died the next day, and——"

He caught her in his arms and kissed the happy smile from her lips. "My darling!" he murmured, and she cuddled happily to him.

Two sharp whistles sounded on the warm summer air as the last train pulled out of the station, but neither of them noticed it.

"COLONEL" McGILVRAY

Duluth's City Engineer Has Greatness Thrust Upon Him.

Hence forth Thomas F. McGilvray will be "Col. Tom" to his numerous friends.

The title was conferred on him yesterday by Governor Johnson. Some men are born great, others achieve greatness, and others have geratness thrust upon them. "Col. Tom's" greatness is said to have been thrust upon him. He was a member of Governor Johnson's fishing party on the Brule, two weeks ago. The governor is said to have decided that any person who knew as much about trout fishing as the city engineer, deserved some better title than plain citizen, so on his return to St. Paul he ordered a colonelcy for Mr. McGilvray.

Mr. McGilvray has not yet been notified of the appointment officially, but he expressed much pleasure this morning when shown the dispatch.

"It is a complete surprise to me," he said, "but I am very grateful to my friends for the honor."

MAKES HIS DEFENSE

John Erickson Claims Gulas' Death an Unfortunate Accident

Von Flattern Assualt Case Comes on For Trial.

All the evidence was submitted in the manslaughter case against John Erickson, this morning, and the court's charge to the jury was given shortly after two o'clock this afternoon.

The testimony showed and the state admitted that there was no intention on the part of Erickson to kill Anton Gulas, the old dryhouse keeper at Eveleth, when he pushed the latter against the staircase and caused him to break several ribs, but the fact he did so push Gulas, during a spell of anger, causing injuries which resulted in a fatal attack of pneumonia, was no excuse and Erickson should be punished.

In Erickson's defense one witness testified that Gulas either took hold of Erickson's shoulder or attempted to strike him there and that the younger man gave him a push, the old gentleman falling down against the stairs.

In his argument, F. L. Bannon, attorney for Erickson, claimed that his client's action in pushing Gulas away was only a natural one when the older man struck at him, and that the fatal result could not have been foreseen, in fact the death from pneumonia was too remote to be laid to Erickson as having done any moral wrong. He cited the story of the case of the man who stopped to water his horse at a fountain when another man came along and struck him, the horse becoming frightened jumped about and stepping on its owner's head crushed his skull. In this case, Mr. aBnnen claimed, there was no conviction of the second man for manslaughter for the reason that the cause of death was too remote.

Mr. Bannon also claimed that the testimony as to Erickson being intoxicated was of a very doubtful nature, while the testimony of character witnesses showed his client to have a reputation as a peaceable and law abiding citizen.

Following the Erickson case, this afternoon, a jury was summoned to try the case of the state against Von Flattern, who is indicted for assault in the first degree. The information is that he shot and wounded in the shoulder a young man by the name of Henry DeMeyers, who had been ordered away from Von Flattern's premises, but who is said to have refused to go.

Considerable interest hangs about this case for the reason a local attorney was indicted for attempting to get the complaining witness, DeMeyers to leave the country, before his testimony could be taken by the grand jury. No sentence has yet been imposed in the case of the attorney, who pleaded guilt" to the indictment.

CHANGE OF FORMS.

"The baptism of infants.
"The baptism of adults.
"The reception of these baptised in infancy to the Lord's supper.
"The solemnization of marriage.
"The burial of the dead.
"The ordination of a minister. And a "Treasury of prayers for general and special uses.

"Your committee desires to call attention, by way of illustration, to certain points which may help to make clear the spirit and purpose of the book:

"Morning and Evening Services—There is considerable room for variation within the general order—as much as is compatible with a practicable unity. The forms as printed suggest an order which seems generally advisable. The rubrics make provision for such modifications as may be desired in any church. In all the prayers it is left to the minister's discretion whether he will use any of the forms given in the book or not. For the 'long prayer' in morning service a general rubric is given, according to the directory for worship, which the minister may follow in his own words, or he may use one or more of the forms which are arranged for his convenience in The Treasury of Prayers.' For the principal prayer in the evening service a brief, comprehensive form is given (less than five minutes long), which may be used as it stands or taken as a model.

"Sacramental Services.—These services embody, in the addresses, prayers and rubrics, the instructions given in the Westminster directory for worship and the amended directory for worship of our own church. Passages from the confession of faith, the larger catechism, and John Knox's book of common order are carefully wrought into the service. The faith of the Reformed church in regard to the sacraments is expressed in the language of devotion. The Lord's Supper is presented not as a sacrifice offered by a priest, but as our commemoration of Christ's sacrifice offered once for all upon the cross. The oblation of the sacrament is our offering of praise to God for this great gift, and the consecration of ourselves, through Christ, according to the holy scripture. The last prayer of the service is a petition for holy living, for the prosperity of the church, for the success of missions, for the salvation of the lost, and for the heavenly fulfillment of the communion of saints. The faithful and reverent presentation of such thoughts in the communion service must tend to make it not only more comforting but also more strengthening to all who take part in it.

"The order for the baptism of adults is made on similar principles; and it is so arranged that at a certain point it may be combined with the service for the reception of those baptized in infancy to the communion. Thus the covenant relation of baptized children to the church is emphasized; and at the same time an orderly method is provided for them to confirm in public the vows made by their parents in their behalf.

"The Marriage Service.—The Westminster directory and our own directory for worship, combined and arranged, offer full material for a simple, dignified, beautiful and truthful marriage service. It seemed to th committee, after long study and careful labor, far better to use this material than to attempt an alteration of the marriage service in the Protestant Episcopal book of common prayer. That service, familiar and in many respects admirable, still remains open for use by all who desire it. But for our own book, it is best to have a service drawn directly from our historic standards, and closely conformed to the teaching of scripture in regard to the sacred relation of marriage.

"The Treasury of Prayers.—In this part of the book some of the rich treasures of Christian devotion are gathered from the records of the past, and arranged in such a form as to make them serviceable to any who may wish to use them inpublic or private worship. New prayers have been added for occasions and for objects in regard to which the committee were unable to find existing forms that seemed both true and fitting. In conducting divine worship on special days, such as New eYars' day, Thanksgiving day, and Christmas, it does not seem needful to have an entirely distinct service. It is better to use the usual order of service with such scripture readings, psalms, hymns and prayers as are appropriate to the particular season. The prayers given in the treasury are not intended to restrict or narrow the free spirit of devotion, but rather to enrich and deepen it."

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, chairman of the committee, came Wednesday to do some active campaigning in favor of the report, and he led the forces in favor of it.

The printed report of the committee has been placed in the hands of the commissioners and the demand for it has been so great that a large edition is exhausted. Even the commissioners, who have been against adopting what they call the "Van Dyke prayer book," admitted that it is a fine piece of Presbyterian literature, and hundreds of copies will go into the libraries of Presbyterian homes over the United States.

The form of worship which the committee offered was regarded as mild in tone, and the opposition to it made its objection on the general ground that the Presbyterian church is not a denomination for rituals, printed prayers and fixed forms. Many of the commissioners objected to the Van Dyke book for the reason that it was approved by the assemgly, it might prove in later years to be a stepping stone to some form of worship more radical and obligatory.

CHARGE IS SWINDLING

But Lieutenant Is Said to Have Sold German Plans.

Thorn, Prussia, May 26.—The trial will begin Monday next of Hellmut Wessel, formerly a first lieutenant and instructor in the artillery and engineer school at Charlottenburg, who is charged with swindling. This is the accusation on which he will be tried, but the former lieutenant also is charged with selling plans of German fortresses to France. Wessel is the husband of Matilde Baumler, the "veiled lady" of the second Dreyfus trial. In 1898 he found an asylum in France and lived there for some years. Wessel followed a precarious career in Italy where the German authorities caused his arrest and after sixteen months' imprisonment secured his extradition. The opposition Italian press criticised the government of Italy for giving up a political fugutive. Wessel is now to be tried here, his last garrison detail or an indictment charging him with fraudulently obtaining $25 from a captain of Uhlans named Becker, since deceased.

READ ABOUT

RUBBER

The tendency to cheapen Rubber goods by the use of inferior materials below a point of safety, has become almost universal. The Cleveland Rubber Works of Cleveland, Ohio, make good goods as cheaply as possible. When quality is given proper consideration, their goods will compare favorably with those of any other factory in the world. There is a point in price and quality below which they refuse to go.

Garden Hose is what they manufacture principally, and they make it different from almost every other Rubber concern. The inner core of Rubber in their Hose is run from a die the same as lead pipe, which makes it perfectly seamless. Most of the other firms have what they call a Hose pole, on which they wrap this core of Rubber and then cement the entire length. This is the place that gives out first. The Kelley Hardware Company sells the Cleveland Hose in Duluth.

Isaac Anderson Hangs Himself In Jail at Manistique.

Manistique—Isaac Anderson was found dead in the Manistique jail for Schoolcraft county, having hung himself with a handkerchief from one of the bars. Anderson was a tall man and had to curl his legs up to let his weight fall on his neck. The man was to have been examined for insanity, his mind having given away. A few weeks ago he was on a prolonged debauch.

Felch—The people of Felch township, Dickinson county, have finally decided to erect a central school building and abandon the present structures at "Old" and "New" Metropolitan. The new building will be erected about midway between the two settlements. The school board is now making the necessary arrangements for the erection of an eight-room building to cost in the neighborhood of $5,000. There are about 130 children in the district and the number is increasing each year.

Munising—Dr. E. W. Humphrey, Edward Robinson and two other Munising men were out trout fishing recently, and they made a catch that was truly remarkable. The four men in one day caught 120 of the speckled beauties and not one of the fish weighed less than one pound.

Gladstone—Fire at the Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber company's railway at Ten Mile spur, on the Rapid River Valley railroad, threatened over 100,000 feet of timber and was finally extinguished by the members of the Gladstone fire department with a loss estimated at $2,000. The blaze was started from a forest fire that had been raging in that district for several days and although repeatedly driven back from the company's railway, obtained a foothold and for a time threatened to destroy all of the logs collected there. Officials at the head office of the company at Gladstone were notified and members of the fire department of that city with fire fighting apparatus were hauled to the scene by special train. After working for nearly three hours the fire was brought under control.

Ironwood—Fire was discovered in the barn of L. Sheretski at the Ashland location Wednesday afternoon and before the arrival of the fire department the residence and barn of Sheretski was totally destroyed and the home of F. Koshink was partly burned. But for the timely arrival of the department and the hard work of the firemen, the whole block of buildings would have been destroyed. The damage to L. Sheretski's house and barn is $800, and that of F. Koshink's $300, with no insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is thought to have originated from a spark from a locomotive that passes nearby.

George McFarlan, 10 years of age, was struck by a street car and dragged a distance of 60 feet before the car could be stopped. The boy was walking up Aurora street and tried to pass in front of the car and was not seen by the motorman until too late. The boy was brought into the home of Dr. E. H. Kelly, where it was found that although badly bruised, no bones had been broken.

SENATOR LODGE'S HUMOR.

Senator Lodge's sense of humor is a grim one in the opinion of a certain committee clerk in the senate, says the Kansas City Journal. One afternoon in the present session there were a number of clerks engaged in a room just off that of the senior senator from Massachusetts. All at once they were aware of the sudden appearance of the senator. His brows were wrinkled into the sternest of frowns.

"Who is it," demanded he, in a peremptory tone, "that is smoking that cigarette?" Whereupon the guilty man immediately began to apologize and threw away his smoke. "Oh, it's you," said the senator, with a half smile; 'then I'll thank you to hand me one; there isn't a single cigarette in my room."

FEW CHINESE IN CANADA.

Canada's law imposing a tax of $500 on every Chinese entering the Dominion has had a prohibitive effect, says the Kansas City Journal. From January 1, 1904, not a single Chinese arrived, with the exception of two who escaped from steamships. In each case the steamship companies had to pay the poll tax of $500. The exclusion of Chinese has deprived British Columbia of a handsome revenue. In 1903 the province received from the poll tax $225,000 and the year before over $259,000.

Northern Pacific and Union Pacific to Build Joint Line.

Will Develop Rich Farming Country In Washington and Idaho.

New York, May 26.—An agreement, ratification of which has been exchanged by representatives of the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific executive committees, for the development of the Nez Perce's territory by the building of a joint line into the rich farming country on the borders of Idaho and Washington involves the construction of about 300 miles of road.

When the Nez Perces Indian reservation was thrown open to the public some years ago, the two systems began to invade this territory, which since then has been claimed by each as belonging to it exclusively.

The Northern Pacific built a railroad branch from its main line down to Clearwater. The Union Pacific built a line as far as Pomeroy in Washington, and ran a steamboat service up the Snake river into the Clearwater country.

Recently both systems sent surveyors into the country to map out more lines and these surveying parties met. Each informed its superiors of the presence of the other, and when the main offices heard of it they tried to find out as much about the other's plans as possible. Mr. Harriman, for the Union Pacific, finally met Col. Lamont, representing the Northern Pacific and they talked the matter over.

The result was that they agreed that the building of two lines was a needless expense. The result is an agreement just announced to build one line and use it jointly. It will run from the Clearwater district to a point near Pasco, Wash. The main line will run along the north bank of the Snake from Lewiston to Riparia.

It is probable that a new company will be organized to do the work and that when the construction is completed the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific will each lease one-half of the road.

Railroad Notes.

The South Shore has announced very low rates, practically half fare, to Toronto for the middle of June, on account of the convention of the International Sunday School association. Tickets will be good returning Aug. 25.

H. M. Pearce of St. Paul, general freight agent of the Omaha, is in the city today.

In order to provide the Great Northern Steamship company with its own coasting connections in the Orient, the twin screw steamer Tremont, recently constructed for the company, will sail from Seattle June 23. She will ply between various Oriental ports, including Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghai, Hongkong and Manila.

According to information received by the railroads from the Eastern Passenger association, the increase in the number of immigrants arriving in New York during the first three months of 1905 was 85½ per cent compared to last year.

The Burlington road has put on a new train between Chicago and St. Paul, leaving Chicago at 6:30 p. m. and arriving in St. Paul at 7:20 o'clock the following morning.

FROST DOES MUCH DAMAGE IN IOWA.

Des Moines, May 26.—Frost, which touched Iowa in half a dozen sections last night, is believed to have done serious damage to early crops and fruits. Des Moines, Boone, Albia, Forest City, Iowa Falls and Waterloo reported frost while at Estherville the mercury dropped below the freezing point.

TAR PAPER PLANT

Work on Building Is Progressing at Favorable Rate.

Annual Meeting of Holy Apostles Church Is Held.

The accompanying picture shows the work being done on the new tar paper plant at the foot of Fifty-ninth avenue west. The walls will be finished in a few days and work will be rushed on the flooring and the roof. The building must be ready for occupancy on June 15. The building will be of one story in height, and its ground dimensions are 150 feet by 200 feet. A heavy stone foundation supports the walls, and heavy piling has been driven in the ground to support the flooring. It is expected that 100 or more men will be employed at the plant.

IN GOOD CONDITION.

Holy Apostles Church Holds Its Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of Holy Apostles Episcopal church of West Duluth was held last evening, and a number of important matters were attended to. It was decided, for one thing, to re-establish the Sunday school, which has been discontinued for several months, and the first meeting of the school will be held next Sunday morning at 9:45.

The finances of the church were shown to be in first-class condition, the running expenses having been fully met, while there is only a small deficit in the improvement fund, and steps were taken to take this up rapidly. Because of the rapid growth of the congregation, the parish committee was increased from five to seven members, and the officers were chosen as follows:

Senior warden, Thomas Wright; junior warden, J. Allan Scott; treasurer, Charles Matthews; members of the committee: Walter Everett, Fay Doherty, Charles A. Harbour and James A. Bowne.

The pastor, Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, and Miss Grayce Frances Turner were complimented for their work in getting up a vested choir for the church.

FINE NEW BLOCK

Christian Building Erected at Twenty-Third Avenue West.

Fight Over New Park Pavilion Is Keen as Ever.

The new Christian block, of which a likeness is presented, is one of the most modern blocks in the city. It has just been erected at the northwest corner of Twenty-third avenue west and Superior street at a considerable cost by Harry Christian and his wife, who are engaged in the grocery business in that vicinity at present and will, within a few days move into the west storeroom of the new block. The corner store is already occupied by Emil Peterson's drug store.

On the two upper floors are modern five-room flats and all but one or two of them are occupied and those remaining vacant are rented for June 1.

The whole building is fitted with the latest type of improvements. Hardwood finish is everywhere, the plumbing is all open and the metal work throughout the building is of imitation onyx. In each flat there are bath and toilet rooms and fireplaces with handsome mantels. The building is heated with the latest type of hot water plants. There are eight flats in the building.

The two stores on the ground floor are modern in every way and the new furniture which the Christians will put in their grocery will be strictly up to date. The usual counter will be dispensed with and more modern and convenient furniture employed instead. Outside of the center of the city proper, the Christian block is far in advance of any building in the city. The building was designed by C. E. Nystrom.

NEW CHRISTIAN BLOCK AT TWENTY-THIRD AVENUE WEST AND SUPERIOR STREET.

THAT PAVILION.

Both Sides Resting Until Monday Night.

The West Enders who are opposed to a dancing pavilion at Lincoln Park are not yet through fighting the proposition. On the other hand, William Chestock of West Duluth, who is trying to get a permit from the council to operate the pavilion, says that neither is he through fighting.

A few days ago, Mrs. Cox who owns the property in the zone of fire, took out a permit to build a $3,000 pavilion at the place where one is desired by her and Mr. Chestock. This is in anticipation of the council granting the permit. It is taken by some as meaning that if the council does not grant the permit Mrs. Cox and Mr. Chestock will appeal to the courts to compel the council to show good cause why such a permit should not be granted. Neither Mrs. Cox or Mr. Chestock will say as much, but are keeping quiet about the matter.

The West enders are concentrating themselves on a final effort before the council for Monday night. They point out that the petitions submitted should be seriously considered for out of the 1,356 names on them, less than 100 are women, the rest being voters. It is expected that the subject will be generally aired in the West end churches next Sunday.

Plans are already making by a number of young men to form an indoor hockey team to play at the Lincoln Park pavilion if the deal goes through. These young men will wear rubber-tired roller skates in the games which, it is promised, will be very exciting. An effort will be made to form a league and it is believed that some fun will result if the matter goes through. In case the pavilion is built it will be 70 feet wide by about twice that length.

Births at West End.

Twin sons were born a few days ago to Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Silverness of 27 North Twenty-fifth avenue west. Sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kiley of 2011 West Superior street, and to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hebner of the Clarendon hotel. A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shields of 326 North Nineteenth avenue west.

West End Shortrails.

Charles E. Dice received a telegram night before last telling him that his father died May 24 at Oskaloosa, Iowa. As the funeral was held yesterday, Mr. Dice could not reach there in time, so did not go. He is superintendent at Scott-Graff's.

J. A. Ellis of Minneapolis is visiting with his son, J. A. Ellis, at the Esmond hotel.

A. Carlson, deputy organizer, is working on another large class of candidates for Beta council of Modern Samaritans.

Greysolon camp, R. N. A., will meet at Columbia hall this evening at 8 o'clock.

A permit to build a $1,600 residence on Twenty-third avenue west between Ninth and Tenth streets has been issued to Nels Hovland. Quite a number of permits for repairs at the West end have also been issued.

The funeral of Mrs. Dorothy Watts was held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from 923 West First street. Mrs. Watts died a few days ago at St. Luke's hospital.

INJUNCTION GRANTED

Against Mutualization of the Equitable Society.

New York, May 26.—The motion of Franklin B. Lord which sought to restrain the directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society from mutualizing the company, was granted today by Justice Maddox in the supreme court in Brooklyn. In granting the motion Justice Maddox said, after reviewing the facts in the case. "The motion therefore is granted but is limited to the filing and effectuation of such proposed amended charter, for it appears that such contemplated amendment has been adopted and executed by the board of directors."

The injunction against the mutualization of the society is to be in force only pending the trial of the action which also involves the same question.

SCHOOL APPROPRIATION

Increased By the Russian Council By $625,000.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—The council of the empire has increased the appropriation for public education by $625,000.

Private reports from Zhitomir, province of Volhynia, say the tension between the Jews and Christians is increasing and that both sides are arming.

The Ignatieff commission, for the revision of exceptional laws, designed for safeguarding public order, has pronounced against a continuance of the minor state of siege which is annually declared in many cities. The commission finds that it led to the great abuses and arbitrariness and furnished a pretext for domiciliary visits and summary arrests. The commission recommends the entire abolition of the so-called minor state of siege and the substitution at times of great public stress, of martial law so as to leave the cities either in a normal condition with the civil authority in full sway, or entirely under the control of the military.

HIGGINS ACQUITTED OF MURDER CHARGE.

Peoria, Ill., May 26.—The jury in the case of Richard Higgins, charged with the murder of Mrs. Nellie Thomasson, on Oct. 15 last, returned a verdict today finding the defendant not guilty. But two ballots were taken. The evidence showed that Mrs. Thomasson suffered an affection of the stomach, which might also have caused her death.

CLUE TO KIDNAPER

May Lead to Recovery of Lost Boy.

New York, May 26.—What the police think may be a clue indicating that Siegfrid Roebling, the 14-year-old son of Millionaire John A. Roebling of this city, who disappeard from his parents' winter home in Asheville, N. C., last Saturday, is held for ransom by kidnapers, was obtained Wednesday night through the arrest of Daniel Dolan, 20 years old. The prisoner is charged with attempting grand larceny.

He sent a telegraph message, signed with the missing boy's name to Col. Washington A. Roebling of Trenton, the lad's grandfather, requesting $50. A trained nurse started to this city at all haste. Dolan's arrest followed the arrival of the nurse. When searched the police say they found on the prisoner a dozen pawn tickets and fifteen keys. Marks on a purse and hat indicated that the articles had been purchased in New Orleans.

SEARCHING FOR OGLE.

Sheriff Sends Out Notices Describing Missing Man.

Mankato, Minn., May 26.—Sheriff Ben Williams has sent out 5,000 notices for the arrest of John B. Ogle to the various police departments in America. The notice reads as follows: I hold a warrant for the arrest of John B. Ogle on the charge of forgery. Total amount will reach $30,000. Ogle is about 35 years of age, 6 feet 1 or 2 inches in height, weighs 260 pounds, medium complexion, well dressed and of good appearance, was smooth shaven when last seen. He is a man of good habits and is a lawyer by profession, having held the office of special municipal judge in this city for seval years. He walks erect, and is a man who would attract attention. Is a pleasant and fluent talker and makes friends easily. A reward is offered for his capture.

The merchant who advertises gives you the same opportunities to secure bargains that your neighbor has. Publicity equalizes opportunity. Nowadays there is no reason for your not having heard about some special sale.

BONES OF MASTODON

Found By Fosston Farmer While Digging Well.

Fosston, Minn., May 26.—A skeleton was dug up by a farmer living fifteen miles north of this place. It was found at a depth of twelve and one-half feet and was very large. Though badly decomposed, its general form and size could be clearly made out. The head itself extended from corner to corner of the well which the farmer was digging and which is about three and one-half feet square. The teeth are well preserved and the largest ones are betweeen three and four inches in length, occuring in groups. The general character of the country where the skeleton was found is hilly. The subsoil in the locality is sand and gravel, the particular stratum surrounding the skeleton being a dark loam.

Various opinions are current as to the character of the skeleton, but the best informed persons who have seen the bones incline to the view that they are of a mastadon. Dr. McKennon of this place has in his possession some of the best preserved bones.

FROST IN GERMANY.

SACRIFICE BY LOVING WIFE

Seeks Divorce That Her Husband May Get Fortune.

Kenosha, Wis., May 26.—Sacrificing her position as a wife in order that her husband might achieve his wish of being a wealthy man, Mrs. Daisy B. Rogers has begun suit for an absolute divorce from her husband, Charles Rogers.

It is to be a divorce of convenience, and on it depends the future wealth of Mr. Rogers. Mrs. Rogers admits that she still loves her husband, but she will not stand in the way of his securing the fortune that was left to him by his father, with the understanding that the wife be put aside.

Charles Rogers is one of the three children of Daniel G. Rogers, a former Milwaukee millionaire lawyer and real estate man. The elder Rogers died several years ago, and left a fortune estimated at over $1,000,000. Charles Rogers and pretty Daisy Green, a Chicago girl, were married seven years ago, but at the time the father of Rogers objected to the marriage and threatened to cut the son off without a penny.

Notwithstanding this fact Rogers told his wife-to-be that he was willing to accept poverty with her and the marriage took place. The father relented in a way, but the fact that the old man carried his objections to his son's wife to the end was evidenced by the will filed two or three weeks after his death. This declared that the son should receive but $6 a week from the estate so long as he remains husband of his present wife, but when the couple are divorced, the son is to receive the interest from a fund of $50,000, and ultimately to receive one-third of the entire estate.

GREAT NORTHERN ROAD

Is to Build an Extension to Omaha.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 26.—It was announced here yesterday by L. W. Hill, vice president of Great Northern railroad, that the Nebraska extension to connect with the Burlington system will be built to Omaha as well as to Ashland.

"We have intended from the first to build a cut-off to Omaha, but the line will, of course, run to Ashland. This should make it satisfactory to all concerned."

Since the announcement that Mr. Hill would build a link to Ashland, Omaha has been greatly exercised, fearing that the line would be built around that place. Committees were appointed to wait upon James J. Hill, and induce him to alter the plans.

L. W. Hill says construction of the Nebraska extension will begin without delay. Mr. Hill arrived yesterday with A. H. Hogeland, chief engineer, Charles Hayden, right-of-way commissioner, and N. D. Miller, in charge of the Nebraska extension. An automobile was put in their private car, and the party left in it, for a three days' trip over the route of the extension.

COMES TO CLOSE

German Methodist Conference Finishes and Passes Resolutions.

Next Annual Meeting at Valley City or Morris.

The several days' session of the German Methodist Episcopal church conference of the northern district, was brought to a successful close last evening, at the German Methodist church in this city, with an experience and farewell meeting, conducted by Rev. J. E. Benz of Montrose, the closing prayer being made by Rev. F. J. Preine of Minneapolis, who acted as secretary of the conference.

The time and place for the holding of the next annual conference was left in the hands of the conference committee, comprisd of Rev. C. L. Lehnert, Minneapolis; Rev. W. A. Weiss, Minneapolis; Rev. F. J. Preine, Minneapolis; Rev. C. Hohn, Minneapolis; Rev. W. O. Boemmel, Valley City, N. D.; Rev. F. Brinkmann, Morris, Minn.

The next conference, it is understood, is likely to be held at Valley City, N. D., or at Morris, Minn.

At the afternoon session Rev. W. A. Weiss gave a discourse on the subject, "The Divine Providence and Man's Free Will." Rev. Mr. Weiss held that a man had at least sufficient freedom to render him responsible for his actions. Rev. W. H. Koenig also spoke on this topic.

Rev. F. J. Preine talked on the subject of revivals and claimed that timelliness and prayer are two great elements that enter into the effectiveness of such meetings.

An address on revivals was given by Rev. W. J. Gammielin of Willow City.

Rev. C. P. Bubiltz of Bertha and C. H. Hohn of Minneapolis talked of the position of the church in the divine scheme, the latter holding that the church is God's chief instrument for good.

Rev. Robert Forbes of the Home Missionary board of the Methodist church of America was the guest of the conference in the afternoon and delivered an address on "Church Extension," giving some very encouraging figures about the work. Rev. E. Ahl of the Evangelical Lutheran church was also a visitor.

Before closing the conference passed resolutions of thanks to the entertaining congregation and to the local press.

CELEBRATION BY INDIANS

Of Anniversary of Settlement on White Earth Reserve.

White Earth, Minn., May 26.—The thirty-seventh anniversary of the settlement of the Ojibways on the White Earth reservation is to be celebrated on June 14 and 15, and the following invitation has been issued, signed by B. L. Fairbanks, president; Theodore B. Beaulieu, vice president; George M. Campbell, secretary, and Charles Uran, treasurer:

To our kindred and fellow-neighbors we extend cheerful greeting:

Once again the Great Spirit has permitted the Ojibways to add another year to the anniversary of their settlement on the White Earth reservation. Verily, the day of rejoicing is at hand. It is therefore with cheerful pleasure that we announce to you, kindred fellow-neighbors, that the thirty-seventh anniversary of June 14, 1868, will be celebrated at White Earth, Minn., on June 14 and 15, 1905. On this occasion we most respectfully solicit the company of yourself, relations and friends to come and partake of this feast of good cheer, smoke the pipe of peace and generally enjoy yourselves.

Exercises of the Day—Federal salute at sunrise; grand aboriginal parade, showing Indians as they were in 1868 and as they are today; short speeches by red and white orators; canoe races, games, great sham battle of 200 on a side, Indian pony and foot races. Music by the White Earth Indian band. Exercises commence at 9 a. m.

Here will be an opportunity to see nature's red children as they were yesterday—as they are today; in a word, to see them enjoy themselves in the fun, frolic and festivities, as was their happy wont in days of long ago and ere the erect form and agile step were bent and dulled by the trying cares of a new civilization and before assuming their share of the white man's burden.

You can talk to all kinds of people through Herald wants ads. If you are looking for purchasers, renters, employes, boarders, roomers, or anything, the quickest, best and cheapest way is to talk to them through these inexpensive and effective "want-fillers." That's what most people who have a want of any kind do.

SCATHING ARRAIGNMENT

Of School "Fads," "Frills" and "Follies."

Chicago, May 26.—A scathing arraignment of the administration of the Chicago public schools, in which the schools themselves were characterized as "sweat shops" and the system held to blame for driving teachers insane, was made by P. Shelly O'Ryan, school trustee, at Wednesday night's meeting of the board of education.

Trustee O'Ryan accused the board of stealing from the children of the primary age to get money wherewith to erect palaces for the older children. He declared that millions were being spent for "fads" and "frills" and "follies" for secondary schools and pedagogical experimentation to give the educators an opportunity to parade their achievements in the pages of magazines and from the rostrums of teachers' institutes, while the little children's cry for the rudiments of education was unheard.

He declared Chicago made the middle section of the country the "black belt" in education, and pleaded for the rehabilitation of the "three R's" educational doctrine and the overthrow of the "chop soocy" and "breakfast food" educational theory.

Portland, Or., May 26.—Col. E. Stever, grand marshal of the opening day exercises at the Lewis and Clark fair, has announced that a parade, which will be the most imposing that has ever occurred in the history of the Northwest will be the initial feature of the exposition on June 1. Col. Stever with the Fourth United States cavalry, will lead the parade, followed by Vice President Fairbanks and party, and other distinguished guests of the Lewis and Clark exposition. The opening ceremonies will be held on the lake view terrace at the exposition grounds. In the evening a banquet and reception will occur at the New York state building.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SECRET OUT

Truth is Unshackled.

To refute the many false and malicious attacks, bogus formula and other untruthful statements published concerning Dr. Pierce's world-famed family medicines, the Doctor has decided to publish all the ingredients entering into his Favorite Prescription for women and his equally popular tonic alterative known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Hereafter every bottle of these medicines, leaving the great laboratory at Buffalo, will bear upon it a full list of all the ingredients entering into the compound. Both are made entirely from native roots, barks and herbs. The ingredients of the Golden Medical Discovery being Golden Seal Root, Queen's Root, Stone Root, Wild Cherry Bark, Mandrake Root, Blood Root. The Favorite Prescription is prepared in a similar manner from Blue Cohosh Root, Lady Slipper Root, Unicorn Root, Golden Seal Root and Rattleweed Root, these ingredients being macerated for a long time in a non-alcoholic menstrum. The exact working formula for making these medicines cost Dr. Pierce and his Colaborating Chemist and Pharmacist many years' of study and experiments, but as perfected they produce almost perfect pharmaceutical compounds embodying all the active, medicinal principles residing in the ingredients employed, and this, too, in such form and combination as to keep unchanged in any climate. Thus the use of alcohol is entirely avoided in their manufacture and instead an agent is employed which possesses valuable medicinal properties, being a demulcent, anti-ferment and nutrient.

Women suffer in girlhood from backache, spine-ache and headaches, followed by irregularities painful or disagreeable, and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose. It is often the result of days of girlhood passed in overcrowded public schools, or worse, in a jail-like boarding school for young ladies. The brain is crowded, indigestible foods disturb the stomach, the body does not get healthful growth, and the undeveloped woman leaves school to plunge into social dissipations, followed only too closely by the taking up of wifely duties and responsibilities towards a husband who has only noticed her beautiful face. The woman suffering from continued nervousness, weariness, wakefulness, headache and backache, needs the advice of a physician of large experience. Perhaps the physician of the largest experience in the Diseases of women is Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. The young wife desiring the advice of a physician and younger single women, we should advise to write at once to Dr. Pierce, who will treat their correspondence as strictly confidential, and give them an intelligent medical opinion of their cases without cost.

FARMERS TO LOSE

If Government Fixes Freight Rates, Says Henry L. Little.

Denies Large Shippers Are Better Treated Than Small Shippers.

Minneapolis, May 26.—Henry L. Little, manager of the Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mills company, today declared the farmers of the Northwest, who possessed wisdom, would have no part in the agitation for governmental freight rates.

"If the government does attempt to fix rates, the farmers will lose markets that now make their grain valuable, and millions of dollars will be lost to them," said Mr. Little.

He also referred to the statement that railroads accord better treatment to large than to small shippers.

"I have been both," said he. "And I can say there is no difference in the treatment by the railroads. I received fair rates when I shipped ten cars. I receive fair rates now and I ship 200 cars per day."

The statements of Mr. Little are interesting in that they come from a man who knows whereof he speaks. Mr. Little is well known in the Northwest. He has been shipping flour for twenty-six years. He is one of the pioneers in placing the flour of the Northwest in the countries of Europe, South America and even South Africa.

"My advice to men who produce wheat is to let the railroads alone," continued Mr. Little. "And I believe a simple question will illustrate my point. What would the Northwest have been had it not been for the railroads? Let every man answer that as he will. My answer is that the Northwest of today would have been an impossibility had it not been for the railroads. And I am just as certain there would have been no such development, and no such prosperity in this great land, had the government attempted to tell the railroads what they should charge for freight.

"Men are inclined to forget, however, and it is always well to point to present conditions. Twenty-six years ago the output of our mills was ten carloads a day. That would have furnished a very limited market for the producers of wheat. As the time passed we constantly increased the output. Then came the time when we manufactured flour for export. Now the railroads were largely responsible for this. They made rates that enabled us to compete with the other countries of the world in their home markets. Take Australia, for instance. That is a wheat producing country. Yet we sell Minneapolis flour in Australia. And every time a market was opened to us it meant another market for the wheat of the Northwest.

"Well, in time these foreign markets became of great importance. Let me illustrate. Last year we shipped abroad 1,500,000 barrels of flour. We shipped one-third of the Minneapolis flour that found a market abroad. Multiply that by three and you have an export trade of 4,500,000 barrels of flour. And remember this from Minneapolis alone.

"That is the miller's side of the story. Now the wheat producers of the Northwest furnished the wheat that made this flour. We figure that it requires five bushels of wheat to make a barrel of flour. At this rate 22,500,000 bushels of wheat were consumed. That means that 22,5000,000 bushels of Northwestern wheat found a market in the countries of Europe, South America and South Africa.

"I want to emphasize the fact that the railroads made this possible. Their rates are low. Now, if the government is to assume charge of rates, they will be made on the basis of the rate per mile. That will make it impossible for us to compete in the markets of the world.

"We will have no opportunity of selling our 4,500,000 barrels of flour in the foreign ports. The market for the 22,500,000 bushels of wheat will be lost to the wheat producers of the Northwest. And the result? Fewer markets with those markets congested. A congested flour market means a cheap flour market. A cheap flour market means cheaper wheat. There you have it. If we are shut out of foreign ports by a government made freight rate, the farmers of the Northwest can assure themselves there will be a less demand for their wheat and a smaller price for the grain that is consumed."

Mr. Little was asked to name the countries in which the flour of the Minneapolis mills found a market.

"Almost everywhere," was his answer. "We send flour to Australia, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Great Britain, South America and South Africa. And we attempted to establish a market in China and Japan, but the interstate commerce commission stepped in and stopped us.

"A year ago the railroads attempted to open markets in these two countries for our flour. They made us a rate that enabled us to compete with the flour produced in other countries. The people of the Eastern countries were pleased with out product and we congratulated ourselves upon the fact that two additional markets had been opened to use. The shipments continued for two or three months. Then came a complaint to the interstate commerce commission. The railroads were compelled to abandon the rate. The new markets were closed to us. We lost a market for our flour and the wheat producers of the Northwest lost a market for their wheat."

Mr. Little then turned his attention to the freight rates that had prevailed within the last two decades.

"Rates are not more than one-half as much as formerly," he said. "I remember when it cost 50 cents to send a barrel of flour to Chicago. That was the normal rate under normal conditions. Now we send a barrel of flour to Chicago for 20 cents. That is the regular rate under normal conditions. The railways have saved in the cost of production wherever they could. That is good business sense. The saving has been presented to the shipper in the form of lower freight rates. I take no stock in the cry of rebates. I am certain there are none. And I am equally certain that the small shipper receives the same rate as is paid by the heavy shipper. As I said, there was a time when we shipped ten cars a day. I believe we received the same rate that the man that shipped more received." And today, when we are shipping 200 cars a day, I feel no hesitancy in declaring that we pay as much freight per car as the man who ships a much smaller amount.

"Not long ago, a writer for an Eastern magazine sought me. He was accompanied by a friend of mine. Although this friend never shipped a carload of freight, he had many grievances against the railroads of the Northwest. Naturally he and this friend of mine were warm friends. When they arrived at my office, my friend introduced the writer. His words were something like these: 'Mr. Little, my friend is seeking material which can be used in an article against the railroads. You have been a shipper both large and small. Now sit down and tell him all about it.'

"And I answered him in something like this fashion: 'Your friend, the writer will waste his time if he talks to me. I have no complaint to make. I can give him no material for this article. Only such fellows as you, who have never shipped a carload of freight can do that.'

"I tell this incident to illustrate the point that the men who are doing the most kicking and who are finding the most fault, are the men who have never shipped a pound of freight."

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

The Food Value of a Soda Cracker

You have heard that some foods furnish fat, other foods make muscle, and still others are tissue building and heat forming.

You know that most foods have one or more of these elements, but do you know that no food contains them all in such properly balanced proportions as a good soda cracker?

The United States Government report shows that soda crackers contain less water, are richer in the muscle and fat elements, and have a much higher per cent of the tissue building and heat forming properties than any article of food made from flour.

That is why Uneeda Biscuit should form an important part of every meal. They represent the superlative of the soda cracker, all their goodness and nourishment being brought from the oven to you in a package that is proof against air, moisture and dust—the price being too small to mention.

FEDERATION CONFERENCE

Twenty-One Denominations Have Already Appointed Delegates.

New York, May 26.—There was held here a few days ago the first meeting of the full committee of arrangements for the International Conference on Federation, which is to be held in this city, in Carnegie hall next November, from the 15th to the 20th. The meeting was called to hear the report of the executive committee as to details arranged for the conference, and of a sub-committee which has been working on the program. It was attended by representatives of a dozen or more denominations, and in a series of brief addresses commending the plans for the conference, there were heard representatives of the Presbyterian, Reformed, Congregational, Baptist, Free Baptist, Methodist and Lutheran bodies.

The secretary of the committee, the Rev. Dr. E. B. Sanford, reported that already twenty-one denominations have appointed delegates to the conference, in numbers varying from two to fifty, according to the size of the denomination. Among the larger bodies that have named official delegates are the Baptist, Disciples of Christ, Congregational, Methodist, Methodist South, African Methodist, Methodist Protestant, Presbyterian, Cumberland Presbyterian, Reformed, Evangelical and Moravian. The expenses of the conference will be, it is estimated, about $18,000, and the amount is to be raised among the members of the various religious bodies. There has been suggested a plan of apportionment whereby the amount named will be divided among the bodies according to their size, and this plan will doubtless be followed by the finance committee.

The program for the conference has been prepared in tentative form and provides for a consideration of the relations of a united church to evangelism; to the social order; to home and foreign missions; to religious education, and to the fellowship of faith; the essential unity of Christianity; the relation of the church to the national life; the kingdom of God, the transcendent aim of the united church. The purpose of the conference is to discuss in all its phases the closer relations between the churches, called "Federation" and to organize, if possible, a national religious body in which all the Protestant denominations shall have representation. This national body will have nothing to do with ecclesiastical questions or church government, but will be a medium through which the denominations may be heard in the great moral and social questions that come before the people.

Speakers who have already accepted places on the conference program include the Rev. Drs. Charles L. Thompson, William H. Roberts, J. Wilbur Chapman, S. J. Niccolls, Robert F. Coyle and Charles C. Hall of the Presbyterian church; the Rev. Drs. J. H. Garrison and F. T. Power of the Disciples; Bishop Andrews and Rev. Drs. E. S. Tipple, F. Macon North and W. V. Kelley of the Methodist church; Bishops Galloway, Hendrix and Wilson of the Methodist South; President King of Oberlin and the Rev. Drs. William Hayes Ward and Amory H. Bradford of the Congregationalists; the Rev. Dr. Charles R. Watson of the United Presbyterians; Bishop Sabine of the Reformed Episcopal church; the Rev. Drs. J. B. Remensnyder and G. U. Wenner of the Lutherans; Bishops Doane and Greer, Dean Hodges and the Rev. Dr. A. S. Lloyd of the Episcopal church, and leading men of the Baptist, Reformed, German Reformed, Moravian and Methodist Protestant churches.

NEARLY 500 JOINTS

Thrive In Kansas, Though a Prohibition State.

Topeka, Kas., May 26.—Kansas is a prohibition state, but statistics have come to hand to prove it is not altogether thirsty.

Reports have been received from forty-two Kansas counties regarding the enforcement of the prohibitory law. Of these nineteen report the existence of licensed saloons. More than 450 saloons in Kansas are paying licenses to the different city and town governments. The information has been placed before Governor Hoch to form a basis for his coming order to close all liquor selling enterprises in the state.

Politicians generally say that Governor Hoch is making a political mistake in the attitude he is taking in demanding the closing of the "joints," not only in this city but in the larger cities of the state. One of those, however, who believes that the governor will profit by his insistence upon the closing of the "joints" in Kansas City, Kan., Leavenworth, Atchison and this city is W. Y. Morgan of Hutchison, a member of the lower house of the last legislature. Mr. Morgan, who is here, said:

"It is my opinion that by closing the 'joints' in those towns which are recognized as the strongholds of the whisky crowd, the governor would make no mistake. The sentiment of these towns towns is against Governor Hoch anyway, and it would not be any more against him if he should enforce the law there. On the other hand, it would make Hoch solid with the Prohibitionists of the state. The small towns and the farming communities are generally dry; they want the law enforced, and it is the small towns and farmers who control the state."

SAVED BY DYNAMITE.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her." Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and La Grippe. At all druggists, price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

UNCLE SAM PROBING

Swindles Operating Under the Guise of "Mexican" Plantations.

About $60,000,000 of American Money In These Undertakings.

Washington, May 26.—The Ubero rubber and coffee plantation schemes in Mexico against which a fraud order was recently issued, are not the only ones of the kind.

It develops that about 150 companies have been operating throughout the country, many of which are of the same general character.

The facts gathered prove that about $60,000,000 of American money have been paid into speculative Mexican plantation companies. Many of them have gone out of existence. Others are now in the hands of receivers and still others are reorganizing. General action on the part of the authorities in various sections, against a large number of these concerns, is now likely.

Very few have in any way justified the extravagant literature that has been scattered from one end of the country to the other. They have sold stock on the installment plan, in spite of several warnings that have been put up by the United States government and the consular representatives of this country in Mexico.

The high price of rubber has been the first factor which has made possible the development of these companies and the sale of their securities. Again tropical agriculture being largely in the experimntal state, the scheme has been a fruitful one to unscrupulous promoters, because it was easy to deceive the uninlated.

In nearly all cases the plan of operation in these companies has been the same. First, a large number of acres of land would be purchased at a low price. This wild land is readily obtainable in Mexico from fifty to seventy-five cents an acre. The land being secured, a company would be formed with a large capital, known as a development company and controlled by the insiders.

This step being taken, a second company was organized and a contract would be made between the two by which company number two, whose securities would be bought by the public, would purchase the land from company number one, with the further agreement that number one would plant certain rubber trees and other tropical products, and care for them for a period of about fifty months. For this, company No. 1 would receive $300 an acre.

If the rubber and coffee trees were honestly planted, according to this contract, and properly cared for the full period of fifty months, it would not cost company No. 1, including the payments made for the land itself, more than $50 for the entire period of fifty months. There would thus be a net profit of about $250 an acre to the promoters, while the public took all the risk. But few of these development companies have made the plantings called for or have cared for the land according to the contract. It has been possible to cover this up, because in the majority of cases the inside company was controlled and owned by the promoters of the second company most of the time, and the small holders of stock were in no position to find out the true conditions.

Practically all of the companies have boasted that every year an "inspector," representing the stockholders and chosen by them, would be sent to the plantation to make a report. The general plan has been for the insiders to control the selection of this inspector. He is usually some man who could be easily handled and who had no knowledge whatever of tropical agriculture. Even when the inspector selected was really honest, it was easy to deceive him, because of the wonderful possibilities that are opened up to the unittated. The reports of these inspectors as set forth in the literature of these stock-selling concerns are most entertaining and amusing, when regarded in the light of the actual facts.

Most of them have been induced by the promoters of the company to insert in their reports long quotations from supposed authorities on tropical rubber, garbled consular reports and similar statements, well calculated to deceive investors. Most of the literature has been profusely illustrated with selected pictures, which have fooled thousands who have examined these booklets. Prominent men have been quoted at length in statements that they never made.

Another part of the scheme, in most cases, has been to give away free stock, and use as officers of the company prominent men, or substantial business men, who had practically no knowledge of what the company was doing—the promoters themselves managing it.

In scores of cases dividends have been paid of from 6 to 10 per cent. In some cases it has been explained that these dividends came from "side crops;" but about a year ago the promoters became frightened over the developments in Ubero and dropped the side crops explanation. Now they offer other excuses for the dividends. One is that the inside company is so confident of the large dividends that will be earned when the rubber trees reach maturity, it is willing, meanwhile, to pay dividends to the stockholder, if he will assign his dividend rights to them. No dividends whatever have been earned. The investors have simply paid back a part of their money.

The Ubero swindle is now focusing attention upon all of these concerns. The investigations which are being made throughout the country are likely to result in the winding up of many of these companies. Already several of them are in the hands of receivers, and others are undergoing reorganization. Some of the promoters have been fully advised of the situation in the Ubero companies, and the first of the year began to get ready for a cyclone. They destroyed a lot of their old literature and proceeded to get out new booklets, in which all reference to "side crops" was omitted. Many of them also have begun to explain that no dividends can be expected now, until the rubber trees mature, because they have found by experiment that "side crops" are impracticable.

The situation has been called to the attention of the Mexican government, and will probably be thoroughly investigated by President Diaz, inasmuch as the scandal is likely to discourage the investment of American capital in Mexico, unless prompt action is taken. The United States government, also, is keeping a close watch on the situation.

FLATIRON BRAND

Placed on Girl's Shoulder By Her Employer.

York, Pa., May 26.—To debranded on the back with a flatiron, scalded with boiling water, and half drowned in cold water, to be stripped naked and lashed with a horsewhip until the blood came, to be fed on red pepper and knocked down with stove wood, to receive an ordinary whipping every day for four years, and have her hair pulled out by the handful—these are a few of the cruelties which Effie, the 13-year-old daughter of E. W. Jacobs of this city, alleges were inflicted on her by Mrs. Mary E. Laird, wife of John R. Laird, her employer, a wealthy farmer of Fairview Township.

The Lairds were arrested on oath of the child's parents. The child was brought back from Lairds by the father through the appeal of neighbors.

The girl bears on her back over her left shoulder blade a livid scar, which corresponds to the shape of a flatiron. This, she says, was placed there because she did not wash dishes fast enough.

It is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks selected for their purifying and healing qualities, and possesses just the properties that are needed to restore to the body strong robust health. When the blood becomes impure and clogged with waste matters and poisons the body does not receive sufficient nourishment and suffers from debility, weakness, sleeplessness, nervousness, loss of appetite, bad digestion and many other disagreeable symptoms of a disordered blood circulation, and if it is not corrected some form of malignant fever or other dangerous disorder will follow. S. S. S. builds up the broken down constitution, clears the blood of all poisons and impurities and makes it strong and healthy. The nerves are restored to a calm restful state, refreshing sleep is had again, the appetite returns and the whole system is toned up by this great remedy. S. S. S. is a blood purifier and tonic and acts promptly in this run-down depleted condition of the system. Book on the blood and medical advice furnished by our physicians, without charge.

I have used your S. S. S. and found it to be an excellent tonic to build up the general health and give tone and strength to the system. I have used other things highly recommended, but S. S. S. did me more good than everything else combined. As to its tonic properties it gives a splendid appetite, refreshing sleep, and the system undergoes a general building up under its invigorating influence.

TO BREAK STRIKE

Seventy-Five Men Have Left Duluth For Chicago.

Free Transportation, Board and Wage Scale of $3.50 a Day.

A special car containing about seventy-five strike breakers, left over the Northern Pacific this afternoon for Ashland. At Ashland the car will be transferred to the Wisconsin Central and will proceed at once to Chicago, where the men will be employed to take the place of the striking teamsters.

A representative of the Chicago Employers' association arrived in the city this morning from the Twin Cities, where he has been hiring men as strike breakers for the past two weeks. He immediately got busy, and with the assistance of local people began the work of rounding up men looking for high wages in positions which are not looked upon very generally as being agreeable.

The offers made to men out of work were tempting. The wage to be paid is $3.50 and board, with ample police protection. Free fare to the Windy City is advanced, and when the strike is declared off, should there not then be places for the men being shipped from here, they will, it is affirmed, be returned to Duluth at the expense of the employers, if they want to come back to the Head of the Lakes.

The man representing the employers hoped to get 100 men before train time, but was unable to get together as many as that. There is so much work on the ranges and in different parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin that not a great many idle men are to be found, and not all of them cared to leave the city as strike-breakers.

Nearly 600 men have been sent from St. Paul and Minneapolis during the past two weeks, many of them being university students, it is said, who are anxious to get a little money ahead to help in paying the expense of their education.

The continuance of the strike now depends entirely upon the refusal of the employers to take back the men who walked out when told to do so by the walking delegates. No more negroes are being taken to Chicago as strike-breakers, and a number of those already there are being sent back whence they came. They were largely to blame for the more serious disturbances, it is said.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

Watertown, N. Y., May 26.—Andrew Outterson, aged 80 years, a pioneer paper manufacturer, is dead here. He helped his father erect the first paper-making machine built in America and ran off the first sheet of bank note paper ever made on a machine.

Omaha, Neb., May 26.—Capt. B. F. Reynolds, chief engineer of the Omaha waterworks, is dead at his home in Florence, aged 81 years. Capt. Reynolds was chief engineer of the steamship Pioneer, which in 1866, went to the relief of the John Franklin Arctic expedition, and recovered the bodies of Franklin and six companions. Capt. Reynolds had visited nearly every port of importance in the world.

Minneapolis, May 26.—Capt. John Martin, one of Minnesota's sturdy pioneers and for more than half a century a prominent citizen of Minneapolis, died at his farm, three miles north of here last night. He was one of the builders of the Minneapolis & St. Louis road and up to a few years ago was vice president and a member of the directorate of the Soo railway. He was a lumberman, a miller, a railroad official, a banker and a business man, and although his advanced age had narrowed his activities of late years, he was perhaps better known to the older people of the city than any other Minneapolitan. He was one of the wealthiest men of Minneapolis, his property interests being very extensive.

OPPOSED TO FEDERATION.

Fort Worth, Texas, May 26.—The general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church today voted against federation.

DECISION SOON

Committee From State Golf Association Coming to Duluth.

State Tournament Will Probably Be Held In This City.

The special committee appointed by the Minnesota State Golf association to decide whether the state golf tournament shall be held in Duluth this year, and whether the local grounds are suitable for the purpose, will arrive in the city tomorrow night or Sunday morning and pay a visit to the golf links. It is expected that their decision will be announced before they leave the city, and it is further believed that the decision will be favorable to Duluth.

Including the Duluth man there are five members of the committee, which is made up as follows: L. J. Hopkins, Duluth; Mr. Rees, Minneapolis; Mr. Taffry, Mankato; Mr. Dobbin, Faribault; Mr. Yeoman, Winona; Mr. Albert, Lafayette, and Harold P. Bend, of the St. Paul Town and Country club. While in the city the visitors will be the guests of the Northland Country club.

Mr. Bend holds the state golf championship, and won out in the trans-Mississippi contest. Mr. Jaffray is a close second, and in all the championship contests has been a close rival of Mr. Bend, always playing the finals with him. The other members of the committee are supposed to be among the best golf players of the state. In trying out the grounds they may hold a practice match Sunday.

The date for holding the state tournament has not yet been decided upon. It will probably be held late in July or early in August. There is no doubt that a decision favorable to Duluth as a place for holding the matches will be reached, for the local links are in fine condition at the present time, and compare very favorably with any in the Northwest.

APPLICATIONS REJECTED.

Soldiers, Additional Homestead Not Allowed.

Several soldiers' applications for land have just been rejected and the local land office has just been notified of them. One rejection is in the matter of Louis J. Hopkins, assignee of Anthony Young, for additional homestead consisting of the south half of the southeast quarter of 23, 64-12. His right of application is based on the service of Anthony Young in Company H, Seventy-second Ohio infantry, during the Civil war, from Oct. 12, 1861, to July 23, 1863. Based on the same service, one Antone Young of Boonville, Crawford county, Mo., made the original application for a homestead in 1868.

The pension certificate of Anthony Young shows that he has resided in Fremont, Sandusky county, Ohio, ever since the war, so together with this circumstance and the fact that the assignment in question was procured by one Nelson W. Ward of Springfield, Mo., who has purchased numerous claims that have proven fraudulent, the application is rejected.

Memorial Day Proclamation By the Mayor.

With increasing veneration we approach the day made sacred by a grateful people to the memory of the Nation's fallen heroes—Decoration Day; when by every loving tribute to the dead we may prove to the living soldier a country's earnest gratitude; and to our children and to the younger generation, that the greatest reward this side of Heaven is given to those patriots who respond to their country's call in the hour of need.

In order that this day may be properly observed, I hereby request that, on Tuesday, May 30th, all business houses close, and that the citizens in general cease all unnecessary labor.

Signed Friday, May 26, by
M. B. CULLUM,
Mayor.

PROGRAMS GIVEN

Schools Present Memorial Exercises With Veterans In Attendance.

Interesting Addresses Are Made to High School Students.

This morning, in the high school, four veterans of the G. A. R. spoke to the students about Memorial day and the great events of the Civil war, the memory of whose heroes is honored on that day.

The choir opened the program with the song, "The American Flag," after which Principal Smith made a few remarks, introducing the veterans, saying in brief:

"Each year brings us one year farther from the events of that great conflict, which racked our country through and through, nearly half a century ago; each year the ranks of those who fought to preserve our Union are gradually thinning, but we are glad that we still have with us a few of them to remind us of what that great struggle really was. It is perhaps difficult for you to understand just what the word 'nation' means. There was a great question about that in those stirring times which we are gathered here to commemorate this morning, but thanks to the many patriotic men that responded to the president's call to arms, we are still a united people. It is our privilege to have several of them with us this morning, and I am sure that we shall be glad to listen to what they may have to say."

Russell McLean then read an extract from Senator Beveridge's speech, delivered on the battlefield of Shilo when dedicating the monuments to the Indiana soldiers.

Rev. Mr. Klimball was the first of the old soldiers to speak. He said in part: "As the first speaker it is my privilege to extend to you the good wishes of the G. A. R. and to thank you and show our appreciation of your aid in keeping alive the memory of Memorial day.

"In the address that has just been given, some mention was made of nationalism and I wish to call your attention to the fact that the magnificent system of free public schools that we have in our country, is the result of nationalism. Before the Civil war, the South was bitterly opposed to free schools, and even for a long time after its close they spurned gifts of money left to them on this condition. I mention this, my young friends, to show you why I deem it so appropriate for the students of the public schools to observe with us the events in the history of our country that are marked by Decoration day.

"If it were not for your co-operation the day would be one of much greater sadness, but when we look into your bright young faces, it encourages our old hearts to look forward to our country's future. Good citizenship is what we want, and it will be instilled by ideas of loyalty and patriotism. Inquiries have shown me that in the great strikes and the lawlessness going with them, not one old soldier has been engaged. They are on the side of law and order.

"When I was young and the war was approaching, I remember there was resistance and disloyalty in the North as well as in the South, and I particularly remember the distrust with which the government bonds were regarded and the great assistance that Jay Cook rendered the government in placing them on the market. In closing, let me say that we must also think of those that staid at home, of the mothers, the sisters, and the sweethearts, and also of the brave girls that went to the front in the capacity of nurses."

The choir sang "Peace to the Brave," which was followed by an address by M. H. Stanford, who was a drummer during the war. He said, in part:

"This is a very interesting occasion to me, particularly in this place, as the war was associated to a great extent with high schools and they with my remembrance of that war. When war came in the spring of 1861, I was in the high school and had just passed my thirteenth year, and for three years that experience in high school was associated with the history of that time, with the sentiment and feeling of the community in which I lived and that which we learned in the daily press.

"When Sumpter was fired on I went home and up to my room and cried, hardly knowing or understanding why such great grief came upon me. The whole country was aroused, and with but few exceptions there was one feeling prevalent, that the Union must and should be preserved at all cost. In 1864 I had one year left in school and after several uneffectual attempts succeeded in enlisting as a drummer in one of the regiments."

He then advised all the student to make the best use of their time, and reiterated the remarks of his predecessor in regard to good citizenship.

The choir sang another chorus, and then U. A. Burnham, a veteran of one of the New York regiments spoke for a short time. He gave an exceedingly vivid description of one of the battles of Bull Run, telling chiefly of the experiences of what was known as the "Iron Brigade," which was always recognized by the Confererates in battle.

He said that it was an interesting fact to note that the Federals and the Confererates often designated the same battle with a different name, due to the fact that the former generally lived in the cities and were attracted toward natural things, while the latter usually were brought up on plantations and were more interested in the towns and cities, and accordingly named the battle from the largest nearby town.

Jacob Laux of the Twenty-seventh Ohio then read a very interesting paper, supposed to be dated May 30, 1950, which told of the exercises that occurred a long time ago in the Duluth Central high school and of the experiences that one of the old soldiers told about his frightened run from imaginary danger and of how he was brought to his senses by a calm Southern girl on the path before him.

The choir rendered "Fling Out the Banner," which closed the exercises of the day.

MRS. D. T. HELM PASSES AWAY

Wife of Prominent Duluth Man, Dies In St. Paul.

Mrs. Jessie C. Helm, wife of D. T. Helm, the Duluth vesselman, died this morning at the home of her cousin, Mrs. E. W. Bennett in St. Paul.

Mrs. Helm had lived in Duluth for seven years previous to her death, her home being on Superior street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues east. She had been ill for three or four months previous to her death. One son, Ray, and a daughter, Miss Cora, survive her.

The funeral will be held Sunday from the residence of her rather, W. R. Clark, 880 Washington boulevard, Chicago.

LIKED THE SHOW.

The Chinese laundrymen on board some of the battleships often contribute amusing situations, as the following incident taken from a letter received from the North Atlantic fleet by an officer of the navy yard will show, says the Brooklyn Eagle. There was a minstrel on board the Alabama and all the captains and officers of the fleet were assembled on the quarter deck awaiting the arrival of Rear Admiral Barker, commander-in-chief of the fleet, when somebody shouted "Gangway! gangway!" All thought it meant the admiral was coming and everybody lined up in two lines and stood at the stiffest attention. Not an eyelid batted as down the line came Mr. One Lung, first-class Chinese laundryman, in his Sunday go-to-meetin's, smoking a fat cigar and holding his head high in air. After marching impressively down the line, he squealed out: 'Belly good; me muchee like minstel show; me llish, too.' And Admiral Barker on his gig in the water wondered what the applause meant that came over the waves to him.

WAS SUPERSTITIOUS.

"I've heard tales of superstitious women," said the very obliging young man to the Philadelphia Record, "but a woman who lives in our neighborhood has them all beaten. She occupies a twin house just above ours, and, despite her constant dissertations on hoodoolsm, is rather popular. The other day she went out without her key, and when she returned home could not get in. She was on the pavement almost crying when I came along. Naturally I offered to assist by climbing in a window. I went to the twin house and, climbing through a second-story window, got on the porch. Then I squeezed through a tiny bathroom window into her house. After I opened the front door I started to leave, when she stopped me with evident embarassment she explained that if I left by any other route than the one by which I entered death would surely visit the house. Summed up, she wanted me to climb back over the roofs. Well, as she is young and pretty and I'm obliging, I did it; but you can bet the next time she loses her key someone else will jeopard his life."

WHAT "FLIMFLAM" IS.

Senator Depew was explaining to a clergyman the slang term, to "flimflam." "To flimflam," he said, "is to confuse a man's mind to such a degree that he actually consents to and concurs in his own cheating. Now permit me to give you an illustration of flimflam: A boy goes to a grocer and asks for a pint of molasses. 'Put the molasses, sir,' he says, 'in this pitcher.' The grocer draws the molasses in a pint measure, pours it into the pitcher and hands it to the boy. But the boy, looking at the measure, exclaims: 'See here, you haven't given me all my molasses. There's some still sticking to the bottom of the measure.' 'Oh, that's all right, sonny,' says the grocer easily. 'There was some in the measure before.' Thereupon the flimflammed boy goes off content."

KEEP FOG OUT.

In summer time the air used for ventilating the house of commons in London passes through blocks of ice, says the Kansas City Journal. In winter it is heated. In fog the outer air passes through layers of cotton wool six inches thick. During forty-eight hours of fog, the cotton wool on one occasion was as black as the back of a chimney. Thanks to these precautions, the house has been absolutely free from mist and the atmosphere is in normal condition, while a dense fog prevails outside.

WHAT WILL HE DO?

It would be a singularly fit thing if the result of John D. Rockefeller's training of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., should turn out to be the repudiation of the father's methods by the son.

It is well known that throughout his life, in spite of his methods, in spite of his thousands of crushed and bleeding victims, in spite of the suicides, the crime, the poverty that his system has produced, John D. Rockefeller has aped the Christian life, and has accompanied his most characteristic acts by a quotation of Scripture. "Judge not that ye be not judged," says the good book, but it is evident that the people who are aware of his intensely religious nature and his intensely predatory methods have found it difficult not to judge the one by the other.

Naturally, the son and heir has been brought up in the same deeply religious atmosphere, and in that respect, at least, will follow in his father's pathway. As to business methods, that has yet to be seen. Young Rockefeller has given his Bible class some opinions, according to report, that most people would find difficult to reconcile with the father's business methods.

"I believe that a man can be a good Christian and a successful business man," he is reported to have said. Again: "If he finds that the business he is following interferes with his Christian duties or disturbs his beliefs, he should give the business up." Again: "To be really a Christian you must observe the spirit as well as the letter of the law." Again: "Many men today think that dishonesty is the best policy, and that business and Christianity are diametrically opposed to each other." Again: "Absolute honesty is the chief requisite of a successful business man."

The average man does not think that it is possible to do as Rockefeller has done and be consistent with these utterances. Very likely Rockefeller, Sr., sees nothing inconsistent between "doing as you would be done by" and throttling competition by the unfair methods of conspiracy, oppression and persecution. Very likely he thinks a Christian life consistent with the life of the mightiest robber baron that ever held up the people on the highways of commerce.

Young Rockefeller has said things, according to report, indicating a condition of mind surely not consistent with the life of his father's successor. Will he reconcile his ideas to it as his father has done, or will he repudiate his father's methods and try to run the Standard Oil company and its correlative interests upon a Christian basis? If he manages to carry something of his Christianity home from church with him Sunday, and gets it into Standard Oil methods Monday, there will be a terrific revolution in Standard Oil that week.

THE COWARD'S REFUGE.

Here is a conversation reported to have taken place between Dr. George Koch of New Ulm and his father on the Friday after the murder of which Dr. Koch is now accused:

"George, here is a loaded gun. If you killed Dr. Gebhardt it's your duty to go out to the barn and end it all."

"Father, I did not do it."

"Then I'll stand by you till the end."

The Herald will give the accused dentist's father the benefit of the doubt, and refuse to believe that any such conversation ever took place. If it did, either between Dr. Koch and his father or between any other father and any other son similarly situated, it is a very sad commentary on the honor and intelligence of the father.

The intimation is that if the son was guilty he should go out to the barn and plead guilty by shooting himself.

Suicide is the refuge of the coward, the poltroon, the moral degenerate, or of the insane. It requires vastly more bravery for a man to take his medicine and confront the world of troubles that may face him than to sneak out of the world by the suicide route. That is an act of the rankest cowardice, equivalent to a desertion in the face of the enemy, and The Herald refuses to believe that there is a father in Minnesota so depraved as to give such advice to his son.

That father's declaration that he would stand by his son to the end should have had no condition. Certainly it should have carried no such condition as the one proposed in the reported conversation. Guilty or not guilty, the man is his son, and entitled to his support and comfort though all the rest of the world were against him.

Guilty, that father's advice should have been to make his peace with his God, and meet the punishment the law prescribes like a man. Not guilty, that father's declaration should have been to fight to the finish, to the last dollar, to the last drop of blood.

No, The Herald refuses to believe that there is a father in this state so utterly devoid of the instincts of humanity, so deaf to the voice of decency, as to give such advice to his son.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Resolved into its final elements, the question of municipal ownership is simply a question of whether the business instinct is confined to corporations and their employes, or whether public servants are capable of exercising it. Attended by good management, there is every reason why municipal ownership should be a success, and none why it should fail. Duluth has solved that question by the adoption of unsalaried, nonpartisan boards of managers, made up of business men with no direct political interests, who have sought the good of the service and the welfare of the city rather than the advancement of a party or a political ring.

Under such management as this, there can be no arguments against municipal ownership, except those of the monopolists who are driven out of business by it. In municipal hands, the elements of inflated capital stock and swelled bond issues are eliminated, and fat, well-paid sinecures for pets of directors find no friendly shelter. Shorn of such things as these, the well-managed city-owned plant can make money on much cheaper rates than the privately-owned plant.

But municipal ownership is not an abstract idea, nor has it been for many a year. In Great Britain alone, in 1902, there were 931 municipalities owning waterworks, 99 owning street railways, 40 owning gas works and 181 supplying electricity.

The city of Sheffield, Eng., has invested $75,000 out of the profits of its street railway in shops to be rented. Liverpool owns its vast docks, and has built 2,000 model tenement houses.

Like any other business, municipal ownership depends upon its management for its success.

THE MEDICINE HABIT.

There is a good deal of enlightening human nature in the story of a Hoboken husband who was haled into court by his helpmeet on a charge of assault and battery, and who got off scot free on the unique defense that his wife was a professional invalid, with a prodigious appetite for drugs. To support his claim, he hauled into court 375 different sorts of medicine bottles and boxes which his wife had emptied during their three years of married life. It is reported that while she was giving testimony, the wife, after consulting her watch, drank a spoonful of medicine from a bottle in her reticule. The court dismissed her complaint, and as she sailed indignantly out of the courtroom she was observed to swallow two large pills.

It may be that this story is slightly overdrawn, but anybody can point out cases almost as bad. In every community—the words "in almost every household" nearly slipped into print—there are folks that study their symptoms with diligence and persistence that would accomplish much if exerted along useful lines. They read all of the patent medicine advertisements, and almost gleefully detect in themselves nearly every printed symptom. Everybody is familiar with the story told by the humorist who got a catalogue of symptoms in an advertising pamphlet, and discovered, to his horror, that he had everything in the list except housemaid's knee.

The wonder is not that such quantities of medicines as these unfortunates take do not cure them, but that they live through the experience. The patent medicine fiend consumes incredible quantities of queer mixtures, most of which must be harmless or the victims would die in shoals.

Victims of this habit are to be pitied. Their imaginations are usually acute, and they generally suffer as much from their imaginary ills as anybody could from real ones. The condition is one that tends to grow worse, because once a mind gets the habit of imagining illnesses, it finds plenty to do, every slightest feeling out of the normal being construed as certain evidence of mortal illness.

The remedy is to drive out such thoughts with thoughts of other things. Work is a sovereign cure for imaginary ills, as well as for some that are real. Cheerful thoughts are the deadliest enemies of gloomy ones. The thing to do is to substitute the health habit for the sickness habit, which is not half so hard as it sounds.

Hotel Gossip.

"Negroes in the North get fancy notions which have to be quickly dispelled when they return to the South to visit with friends and relatives," said R. A. Moore of Louisville, Ky., at the McKay. "As everybody by this time knows, they are not allowed such liberties in the Southern states as they are up here. As soon as they get across the Ohio river, for example, they are not permitted to ride in the same passenger coaches as the whites, but are put in cars by themselves. This, naturally, is rather galling to the educated black.

"Louisville, like other cities of the South, has its full quota of negroes. They are not greatly in evidence during the week, but if you want to see them in force, and desire to come to some definite conclusion as to their real number, all that is necessary is for you to take up your position somewhere on Market street after 9 o'clock any Saturday evening. By a tacit agreement all the whites disappear at that hour. At fifteen minutes to 9 they may be swarming over the thoroughfare, but when the hour strikes they have disappeared as completely as though the street had opened and swallowed them up, and their places are taken by the blacks, who are there by the hundred until midnight. This occurs only once a week, and invariably it is on Saturday night.

"Every year sees the negro advanced to a higher educational plane. The way things now are it is unnecessary for any of them to grow up without an education. Schools and colleges for the negroes have been established all over the South, and more of them are constantly being started. They are accomplishing a vast amount of good, and their beneficial effects are every year becoming more pronounced. In the professions you find as bright and able negroes as you do whites. I know of practising attorneys, physicians and professors whose only fault is the color of their skin. As it is most of them are able to derive a comfortable income from the practice of their professions."

"It is a peculiar fact that towns east of the Mississippi river which are perhaps two or three times the size of many to be found in the West are scarcely known at all beyond the borders of their own state, while the Western burg is known from ocean to ocean," said D. G. McKay of Lewiston, Mont., at the St. Louis. "Perhaps this is because there are fewer towns in the West. Take Lewiston and Helena, in Montana, for example. Nearly everybody appears to know where they are, although they are little more than villages.

"Lewiston has a population of about 3,000. Despite its size it is an up-to-date little city in every respect, except that it does not possess any metropolitan hotels. The stores you find there are of a grade equal to the best in the cities, and the stocks offered for sale are only of the best. The freight expense of getting goods into the town is so high that it does not pay to bring in shoddy articles. And the people are willing to buy the best. Everybody seems to have money. The miners are paid good wages, none of them receiving less than $3.50 a day, and they are free spenders.

"It costs passengers 5 cents a mile to ride on the railroad leading into Lewiston, and the freight rates are correspondingly high. The track is all grades and curves, and four or five cars is about all any engine can handle. In some places the grade is three feet to every hundred feet.

"Everything is very active in Western mining circles now, and the indications for a busy season are good. New properties are being opened up and old ones are being operated to the limit. Owing to the strict laws of the state, providing for heavy fines and imprisonment for anyone caught operating a wildcat scheme for fleecing the public, there are few fake mining propositions afloat in Montana. This is not saying that every mine into which money is put is turned into a paying proposition, for no mining proposition is a dead sure thing, but even the losing ventures are gone into with good faith. Mining is being brought down to such a fine point now that there are fewer large losses than in the old days, for before any great amount of money is spent the owners are able, with improved methods, to judge pretty accurately of just what the property will produce, and so do not go ahead unless a reasonable profit is in sight. Many failures in the past have been due to mismanagement. The diamond drill is a great boon to the miner of today."

"No city in the world has a better street car system than Washington," said W. C. Keegin, an attorney from the national capital, at the Spalding. "For a time Washington had one of the worst street car services in the country, but outside interests came in and secured charters, later establishing a system which we have learned to be proud of.

"The suburban service is not so good. In the District of Columbia congress grants the charters to the corporations, and in the main we must rely upon the good will of the corporations. Down in Washington you never hear of the graft stories that are encountered in the other big cities of the United States. There they have a fine set of commissioners, who are appointed by the president, and the city is a model one in many respects."

Rusting, Not Wearing.

Norwich, Conn., Bulletin: More than half the folks who think they are wearing out are just rusting out. Right with a feeling of weakness comes a spirit of resignation. You know what this is—a yielding to conditions, a tumbling down. The chances for a person in this world are fighting chances. Most that is won is achieved by activity and energy. The only time to be resigned is when you have to be. You do not have to be so long as there is a fighting chance. When you feel like being resigned it is time to sumon resolution, that will serve you ten times as well and keep your spirits from diving out.

The Weather.

When the frost that conditions yesterday indicated for last night came, it came in such infinitesimal quantities that it only made things fresher, and crisper, and fuller of the joyfulness of being alive. The east wind, too, failed to show up, and instead, this morning there was a fresh, brisk westerly wind. Cloudiness joined with its freshness to make it cooler than picnic parties would wish, but the day was better than passable, and probably there were not many picnic parties anyway.

However it works on Mr. Kicker, who is a good deal of a pessimist anyway, vegetation is surely thriving apace. The woods are turning from their faint green to the stage that precedes the ripe, rich green of June, before the summer's heat begins to paint it with touches of brown that remind Mr. Kicker that there is going to be an autumn after a while. For if the pessimist can't find anything to complain about in the day's weather, he dearly loves to remind people that there is sure to be bad weather later.

Too bad he can't be accommodated today, but the predictions furnished by the weather man are for even better things. The wind is due to stay in the Western semi-circle of the horizon, and to switch toward the southwest, bringing warmer weather tonight. This is likely to bring showers, which will add further encouragement to the work in nature's workshop, which is progressing so beautifully just now.

The frosts, though imperceptible here, came through Northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, but in the Red River valley it was warmer this morning. In the central valleys it was stationary, and there were low barometric pressures in the Nevada, Manitoba and Lake Erie countries.

O'Leary at the Crossing.

'Tis all along Fifth avenue, as wheels the grand display
Of hansom, coach, victoria, of landau and coupe,
That like Napoleon Bonaparte reviewing his army,
Stands Officer O'Leary at the crossing.

"Whoa, there! slow, there! Can't ye understand?
Dhraw back! shtop that hack whin Oi howld up me hand.
That's the way ye must obey whin th' general gives command."
Says Officer O'Leary at the crossing.

'Tis all along Fifth avenue the city orchid blooms,
The miles and miles of many styles, furs and silks and plumes;
But keen and stern, the censor of the coachmen and the grooms,
Stands Officer O'Leary at the crossing.

"Whoa, now! slow, now! Put yer horse to grass!
Aisy, sure, ye fresh chafoor—don't give me anny sass!
Halt, Oi say, an' open way to let this lady pass!"
Says Officer O'Leary at the crossing.

Half a mile of millionaires along that moving chain,
Dappled grays and thoroughbreds with cropped and arching mane—
But Maggie Flynn, the milliner, need not appeal in vain
To break the grand procession at the crossing.

"Whoa, there! slow there! Don't give me anny chin!
Siddy, sure, yo fresh chafoor, before I run yez in!
Whin Oi've me say ye'll all give way for little Maggie Flynn."
Says Officer O'Leary at the crossing.

Queerness of Indiana.

Peeking stonily and superiorly over the Boston Pale at a barbarian world, the Boston Herald stares and wonders at those happy Hoosiers and remarks:

"Indiana is a queer state."

We have forgotten whether Boston is crazier than Springfield or Springfie'd crazier than Boston. Indeed, statistics show that each is crazier than the other and both are crazier than all others. Massachusetts is the only state, but Kansas, where they have sane asylums. Yet Indiana looks "queer" to those Bost:n eyes in a fine frenzy rolling. "Don't mind him; he's crazy as a bedbug," says the gentleman who believes himself to be Nebuchadnezzar, as he glares at h's keeper.

By "crazy" we mean, of course, "stung by the gadfly," "full of sacred madness," "divinely dippy."

Boston contemplating pragmatically the rest of the universe and finding it bad is a familiar but joyous sight to most of us. Bitten by patriotism, however, the Indianapolis News cries that "it would be interesting to know in what ways Indiana is a queer state."

Peace, perturbed spirit! To be distinguished, to be different from the rest, is to be labeled "queer" or "crank." Indiana is "queer" in more ways than we have time and ink to write them down. For example, she has:

1. More and sweeter poets to the square inch than any other state and all other states.
2. More novelists to the square inch.
3. More politicians to the square inch.
4. More women's clubs to the square inch.
5. More dramatists and humorists to the square inch.
6. More "temperament," delight in literary and other glory, and as much or more state pride.
7. A Hoosier can pick out another Hoosier among ten thousand or a million men. Why?

A mystery. Indiana is "queer." So was Athens, in its most high and palmy days. It is the privilege of genius to do as it darn pleases.

Twenty Years Ago.

Taken From the Columns of Duluth Papers of This Date 1885.

Prospective millionaires in Duluth and its vicinity, men who own lands in the "gold" region of the north, have settled back with a long breath, and their air castles are dissipated into the air. H. Emery, the man who has invested more money than anyone else in mineral lands, has come back from the north, shaken the gold dust from his feet, and says there is nothing in the country but rock. The bottom has dropped out, for a time at least. Nightingale, the assayer, who is charged with using lead rich with precious metal to obtain the flattering results, is still in the gold country, but is expected down in a few days.

J. H. Emerson has begun work on two dwelling houses on the corner of Second street and First avenue east.

A statement that the St. Paul & Duluth and Canadian Pacific roads intend doing through business and making connection between Duluth and Port Arthur by boat, is denied by officers of the road here.

Driving on Second street is blocked by the work of the water company and W. C. Eyster, near Second avenue east.

McLean & Crawford are very busy just now in the iron works. They have completed repairs on the propeller Isle Royale this week, putting in a larger shaft and new wheel, and have built several derricks for the Northwestern Fuel company's Washburn docks.

Edward Erickson and Peter Johnson, Swedes, en route from this city to Portland, Or., were held up at Brainerd, Wednesday night, while waiting for a westbound train, and robbed of about $700. Bill Dake, a gambler, and Pat McNorton, a hard character, were arrested and held for trial. Most of the money was recovered.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Walker Pilot: A man might live in a big city and forget there is a God, but not in Walker. Too much nature, and too little of man's genius in Northern Minnesota to allow one to forget. A few of the godless city folk better come up and get converted.

Red Wing Republican: Now that most of the murder trials are out of the way, we can turn our attention to hoeing the garden.

International Falls Press: Congressman Bede still lingers at Washington, apparently indifferent to his gubernatorial boom.

Albert Lea Tribune: Senator Beveridge of Indiana urges the people to "get the habit of happiness." And when you awaken in the morning repeat to yourself, "everything is all right." Now, don't say that you could do so if you were a United States senator, but go ahead and try it anyway.

JUNE.

The birds are singing in the trees—
Why shouldn't they? They take their ease,
They loaf about the woods all day,
And haven't any rent to pay.

The flowers bloom and gayly bow—
Why shouldn't they? Who'd make a row
If down below they had a root
Preparing food and drink to suit?

The trees are rustling all their leaves—
Why shouldn't they? Who is there grieves
When neatly dressed from top to toe
And not a cent to pay or owe?

The fishes dart about the sea—
Why shouldn't they? It seems to me
That men enjoy mere rambling, too,
Provided there's no work to do.

The little lambs do skip and play—
Why shouldn't they? What's in their way?
They have no bric-a-brac to smash,
Or doctor's bills to pay in cash.

All Nature finds the world attune—
Why shouldn't she?? The month is June,
The grass is green, the sky is blue.
How very trite that is, though true!

Washington Star: "Don't you feel deeply impressed by the halls of congress?"

"I don't know," answered Senator Sorghum, thoughtfully. "The hauls made there don't strike me as being nearly as large as formerly."

Judge: "So the lawyers got most all the estate. Did Ethel get anything?"

"Oh, yes. She got one of the lawyers."

Chicago Tribune: "They have arrested him, have they? What is the amount of the defalcation?"

"No one knows, but it must be enormous. He can remember where $10,000 of it went."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The more favors you ask the fewer will be granted.

It is easy to understand why people like dogs, but how in the world do dogs make themselves like people?

If a woman has birds' wings on her hat it is a sign she doesn't like little children to be cruel to animals.

A Sad Case.

Milwaukee Sentinel: It is not the purpose of the writer to record in this column those who have fallen from grace by reason of failure to see the pitfalls with which their paths were beset. It is not for us to moralize or philosophize upon the serious side of life; there are other and more appropriate parts of the paper set aside for such purposes. But little lessons do not come amiss, especially wherefrom morals may be drawn.

The young man was one who commanded the social and commercial respect of all with whom he came in contact. Round by round he had ascended to the verge of success in the financial world. Faithful, of good habits, he had in twelve years worked himself to the head of a department, where thousands of dollars were intrusted daily to his care.

And not once had the breath of suspicion rested upon his fair name.

But in an unguarded moment the crash came. He fell.

For a brief moment the world looked on, without offering a helping hand, then passed him by. It's the way of the world. "Drat that banana peel, anyway," he was heard to mutter. Picking himself up, he continued on his way.

Help Needed.

Stand Pat or Fall Flat?

New York Sun: What the Ohio Republican convention says of national matters will be far heard.

Ohio has been a capital of standpatism. Many of its Republican politicians are known not to love Mr. Roosevelt, except for purposes of publication. But if, as has been said often, "Roosevelt has nobody but the people with him," what are those secret dissenters to do?

For Roosevelt or against him; for Taft or against him; for or against the policy of paying higher than American export price for supplies for the Panama canal; for or against excessive and hidebound protection; for or against tariff rates that squeeze American consumers and give rebates to foreigners—the convention will have to decide.

Will the standpatters stand pat or fall flat?

Indianapolis News: Still a deficit of $10,000,000 or so caused by rural free delivery is a good deal easier for the country to tolerate than some other deficits it has been called on to face. Here at least it gets something for its money.

What is the Limit?

Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin: Orders for new tonnage at the lake shipyards do not flow in as rapidly as in former years, when wood was the ship material and when a 1,500-tonner was a big ship, but whenever a contract is made the addition to the carrying fleet counts in the matter of tonnage. The last order, to the Great Lakes Engineering works at Detroit, is for a steamer capable of carrying 10,000 tons. She is to be 530 feet long, 56 feet wide and 31 feet deep.

The 500-footer is no longer a novelty. There are now many steamers of that class in service on the lakes. Every new vessel seems to represent a desire to own the "largest ship afloat" on fresh water, and consequently the figures are forging upward toward the 600-foot mark. Last year the Augustus B. Wolvin was the "marine wonder," on a length of 590 feet. But she has since been eclipsed by the Elbert H. Gary, built at Chicago, which is 563 feet in length, 9 feet longer than the Wolvin. Now it is reported that the marine investor after whom the Wolvin is named is preparing plans for a vessel that will be 578 feet long—nine feet longer than the Gary.

At the rate of nine feet for every reach for the honor of owning the largest vessel, the 600-foot mark will soon be reached. This may be so close to the limitations of lake channels and harbors that the builders of big ships will have to call a halt in their ideas as to size.

The Hardest Job.

Detroit News: Every man thinks his own is the really hardest job.

The really hardest job, however, is that of the hero in a modern novel. These are the performances of one here in one chapter of a recent novel:

His countenance fell.
His voice broke.
His heart sank.
His hair rose.
His eyes blazed.
His words burned.
His blood froze.

Now, how would you like to be that hero?

The Dollar's Confession.

The solemn organ pealed in state,
The choir melodious sang;
Upon the contribution plate
A silver dollar rang.
The coin was thinking on its past,
And sighed, "Were they acquainted
With me I'd from their midst be cast,
For I am surely 'tainted.'"

The deacon listened as it spoke:
"I've swelled the miser's hoard,
I've fastened on the toiler's yoke
And sharpened many a sword;
I've fed the proud and scorned distress;
I've done the gambler's mission;
All this and more I do confess
With sorrow and contrition."

The honest churchman said: "My fame
Is scant for wit and learning,
But 'tis my duty sure to claim
A brand forth from the burning.
Perhaps you'll find the conquer yet
A nobler destination.
A dollar, like a man, should get
A chance at reformation."

Naval Relics of '98.

Springfield Republican: There is a pride in enrolling under the national flag a warship captured from the enemy, which is the nearest modern equivalent of the captives following at the chariot wheels of a Roman triumph. The former Spanish warship Reina Mercedes, sunk in Santiago harbor by order of Admiral Cervera, and afterward raised and repaired, has been converted into a receiving ship at the Portsmouth (N. H.) navy yard, and is, according to the construction report, the finest of her kind in the navy. She was originally built at Carthagena in 1887, and was of 3,090 tons. It was on the Reina Mercedes that Hobson and his companions were first taken after their daring exploit.

Legal Logic.

Brooklyn Eagle: There are men in Sing Sing who are serving sentences for thefts of a few dollars. Yet one candidate has been released from that institution after serving three years for stealing a quarter of a million. Incidentally, he committed perjury and forgery. By these tokens the Milwaukee bank president who stole $2,000,000 or more will be sent to jail for nearly a week.

THEY PASSED EXAMINATION

As Lawyers and Will Practice Their Profession.

Joplin, Mo., May 26.—Miss Della Sharp of Carthage, and Miss Anna Campbell of Joplin, are full-fledged lawyers. The young women, who are both court stenographers, took the examination for admission to the bar, as required in Missouri, purely for the enjoyment of the novelty, but it is generally understood that they will practice their profession.

The proceeding by which the young women were admitted to practice in all of the courts of Missouri was held in Judge Howard Gray's court, when a favorable report concerning the knowledge of the law of the two fair applicants was made by a committee of the best lawyers of the Jasper county bar.

The committee was composed of thorough lawyers, and the gentlemen appeared in the examination to which they subjected the young women to be disposed to guard the Jasper county bar against incompetent members. The whole field of law and equity, from the days of Justinian and Gregory, was explored in the examination. The fair disciples of Blackstone were required to scatter information broadcast like the law department of a state university, and it was a revelation to the members of the examining committee to observe the readiness with which the young women disposed of questions, especially those pertaining to the rules of practice as established in the courts of this state and county.

The applicants for license to practice law gave evidence of familiarity with all the commonly accepted authorities on the elementary principles of law and equity. They had read the commentaries of Blackstone and Kent, and were especially familiar with the writings of Blackstone.

Miss Sharp and Miss Campbell are natives of this state and have lived in Jasper county all their lifetime. Miss Anna Campbell makes her home at 308 Virginia avenue, Joplin, and Miss Della Sharp lives at 209 North Maple street, Carthage. Each was educated in the schools of her home town, and both have been dependent upon their own resources since completing the course of study in these home schools. They have been without parents since early childhood.

LEGAL OPINION IS DEMANDED

As to Male's Right to Appear In Woman's Attire.

Washington Courthouse, O., May 26.—Randolph Melbourne, who was arrested here a few days ago for appearing on the streets dressed in female attire, has not received an answer to the letter he wrote Attorney-General Wade Ellis, asking his opinion as to whether he cannot continue to wear woman's clothes on the streets without violating the law.

Milbourne asserts that the law does not touch his case, as he desires to wear female attire because it better suits his form, and he feels more comfortable when thus dressed than when he is dressed as a man. He says he never did like to wear men's clothing, and for years he has been wearing the garb of a woman about his home, where he lived alone.

Mr. Melbourne says: "It has been my intention for a long time to discard men's clothing and dress only in female garb. For years I have worn ladies' garments about my home and I feel much better than when dressed as a woman. While physically I am a man yet spiritually and intellectually I am neither a man nor a woman, while I feel that in form and spirit I incline more to effiminancy and am gradually taking on more of the nature of womanhood.

"There is today too much attention paid to the kind of clothing a person wears. In New Testament times men and women dressed alike, in long flowing robes, and now I am arrested for wearing garments in vogue in those days. Why should I be arrested for wearing clothing of my choice when I am doing it because I think it is my duty to do so?

"Dr. Mary Walker, a woman of Washington, D. C., chose to wear men's clothing because she thought them better suited to her profession, holding that in the sick room men's clothing does not stir up the dust of the floors as women's skirts do, and hence should be worn by her. Dr. Mary Walker was arrested for wearing men's clothing. She pleaded her own case and won in the courts.

"If Dr. Mary Walker can lawfully wear men's clothing upon the streets of American cities, why should not I be allowed to wear women's garments if I prefer to do so? Another thing; my form is better suited for female dress than for male attire, and I never feel comfortable in men's clothing, while I am at perfect ease when dressed as a woman. For ten years I have worn a woman's corset, and could scarcely live without it.

"If the authorities insist upon preventing me from wearing the attire of a woman it is my intention to petition the legislature at its forthcoming session for the special privilege to wear female attire.

"I am 61 years old, and for three years fought for the Union, serving the last year as drum major in the Veteran Reserve corps at Detroit baracks, having been transferred from the Eighty-first Ohio, and no one will go further than I will to stand by the law of the land."

BABY CAME NEAR DYING

From an Awful Skin Humor, Scratched Till Blood Ran. Wasted to a Skeleton.

SPEEDILY CURED BY CUTICURA

"When three months old my boy broke out with an itching, watery rash all over his body, and he would scratch till the blood ran. We tried nearly everything, but he grew worse, wasting to a skeleton, and we feared he would die. He slept only when in our arms. The first application of Cuticura soothed him so that he slept in his cradle for the first time in many weeks. One set of Cuticura made a complete and permanent cure. (signed) Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper, Ontario."

BIG DAMAGE SUIT

Dismissed, Plaintiff Being Too Drunk to Testify.

Basin, Wyo., May 26.—J. L. Hart of this city has recovered from a $15,000 jag. The case is an unusual one. Hart is the man who sued the Meeteetse-Cody Stage Co. for $15,000 damages for injuries sustained by the overturning of the stage coach last November during a race between the stage and a vehicle in which Governor Brooks, Congressman Mondell and Judge Cyrus Beard were riding. One of Hart's legs was broken, and he sued for $15,000, claiming the accident was due to the negligence of the driver. The case came up for trial, the jury was selected and the taking of testimony began, when Hart started out on a hilarious drunk at a time when he should have been in court to give his evidence. At the gentle suggestion of the judge his attorneys made a motion to dismiss the action, and the jury was discharged. Hart had an excellent case against the stage company.

DEATH FROM ANTHRAX

Which Was Contracted By Handling Skins.

London, May 26.—A dock laborer named Joseph Wynn helped to unload the cargo of the City of Cork at the London docks. The ship came from Oporto and carried wine, fruit and a large number of wet salted hides. Wynn aftrewards worked in a neighboring warehouse and handled Australian and Patagonian sheepskin.

He discovered a swelling on his neck, so he went to the London hospital, where he was given a note saying that he was suffering from abscess of the neck, and needed infirmary treatment. The man was then admitted into Bethnal Green infirmary, where he died on the following Tuesday.

Dr. William James Potts, medical superintendent at the infirmary, said at the inquest that death was due to anthrax. It often happened that men worked while infected with the bacillus.

The coroner remarked that the disease was common to oxen and sheep, the skins of which were imported into this country. The only hope for a man so infected was to cut a portion of the flesh away.

In answer to the coroner, the doctor said that Wynn was too bad to be operated on, but two injections of serum were made.

The coroner added that good results had been obtained by the use of serum, but this, like the cutting away of the flesh, had to be done in the early stages of the disease. It was always desirable to trace the infected skins, in order to prevent other people getting the terrible disease. All that could be done now was to leave the matter in the hands of the government inspector.

The jury returned a verdict of "death from anthrax."

LOTTERY RAIDS

Federal Grand Jury In Texas to Return Indictments.

Evidence Has Been Collected In Many Large Cities.

San Antonio, Tex., May 26.—The present investigation of the violations of the postal and interstate commerce laws, in connection with the lottery raids, has assumed proportions which makes it the most important investigation ever conducted in the United States regarding this particular class of law breaking, according to the statements of federal officials.

The magnitude of the exposures, the great mass of evidence secured, the large number of men involved and the revelation of the audacity with which certain parties had been defying the statutes of the United States has surprised even the officials who ordered and carried out the raids.

From being a local affair in which only a few San Antonio and Texas men were involved, it has grown to be a national affair of sufficient importance to warrant the personal interest of Postmaster-General Cortelyou. The evidence has been collected in Denver, New Orleans, St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Louisville and many other cities, and the evidence which will be taken here will be carefully preserved to be used in the cases in those cities.

The object of the investigation is to establish a precedent for the final suppression of the lottery business in the United States, and to strike a blow that will be a warning hereafter to the men who contemplate the commission of such crimes.

It is stated that Postmaster-General Cortelyou was startled at the immunity this particular class of law-breakers had so long enjoyed and that when he discovered that there was sufficient evidence captured in the raids in San Antonio to implicate men engaged in the business in all parts of the United States, he immediately issued orders to let the investigation and the indictments be sweeping and far-reaching.

This is the first general investigation to be held in ten years. In 1895 cases in which convictions for the violations of the interstate commerce law were secured was carried to the United States supreme court and the constitutionality of the statutes upheld.

The investigation in San Antonio is the first since that time and the first general one which will include all the features of the law, the depositing of lottery matter for transmission in the United States mail, the use of the mails for the purpose of defrauding and conspiracy to break the laws of the United States.

Indictments will be returned on all these counts and the prosecution will be most vigorous. It is stated that the postoffice department desired to mete out to the men who are found guilty the extreme penalty of the law, in order that it may deter others in the future.

It is also stated that every bill found will be pushed against the indicted parties and that no pleas for mercy will be permitted in the cases. This fact is brought about by the fact that the department has satisfied itself that the conduct of the lottery business was a conspiracy to break the laws of the United States and carried on in open defiance of the statutes.

The fact that the scope of the investigation covers all these points has made the matter a difficult one and had placed a lot of extra work on United States District Attorney Terrell, the federal grand jury and the postoffice inspectors. It is for this reason that the session of the grand jury is such a long one.

The investigation will cost the United States thousands of dollars. More than thirty postoffice inspectors have testified. They came here from as far west as California, as far north as Chicago and as far east as Atlanta. Some of them have been in attendance over two weeks. The United States, of course, paid their transportation here, all expenses and their salaries. This in itself is an important item. In addition United States District Attorney McLemore of Galveston, Assistant District Attorneys Engelking of El Paso and Cresson of this city have assisted in the work.

As to the number of indictments returned, speculation is rife, but even after the report of the grand jury has been made, it will probably be weeks before the names of all parties against whom bills are returned can be made public, as their arrests must first be effected.

It may be impossible to prove that the "Little Mexican" lottery was a fraud, but a great deal of evidence has been brought out along these lines. However, the United States attorneys state that this specific charge is a very hard one to sustain. Nevertheless, there will be plenty of other counts to get the violators of the law into most serious complications.

It is generally believed that the grand jury is now taking the last of the evidence and that a report will be made in the very near future.

FOR YOU.

Here are some facts for dyspeptics.

Are you one?

Probably; because most people are, though they ignore it.

First, please bear in mind that Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, is more than ailment.

It is a disease.

It is a disease, with ramifications into the uttermost, innermost part, of your body.

It does not always begin in your stomach.

No, indeed. It may begin in your mouth.

Your saliva may be of the wrong chemical formula to begin the work of digestion, and so the whole process may go wrong from the very beginning.

Or, everything may be all right, but your liver.

Or, maybe it seems to be in your heart.

Or, you may have a deep-chested lung cough.

Ten times out of eleven, those symptoms point to the plain, everyday common or garden variety of indigestion.

This may seem hard to believe, but if so, it is only because for many years, even after the discovery of the circulation of the blood by Harvey, doctors remained in the densest ignorance concerning the workings of the processes of digestion.

So, of course, of IN-digestion, they knew less.

And of a cuer today, they have no knowledeg at all—any of the 140,000 that are "practicing" in the United States.

Except—about 40,000, who use and recommend Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Here we have a medicine which attacks the troube with all of the most modern engines of medical warfare, which are indeed needed to conquer such a malignant, pestiferous, all-pervading disease.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets drive INdigestion OUT.

They contain ingredients which act curatively, not mere'y upon the stomach, but upon every vessel, organ or gland, throughout the entire body, which is in any way concerned in the great and important work of digesting your food.

In this way, they throughly purge your entire system of any possible disease-taint, and thereby restore you to a condition of perfect and natural health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are unique in the entire history of medicine.

They are a specific remedy for just one disease and this disease they positively and never-fallingly cure,

Try them.

MARRIAGES AT DENVER

Are Hard to Prove, Licenses Not Being Recorded.

Denver, Colo., May 26.—On account of a fight between County Clerk Sommers and County Recorder Byrne 1,500 marriage licenses have not been recorded and there is no legal proof that these people are married. Both these officials claim the fees for recording licenses. Mayor Speer has decided in favor of the clerk, but the recorder refuses to honor this decision and so the licenses are not recorded. Both officials refuse to take care of certificates after they are returned legally signed by the minister performing the ceremony and the witnesses and these, the only legal evidence of the marriages, are reported lost.

Every marriage license that has been solemnized since July 1, 1904, is without official record in the office of the county recorder.

Not one of the 2,000 happy men and women who have been joined by God's divine law during that time has a scratch of writing on record to show that such marriage has ever taken place.

Should it ever be necessary for any of these to show proof by the record of the legality of any marriage it will be impossible to establish the fact of such marriage to the satisfaction of any court in the country.

This alarming state of affairs, which is causing widespread consternation among those who have been joined in wedlock during the past eleven months, is due to the dispute whoch arose at that time between Recorder Robert J. Byrne and City Clerk E. E. Sommers as to which office should have the issuance of the marriage licenses and the emoluments from such privilege.

In former years the recorder had the right to issue licenses and to record them in proper form after the minister had made the return to the office. When Sommers was elected to the office of city clerk he asserted his rights to have the license department transferred to his own office in the city hall. Recorder Byrne objected strenuously to the change and refused to recognize the right of the city clerk to exercise any such prerogative. When Mayor Speer was called into the matter he sustained Sommers' view of the case and the license department was closed in the recorder's office in the courthouse.

When Sommers made his first report to the county treasurer at the end of the first month he was in office he incorporated in his report over his signature a note to the effect that $1 of each marriage fee of $2.50 should be placed to the credit of the recorder's office for the recording of the marriage. Treasurer Elder and Recorder Byrne have refused to take any notice of this request.

Recorder Byrne has refused to record or make any entry on the books of his office on the ground that he must have $1 to show for such marriage that is placed on record. As the minister could not be required to produce the fee before the record was made, as it had already been included when the original application was filed, the recorder declined to make any such entry.

On the other hand Treasurer Elder refused to pay any attention to the request of Sommers, on the ground that the law did not permit him to segragate any moneys from one office and place it to the credit of any other.

The matter has rested in this condition since that time. There have been numerous complaints made at both offices on account of the irregularity. In several instances persons have called at the recorder's office for the purpose of looking up the data in certain merriages. When they were unable to learn what they desired a strenuous kick has been the result and threats to find out the reason why have been numerous.

FROM RICHES TO POVERTY

Strange Case of Woman Who Is In Soldiers' Home.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 26.—From riches to poverty; from fashion and society to plain grub and public charity; from beauty and happiness to want and sorrow; from high station as mistress of the Indiana State Soldiers' Home, wife of the colonel in command, to the humblest place of a common inmate of the public institution—these are the elements that go to make the story of the last six years, or less, in the life of Hester Frink Megrew.

The final sorrow came after she made a failure of a World's Fair hotel in St. Louis.

In 1861, Hester Fring, Indianapolis belle, and John P. Megrew, newly commissioned as a first lieutenant in the army of the Union, were lovers.

Then came estrangement during the time of the war of the states, and the Indianapolis beauty became the wife of Major Walker of Evansville.

May 26, 1896, some thirty-five years later, the stately and unusually handsome widow of the late Major Walker was married at Chicago to the first lover, the war-time favorite, Col. John P. Megrew, at that time in command at the Lafayette Soldiers' home. It was a case of romantic love renewed and strengthened.

July 1, 1899, Col. Megrew and Mrs. Megrew left the Soldiers' home, he to seek one path, she to follow another. There was a divorce later, secured by the wife in Indianapolis.

The last chapter has just been written in the Megrew story of long-enduring love and unexplained separation.

The other day Hester Frink Megrew, after six years' combat against misfortune, broken in health, bowed in spirit and humbled to the dust, sought and obtained admittance to the home where she queened it for many years, and today is an inmate of the institution, receiving her meager portion of state bounty along with those upon whom she once loked down as befitted the dignity and impressiveness of her position, that of "First Lady of the Post."

In the old days she was gracious in her power and magnanimous in her daily dealing with those whom misfortune had placed below her in the scale that rules at the Soldiers' home.

Her old-time graciousness is remembered today among the members of the home, and those who remember will be kind to the woman who has returned in penury to take up a life of quietude and tears among them.

Mrs. Megrew once ruled fashion and dictated the social foible of the hour. Today she herself is ruled by the inexorable law of a public institution and must look to the beneficence of a state for more subsistence.

A few years ago she was worth $50,000 or more in her own right, and lived with no thought of so sordid a thing as the dollar.

At this time, with fortune spent and health gone; with proud spirit fallen and with humiliation as her only close associate in the world, Mrs. Megrew returns to old scenes; to the place of her former regnant glories, to eat in bitterness the bread that it doled to the helpless by a new regime.

April 15 or therabouts the adjutant's office at the Lafayette Soldiers' home was startled and amazed to receive from Cincinnati an application from Hester Megrew for admission to the institution as an inmate.

The question ran the rounds: "Can this be the former first lady of the post?"

The coming of the applicant, and her entry into the life of the home as one among its members, told the story.

Mrs. Megrew's wan face and pathetic hopeless figure are not seen frequently in the public spots at the home. She does not court scrutiny or invite pity.

Col. Megrew's Eleventh Indiana friends did not desert him. He landed a position at Washington, D. C., as captain of police. He is married again and is said to be prosperous.

MRS. JAMES BROWN-POTTER

Made a Failure as Actor-Manager of London Theater.

London, May 26.—"Poor Mrs. James Brown-Potter has not a £5 not in the world."

So Americans here are telling each other sadly, and all Mrs. Brown-Potter's English friends express the deepest sympathy with her.

Their sympathy may be exaggerated in its expression, but certain it is that the collapse of Mrs. Potter's enterprise as actor-manager at the Savoy theater seems to be total. Lavish extravagance for costumes, prodigal expenditure for scenery characterized all of the productions at the Savoy, most especially the last, "La du Barry."

This, for a brief period, seemed to be a success. So the rent in the balloon of Mrs. Potter's rising hopes came most unexpectedly.

It turns out that Mrs. Potter has been guided in money matters by a country solicitor of Maidenhead, where is her charming residence. To him she now attributes her deep financial difficulties. It is said even that she did not know the Savoy must be closed until three hours before the final performance there.

Yet, Mrs. Brown-Potter must have recognized that she was risking everything, financially, when she was buying the jewels, wonderful costumes, brocades, laces and paneled bedrooms, which distinguished her production of "Du Barry," even in this decorative age.

For several weeks before the first performance she and Gilbert Hare, her leading man and stage manager, intended to insure their lives to secure a loan with which to push the play to its first production. But the sureties necessary to secure this loan were not forthcoming, nor would Gilbert Hare's father, a wealthy man, go to his aid.

Vastly disappointed, perhaps trembling on the brink of ruin, Mrs. Potter appealed to William Waldorf Astor to endorse the necessary papers. This is common report in the boudoirs and clubs. She was encouraged by the fact that she had been an intimate friend of the late Mrs. Astor, when she lived in Philadelphia, and Mrs. Potter in New York. Perhaps William Waldorf Astor had forgotten this. At any rate, gossip has it that he refused Mrs. Potter's request.

Then, in her desperation, she turned to her daughter, "Fifi," wife of James A. Stillman of New York. It has been reported that James Stillman, James A. Stillman's father, offered to pay all expenses of four productions at the Savoy, be they sucessful or not, on the condition that the actress pledge herself never to appear on the stage in America, and, last of all, on the stage of a music hall.

If this proposition was made it was refused. Nevertheless, by a coincidence, Mrs. Brown-Potter had produced four unsuccessful plays at the Savoy before she came forward with "Du Barry."

Mrs. Brown-Potter's prayer to her daughter was coldly rejected by the elder Stillman, who might have opened his purse strings had the actress even then bowed to his last proposition. Now Mrs. Potter has leased the Savoy to Maxine Elliott and has abandoned her provincial tour, broken in health, she has retired to Maidenhead with her mother, Mrs. Urquhart.

By the irony of fate, Mrs. Potter's private secretary, Edward Wesly, who recently went to America in her interests and married a rich girl there after three weeks' courtship, is living in great style at the Hyde Park hotel.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Filbridge, West Cornwell, Conn.

MESMERIC MASSEUSE

Keeps Mrs. Mackey In Condition For Society.

London, May 26.—Mrs. Frank Mackey has been only a fortnight in town, and everyone is wondering at her change from a pale, weary woman to the brilliant person who presided at her own party on Monday, so full of vivacity and life. The truth is she started a wonderful course of massage, which she goes through twice a day, and is paying a woman a fabulous price for living in her house and devoting all her time and attention to her. This woman is a strong, big, athletic personage, and the process is a kind of will power.

As she rubs she half mesmerizes her patient and passes into her all of her own strength and energy. After an hour of this, Mrs. Mackey rises refreshed and quite a different woman, but the rubber has to retire for rest for quite three hours before she is fit for anything, and ablo to administer another course.

Mrs. Mackey takes the greatest care of herself, and, if she is going anywhere in the evening, she makes a point of resting all of the afternoon. She is now full of the charms and delights of Hampton House, which she reated from the duke of Abercorn, and she declares that, should she still care for it as much at the close of the season as at present, she will assuredly buy it, as the duke is anxious to sell.

What pleases her is not only the house itself, but the family treasures with which the place is filled. There are priceless old cabinets crammed with equally priceless china, eighteenth century French furniture and decorations. The duke's private sitting room, which opens out into a delightful private garden, where fountains play and flowers bloom all summer, Mrs. Mackey has secured as her own private sanctum. This is furnished entirely in old English style, panneled throughout in old oak.

A SUDDEN BULGE

Wheat Weak Early But Rushes Upward In Last Hour.

Southwestern Markets Send Crop Damage Reports and Decline.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 26.—Wheat had a rather heavy break in the early part of the session and then in the final hour recovered all it had lost and closed higher. Improved weather conditions and larger receipts were apparently the cause of the weakness and then after the noon hour came a rush of crop damage stories from St. Louis. The peculiar feature of these was that they sent the price up swiftly in Chicago and the Northwest and caused those markets to close higher while in St. Louis and Kansas City prices were lower except for the September option which advanced slightly. Argentine shipments were small, being only 1,268,000 bus. The Liverpool market closed 3/4@1 1/2d higher. Paris 1/4@1/2c lower and Berlin Antwerp and Budapest unchanged.

In the Duluth market July wheat closed 1c higher, in Chicago 5/8c higher, in Minneapolis 3/8c higher, in New York 5/8c higher, in St. Louis 1/4c lower and in Kansas City 1/4c lower. The September option gained 5/8c in Duluth, 7/8-1c in Minneapolis, 5/8-3/4c in Chicago, 3/8c in New York, 1/4c in St. Louis and the same in Kansas City. In Winnipeg July lost 1/4c and September was unchanged.

The Modern Miller's weekly report said: "A continuation of unfavorable weather conditions caused a further impairing in the condition of the winter wheat crop and there has been too much rain and a lack of sunshine and the weather has been too cool. In the southern part of the wheat belt, especially in Texas, the territories and Tennessee, there has been a further spread of rust and there are traces of rust in other sections though to a much less extent. The damage by fly is slight, a further deterioration is noted in many sections which is attributed in part to the inferior quality of the wheat seeded. Nebraska, Michigan, Ohio and Indiana promise the best results."

Car receipts at Duluth were 3 against 21 last year, and at Minneapolis 226 against 134 last year. Chicago received none against 12 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 303,386 bus, last year 260,636 bus. Shipments 167,848 bus, last year 262,709 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 111,474 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed 3/4@1d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed 1/4c lower. July oats closed 1/4c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 696,800 bus, last year 522,130 bus. Shipments 350,636 bus, last year 306,824 bus. Clearances of corn were 150,294 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very slow. The July option opened 1c lower at $1.11 1/2 and advanced to $1.12 at 11:55. In the final hour of the session there was a sharp advance which carried the price to $1.13 1/2 at 1 o'clock and it closed there, an advance for the day of 1c. The September option opened 1/4c lower at 85 1/2c, fell to 84 3/4c and then advanced to 86 3/4c, at which it closed, a gain of 5/8c. The May option closed 2c higher.

Flax was a little more active than it has been, the October option getting all of the trading, however. The May and July closed unchanged. October advanced 5/8c to $1.27 1/2 and closed at $1.27 1/4. The September option advanced 1 1/4c to $1.28 3/4.

Oats fell 1/8c and rye advanced 3c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Improved Weather Conditions Causes Weakness In Wheat.

Chicago, May 26.—Improved weather conditions caused weakness in wheat here today. Selling was quite general, and with no definite support prices declined nearly a cent. A sharp break at Minneapolis, following increased receipts at that point, had a bearish effect on the market here. July opened unchanged to 1/2c lower at 96 5/8c to 96 3/4c and sold off to 89 7/8. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 229 cars, against 164 cars last week and 126 cars a year ago.

After July had sold off to 89 1/2c, the market turned strong. Fresh confirmation of reports of damage in the Southwest started an active general demand resulting in a quick rally. During the last half hour buying was of an influential character. The market closed at the highest point of the day with July up 5/8c at 91 1/2c.

Belief in the settlement of the "deal" in corn for May delivery caused a further decline of 5c a bus in the price of that option. A liberal increase in receipts was another weakening influence. The price of May was off 3c at the start, initial quotations being at 60c. Within the first fifteen minutes sales were made at 58c. Distant deliveries were affected by the weakness of May. July opened a shade to 1/8@1/4c lower at 49 1/4c to 49 3/8c and sold off to 48c. Local receipts were 408 cars, with 288 of contract grade.

Later in the session another downward plunge landed the May option at 55 1/4c, a break of 5 3/4c from yesterday's closing quotations. At the same time July sold off to 48 3/4@7/8c. Some recovery was made on buying by shorts, but the close was weak, with May off 2c, at 58c. July was down 1/8@1/4c at 49 1/4c.

In sympathy with the weakness of other grain, the oats market had an easy tone. July opened unchanged at 30 5/8c and declined to 30 3/8@1/2c. Local receipts were 139 cars.

Provisions were easier owing to a 5c decline in the price of hogs. Trading was extremely quiet. July pork was off 5c at $12.47 1/2. Lard was down 2 1/2c at $7.25. Ribs were off 2 1/2c at $7.20.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It is expected that stocks will show a large decrease in Minneapolis and Duluth. Lower markets in the Northwest gave us an easier start and for a while the market looked as if it had set in for a good setback. The break amounted to 1 3/8 from yesterday's close, and not until the low point was reached did the market show any disposition to do better. The market certainly does act strong. Trade is excited and inclined to place much credence on reports of damage and the belief is generally held that the next government report will show a decided falling off as to condition, and a liberal cut-down in acreage. While present unsatisfactory conditions prevail and crop reports of damage come to hand, the sentiment of the crowd is not likely to change. It is noticeable that on every little dip resting orders are found large enough to absorb vast quantities of wheat. It is a weather market, but on the whole a splendid trading affair.

Corn—Further easing off in May price was the feature of the market today. The deferred futures stiffened up somewhat in sympathy with the pronounced strength in the wheat market, but throughout the session seemed to show a lagging tendency. Receipts for some few days yet are likely to be extremely large, and unless taken care of by shipments stocks will accumulate. On pronounced bulges we think the futures can be sold for moderate profits.

Oats—Trade was very slow. The speculative markets response to the improved cash situation is disappointing. On pronounced strong spots, we favor sales of the futures.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Settlements on 100,000 bushels of May corn were made Wednesday afternoon and yesterday by the leading corn shorts. Bartlett, Frazier and Patten let them out at 65c to 68c. There was a line of 600,000 bushels said to have been settled by T. E. Wells & Co. for their foreign customers. New Yorkers settled some big lines; a local line of 250,000 bushels was fixed up and Rankin of Milwaukee settled on 200,000 bushels. There is still an outstanding short interest estimated by some at 1,500,000 bushels to 2,500,000 bushels. The bull interest has been willing to settle for several days, and is said to be still ready to whenever the shorts demonstrate that they have reached their limit. Many of the small country shorts have come in the past few days. Foreigners have suffered the most, as they always stay out until the last. There are some in the trade who assert that the May is practically over. Bull interests do not admit it. They have sold under cover on the advance from 60c up, and taken profits that warrant their going out at these high prices. Their line at its maximum was around 12,000,000 bus., prior to the first of May. It was bought on an average of 47 1/2c, the bull leaders having no corn taken on as high as 50c; their purchases in the open market of late have been to cover shorts for customers, and their individual lines are said to have been reduced on the quiet. Their cash sales so far have been over 2,000,000 bus., of the 3,000,000 bushels taken in, so that the corpse on hand at the present is a small one, and is not likely to bother them. In fact there is little probability of their having to take more than 1,500,000 bus. in the next four business days. They are selling cash corn at 3c over old July in store for shipment the first ten days in June. Their sales yesterday were 180,000 bus., including 50,000 bus. No. 2 white to South Africa. The deliveries yesterday were only 85,000 bus. The way that the trade has taken cash corn of late has surprised even the bulls.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Somewhat better conditions throughout the wheat belt this morning. The liberal receipts in the Northwest for several days has afforded some relief to the stringent demand, and the decline in Minneapolis stocks is one half less for this week than last. As we have the situation, conditions are so unsettled that we look for an active market with broad scalping changes for some time. Although closing prices were 1c above those yesterday and somewhat higher, prices may advance early tomorrow, we believe that quick bulges will afford profits on short sales.

Dennis, Chicago: After say, May 27, when high grade wheat can no longer be bought to fill any May sales in any market, the demand is likely to cease for that class of wheat with a dull thud. What the general effect of this readjustment in the first few days of June will be on all values I don't care to guess and care less to experiment by being long any kind of wheat to see. A man don't have to be in the market all the time to make money.

Chicago Inter Ocean: Some of the best money makers in the trade took profits on long July wheat yesterday. They figured that despite the bad crop reports the trade is due to shift from the May to the July basis within a few days and the change is likely to have a depressing effect on market values for a time at least.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Market Closed Irregular But at Slightly Higher Prices.

Weakness Followed Early Strength But Rally Took Place.

New York, May 26.—Strength in the London market helped some of the international stocks to a higher level in the opening trading here, but demand was very languid and a number of the Industrials and Specialties fell off. Ontario & Western made a gain of 1 5/8. Great Northern preferred dropping 2, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 1 1/4 and a number of the Industrials, including the United States Steel stocks, varying fractions.

Energetic trading commenced after trading was well under way and the market broke with some sharpness. The brunt of the attack was borne by the leading trans-continentals, Metal and Railroad equipment stocks. Reading was quite weak. O. & W. lost a point of its opening gain. Great Northern preferred gave way 4 1/2, Northern Pacific 3 1/2. St. Louis Southwestern preferred, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred, Colorado Southern second preferred, the United States Steel stocks, Locomotive, United States Realty, and Sloss-Sheffield Steel 1 to 1 3/8. Snuff preferred improved 1 and New York & New Haven and Hartford 2 3/4. Partial recoveries were made before 10 o'clock, but the volume of business diminished considerably on the rally. O. & W. was pushed up vigorously again to 51 1/2, a gain of 2 3/4, and Erie showed some sympathy, rising above forty.

Speculation flattened out and business became very dull about last night's level, but the undertone was firm. O. & W. touched 51 5/8, Erie and New York Central gained about 1 point and Reading and Lake Erie fell 2 and Long Island 2 3/4. Bonds were steady at noon.

Higher prices all around resulted from a spasmodic buying movement in Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper, which benefitted them a point each. After the demand for the leaders abated and had vacated, the entire list became almost motionless. Liquidation in corn products stocks cost the common stock 2 points, and the preferred twice as much. Northwestern, Wisconsin Central preferred and Republic Steel preferred moved up a point, Hocking Valley yielded 1, and Union Pacific subsequently lost its rise. Aside from a recovery of 3 points from the lowest in Northern Pacific, fluctuations were trivial.

The market was lethargic and no drift of prices was perceptible. Toledo, St. Louis & Western rose 1, and Ontario & Western touched 52 3/4. The closing was strong, but semi-stagnant.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was extremely dull with no fluctuations of importance. Mass mining still comes out freely. Greene also is being sold although the market for this stock is excellent. The declaration of only $10 by Calumet and Hecla has made that stock very weak.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 26.—The cotton market opened strong at an advance of 16@20 points on active andexcited covering and fresh buying for long account in response to much firmer cables, the big spot demand at the advance in Liverpool and reports of more or less general rains over the belt. At the advance recent bull leaders were very heavy sellers, however, and after gaining another point or two on the first rush of demand, prices eased off 8 or 9 points from the best with the market active and unsettled. Private wires from the South were bullish as to crop prospects and the attitude of holders and private cables from Liverpool reported a big demand from consumers.

Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 8.50; middling gulf, 8.75. Sales 2,711 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 8.11; June, 7.95; July, 8.03; August, 8.01; September, 8.04; October, 8.09; November, 8.13; December, 8.18; January, 8.24; February, 8.36; March, 8.32.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 26.—Money on call easy, 2 1/4@2 1/2 per cent; closing bid 2 1/4; offered at 2 1/2; time money very easy and dull, 60 and 90 days, 3 per cent; 6 months, 4 1/4. Prime mercantile paper 3 3/4@4 1/4 per cent. Sterling exchange heavy with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87.05@10 for demand and at $4.85.15@20 for 60 days; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.84 7/8. Bar silver, 58 3/8c; Mexican dollars, 45c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds steady.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, May 26.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $128,315,542; gold, $70,109,885; silver, $26,380,303.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, May 26.—Cattle—Receipts 1,500; steady. Good to prime steers, $5.60@6.50; poor to medium, $3.65@5.50; stockers and feeders, $2.75@5.15; cows, $2.60@4.75; heifers, $2.60@5.20; canners, $1.50@2.40; bulls, $2.50@4.75; calves, $3@6.50. Hogs—Receipts 23,000, tomorrow 9,000. Mixed and butchers, $5.20@5.40; good to choice heavy, $5.30@5.40; light, $5.25@5.47 1/2; rough heavy, $5.15@5.35; bulk of sales, $5.35@5.45. Sheep—Receipts 6,000; sheep and lambs steady. Good to choice wethers, shorn, $4.50@5.70; fair to choice mixed, shorn, $3.50@4.40; western sheep, shorn, $4@5; native lambs, shorn, $4.75@6.50; western lambs, $5.50@7.75.

ALLIGATOR FARM.

It is reported that several French dealers have recently visited America to purchase stock for an alligator farm, which they propose starting in the South of France, says the Kansas City Journal. Alligator skin has become so highly prized throughout France that the animal dealers believe it will pay well to raise the alligators on this, the first farm of its kind in the world.

PROGRESSIVE HINDUS.

Although the Hindus are, for the most part, lacking in ambition and push, occasionally a native of India displays energy and enterprise which would do credit to a wide-awake Occidental, says Leslie's Weekly. Such a man was the late Sir D. M. Petit, a Parsee of Bombay, who founded numerous cotton mills, became a millionaire, gave $2,500,000 to benevolent projects, and was created a baronet, an honor conferred on only one other native. The wealth and the virtues of this great captain of industry and philanthropist were inherited by his grandson, Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, who is today one of the most prominent and influential men in his thriving city.

ASSOCIATED BUILDING TRADES WITHDRAWS ITS SUPPORT FROM STRIKERS

Cuts Off a Fund of $1,000 a Week From the Teamsters.

Lack of Money May Bring Strike to Speedy Close.

Strike of Express Men Throughout Country Is Threatened.

Chicago, May 27.—Attention of strikers and employers was centered largely today on the effect of the action of the Associated Building Trades, accounted the strongest labor body in Chicago and representing in its membership upwards of 18,000 union workmen. This body having withdrawn both moral and financial support from the teamsters cause, the first effect will be to cut off nearly $1,000 a week from the strikers' funds. The subsequent effect is problematical many thinking it means the first break in the struggle, the beginning of the end.

In any event, it seems to check the peril to the whole building industry of the city—a situation which had become one of the great problems of the strike. Further, this withdrawal of financial support is particularly trying at a time when finances are a serious problem. The response to the request for contributions from the country at large has, it is alleged, not been up to expectations, and with a daily expense of $10,000 financial stringency may be the rock on which the strike will be wrecked.

Possible spread of the strike of the express drivers to other cities is a new element in the situation. The trip of Business Agent James Barry of the express drivers to New York has caused the idea to be given credence. Some of the labor leaders say that Barry's trip to New York will be for the purpose of obtaining funds for the striking men in Chicago. Fifty picked men from the express drivers have been directed by the union to go to fifty large cities of the country, and a demand may be made by every express wagon men's local that the Chicago local be reinstated, or a general strike declared against all express companies.

Inconsiderate action of teamsters toward carpenters, plumbers and other members of unions affiliated with the Associated Building Trades' council, is said today to have been the direct cause of the action of the Building Trades' council in withdrawing moral and financial support from the teamsters' strike. The alleged affront of the teamsters resulted in a strike of workmen constructing the huge new office building of the Chicago & Northwestern railway, Jackson boulevard and Franklin street. A number of vaults and safes had been delivered to the building by union drivers, who proceeded themselves to set the safes. The other workmen struck, claiming that teamsters were not constructors and this brought about the trouble about the jurisdiction between unions. The trades council, to prevent further action of this sort on the part of fellow unionists, voted to withdraw support from the teamsters' strike. There has long been a dispute between various factions as to whether the safe and machinery drivers are teamsters or engaged in a constructive trade. The matter was brought to a head at the Northwestern building and has resulted in the teamsters losing much-needed support of other trades when strike affairs are at a climax. The bridge and structural iron workers claim it is within their scope to set steel vaults, yet the work is now being done by members of the Machinery Teamsters' union, who receive 35 cents an hour, while the iron workers get 55½ cents. Numerous instances of the kind have occurred, making bitter feeling between the unions involved.

Rioting was renewed today near the retail shopping district. Missiles were thrown and a blockade was formed at South Water and State streets. Three wagons driven by non-union men became wedged in between a number of heavy trucks at the corner. This blockade had been cleared when a trolley car blocked the way and missiles began to fly. A patrol wagonload of police dispersed the mob.

Levy Mayer, attorney for the Employers' association, left today for New York and it is expected his mission in the East will have an important bearing on the Chicago strike situation. It is believed that he was summoned to New York to lay before the officials of the express companies the strike conditions in Chicago and suggest a line of campaign to be followed in the contest with the labor unions. Mr. Mayer would not discuss the object of his hurried trip East, but said the express companies were remaining firm.

KING OSCAR DECLINES TO SIGN.

Christiania, May 27.—King Oscar at today's sitting, a council of ministers declined to sign the law creating a separate consular system for Norway. The ministers immediately tendered their resignations, but the king refused to accept them.

OWNERSHIP BY THE CITY IS A SUCCESS

Man From Glasgow Tells of Results of Municipal Experiments.

New York, May 27.—James Dalrymple, superintendent of the city tramway system of Glasgow, Scotland, who comes to this country at the invitation of Mayor Dunne of Chicago to advise the officials of the Western city in their experiment with municipal ownership, arrived here today on the steamer Campania. Mr. Dalrymple was met down the bay by James O'Shaughnessy, Mayor Dunne's representative, and by representatives of the New York Municipal Ownership league. Speaking of his mission generally, Mr. Dalrymple said that the principle has been successfully demonstrated in Glasgow.

"Glasgow now controls its gas, electricity, tramways, water, markets, parks, baths, lodging houses and telephone systems," he said. "The telephone system is not so much of a success as was expected, however, as we are fighting the National Telephone company, but we believe that in time we will get it in better order.

"The situation in Glasgow was different from what it is here," he said. "In this country, I understand every man holding a municipal position has to be a politician, whereas in Glasgow, every man in the city service must not be a politician. Since Glasgow took over the tramways in 1894, we have raised salaries and increased mileage and reduced the fare so that now it is a half penny per half mile, the maximum charge being ten cents. We plan to pay interest at 2 per cent for a sinking fund intended to wipe off the debt in thirty years; and 5 per cent for depreciation."

Mr. Dalrymple said that little trouble had been experienced with labor unions. He said that Glasgow had been successful with its gas plant and had reduced the price to about 50 cents per thousand cubic feet.

A MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSION OF DYNAMITE ENDANGERS BRIDGE

New York, May 27.—A mysterious explosion of dynamite which blew out the windows of a pile driver near the new Pennsylvania railroad bridge over the Hackensack river in Jersey City early today was at first reported to the police as having destroyed the bridge but was ascertained later to have done no damage to the structure. Two watchmen and three railroad detectives, who were on guard saw the flash of the explosion but could neither find any suspicious person in the vicinity nor discover what had exploded nor how it reached the bridge.

The explosion caused the circulation of rumors that the railroad company had refused to allow a certain class of workmen to be employed on the bridge and that, thereupon an anonymous threat to blow up the bridge and the lives of some of the railroad officials. All knowledge of such letters was denied at the offices of the Pennsylvania railroad. That the explosion was the result of a plot by disgruntled workmen was pronounced absurd.

It is believed that a powerful explosive floated down the river on the tide whether by design of some malicious person or by accident is unknown. A rigid investigation is in progress today.

GERMAN YACHT LEADS THE RACERS

New York, May 27.—The German yacht Hamburg was leading the Ailsa by 137 miles with the Atlantic, Fleur de Lis and the English clipper ship Valhalla strung out in that order far astern when sighted on May 23 and 24 by the steamer St. Paul. The Endymion also was sighted by the St Paul, on a course well to the north of that taken by the Hamburg and Ailsa. The dispatch came to the Associated Press by Marconi wireless from the St. Paul today.

THREE MEN HURT IN SHAM BATTLE.

New York, May 27.—Three men were seriously injured and another may die as a result of being trampled on in the charge of the New South Wales Lancers and the Highland brigade, at the Boer spectacle at Brighton Beach last night. The accident occurred in the tableau representing the battle of Pardeberg, when more than 800 men are on the field. After the fight is over the nurses and the Red Cross orderlies go over the field to pick up the dead and injured.

Last night when the nurses ran out on the field with their stretchers they found Charles Stewart and James Hardner, British gunners, John Barlow, a cavalryman, and Piet Gonner, one of the Boer horsemen, badly trampled by the British horses. They were picked up and carried to the emergency hospital on the grounds, where it was said that Barlow was probably fatally hurt.

GRAFTERS' OFFER FOR THE PHILA. GAS PLANT WITHDRAWN

"Organization" Leaders So Report From the Gas Company.

Mayor Has Gradually Been Gaining Strength In Councils.

Philadelphia, May 27.—"Organization" leaders are responsible for the statement that the United Gas company has withdrawn its offer to advance the city $25,000,000 in consideration of an extension of the lease of the city gas works. This, no doubt, is the outcome of the conferences between Messrs. Durham, Seeger, McNichols and President Dolan of the United Gas company today.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon President Dolan sent a letter to President McCurdy of common council, in which he said that the United Gas company would withdraw its bid. Mr. Dolan said: "The manner in which the whole subject has been treated induced the United Gas company to believe that the community is opposed to any extension of the gas lease on any terms. This being so, this company is unwilling to accept the ordinance which has been passed or to enter into any contract with the city looking to any variation of the terms of the present lease.

"The United Gas company therefore begs respectfully to advise councils that for the reasons stated above, should the pending ordinance become a law, it will not be accepted by it."

Mayor Weaver and the Republican "organization" leaders are exerting all their efforts, the former to gain control of councils and the latter to prevent a sufficient number of defections from the "organization" ranks to sustain the mayor's veto of the gas lease. When Mayor Weaver broke with the "organization" over the lease of the city gas works, it was not anticipated by any of those concerned in the fight that it would extend beyond the confines of the city. Developments during the past two days, however, indicate that the entire state organization is likely to become involved.

Since Thursday leaders from various other counties have been coming here seeking information, and it is reported today that a call has been secretly issued from headquarters for a conference at Atlantic City, N. J. It is rumored that state and city leaders have been invited to attend the conference.

Mayor Weaver was today assured of the support of an additional select councilman, making eleven in that body who are said to be pledged to him.

Out of respect to the memory of the late Judge Bean of the state supreme court, whose funeral takes place on Monday, the common pleas court will not hear argument on the injunction granted by Judge Ralston against the removal of Directors Smyth and Costello until Wednesday, May 31. John Auerbach of New York, who has been engaged as special counsel for the committee of seventy, to fight the gas lease, called on Mayor Weaver today.

Mr. Auerbach spent more than an hour in the mayor's office and Judge Gordon and other advisers of the mayor being present.

Select Councilman James E. Walsh of the Thirty-eighth ward, announced today that he would vote to sustain the mayor's veto. The mayor now requires seven votes in select council to defeat the lease of the gas works. "Organization" leaders Seeger and McNicoll went to the office of the United Gas company and were supposed to be in conference with Thomas Dolan, president of the company. They refused to make any statement afterward.

OMISSION OF WORD MAKES A WISCONSIN LAW WORTHLESS

La Crosse, Wis., May 27.—A special from Madison, Wis., to the Leader-Press says: The omission of the little word "Not" in the engrossed copy of the bill passed by the senate, creating a commission to control and supervise railroad rates makes the commission practically powerless. Section 33 of the new law was intended to read, that "They (the orders of the commission making rates) shall 'not' be declared inoperative, illegal or void for any omission of a technical nature in respect thereto."

As the bill was actually passed by the senate, it provides that the commissions ruling "shall be declared inoperative, etc., for any omission of a technical nature in respect thereto." The mistake was discovered by the merest accident by a member of the railroad committee, and, had it not been noticed, the bill would have become a law and the railroad commission would have been shorn of its power. The situation now calls for the repassage of the bill in the senate, with the word "Not" back in the section where it belongs.

OUTLAW CAPTURED.

Asheville, N. C., May 27.—Nat Crump, the outlaw, who shot from ambush and seriously injured Clay Grubb at Salisbury, N. C., last Monday, was captured at Old Fort early today, after a desperate fight with a sheriff's posse, in which Crump was badly wounded. A telephone message received here stated that Crump on which a head price of $750 dead or alive had been set, was barely alive.

HOLMAN & CO. SUSPEND.

New York, May 27.—The suspension of Holman & Co., stockbrokers, whose main office is in Cincinnati, and a branch in Chicago, was announced on the exchange today. The embarrassment of the firm became known on Thursday, when their formal assignment was made in Cincinnati.

Rojestvensky Doubles Back and Takes Dangerous Route.

His Supply Vessels and Unarmored Ships Are Near Shanghai.

Not Probable That a Battle With Japs Can Long Be Delayed.

Advices from various sources today point to the probability of an early battle between the Russian and Japanese fleets. The Tokio dispatches reporting the presence of Russian warships off Tsu islands in the Straits of Korea, indicate that the Russian admiral has divided his fleet, as authentic dispatches to the Associated Press, confirmed by advices received in Washington, show that some Russian vessels are still near Shanghai. It is probable that Rojestvensky has detained his auxiliaries, supply vessels, unarmored ships and others unfit for battle and proceeded northward wih his main fighting force. Whether it is his intention to force Togo to accept battle or whether his object is to reach Vladivostok, the dispatches do not make clear. Togo's whereabouts is not known.

Tokio, May 27, 4:30 p. m.—Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet has been sighted off the Tsu islands, in the Straits of Korea.

The sighting of Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet off the Tsu islands would seem to indicate that the Russian commander has determined to take the boldest course and instead of skirting Japan and entering the sea of Japan by the Tsugaru or Laperouse straits, to push direct through the Straits of Korea and try to reach Vladivostok, which is about 640 miles from the Tsu islands. That he will be able to do so without at least being harrassed by the Japanese, seems improbable and the report circulated at Tokio today that the two fleets have engaged in the Straits of Korea, may turn out correct. There is a possibility of course, that Rojestvensky may have so far deceived Admiral Togo that the latter is still at the base he established in the north of the island of Formosa, in which case a general engagement may not take place before the Russians reach Vladivostok. It is also possible that the Russian vessels sighted in the Straits of Korea only form a portion o fthe Russian fleet.

Washington, May 22.—Private advices received here of an entirely authentic nature report more than twenty-one Russian vessels including three battleships and three cruisers, off Saddle islands which are sixty or seventy miles southeast of Shanghai. Additional information reports that it is rumored that an engagement has taken place.

Tsingau, May 27.—A private telegram received here says that the Russian Vladivostok fleet has left Vladivostok, going in a southerly direction.

St. Petersburg, May 27, 3:45 p. m. There was great rejoicing here on receipt of the Associated Press dispatch from Tokio, anouncing that Admiral Rojestvensky had been sighted off the Tsu islands, Straits of Korea. Many people believe that Rojestvensky has already met and defeated Admiral Togo, while others hold that he has eluded the Japanese admiral and that it will now be a stern chase for Vladivostok. The fact that today is a general holiday, the anniversary of the emperor's coronation, is considered a happy augury. The city, which is gaily decorated, is full of rumors of a Russian victory.

JAPS OCCUPY HSUMIENCHENG.

Tokio, May 27, 1:45 p. m.—Imperial army headquarters made the following anouncement today:

"On May 25, our cavalry in driving a body of Russian cavalry northeastward, occupied Hsumiencheng, 18 miles north of Changtu. Otherwise with the exception of small collisions between detached parties on both sides, the situation is unchanged."

ADMIRAL'S STRATEGY

Mystifies Russian Admiralty as Well as Japs.

St. Petersburg, May 27, 1:10 p. m.—The tension in naval circles is very great. News of the meeting of the Russian and Japanese fleets is expected hourly. The dispatch from Tokio to the Associated Press, saying it was rumored that the fleets have already engaged in the straits of Korea, aroused intense interest at the admiralty, but nothing confirmatory had been received up to the time this dispatch was filed. The majority of the officers are inclined to doubt the accuracy of the Tokio report, believing that Rojestvensky, with his fighting ships, is heading northward for the eastern coast of Japan. Others, on the contrary, considered it quite likely that Rojestvensky, after passing out into the Pacific, doubled back through the Luchu islands, and will take the straightest course for Vladivostok. Rojestvensky, they point out, is a believer in strategy and mystification, and his cruise in the Pacific may have been not only to avoid the danger of mines and torpedo boat attacks, in the shallow waters of the straits of Formosa, but to deceive the Japanese into the belief that his objective was either the Tsugaru or Laperouse straits, while in reality he changed his course and headed for the straits of Korea. As a matter of fact Rojestvensky seems to have mystified his own admiralty as much as the Japanese. On one hand, the appearance of Russian colliers and converted cruisers off Shanghai is taken as being confirmatory of the theory that Rojestvensky's fighting division headed back after circling the island of Formosa, and on the other, the presence of colliers and converted cruisers off Shanghai is regarded as a blind to confuse the Japanese. The orders sent to Japanese merchant vessels at Chefu to await instructions before sailing are considered to strengthen the former view, indicating that Admiral Togo received information that Rojestvensky had altered his course, and thereupon ordered all the Japanese merchantmen to remain in port.

SUCCESSFUL RAID

Made on the Japs By Gen. Mistchenko.

St. Petersburg, May 27.—News of a successful cavalry raid by Lieut. Gen. Mistchenko comes in the following dispatch from Gen. Linevitch to the emperor, dated May 25:

"A cavalry detachment, commanded by Lieut. Gen. Mistchenko, composed of a portion of the South Caucasian brigade and trans-Baikal Cossacks, while engaged, May 17, in repulsing the enemy to the southward, approached Sinlountchouan. On May 18 squadrons of the vanguard succeeded in reaching the Fakoman road, where they burned a store depot and destroyed the telegraph for a considerable distance. Large bands of Chinese bandits encountered by the detachment were partly annihilated and partly dispersed.

"On May 19 the main body arrived at the Fakoman-Shifudzy road and found the heights south of Wakonman occupied by a large Japanese force, consisting of guards and infantry, with machine guns. The Russians attacked and annihilated two Japanese companies and captured another company, with all of its officers and two machine guns.

"The Russians seized a road on the right bank of the Liao river and dispersed, near Shifudzy, a transport train, seven verts long, with rice, tinned feed and fruit, destroyed the telegraph line and took several prisoners and 100 horses.

"On the return journey the Russians dispersed several bands of Chinese bandits. The prisoners taken number five officers and 234 men."

ROOT AND HART TO FIGHT.

Chicago, May 27.—A dispatch from Reno, Nev., to the News says: A. L. Livingston and Dan Egan, fight promoters, have completed all arrangements for a fight between Jack Root and Marvin Hart to take place in this city, July 2. A forfeit of $1,000 has been posted by the promoters. A special arena will be built for the event.

STRAITS OF KOREA THROUGH WHICH RUSSIAN SHIPS ARE PASSING.

From all reports the fighting ships of Rojestvensky's squadron are off Tsu island in the Straits of Korea. The non-combatants are in the vicinity of Shanghai.

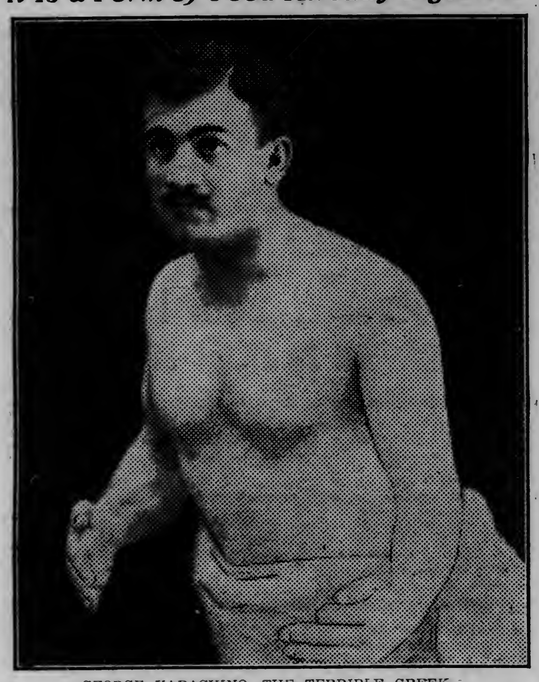
Thousands of Men and Women Owe Their Health, Strength and Long Life to This Great Tonic-Stimulant.

It Is a Form of Food Already Digested.



GEORGE KARACHINO, THE TERRIBLE GREEK.

The Terrible Greek, while in Aberdeen, Washington, a few days ago, upon being asked by some newspaper correspondent to what he owed his great strength and restoration to health, replied:—

"I am now in my 28th year, and have been wrestling professionally since I became of age. I have met and defeated the best men in this country and in Europe. A year ago I was troubled with serious indigestion, and that was followed by weakness. This attack served to unfit me for any matches, and I thought at one time I would have to leave the business. Doctors advised me to take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey before eating, and after taking it for three months I found myself as well and strong as when I used to tend my father's flocks on the hills of Greece.

"I would advise every one suffering from weak stomach or poor digestion to try Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, as I feel confident it will cure them."

RAILROAD NEWS

Superior Has Hopes on the Union Depot Proposition.

Believed Plans and Site Have Been Decided Upon.

It is understood that the officials of the railroads interested have practically agreed upon the site and plans for the proposed new union depot at Superior, and the visit of President Fitch of the South Shore, to the Head of the Lakes at this time is supposed to have something to do with the union depot proposition. He said yesterday that official announcement would be made by the roads in a short time, outlining their plans in this respect.

Mr. Fitch spent a good deal of time in Superior yesterday in conference with D. M. Philbin, superintendent of the Great Northern, and it is known that their talk related to the depot matter. A meeting of the union depot committee of the Superior Commercial club was also held during the afternoon. Superior is becoming heartily sick of the poor depot accommodations, and her business interests are doing all they can to hustle the roads along.

The plans for the depot have been roughly drawn and will be submitted for approval to the different roads interested. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in coming to an agreement on the site for the new building, and this fact has delayed proceedings as much as anything else. Some wanted the structure erected on the old site, while others desired to have it built in another part of the city. The probable cost of the building has not yet been officially announced, but it will in all probability be less than $75,000. It is thought the building material will be stone.

CUTS THE RATES.

Illinois Central Acts Independent of Association.

Chicago, May 27.—General Passenger Agent Hansen of the Illinois Central railroad yesterday gave notice to the chairman of the Western Passenger association that his road would take independent action and sell round trip tickets from Omaha, Sioux City, Sioux Falls and all points on the Illinois Central lines west of Dubuque, Iowa, to Chicago, at a rate of $5 for the round trip, June 18. This is the culmination of a fight between the Chicago-Omaha lines over the movement of delegates to the convention of the Modern Woodmen in Milwaukee next month. The $5 rate will be thrown open to the public. The regular rate between Chicago and Omaha is $22 for the round trip.

DOUBLES LENGTH

Paths In Chester Park Are Extended to Boulevard.

Parks Are Now Most Attractive In Spring Foliage.

The part of Chester park available for park purposes has been practically doubled by the action of the park board in extending the paths in the park to the boulevard, and it now offers one of the prettiest scenic walks imaginable.

Formerly the paths extended only about half way to the boulevard, or to the second falls. Beyond that the undergrowth was so thick and the ground so rough that it was impossible for women and children to get through, although the stream above the second bridge comprised some of the prettiest scenery in the entire park.

This spring the park board undertook to extend the paths to the boulevard, and this work is now complete, giving a walk over two and a half miles in length, from Fourth street to the boulevard and return.

A little footbridge has been built across the third falls just below the boulevard for the convenience of people taking the walk, and it is no longer necessary to climb to the road to cross the stream.

Seats will be built along the walk during the coming week, and it will doubtless prove to be one of the most popular parks in the city.

The work of setting out the flowers in the parks has been delayed by the cold weather. The work was just fairly commenced when the weather caused a delay, and the growth of the flowers already set out has been retarded from the same cause.

Next week the planting will be continued, and a few warm days will suffice to complete it.

Portland square will be made into an especially attractive spot this year, and this, the most formal of the city's parks, will be a very beautiful breathing place for the East end people.

Flowers and plants will also be planted in the lower part of Lincoln park in the West end, but Chester and Lester parks will be left in their natural state, as has been the plan of the park board.

With the budding of the trees the parks are now at their most attractive stage. The trees and grass are beautiful in their bright green tints, and they offer the most alluring attractions for an afternoon walk.

The members of the park board are anxious that, granted a fair day tomorrow, as many people as possible enjoy a Sunday afternoon stroll in the parks, and inspect the work that has been done on them this year. This work is not yet completed, but the parks have probably never looked prettier than they do at the present time.

In Lawton the streets were flooded and water stood a foot deep in many business houses. Most of the sterams are higher and higher and washouts are reported. The 'Frisco railroad bridge over the Red river in the southern part of Greer county, is reported out. At Junction City and Lone Wolf, and Duncan, some damage was caused by a heavy wind and several persons were reported injured. No deaths are reported.

FINDS WHEAT DOING WELL

E. W. Kneeland Says Crop Conditions Now Are Excellent.

E. W. Kneeland of Minneapolis, manager of the Duluth Elevator company, one of the Peavey lines of houses, was in the city today and spent the morning on the Duluth board of trade. Mr. Kneeland has within the past two or three weeks visited much of the wheat country in the Red River valley, and as far west as Devil's lake. He says that he never saw wheat showing finer promise since he has been in the country, which is since 1883. While there are some districts that have perhaps received too much moisture, the reports that the Red River valley is afloat are exaggerated. He says there is about twenty-five miles of territory between Hillsboro and Fargo that is rather too wet, but it is limited in area and close to the railroad track. Back some distance the land is all right.

The tendency of the person viewing the fields, says Mr. Kneeland, is to magnify the bad spots and to let them blind him to the vaster area of promising wheat. He believes that so far as present conditions go the Northwest can hope for a large crop. The condition is as good as could be asked and the acreage large.

THE STATE SCHOOL FUND

Capt. McDougall Comments on Minnesota's Accumulation.

An article by State Superintendent J. W. Olson, with reference to the school fund of the state, has attracted the attention of Capt. Alexander McDougall, and he said to The Herald today:

"That is a splendid article by Superintendent Olson, telling us that we have $16,000,000 in the state school fund and that there is a fair prospect that it will some day—when we are dead, probably—reach the sum of $75,000,000.

"There is another side to the school fund condition. When you pay your taxes on June 1, you will find an increase over last year of about 10 per cent, which is mostly caused by the increase of 3 per cent for school purposes. And this is in a county that is furnishing most of the great school fund that the state of Minnesota is piling up.

"I suppose we are rasing this great fund for posterity or for the benefit of some future generations, but is it not a little hard to make the men who blaze the trail stand those 10 per cent raises in taxes. I think the matter is one that should receive earnest attention."

MASHER IS BEATEN

Addresses Respectable Negro Woman and Is Knocked Down.

Woman's Husband Lands Short Arm Jolt on the Jaw.

A masher who attempted to force his attentions on a respectable negro woman yesterday afternoon, met with his just deserts at the hands of the woman's husband.

The woman was Mrs. Charles Colby. She was walking along Michigan street yesterday afternoon with her husband, who is employed on W. A. McGonagle's private car.

As they were passing a saloon on West Michigan street, Edward Turner stepped out, and according to the story told by both the woman and her husband, walked in front of Mrs. Colby and leering into her face said, "Hello, Carrie."

Mr. Colby promptly knocked the man down, striking him a straight arm jolt on the point of the jaw.

He and his wife then continued on their way, but after they had gone a short distance, Mrs. Colby looked back and then cried out to her husband that the man was drawing a knife.

Mr. Colby ran into a store and asked for a telephone to call the police. The proprietor told him that the officer on the beat would be along in a moment, and when he came Mr. Colby pointed out Turner and asked that he be arrested.

Turner was arraigned in court this morning on the charge of disorderly conduct. He pleaded not guilty, and stated in defense that he had addressed his remark to his "partner" who was inside the saloon from which he had emerged.

"Was 'Carrie' your partner's name?" asked Judge Cutting.

"No, that was just a little byword we had."

"What was his name?"

"Dave, I don't know his last name."

The court evidently didn't place much faith in the story, as Turner was found guilty.

He denied drawing the knife, however, and the evidence of the complaining witnesses did not show that he made any effort to attack them with it.

"I guess he was punished enough by the blow and being knocked down and arrested," said Judge Cutting. "I'll suspend sentence on him this time."

YOUNG MEN FOR COMMAND

Roosevelt and Morton to Retire Veteran Naval Officers.

Washington, May 27.—President Roosevelt and Secretary Morton, it is believed, are on the point of achieving their purpose to place young men in command of the vessels of the navy.

Through an opinion rendered by Attorney General Moody at least sixty-seven officers are to be placed immediately on the retired list, and every year hereafter forty vacancies must be made in the higher grades. Practically a reorganization of the commissioned force is impending.

The full effect of the attorney general's opinion is just becoming apparent to the officials here. It may require the issuance of new commissions practically to every officer of the service, and even raises the question of back pay amounting to thousands of dollars.

But what is of special importance and concerns the service and the country more than anything else is that instead of old men being assigned to command modern battleships and cruisers, with their highly complicated mechanism—a duty which requires a masterful activity of brain and muscle—there is a chance for a man of reasonable age to be given this duty.

It is safe to say that there is not an officer in command of the battleship divisions who is less than 56 years old.

Canada Not With Us.

It was the general impression that Canada was only awaiting an invitation to become part of the United States, but when the question was presented to 300 of their prominent people, not one favored the plan. This caused great surprise and considerable comment. Another event that has also caused considerable comment is the wonderful cures being made every day by the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Doctors and druggists everywhere have been interested and surprised at its marvelous power, which often affected a cure when other remedies had failed. If your stomach is weak and you suffer from poor appetite, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, cramps, headache, biliousness, female complaints backache or malaria, fever and ague, the Bitters will cure you. Try a bottle today. It will please you.

TAMS BIXBY TO CONTINUE

Work of Dawe's Commission After It Expires In July.

Washington, May 27.—Tams Bixby, at present chairman of the Dawes Indian commission has been designated by the secretary of the interior, to continue the work of that commission after it expires, July next. The selection of some one to perform this duty is in accordance with the direction of congress and Mr. Bixby was chosen because of his familiarity with the details of the work. He will have all the powers that have heretofore been exercised by the commission, but his duties will not be so extensive. The greatest task of the commission, was the allotment of land to the Indians in severalty, but the bulk of that service has been completed. Mr. Bixby was appointed to a place on the commission in 1897. He is a resident of Minnesota. The announcement was made at the interior department today that Mr. Breckenridge has withdrawn his resignation as a member of the commission. He will continue to serve during the life of the commission.

Several Important Transactions Relative to Mesaba Ore Properties.

Two Options Given Corrigan—McKinney People Take Lease.

Two iron mining deals important to the ranges, have been consummated during the past week and it is predicted that the result will be the starting of a large amount of exploration work near Tower, Minn., this summer.

A prominent Michigan mining company has taken an option on the land of Martin Nelson two miles south of Tower and described as the east half of the southeast quarter and lot 7, township 61-15. The second deal is a new agreement entered into between Albert Kitto of Tower and Alfred Merritt, as regards an option which Mr. Merritt holds on a large tract of land owned by Mr. Kitto on Pine island.

By terms of the option on the Nelson property, the interests holding it have agreed to begin active exploratory work by June 20. It is given to Jan. 15, 1906 to explore with the privilege of buying at the price said to be about $25,000.

Exploration work, it is understood, will also begin immediately on Pine island under the Merritt option. By terms of the new option it is claimed that Mr. Kitto will receive an additional bonus of $3,000 to $5,000 already received under the first agreement the royalty being reduced from 15 cents per ton on a minimum output of 25,000 to 5 cents per ton on the same minimum quantity to be mined.

It was reported yesterday that Corrigan, McKinney & Company of Cleveland, has taken over another iron mining lease on the Mesaba in 48-15. The lease comprises three forties lying north of Aurora, near the Miller mine. The title of the property is owned by the Longyear Mesaba Land and Iron company and the company itself developed the ore on the property. The terms of the lease are not made known. It is said that the quantity of merchantable ore is quite large, but that on account of the great depth of earth on top a shaft mine will be opened up. It is expected that mining will begin in time to stock pile for the season of 1906.

All Meat Markets will close at 10 a. m. Decoration Day.

THEFT AND FORGERY

Now Charged Against Missing Mankato Ogle.

Mankato, Minn., May 27.—What appears to be a little worse than anything yet charged against Judge John B. Ogle has just come to light. From this it would appear that he has added larceny to forgery in his acts, and was without a heart.

Mrs. Hair, wife of the late Rev. George R. Hair, who was formerly presiding elder of the Methodist church, received $5,000 life insurance after her husband's death, which with her little home in West Mankato was all that she had. She loaned the money to a young man in this city, who gave her a mortgage upon his home for the amount. When Ogle heard of this he went to Mrs. Hair several times and wanted to get the handling of the money, suggesting that if he had it he could so loan it that she would not have to pay any taxes. Finally he persuaded her to let him take the money, on the assertion that everybody evaded taxes when they could and that it was perfectly proper.

Mrs. Hair satisfied the mortgage, Sept. 25, 1903, and received an assignment of a new mortgage made out to the real or visionary Nellie G. Gilbert that Ogle used for such purposes. Later, Ogle visited her home on the pretext that he wanted to examine her papers and see if they were all right. She brought them out and he looked at them and said that there were others he wanted to see. While she went into another room for a moment to look for others, he seemed to have satisfied himself, for he remarked that he had found what he was looking for and that it was all right.

Mrs. Hair thought the circumstances a strange one, but it soon passed out of her mind, and not until last Saturday, when Ogle skipped out did she examine her papers. Then she found the note and mortgage were gone. She had Ogle's papers at his office gone over, and there were found a note and mortgage and assignment in an envelope, marked "Hair papers." They were found to be forgeries, although exact duplicates of the genuine ones that Mrs. Hair had possessed prior to Ogle's mysterious visit to her home last fall. The genuine mortgage had not turned up in the possession of the First National bank, to which they were assigned by "Nellie G. Gilbert," Dec. 30th, last. The bank put them on record May 20. It is the supposition that Ogle took the originals to his office, forged the duplicates and left them there for Mrs. Hair, and then sold the originals to the bank.

A reward is offered for the arrest of Ogle.

MONSTER MEET

Official Program For Convention of Eagles Is Issued.

Four Days of Entertainment Provided for the Visitors.

With special trains bringing Eagles from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Stillwater and the south, special trains bringing Eagles from the ranges, special trains bringing Eagles from Fargo, Grand Forks and the West, and special boats bringing Eagles up the lake from the Copper Country, the state convention of the order which will be held in Duluth on June 15, 16, 17 and 18, promises to be the biggest thing in conventions Duluth has ever witnessed.

Headed by the famous Calumet & Hecla band, one of the best musical organizations in the country, the Copper Country delegation will come to Duluth on a chartered boat, some 700 strong.

There are over 3,000 Eagles in the Twin Cities, and nearly half of them are expected to come up for the convention on a special train, and headed by two bands.

The ranges will be swept clean of Eagles during the convention, and special excursions will be run in from the Western part of the state, and from Fargo and Grand Forks.

With 800 Eagles in Superior and 1,000 Eagles in Duluth this city will be one huge aerie for the four days of the convention.

There will be at least four bands from outside the city, and Duluth and Superior will be able to furnish two more.

The official program for the convention has been printed, and copies are being distributed in the city.

The convention will open Thursday evening with a social session open to all Eagles.

On Friday at 10:30 a. m. there will be an address of welcome by President W. E. Brown, followed by an address by Mayor Cullum, Grand Worthy Vice President J. H. Ellis of Minneapolis will respond, and the convention will then be called to order by J. W. Shadewald, state deputy grand president. This will be followed by the election of officers and the appointment of committees.

At the afternoon session at 2:30, Grand Worthy President J. F. Pelletier of Kansas City will speak.

In the evening there will be a vaudeville entertainment for Eagles only at the Lyceum.

On Saturday morning there will be a baseball game between the St. Paul and Duluth aeries for a purse of $50, and in the afternoon the routine business of the convention will be disposed of. At 7:30 p. m. there will be a grand street parade to end up at the Armory, where the contests will take place. There are three prizes of $200, $75 and $25 to the best three bands, the prizes being donated by the Commercial club.

The largest aerie will receive a prize of $100, the best drilled aerie $100 and the best uniformed aerie $100. Duluth aeries are barred from these contests, and the Superior aerie from the contest for the largest aerie.

A prize of $5 will be given to the largest Eagle, one of $5 to the smallest, one of $5 to the handsomest and one of $5 to the ugliest.

The evening will be brought to a close with a grand ball.

Sunday morning the visitors will be given a drive around the boulevard, and in the evening they will all go for a cruise on the lake.

ELKS ALSO COMING

First State Convention Will Be Held In Duluth.

Delegates Will Form a State Organization of the Order.

The first state convention ever held by the Elks in Minnesota will be held in Duluth on June 8 and 9.

Up to the present time the Minnesota Elks have had no state organization, although strong lodges exist in every large town in the state.

The convention will be in the nature of a mass meeting of the Elks throughout the state, and a permanent state organization will be effected.

Special rates have been secured from the railroads, and return trips to Duluth from any point in the state may be secured for a fare and one-third, during the convention.

The reduced rates are expected to bring a large turnout, and from advices received by the officers of the local lodge, the convention will bring several thousand visitors to the city.

Elaborate plans are being made for their entertainment. On the afternoon of July 8 the delegates will go into executive session to dispose of the business before them, and at the same time a reception will be held for the ladies who will be among the visitors.

In the evening there will be a grand ball at the Armory for Elks only.

On the morning of June 9 the visitors will be taken for a drive around the boulevard, and in the afternoon for an excursion on the lake, if the weather is fine. In case the weather is stormy a trip will be taken up the river to Fond du Lac. The convention will be brought to a close in the evening with a minstrel performance, followed by a social session.

The Elks' convention will open a convention season which will last to a greater or less extent throughout June, July and August. The Eagles' convention will follow closely after it, and the convention of the International Association of Fire Chiefs will be held later. In addition to these three big conventions there will be numerous smaller gatherings filling in the time between the larger ones.

LA FOLLETTE VETOES VOTING MACHINE BILL.

Madison, Wis., May 27.—Governor La Follette today vetoed the bill authorizing the use of voting machines at primary elections. He holds that the primary law is too important to be experimented with, and that such machines should not be legalized until there is not a doubt of their operating perfectly. The assembly passed a bill appropriating $90,000 for a state tuberculosis sanitarium.

The senate concurred in the bill authorizing the secretary of state to hold back certificate of election until the successful candidates file statements of expenses.

I had five of the best physicians in the city, but I received very little relief from them. I know the Mystic Cure to be what it is represented and take pleasure in recommending it to other poor sufferers." Sold by all druggists.

CHANGE IS MADE

Board of Trade Members Make No. 2 Northern Contract.

Ninety-Three Votes For and Seventeen Against—Minneapolis Men Here.

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Duluth Board of Trade voted to change the contract grade of wheat from No. 1 Northern to No. 2 Northern, to be effective on September 1 and all later contracts.

In favor of the change there were ninety-three votes cast and against seventeen. Two-thirds of all the votes cast were necessary to adopt the new rule and there was a large margin in its favor.

The proposed change has created widespread interest. A. D. Thomson has opposed it vigorously and has been the most active force in opposition to it. For some days there has been a lively campaign, but it has been recognized for two or three days past that the change would carry.

The active interest in the matter was evidenced by the coming to Duluth of a large number of non-resident members of the board. When the board opened this morning about thirty Minneapolis men who are members here were on hand. During the morning Frew W. Maynard of Chicago, formerly a Duluth board of trade man, arrived here for the purpose of voting on the proposition. Another Chicago man, James Pettit, who represents the Peavey interests, was here.

The Minneapolis men here were: Charles M. Harrington, H. F. Douglas, W. O. Timmerman, J. M. Jenks, John Marfield, B. H. Woodworth, Frank McCarthy, A. C. Andrews, J. F. Gage, H. R. Lyon, H. H. Kenkel, A. L. Searle, E. W. Kneeland, Alex Stewart, H. W. Commons, James R. Stewart, C. A. Christianson, William Miller, J. P. Andrews, J. F. Lahart, E. L. Welch, J. H. McMillan, Daniel Raymond, E. E. Martin, Sylvester Cargill, Nels Engel, Andrew Brenner, A. M. Woodward and W. J. Jennison.

Practically all of the visitors were for the change.

His integrity was unimpeached until an examination of the books showed that they had been manipulated to cover a shortage of $600.

RUSSIANS REJOICE

Over News That Rojestvensky Is In Straits of Korea.

Oyama's Offensive In Manchuria Has Come to a Halt.

St. Petersburg, May 27, 5:25 p. m.—During the afternoon the newspapers got out extras which were eagerly purchased by the holiday crowds in the parks and on the boulevards and the admiralty soon was besieged with inquiries for news, but the staff had none to offer. It was reiterated to the Associated Press at 5 o'clock that the admiralty had received nothing beyond the news dispatches from Tokio, explaining that the staff here is now entirely dependent upon the Japanese advices and cannot expect anything from their source until Admiral Rojestvensky reaches Vladivostok. There was no concealment of the pleasure, however, with which the officers read the definite statement from Tokio that Rojestvensky was off the Tsu islands. An officer of the staff said:

"Rojestvensky thus far has shown himself a master of naval strategy. If he has succeeded in leading Togo off on a false trail and has cleared the straits of Korea, without loss from mines or torpedo attacks, he has done more than his most sanguine friends could have hoped for. If on his arrival off the Tsu islands, he proceeded into action Rojestvensky must have been a victor, but personaly I doubt whether Togo would accept battle.

"Rojestvensky's danger is by no means over. Togo may have withdrawn into the sea of Japan ahead of Rojestvensky, in which case the Russian fleet has the enemy ahead and not astern. But with open water all the way to Vladivostok his chances of reaching that port have been increased.

The news from Manchuria indicates that Field Marshal Oyama's offensive has come to a halt. The transport service between Japan and the mainland is believed to have been suspended. Although the Japanese accumulated reinforcements and large quantities of supplies on the mainland since Admiral Rojestvensky appeared in Chinese waters, the dictates of prudence or the decision of Admiral Togo against the advisability of accepting an open battle with Rojestvensky may have induced a change in Oyama's plans. The correspondent of the Associated Press at the Russian headquarters confirms the theory of a change in the Japanese plans. He telegraphs that the Japanese are retiring at the slightest pressure on their center and are shifting eastward seemingly with Gen. Kuroki developing a turning movement against Gen. Linevitch's left for the purpose of screening Gen. Kawamura's army, which is reported to be still farter east, presumably ready to march on Vladivostok. The Japanese movements, however, apparently, are awaiting the result of the sea fight. The correspondent says the eyes of the whole Russian army are centered on Rojestvensky.

London, May 27.—The dramatic appearance of Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet within the zone of fire in the Far East has aroused the liveliest interest, but no news has been received here up to late this afternoon beyond the brief announcement that the Russians have been sighted. Baron Hayashi, Japanese minister to England, has not received any dispatches from his government.

Shipping circles are somewhat disturbed and have been sending cable dispatches broadcast with the object of stopping vessels bound for Japan and elsewhere in the danger zone.

THE WESTERN COAL TRADE

Little Demand For Domestic Coal at Any Point.

Chicago, May 27.—The Black Diamond, official newspaper of the coal industry, reviewing the Western trade, says:

Market conditions in the western coal trade are extremely discouraging this week when view from the standpoint of the Chicago sales agent. There is very little demand for domestic coal at any point in the West, while the supply of four and six-inch domestic lump seems to be increasing in spite of the low range of prices prevailing—these prices having by the way, established a new low record as compared with previous periods of depression during the past ten years. Some lump coal for domestic use, produced in Illinois mines, it is reported, has sold as low as 75 cents f. o. b. the mine. Two years ago if a man had offered this figure for his product he would have been considered a fit subject for the nearest insane asylum. At least one producing company is said to have named this figure, and possibly there have been others who have accumulated car-service coal on track and have been obliged to move their product before it was eaten up by demurrage.

In the anthracite trade in the West there is a feeling of stagnation, which prevails among nearly all of the sales agents. Dealers are extremely reluctant to take in coal at this time, on the ground that they have not been able to make collections and can not pay for it when their obligations become due. Many of them say they will not take in coal unless money comes in more freely until current demand is such that they must have it. Under these conditions there has not been much more activity the past week than there was the early part of May. It was thought that during the last week of the month there would be a rush of orders to take advantage of the 10 cents a ton additional discount which prevails this month as compared with June, but apparently this is not having any influence in that direction. In some few instances, where Chicago sales agents have business in territory east of Chicago there has been a slight increase in the volume of business, but this has been disappointing as compared with what was expected. West of Chicago demand at wholesale is at a low point and no improvement has occurred compared with last week.

More Original Work

When clever advertising originality and a true sense of the fitnes of things are under one roof, united with every modern facility for their artistic execution on paper, it makes for a combination hard to excell. Such may be truly said of the O. F. Collier press.

That the class of work being turned out by this shop gives evidence of someone's brains and skill is very apparent in the numerous samples which have come to our notice of late. Deserving especial mention are the Northland poster hangers, an exceptionally strong poster effect in six colors, gotten out for the Northland Manufacturing company. An interesting booklet on the Lawrence Safety Switch (which device awakened such interest at the international railway congress recently held in Washington, D. C.,) and two beautiful illustrated booklets in colors for the Duluth Business University, all of which we believe are the work and conception of Mr Norton Mattocks of the O. F. Collier press. It is indeed a pleasure to see printed matter that stands apart from the average run, that bears the earmarks of modern ideas, such as these do, and if the recent work being turned out by this progressive firm are fair samples to go by, there can be no honest reason for anyone sending out of town to secure individuality or distinctive quality in their printing or advertising. Such effort as is being put forth by this house to make of printing an art certainly deserves hearty support.

GET TASTE OF TRUST POLICY

Chicago, May 27.—American vessel owners were given a taste of the policy of the trusts to maintain local markets while their surplus was disposed of abroad at any price it would bring, when the corn clique began to move its grain. Canadian vessel owners have a fixed minimum rate on grain between Canadian ports and season which they can maintain, as American vessels are kept out under the coastwise laws of the Dominion. Just now there is a slack time in the movement of Canadian traffic and so the surplus tonnage was thrown into the foreign trade to keep it employed. The Rosemount and consorts were placed on the market for grain at Chicago for Montral and the rate of the American lines was cut to 3¾ cents per bushel. The Canada Atlantic fell into line yesterday and today the Great Lakes & St. Lawrence company chartered the J. S. Keefe for 80,000 bushels of corn to Montreal at the same rate. This charge of only 3¾ cents per bushel for carrying corn from Chicago to the ocean steamer at Montreal, is far lower that the export rate via American ports. It is said it no more than covers expenses, if it does that. Other Canadian vessels are expected on the market and the Chicago rate may go considerably lower than it is now if the policy of the Canadians is to be continued.

NEW TRIAL FOR MRS. ROGERS IS DENIED.

Montpelier, Vt., May 27.—The petition for a new trial of Mrs. Mary Rogers, convicted of the murder of her husband, has been denied by the supreme court of Vermont.

A reprieve granted by Governor Bell the day before Mrs. Rogers was to have been hanged last February will expire June 2. Under Vermont laws only commutation by the governor can now avert the hanging of the woman on the date mentioned.

HARDSHIP MAY RESULT

From Retaliation on Canadian Deportation of Officials.

Windsor, Ont., May 27.—The action of the Dominion government, in ordering the immediate deportation of the Pere Marquette railway officials from St. Thomas, has aroused a storm of indignation and dismay along the border. Three thousand people cross the Detroit river daily from Windsor, Walkerville and Sandwich, and should the American authorities seek to adopt retaliatory measures and discriminate against Canadian employes an incomparable amount of hardship will result. The agitation already has done much to prejudice American employers against Canadian labor along the border.

The third annual catalogue of the Duluth Normal school was issued during the week and is a most attractive book setting forth the interesting facts concerning the school year of 1904-1905 and the announcements for 1905-1906. The calendar for the next year of normal school work comes first in the book and the program is as follows:

Entrance examinations and enrollment of students, Tuesday, September 5, 1905.

Class-work begins Wednesday morning, September 6, 1905.

Term ends Wednesday, November 29, 1905.

The names of the state normal board, the board of control, the faculty of the school and the officers of administration follow.

A general statement of the growth of the school, the building and equipment, the purpose and plan of the school, and the courses of study are given in detail. A number of attractive cuts of the school appear and the catalogue closes with the list of graduates of the school and the present students in both the normal and model school departments.

LICENSES POURING IN

Prosecution of Delinquent Dog Owners Causes a Stampede.

Owners of dogs who have not yet secured their licenses, are falling over themselves this morning to get their money into the hands of the city treasurer and secure the receipt that will render them safe from arrest and prosecution.

Yesterday afternoon no less than six delinquent owners were fined $5 each by Judge Cutting, and this morning another was added to the list. The result is that the treasurer's office is swamped with applications for licenses and over 100 were issued this morning.

The total number of licenses issued up to date is 1,012, which it is believed will nearly represent the canine population of the city.

PAINT MANAGER IS ARRESTED FOR FRAUD

Peoria, Ill., May 27.—Harry Wilmering, manager of the United States Roof Paint company, was arrested by United States officials here for using the mails to defraud. It is alleged he has sold so-cated "Blue Sky" territory extensively in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other states and there are five indictments against him. His operations have neted him thousands of dollars.

Lester Park.

Decoration day, rain or shine, is the grand opening day of both pavilions. Two orchestras, afternoon and evening. No intoxicating liquors sold on the premises.

First Trip

Up the St. Louis river, of the steamer Newsboy, tomorrow, weather permitting. Manager Clow has not considered expense in refitting and placing the "Newsboy" in first class condition for the season. An outing up the St. Louis to Fond du Lac will be more refreshing, and have a tendency to make one feel as though life were worth the living, than remaining at home all day and will fit you better for business on Monday. The river will present an exhilorating appearance in its new coat of green. Steamer leaves Fifth avenue West 10 a. m. returning 6 p. m.

NEW ENGINEERING FIRM.

Northwestern Engineering Company Opens Offices in Lyceum Building.

The Northwestern Engineering company have opened offices in the Lyceum building for the purpose of conducting a general line of engineering work, civil, mechanical, electrical and mining.

The firm will make a specialty of acting as consulting engineers, and of making examinations of operating plants, furnishing estimates upon and bids for the installation of all classes of machinery, and of originating and designing all classes of labor-saving machinery.

J. C. Doyle will act as general manager of the company.

Attends College Reunion.

Hon. C. O. Baldwin left this afternoon for Jacksonville, Ill., where he will attend the reunion of Illinois college at that point. Mr. Baldwin has been selected as toastmaster for the occasion. Among the speakers will be ex-Governor Yates of Illinois and William Jennings Bryan, both of whom are graduates of the institution.

MEET WITH FAVOR

Wind Mills Afford Fire Protection To Point Properties.

Messrs. Sebenius, Hartman and Anncke Now Have Them.

With three modern wind mills of the most approved stamp in operation on Park Point this popular resort is taking on quite a countrified appearance. The first mill was put up because of its usefulness, but it proved to be so ornamental, adding much to the general appearance of its surroundings, that this feature, it is suspected, is now being taken into consideration by those who contemplate adding such an improvement to their Point property.

The residence properties thus equipped belong to J. Uno Sebenius, O. C. Hartman and P. S. Anneke. The last two mills were put in place the present month. Mr. Sebenius was the pioneer in the movement, his machine being erected last year. All are placed on tall towers, so that they are much in evidence from both the lake and bay sides of the point. They are connected with tanks of sufficient size to supply water for all emergencies, including fire, so the wind is made to do much of the work which would ordinarily fall to the human servants.

The heaviest migration of campers to the Point will occur the first few days of June, beginning next Wednesday or Thursday and continuing until about Sunday. A good many have already taken up their summer abode across the canal, but the majority are waiting until June 1, for the coming of the first real summer month generally means that the most disagreeable of the northeast storms are over with for the camping season. Those who moved into their cottages early in May have met with an unpleasant spell of weather, for the sun has not been in evidence many days this month. It is the habit of campers to forget all their troubles the first sunshiny day, however, so on a day like this they have no regrets to express because of their early move.

LOVING CUP FOR THOMAS.

Stockholm, Sweden, May 27.—The American consular corps today presented the retiring minister, W. W. Thomas, Jr., with a handsome silver loving cup as a mark of esteem.

DEMAND FACTS

About What You Eat.

When it comes to food, demand to know the facts about what goes into your stomach.

Not only that it is pure but that you are not deceived in the description of its contents and condition. Some flaked breakfast foods that have thus far failed are now being advertised in close imitation of the Grape-Nuts advertising, thinking in that way to finally make a success of the failure.

But false statements of the merits of human food will never on earth build up a business. These flaked foods are not pre-digested. They are not fully cooked and the starch in them is starch still and has not been turned to sugar, as claimed.

Chemical analysis tells the truth and the analysis of the famous chemists of the world show Grape-Nuts the only prepared breakfast food in which the starch part of the wheat and barley has ben transformed into sugar and, therefore, ready for immediate digestion. Why is this true? All the thin rolled flake foods are made by soaking the grains of wheat or oats in water, then rolling, drying and packing. These operations do not cook or predigest the starch.

Contrasted with this pretense, observe the care, method and skill in making Grape-Nuts.

The barley is soaked about one hundred hours, then it is slowly warmed for some days and sprouted, the diastase being developed and part of the starch turned to sugar (and later on all of it), then the grains are baked and the sprouts stripped off. Then comes grinding, sifting and mixing with the creamy colored flour made from white and maccaroni wheat. This mixture must be skilfully made in right proportions. This blended flour contains just the ingredients demanded by nature to rebuild the soft gray substance in the nerve centers and brain, but how to make the food easy to digest, that was the question.

It certainly would not do to mix in drugs, for there is a certain failure sure to come to the person depending on drugs to digest food. They may do for a temporary expedient, but pure food and digestible food is the only final resort and safe way. So to change the remaining starch part and prepare the other elements in this blended flour, it is made up into massive loaves, like bread, the inside being dark cream color and quite sticky to the touch. These loaves are sliced and again go through long cooking at certain temperatures. Then the rock-hard slices are each one carefully inspected and ground, ready for packing and use, having gone through 10 or 12 hours in the different operations.

When finished, each tittle granule will show a sparkling substance on its surface. A magnifying glass will bring it out clearer and develop little pieces of pure dextrose sugar, not put on "or poured over" (as the head of a large Sanitarium once stated in his paper, thus exposing his appalling ignorance of food processes), but this sugar exudes from the interior of each as the starch is slowly turned to sugar in the process of manufacture. This kind of sugar is exactly like what is found in the human intestines, provided the starch of the grains, potatoes, bread, rice, cake, etc., etc., has been perfectly digested. But many are weak in that form of digestion and yet need the starches, so Grape-Nuts supplies them pre-digested and ready to go quickly into the blood.

Visitors are shown freely through the works and can follow the steps of making Grape-Nuts from the grain to the finished product. The proportions of different kinds of flour, and the temperatures are not disclosed, and it seems impossible for others to steal these secrets of the makers. But purity, cleanliness and skill are shown in every corner of the immense pure food factories. People who care for results from choicely selected food, those who want the food to rebuild the sofa gray substance in brain and nerves that give the go, the vigor, the life, will understand why the imitators who try tocopy the announcements about Grape-Nuts have failed in the past.

There's a reason for Grape-Nuts and a profound one.

West Duluth

PAINFUL HURT

Dan Kavanaugh's Finger Badly Torn While Hitching Horse.

No Dock For Ramsey Street--W. C. T. U. Gets Its Property.

Dan Kavanaugh, employed at Johnson's livery barn, suffered a peculiar and painful accident this morning while at work in the barn. It resulted in the loss of the top part of the forefinger of his left hand and the lacerating of the next finger. He was hitching a horse and while in the act of tying a knot in a rope on the rig, the horse started up and the top of the forefinger became tangled in the knot and was pulled off just above the first joint.

Kavanaugh, of course, shrieked with pain and others about the barn hastened to his assistance. The rope had to be cut away from the rig, and when the knot was released the flesh of the finger above the joint dropped off. The wounded man was attended by Dr. Payette, who sewed the flesh on again

It is believed that it will heal so that the top of the finger may be preserved. Mr. Kavanaugh is suffering a good deal but is attending to his duties the best he can.

NO DOCK YET.

The Permanent Improvement Fund Too Low.

So far as the permanent improvement fund of the city is concerned, the city purse is too short to build the Ramsey street city dock at West Duluth for the present, unless money can be taken out of some other fund for the purpose, and before that can be done a legal opinion as to the propriety of such action is necessary. Bids for the building of the dock were to have been opened at the board of public works office yesterday but because of the condition of the fund mentioned, nothing was done in the matter.

The dock was to have cost $500 or thereabouts, and is considered absolutely necessary for the business interests of West Duluth. The disappointment is general and great because of the failure to do as agreed.

In view of the peculiar use of the funds for paving streets when property owners should have been assessed, not the kindliest feelings are entertained for the board of public works.

GETS THE DEED.

W. C. T. U. in Full Possession of Its Lot.

The deed for the lot at the corner of Fifty-seventh and Wadena, which the W. C. T. U. of West Duluth purchased for a branch Y. M. C. A. building, has been delivered to the ladies. The lots, which cost $510, has been paid for, but there is still outstanding against it about $100 for street assessments, which the ladies are anxious to get and clear the matter up.

The ladies have presented the lot to the Y. M. C. A., and did remarkably well in their work of collecting enough funds for the purchase of the ground. It is one of the best corners in West Duluth and was purchased at a bargain.

The committee of W. C. T. U. women who had the matter in charge were Mesdames H. H. Phelps, H. R. Patterson and C. R. Keyes.

BACK TO THE MINES.

M. Jacoby Goes To His Zinc Property.

M. Jacoby will return tomorrow morning to Wolf River, Canada, where he is interested in a zinc mine. Wolf River is about forty-five miles east of Port Arthur, in the Nipigon country, and the mine in question is operated by the Ontario Lead and Zinc company, of which Mr. Jacoby is president and general manager. Since he arrived here about ten days ago, he has received word that they have made another big strike of zinc and as previously to that a large body of zinc had been uncovered, there is no longer any doubt as to the value of the property.

The company is now putting in the machinery to work the mine and will continue to make improvements and turn out the product from now on.

RETURNS FROM TEXAS.

Joseph Lauermann Thinks It Great State.

Joseph Lauermann has returned from Texas, where he has been for eight months' traveling about on business. His brothers, Ben and Charles, are at Houston and are doing well. They will visit here before long. Mr. Lauermann says that Texas is the greatest state in the Union and is offering greater opportunities than any other part of the United States.

On his way through Chicago, he visited the district affected by the strike and he says it is getting to look pretty serious. The teams that are working are going about under the protection of armed guards, and yesterday he said near one part he visited there was considerable shooting done, but nobody was injured as far as he could learn.

The start will be made from the club rooms at Sixty-fourth avenue west and Ellnor street and the return will be in time for lunch. DAYS OF THE MARTYRS.

Very Rev. Father Moynihan to Lecture Here.

A stereopticon lecture on "Rome in the Days of the Matryrs" will be given next Thursday evening, at 8:15, by Very Rev. H. Moynihan, president of St. Thomas college, St. Paul, at the new cathedral auditorium. The lecture will be under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, and will be for the benefit of the orphans of St. James home.

Not only should the exceedingly high purpose of the affair attract, but the fame of the lecturer will doubtless pack the building. The reverend father has an excellent reputation as an orator and word painter, and as in this illustrated lecture he endeavors to place before his auditors Rome, not as it is today, but as it was in the early centuries, and as he is a deep student of such matters, the lecture will rise above the ordinary by a great degree.

A short musical program will be given also.

Are Much Married.

A rather interesting marriage return made at the clerk of district court's office, from the range, shows that a couple recently taking out a license were married twice to be sure the knot was securely tied. One of the marriages was performed by a justice of peace and the second by a Catholic priest.

MEMBERS OF SENIOR CLASS OF DULUTH CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL, WHO WILL GRADUATE JUNE 30.

PREPARATIONS FOR CLOSING OF SCHOOL

Announcement of Six Seniors Who Will Take Part on Commencement Night and Titles of Their Papers—Play to Be Given on Class Night—Other News.

Tuesday morning Principal Smith announced the names of the six students who will give the program commencement night, June 30, at the graduating exercises of the seniors.

Three young men and three young women were selected. They are, together with the titles of their essays or orations: Willis Hamblin, "Representative Men"; Stanley Strand, "Our Merchant Marine;" Harold Cant, Civil Service Reform"; Lillie Olessen, "Early Ballad Poetry"; Elizabeth Morris; "Uncle Ben's Superstition"; Johanna Strate, "Two of Shakespeare's Heroines."

"The essays show that considerable time and thought have been spent upon them," said Principal Smith in announcing the names, "and are of exceptional worth. As a whole, the work of the class was up to an excellent standard, and is deserving of great commendation. But, of course, some of the papers were better than others."

This year the choice was based solely on the worth of the papers that were turned in and the oratorical ability of the writer, as it was believed that in this manner a better program would result. Formerly some of the students who took part in the exercises were unable to make themselves heard throughout the large Assembly hall, being selected for excellency in scholarship, thus allowing of no means by which the choice could be restricted to those who were able speakers. With but one or two exceptions, those that were chosen this year have had experience in public speaking, and all have strong voices.

All of the young women who were successful were also on the honor roll, being among the first five having the highest standings for the three and a half years of their high school course. Miss Lillie Olessen stood first, Miss Elizabeth Morris second and Miss Johanna Strate fifth. The other two were Miss Isabelle McLean, third, and and Lester Seyler fourth.

* * *

The program for class night has been finally decided, and no further changes will be introduced.

A three-act comedy, entitled "Men, Maids and Matchmakers," will be put on by the class, forming the principal part of the program, as its presentation will occupy two hours.

The parts have not yet been definitely placed, but the cast will very likely be made up for the most part of those who participated in the annual senior play, which was given earlier in the year with great success. An excellent production is assured, as those who will impersonate the various characters will all have had previous experience. Prof. A. F. M. Custance will have charge of the program.

The scene of the play is laid in New York in the present time. It tells of the events that take place between a club of young women that are conducting a bachelor establishment and several young men, and they are many and often exceedingly humorous. The characters represented are eight in number as follows: Bachelor maids, Miss Lilian Steward, Miss Katherine Howard, Miss Elizabeth Everett and Miss Alice Marshall, alias Aunt Selina Winthrop; bachelor men, Guy Richards, Charles Brewster, Roy Vincent, and Sammie, a large cat.

In the first act the bachelor men and maids are presented to one another and to the audience. Aunt Selina appears on the scene, interrupts the course of true love by her interference and at the same time brings about an engagement.

In the second act Dr. Imhoff turns up, falls in love with Aunt Selina, and is so ludicrous that he proves to be irresistable. Mr. Vincent gets a lesson in love making; Mr. Richards gets into hot water; Miss Howard is misunderstood; and everybody gets into a state of dissatisfaction. The events in this act occur a month after those of the first.

The thid act is supposed to be one day later. Mr. Vincent acts as a peace maker and Aunt Selina upsets Miss Marshall's plans. However, the course of true love runs smoothly once more and everybody is made happy, including Sammy, the doctor and also the audience.

The class president's address will be given as usual at the opening of the exercises, and will be followed by the class oration, to be delivered by William Harrison. The class president is Edward Furni.

The play has this year been substituted for the class prophecy, the class history and the last will and testament, which were becoming too difficult to handle with the rapid increase of the classes in size. The play was selected in preference to the series of tableaux that were selected a short time ago, in which it was planned to have the entire class participate.

JUNIOR-SENIOR BALL

To Take Place at Spalding July 3.

The junior-senior ball, the annual reception of the junior class to the graduates, will be given at the Spalding the evening of July 3.

Extensive preparations have been made for the event, which will be one of the finest affairs that has ever been tendered to the students who are going to leave their first alma mater for all time.

The hall will be decorated extensively in the colors of the school, the seniors and the juniors blending, the red and white of the former with the grey and red and the crimson and black of the classes, the whole to be set off with the beautiful new light effects that are being planned. The program of twenty-four dances will be printed on a heavy white paper of the finest quality, with the class pin embossed on the front, together with the word "Junior-Senior."

It was impossible to secure the hall for Thursday night, as was desired, thus necessitating that it be given the evening of July 3. Through this arrangement the program will continue into the Fourth, the advent of which will be celebrated by a large display of fireworks, on the roof garden or sun parlor.

The members of the committee in charge of the arrangements are: Florence Bradley, Mabel Culkins, Charles McLennan, Katherine Hunter, Donald Stocker, Madge Miller, Frank Crassweller, Max Cramner, Elsie Crassweller, Margaret Whipple, Vernon Claypool, Hazel Britts and Henry Gowan.

SIX GRADUATES OF DULUTH HIGH SCHOOL, SELECTED TO TAKE PART IN COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM.

WILL TAKE EXAMINATIONS.

Those of High School Board to Be Taken.

Next week about ten or twelve of the students in the senior class will take the examinations that are sent out by the board of high school examiners.

The marks that are secured in this examination, provided they are above or equal to the required standard, will be accepted as marks on the examinations that are given to those who wish to qualify as teachers in the schools of the state.

The subjects in which they will be examined are elementary algebra, plane geometry, physics, physiology, zoology, chemistry, senior geography, senior American history, senior grammar, senior arithmetic and civil government.

Together with the above named, the complete list of subjects in which the high school board gives examinations is: English grammer, arithmetic, United States history, geography, English composition, English literature, higher algebra, solid geometry, modern and medieval history, history of Greece and Rome, history of England, ancient history (to 800 A. D.,) physiography, study of commerce, political economy, free-hand drawing, bookkeeping, French literature, French language, Vergil, Cicero, Caesar, Latin grammar, astronomy and botany.

Cyrus Northrup is the examiner of the high school board.

FRESHMAN SPREAD.

Lower Class Pupils Have Happy Function.

Last evening about 100 members of the freshman class gathered in the high school building to enjoy a bountiful spread by the girls of the class.

Several of the teachers who were present responded to toasts, as did the various class presidents, who were also invited. After the spread was over they adjourned to the lower hall, where they were joined by the other classes and their friends in the dance that followed. The hall was beautifully decorated in the colors of the class, black and gold. Everybody reported a most enjoyable time.

Each of the two classes is allowed but one spread each, as the school board has decided that too many parties were not in keeping with learning. The sophomores had theirs a short time ago, the occasion being the annual sophomore hop. The two upper classes are allowed two each. The juniors had their midyear immediately after the semester examinations, and will give the junior-senior July 3. The seniors had a spread several months ago, and are now planning to give another the second week of next month.

INVITATIONS SELECTED.

Senior Class Preparing For the Closing.

The seniors have selected the invitations they wil send to their friends and relatives for commencement and class nights.

They will be of heavy bond paper of the best quality with the numerals "05" beautifully intertwined on the first page in silver and cardinal red. The class colors are grey and cardinal red, but the silver will be used as the effect will thus be more handsome.

All the members of the class are now looking eagerly forward to the last week of school and to the class night and commencement exercises, and are busy making their preparations for that time, which will work one of the most important steps that they have thus far taken in the course of their careers. Those who will participate in the class play and the class night program, as well as those who will deliver their essays and orations commencement night, are busy learning and rehearsing their parts, while every one in the class is beginning to make visits to the tailors and dressmakers.

School Notes.

Last week Principal Smith told the seniors that all those who were not expecting to go away to school next year and desired to secure employment could leave their names with him or Miss Taylor. He said that very often students came to him to secure information in this regard, and that business men of the city would frequently ask him to recommend graduates that fitted for certain respective lines of business. If those pupils will hand in their names he will do all that lies in his power to assist them.

* * *

This afternoon the track athletes are engaged in trying for places on the high school track team which will represent the local school in the five-cornered meet that will be held in Ironwood June 10. The men are in excellent condition from weeks of training and it is expected that some excellent records will be made.

* * *

Wednesday afternoon the members of the senior class had their pictures taken in a group at the east entrance of the high school. One of them will be enlarged and placed in the building.

* * *

Yesterday morning four of the veterans of the G. A. R. spoke to the students about Memorial day and the events of the Civil war for which the day is observed. The veterans who spoke were: Rev. Mr. Kimball, Mr. Stanford, Mr. Laux and Mr. Burnham. The choir rendered several patriotic selections.

* * *

The Zenith board has now practically completed its labors, much to the satisfaction of the members of that august body, who were finding the strenuous life less and less to their liking as the end drew near.

* * *

Are you going to take "French leave" Monday? The fishing is of the best and the woods are exceedingly attractive. So why not? School does not let out until the end of June, and the relief may be the means of preventing a nervous breakdown from overwork.

* * *

But be patient and do not lose courage. Only five more weeks of school.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrah.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much-improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; thy cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

FIGURES THAT APPALL.

Figures do not usually make the most enlivening literature, but the immigration figures that are being published now are stirring up strong public sentiment. The Herald the other evening published in its dispatches an intimation from Washington that the president is preparing to call the matter to the attention of congress officially, with a view to having remedial legislation of some sort adopted.

It is not so much the quantity of the immigration as the quality that is compelling attention, and leading to the inevitable conclusion that strong measures are essential. While the increase in the numbers of arriving immigrants is startling, the change in their character is much more alarming. The time has gone by when immigration was of such character that a statesman figured that every immigrant was worth $1,500 to the country. It is becoming a question whether a majority are not a positive menace, rather than a benefit.

In the fiscal year which ends June 30 nearly a million immigrants will have landed on the shores of the United States. This will break all records, as the greatest previous number was 857,046 in the year ending June 30, 1903. If these immigrants were all desirable citizens the prospect would be pleasing. When so many of them are clearly undesirable, the figures become appalling, and the situation calls loudly for immediate action.

As to the changing character of the incoming flood of humanity, federal statistics are enlightening. Three decades ago the vast majority of immigrants were from the United Kingdom, France, Germany, and the Scandinavian peninsula, sources from which the best immigrants have always come. Today the proportion of immigrants from these countries has dwindled, and the greater number come from Austria-Hungary, Italy, Poland and Russia. Below is a tabling comparing the two groups. The first column shows the percentage of immigrants from the latter group, and the second column shows the percentage arriving from the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Scandinavia, in the years from 1869 to 1901:

Year.	First Group.	Second Group.
1869	0.9	73.8
1880	8.5	64.5
1890	34.0	57.7
1891	39.6	52.1
1892	44.8	53.9
1893	42.7	48.2
1894	42.6	47.9
1895	39.8	52.9
1896	52.	33.
1897	52.	38.
1898	57.	33.
1899	64.	27.
1900	66.7	25.3
1901	68.6	22.5

In 1869 the immigrants from the first and undesirable group were about one-hundredth of the number from the second, or desirable group; in 1880 about one-tenth; in 1894 nearly equal to it; and in 1901 three times as great.

It is not that all the immigrants from the first group are undesirable, nor that all from the first are of the highest type; but generally, the first group includes many likely to become public charges, while the great majority of those from the second group become self-supporting and valuable citizens.

The table shows an alarming change in the character of immigration, and in view of the appalling increase in the number of arrivals, seems to call for the deepest consideration.

THE LABORER'S STORY.

Last Saturday The Herald published a letter from a clerk earning $50 a month, who presented his schedule of expenses and demanded how he was to support his family and save money. This week it publishes a letter from a laboring man who makes about the same amount, and who discusses his problems and his prospects in an intelligent and interesting manner. If the clerk will read the laborer's story he will find that his perplexities are not the worst in the world, and that the future looks more uncertain to many than it should to him.

The letter is from a thrifty Scandinavian laborer, who, as may be gathered from his letter, possesses considerable intelligence and has diligently attended to the duty of caring for his family and himself through the years of his residence in Duluth. It is placed before the readers of The Herald that they may see another side of the story.

One thing in his letter, as in that of the clerk and that of Franklin Paine, published during the week, calls for attention, and that is the pessimistic view taken of Duluth because of conditions of which all three complain. They all seem to take it for granted that Duluth is especially burdened with these troubles, and that if they could only get to some other place they would do better. It is the natural view of anybody dissatisfied with his condition that if he could only get into another place or another business he would be all right. The lawyer thinks he should have been a doctor, the doctor wishes he had become a banker, the banker thinks he would have done better as a merchant, the salesman wishes he had learned a trade, the craftsman is sure that if he had gone into a store he would be much better off, and so on all through society. By the same process of reasoning, the man who has a hard time getting along in Duluth thinks he would do better in Chicago, while perhaps the Chicago man similarly situated is ardently envying his location in Duluth.

While a natural and very human reasoning, it is usually mistaken. No business, no trade, no profession, is a bed of roses. No community is without its drawbacks. Therefore those who think of changing should beware, lest they leap headlong out of the frying pan into the fire. The people of a community have its making in hand, and the better course is to persist in believing that they live in the best town on earth, and if they see anything wrong, to do their best to right it.

A LIFE WORTH WHILE.

Luther Burbank, the man who is inventing new forms of flowers and fruits, said recently:

"I shall be content if because of me there shall be better fruits and fairer flowers."

That is the noble utterance of a noble man. Surely there could be no ambition more worthy, more noble, than his. To leave things a little better than he found them. To make something grow where nothing grew before. To make the world a pleasanter place to live in, to make somebody's lot in life happier and smoother, to take the thorns out of somebody's way; surely, these things are worth while and are a sufficient answer to the fellow who wants to know the chief end of man.

It is not given to everybody to do such work as Burbank is doing, for his works are the works of a wizard. He has taken the spines from the cactus, he has made a flower that changes color daily, he has made fruits and vegetables more luscious than ever existed before. It takes a genius to do these things, and Burbank is a genius. We are not all geniuses—fortunately, let us remark—but we can all do something to make the world better and pleasanter, and that is what Burbank is doing. If instead of creating new fruits we do better work in our particular line than anybody before us has done; if instead of taking the spines out of cactus we make the pathway of our neighbors smoother and stand always ready with a word of cheer and a helping hand, we shall be working in accord with the spirit of Burbank.

It is a pretty thought from a man who has chosen a pretty life work, and it is worth thinking about.

HOLDING A GRUDGE.

It doesn't pay to hold a grudge.

One day somebody did you an injury, you think. In many cases it is purely imaginary, and a word of explanation would clear it all up and make you ashamed of yourself for harboring the thoughts that have been given quarters in your breast. But suppose somebody really did hurt your feelings, or your business, or your self-esteem. And by the way that last injury is the one you forgive the slowest.

What good does it do to store up that grudge in your mind, and nurse it, and foster it, and cultivate it until it has grown all out of proportion to its cause? Even if some day you do get a chance to get even with your brother who hurt you, perhaps thoughtlessly, you can never get away from the fact that you are out more than he is; that the bitterness of the spirit of revenge has struck deeply into your soul, and that you are less a man for it. It has soured your nature, more or less permanently. It has injured your faith in humanity, because you have magnified your grievance as many times as a microscope magnifies a germ, and worse still, you have come to believe in the magnified form. Besides, the existence of that spirit of revenge in you leads you to judge others by yourself. If you do a man an injury, you are expecting him to "get back at you," and it makes you suspicious, cautious, fearful.

In most cases, there wasn't any injury in the first place. In most of the other cases, the injury was unintentional, as you would have found out if you had taken the trouble to inquire. In all the other cases, which makes a tiny proportion of the whole, the man that did it is probably more than half ashamed of it after he has done it, and if you gave him a chance would be glad to apologize. Usually if you know an inclination to "make up" you will find in the other fellow a corresponding disposition that will help a lot.

It doesn't pay to hold a grudge, for there is trouble enough anyway, without deliberately going to work and making trouble where there oughtn't to be any.

SOME MORE JUGGLING.

The failure of a Boston banking house because it dealt too heavily in questionable securities is another grade of culpability in the general class of juggling with trust funds. It is not so bad as the crime of the banker that rinks his depositors' money in the wheat market, nor does it by any means come under the head of legitimate business.

It appears from the reports that this house went to the wall because it financed and built several street railways and interurban roads that did not pan out. It appears further that the roads were in thinly settled districts and were unable to make proper connections with roads running to Boston. In other words, they were enterprises built upon an insecure foundation, and when the bankers risked the money of their clients in them they took a long chance with it.

While the reports do not so state, it is probable that the reason these bankers handled their funds in this manner was that the prospects were good for large returns if the projects succeeded. If they took bonds, undoubtedly they got them at a large discount. The prospects of heavy profits obscured in the minds of the bankers the danger of absolute failure and the complete loss of the money of the depositors.

The distinction between this practice and that of playing the wheat market is not so wide as it might seem. The Milwaukee banker who got away with millions in this manner expected, if he won, to make large profits. Undoubtedly he thought he was going to win, or he would not have taken the bank's deposits to gamble with. He did not win, and the only reason the depositors lost no money was that the directors were wealthy enough to make up his defalcation. The Boston bankers did not win, either. The roads did not pan out, and against liabilities of $1,174,348 there are assets that may be worth $200,000, as stated, or that may be worth next to nothing.

In both the Milwaukee and Boston instances, the bankers took unwarranted liberties with funds entrusted to their care. They permitted hopes of personal gain to interfere with their duties to those who trusted them. Neither was engaged in legitimate banking; both were engaged in dishonest juggling with money not their own. Both are excellent examples of how not to conduct a banking enterprise.

THE MILCH GOAT.

The country near Duluth should be able to draw some valuable conclusions from the experiments of the department of agriculture with the milch goat of Germany and Switzerland. It is already beginning to reap some benefits from the department's experiments with the Angora goat, though those benefits are by no means so widespread as they should be and as they undoubtedly will be.

The Angora goat has been shown to be a valuable factor in the development of cut-over timber lands and lands covered with brush. No method of clearing up brush is as adequate and thorough as the plan of turning a bunch of Angora goats into a brush-covered farm. The way they will clear it up in a short time is marvelous, and there should be agreeable profits in handling the goats outside of the service they do in clearing land.

Since the Angora goat industry has grown to be worth several millions yearly under the direction of the department of agriculture, the department has been led to make a study of the milch goat, and its conclusions have been laid before the public.

It appears from the published report that the department believes that the milch goat, if firmly established, will prove vastly more valuable and important than the Angora goat. The goat, which is amiable, uncomplaining, and cheaply fed, yields from three to five quarts of milk daily. When the milk is properly cared for it is said to be as pleasant as cow's milk, and there is no question that it is much richer and more wholesome, being much more free from tuberculosis. Germany has 3,000,000 milch goats, worth $12,000,000, and their yield of milk and kids each year amounts to $36,000,000, or 300 per cent on their value.

The animals seem especially adapted to such a country as this, for their feed is a trifling thing in cost while their yield is greater than that of cows and more productive both of health and wealth.

Hotel Gossip.

"New discoveries of ore are being made through the West every once in a while, although one would naturally suppose that the ground had been pretty well covered before this," said Ernest Richards of Minneapolis, recently returned from a western trip, at the McKay. "Among the latest discoveries is one by a man by the name of Wolverton, in the Colorado desert.

"Wolverton is one of the old-time prospectors, and has always had a great deal of faith in the ore possibilities of the Colorado desert. In the course of his most recent wanderings in that desolate region he discovered an exceedingly rich gold-copper ore about five miles south of a stream which goes by the name of Green river. There are, according to his report, immense quantities of ore on the surface, which can be assorted and shipped in boats on the Colorado river to the nearest line of railway. One vein, he says, has been exposed for over two miles, varying in thickness from 18 inches to 6 feet, and carrying high values in copper, gold and silver.

"There doubtless still exist numerous rich ore deposits in the West which are unknown at the present time."

"A week or two ago the United States government gave the Omaha Indians in Nebraska $100,000 with which to buy whiskey of the most poisonous and loathsome variety," said V. G. Draper of Sioux City, at the St. Louis. The recent ruling of the United States supreme court, that Indians who have received their allotments are citizens, and have a right to spend their money as they please, and buy liquor in the open if they choose, means that the saloon men near the reservation will harvest much of this $100,000.

"Little else will be purchased by the Indians as long as they can secure intoxicants. They need no clothing when warm weather is upon them, work is very uninviting when it is possible to stay drunk, and the drunken Indian does not care to eat. He will go without food for days, until he falls exhausted. When they get their money from the government they enjoy one prolonged debauch until it is all gone. The worst of it is, the poor red man cannot even get the pure stuff. It wouldn't be quite so bad if he could do that, but the stuff that is palmed off on him would choke a white toper.

"The Indian has no choice of brands, and his mixed drinks are passed off on him as straight stuff. Manhattan and Martinic cocktails are unknown to the red man, and he is given a concoction which would ordinarily be hair tonic, or liniment, if put up in bottles of a different pattern. Two Indians died recently as the result of drinking a mixture of wood alcohol, which is regularly diluted and colored for Indian consumption. Some of the Indians are buying lemon extracts, bay rum and even camphor which they substitute for the whisky secured at the saloons, and which are said to be far superior in taste to the coffin varnish bought from the regular liquor establishments. Columbus spirits are among the most common substitutes offered the red men. It is a very low grade of alcohol, used in many of the hair tonics. It is just low enough, and just enough below any required test not to be alcohol, and so does not require a tax. This makes it the cheapest preparation which the saloon men can secure with which to produce the desired effect on the Indians. It is mellowed in old whisky barrels, and careful dispensers make the mixture bearable while it is being swallowed. Then it acts as certainly as mercury. The Indian is seized with a violent desire to get rid of anything he may have in his stomach. Food cannot be taken after drinking the stuff, as nothing can be retained on the stomach. So the helpless Indian becomes weak and sinks down on the prairie, to recover from the dose of poison as best he may."

"I do not believe that the combination of forest fires and heavy rains we have had this spring will affect the fall crop of game birds to any appreciable extent," said J. S. Everett, a Milwaukee traveling man, at the St. Louis. I stopped off at Gordon and other small Northern Wisconsin towns on my way up here, and according to all reports there the birds will be plentiful the coming fall. The farmers and settlers say that the grouse and chickens are rather late in nesting, and that therefore none of the eggs have been destroyed by the fire and water. The way I understand it, the birds wait until the season is pretty well advanced before they make their nests, and if this was done this year they certainly acted wisely. Many sportsmen have expressed the fear that the nesting would be greatly interfered with by the forest fires.

"Last year the birds must have waited almost too long before beginning laying operations, for when the season opened in the fall the young were in many sections too small to shoot. They were very much undersized, and fell an easy prey to the man with the gun."

Judge Stearns and Judd Stearns left today for Crookston, where a three weeks' term of court will be held.

Edward Duplus, who has a son living in Duluth, was killed at Walker's sawmill at Crookston. He fell upon a large belt, was drawn over the upper pully and instantly crushed to death. He was 48 years old and had resided in Crokston about five years. On the day before the fatal accident, Duplus, who had been a widower several years, was married a second time.

Force will give an address at the cemetery and Rev. Levi Gilbert will deliver an oration.

The Duluth wheat market is growing rapidly. As a speculative market Duluth has already outstripped such cities as Milwaukee, Toledo and Detroit and is crowding St. Louis. Much of the option business of the Northwest, which was formerly sent to Chicago, is now coming to Duluth.

C. A. Seley, state boiler inspector, will be through his labors this week. With his associate he has inspected about eighty boilers, and has condemned none.

The Weather.

A glorious morning! Words are inadequate to describe it, for it would empty the poet's quiver of adjectives and imagery to attempt to set its beauties down in cold print. The sun rose upon a world that was fresh and bright, and clean from yesterday's rains, upon trees and plants that were eagerly showing their pleasure at the gifts of the gods, and whose leaves were luxuriantly expanding under the genial influences of kindly rains and an amiable sun. The birds filled the air with their proclamations that it was a fine morning, and their cheerful tunes were more joyous than ever. Even Mr. Kicker's grumpy liver permitted his face to relax a little, and his tongue to reluctantly admit that it wasn't such a bad world to live in after all.

And the morning was simply a suitable preface to a day full of the richest delights that nature can offer. The wind was in a kindly mood, and gave the sun fair play. There was health of mind and body in every breeze and every sun-ray. The indications are that conditions will continue favorable, though the winds are likely to take a northerly shift, and it will be partly cloudy tonight and tomorrow. Incidentally, it might be mentioned, that if tomorrow is pleasant, it will be the first Sunday of that sort since Easter.

There were showers scattered over a wide area yesterday, and today it is warmer in the upper Mississippi valley and the Western Lake Region. Manitoba and Utah continue to hang on to the low barometric pressures.

Justifiable Homicide.

Oh, he yearned to be a sailor, but he had scant time to fool,
So he took just seven lessons in a correspondence school.
Then he went to see a captain who desired of hands a score.
And the latter promptly did asked him, "Where'd ye ever sail before?"
He informed the doughty seaman how his learning he had got,
And the captain took a marlinspike and brained him on the spot.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Chasing Up the Almighty Dollar.

The dollar bulks large in the estimation of the average American. If you doubt it, listen to the talk of the street, the cars, the hotel lobbies. Phrases like these pass from lip to lip,—"a good deal," "a paying proposition," "heard about the new trust?" "stocks a bit ticklish today," and so on. And if we could hear what people think as well as say we should be even more certain that the thought of most grown men and women and even of the rising generation is largely occupied with plans and processes of money-getting. Prof. William James of Harvard that acute psychologist, has said that there is nothing which the average American fears so much as poverty. And the way in which men strive to get money and to get more money and to get still more money confirms his assertion. William J. Bryan recently declared that a man spends the first half of his life in getting all the money he can and the second half in trying to prevent others from getting it away from him.

The chase is not confined to any one class. A lawyer holding one of the most responsible positions in one of our great commonwealths has just refused to be a candidate for re-election, presumably because he feels the time has come to acquire a fortune for his family as he easily can do with his legal reputation. He is only one of many who do not think they can afford to put their powers at the service of the state, even when the salaries which they draw, compared with the salaries of many professional men, seem large, and if we go to another class in society we find just as much eagerness for the dollar. An intelligent railroad engineer confided to me the other day his opinion of his comrades in the same line of work. "The railroad men of this country," he said, "are a pretty good set of men. If a fellow gets into trouble they will help him out. But, they are a greedy lot. They are after the best job and if they can get it they are apt to be piggish about holding it." But is not that just about what any of us would have to confess with regard to many of the men with whom we are closely related, though we might not use exactly the same adjectives?

Well, an age of commercialism is better than an age of utter stagnation. We have to admit that the chase for the dollar calls into play some of our God-given talents, that the tremendous material advance of our time furnishes scope for initiative, persistency, inventiveness, courage, that some men are born business men just as some men are born poets and that such men can hardly help making money if they only exert themselves. Moreover, we may moralize as we please, but we are not likely to stop th present drift of affairs. A discerning business man in the circle of "high finance" said not long ago that, rich as this country is, it is going to be far richer as its resources are developed and he added: "There is going to be enough to go around," by which he meant that no man or single set of men could monopolize all this vast wealth that is to be.

What, then, ought to be our attitude toward this chase for the dollar? First of all, we should recognize that the dollar is, all, only the means to an end. One honors the dollar because it stands for wealth, comfort, home, luxuries, opportunities for travel, for hospitality, for charity. Viewed apart from these ends, the dollar is only a bit of metal or paper unworthy to be the object of any rational being's chase. Then, again, the dollar is not the only means to the end. You can enjoy the fresh air and the sky; you can enter into sympathy with your fellowmen and into communion with your Maker even if you have not a cent in your pocket.

Moreover, the dollar is seldom the means to the highest ends. I doubt if, as a rule, the rich are very much happier than the poor. Indeed, the dollar is often the occasion, if not the source of sorrow and of wrong-doing. A banker in a certain city had an abundance of dollars and all that dollars can bring, but still he wanted more, wanted them so badly that he embezzled funds entrusted to his care and the result is the wrecking of his own life and sorrow upon sorrow to those closest to him.

No, the proper attitude toward the dollar is one of respect and at the same time one of independence. Never hold it so close to your eye as to shut out the sun. Never let it measure for you the real wealth of your life. A New Yorker tells me that the only way to live in New York happily is either to be totally absorbed in money and what it brings or else to be supremely indifferent to it. The latter is the better way to live, not only in New York, but anywhere.

Oh, almighty dollar, potent instrument in the hands of wise men, the power behind scientific advance and human progress, the source of schools, hospitals and churches. Oh, puny impotent dollar, incapable of bringing peace to the disturbed conscience or comfort to the lonely heart! Oh, almighty, puny dollar, we accept thee for what thou art and look elsewhere for what thou art not!

It was a popular-priced show, but the performance was a pretty fair one for all that. The usual run of people filled the theater. The faces were most of them the same, or the same kind, that were always to be seen there. There was nothing particularly refined about them, and nothing particularly unrefined, except in a few instances, and these few exceptions are to be found in almost any large gathering. The people were of the big mass known as the working class. They were out for pleasure, and were not at all afraid of showing their enjoyment when something going on on the stage pleased them. They smiled and applauded and laughed with the utmost freedom. Taken as a whole, the gathering was an interesting one. What gathering of human beings is not an interesting one?

Evidently this was the way the people in the box on the left figured it, for they looked at the people in the parquet as much as they did at the people on the stage. At least the women did. There were three of them, occupying rather prominent positions. Two men sat in the shadowy background, and paid little attention to anything but the play. Every once in a while they laughed. They did this whenever anything struck them as funny, in fact, and with as much freedom as those who occupied the seats on the lower floor of the house. The women did not like this very well, for it showed poor taste, and acknowledged the fact that their husbands, for such they appeared to be, could be interested in common with the creatures down below. It should be understood from this that the two men had married the three women, for they hadn't. They had married only two of them. The third was an outsider, but she was on just as elevated a plane as her feminine friends, as was proven when she refused to manifest any enjoyment even when there really was occasion for it.

Laugh before all those vulgar people and thus let them lose sight of her very evident superiority? Well, she guessed not! The other two guessed not, likewise. They did occasionally venture a smile, but invariably it was one of contempt, or a good imitation, and such samples appeared only when the faces of the three were turned toward the audience, and not toward the stage. Of course they were to show the disdain of these lofty beings for the ignorance the common people displayed by being amused at something funny. It would never do to smile any other kind of a smile in such a vulgar assemblage. Goodness, no! Of course they were there to be amused, but they expected the audience to amuse them, and not the actors, as they afterwards told their friends. It wouldn't do to smile in an amused way at the people, for they might think the occupants of the box were enjoying the play, which would have been just as bad as if the latter had really shown an interest in the performance. It was aggravating, though, that the common lot of unfortunates, who had paid good money to see the show instead of occupying a box by special favor or by reason of allowing the use of a vacant window for bill posting, did not appreciate the full significance of these contemptuous facial illuminations, and become greatly abashed and repent thereby, instead of not noticing them at all, and going right on getting all the fun they have paid for. This was only another sign of their pitiable ignorance. Surely, they were beyond redemption.

Between the acts the people looked at the occupants of the box, and the occupants of the box looked at the people. Again their countenances wore a pitying, contemptuous expression. "Poor things, you have our sympathy," they have been hardly proper. The occupants of the box knew this, and so they didn't say it. This was very good of them. But the people neither knew this, nor seemed to recognize the fact that they were highly honored by being seemed to want to say. But that would privileged to enjoy the distant and critical company of the notables. Again this had a tendency to affect the enjoyment of the notables. The men in the audience gave merely an idle glance of curiosity at the box, while the women looked a little longer, so that they might better observe the cut of the gowns, and speculate as to their cost and the quality of the goods. All failed to read the faces correctly. Poor misguided, unfortunates. They say that the faces were rather pretty to look at, and stopped there. Perhaps a few of them went even farther, and noted a certain element of shallowness of thought and purpose which showed habitually, but there is no certainty on this point. These few occupied parquet seats, and it would hardly do for them to criticise anyone who sat in a box, as everybody knows.

If the women really did study the audience, they probably found something to be interested in. There were two young men, for example, and both are of recognized standing in society. They were "stagging" it. The fact that they were among people who did not move on the same social plane as themselves did not appear to bother them in the least. It so happened that there was nothing doing about town that evening, so they had gone to the theater to pass away the time. The show was better than they had expected to find it. They apparently thought it was worth at least the two half dollars they had parted with to see it, and were deporting themselves accordingly, laughing and clapping their hands violently at frequent intervals. It was rather strange that men of their standing and gerat popularity among "the people who know" should show such poor taste as to agree with the opinions of the common lot relative to the ability of some of the stage characters, but they did it, nevertheless.

Even they were not averse to getting a little amusement out of the audience, however. A few seats in front were two other young fellows of the same social set. The ideas of the latter must have been something similar to those of the people in the box, for they never cracked a smile all through the performance, and occasionally they also cast glances of wonder and pitying scorn at the laughing faces around them. This amused the first two very much, and they laughed just as hard at this as they did at the alleged funny situations on the stage, which was decidedly rude of them, as all must agree.

And then they laughed at the woman who got to laughing so hard that she couldn't stop. Nearly everybody loked at her and laughed with her, and the more they laughed the more she laughed, and vice versa, which expression the people in the box could have told you means the other way round about, or some equally intelligible definition might have been substituted for this. They showed their appreciation of the situation by means of more smiles of pitying contempt.

When this excitement had died away, and after the curtain had descended on the second act, the younger of the two men who were getting their money's worth pointed out a happy young couple across the aisle and a little in front. The man was very young and very unsophisticated in appearance, but deported himself very well, everything considered. The girl at his side was also rather young, likewise a trifle unsophisticated as to appearance, and gaily dressed. He bought her a box of candy from the thoughtful-looking youth who plodded wearily up and down the aisle patiently singing out "Chocolates, bon bons, chewing gum and candy." The girl brightly smiled her thanks and proceeded to unearth the mine of hidden sweets. Probably she said she just loved chocolates, and undoubtedly she meant just what she said. The strange girl at her side, a trifle timid-looking, covertly eyed the box, and something like an envious gleam shot from beneath her drooping lashes. The lucky one with the moneyed beau noted this, and straightway passed the sweets along, at the same time launching into a fervid discussion of their merits. The timid one joined in, and they had a very chattery time for a few moments.

Another girl in front, evidently 15 years old or thereabouts, looked around. She was with her mother. Naturally her mother could not afford to throw away money on such foolish nonsense as candy, although she might have gotten a box of cracker jack in a pitch (and eaten three-quarters of it herself). This third member of the gentler sex was rapidly and promiscuously chewing a big wad of gum. When she saw the bon bons she became so excited that she missed three workings of the lower jaw, according to the count of the young men. Her eyes opened very wide and became quite prominent. She immediately became lost to her surroundings, and had no thought of turning her gaze from the box, except to fasten it in a most supplicating and suggestive way on the unheeding countenance of the fortunate one. She twisted herself about in the seat as much as possible, so that she might get a better view of what was going on behind, and maintained this position until the curtain rose on the next act. The fortunate one paid no attention to her dumb, dog-like pleadings, and so the girl in front was forced to the extremity of working the gum about with all the fingers of one hand in a thought-producing fashion. She even stretched it out the full length of her arm in an informal manner, eight or ten times, but in spite of this extra effort at manufacturing an idea for getting possession of a piece of the candy, she signally failed in her endeavors. The fortunate one could not fail to notice these efforts, neither could she fail to recognize their purpose, but she refused to show that she did either. For anything she did or said she might have been alone on a desert island with the timid one. Finally, a little while before the curtain went up, she shoved the box over the back of the row of seats in front, and, without looking at the gum chewer, sweetly asked the next person, who was also a girl, if she wouldn't like some of the bon bons. The girl smiled in a comprehensive manner and signified her willingness by taking two pieces. Still ignoring the mute appeals of the other, the fortunate one calmly pulled the box back from under her very nose and continued the interrupted conversation with the new-found friend.

Then the curtain went up on the last act.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT.

Dividends For May Reached Total of $251,040.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 27.—The dividends for the month of May of the public companies operating in the Cripple Creek district amounted to $251,040, which makes a total for the first five months of the year near the enormous sum of $1,489,040. At this rate the dividends of the year will go over the $3,000,000 mark.

The drainage tunnel committee of Cripple Creek mine owners has under consideration construction of a $750,000 tunnel which would drain the entire gold camp and be a benefit to all properties in the district. The proposed tunnel would be five miles long, 8 by 12 feet, and would require five years for its completion. Although the matter is still only a matter of discussion, it is thought that favorable action will be taken by the prominent mine owners of the district.

George L. Keener, operating under lease blocks 5 4to 60 of the Globe Hill company of the Stratton estate, will resume sending out ore shipments tomorrow and from this time on expects to keep up an average of a carload of ore a day. The lessee is now working in wonderful body of ore practically at the surface. The larger part of the ore shoot is returning values as high as three ounces to the ton in gold. The lessee started to work at cross-cutting from the Chicago and Cripple Creek tunnel to determine whether or not this same ore shoot extends to his depth which is 800 feet below the surface.

Lessee Webster, operating on the International claim, located on Gold hill, has opened up a nice body of ore a short distance north of the shaft at a depth of 350 feet. While the ore shoot onl measures from three to twelve inches in width at the present time, the values will run several thousand dollars to the ton. The ore is being sacked and will probably be sent out by express. The lessee is satisfied that he has only just opened the top of the ore shoot, so it is his intention immediately to sink 100 feet lower when he will upraise to catch the ore which will allow considerable stoping ground and make more economical handling possible.

Cox and associates, who are working under ease the American Eagle mine, belonging to the Stratton estate, are sending out a splendid tonnage of ore. There are ten sets of sub-lessees operating on this property, five of whom are working in good ore. Probably the best showing of a company is that of Lessee Curnow, who is breaking a body of ore from three to four feet in width on the eighth level, which is giving returns of five ounces of gold to the ton. The shaft of the American Eagle mine is the deepest in the district, being 1,538 feet below the surface, and in several instances, where the ore has been found at the lowest point, the inshoots are widening instead of narrowing with depth. Values are also getting better with depth.

NEVER TIRE OF IT.

Duluth People Are Pleased to Show the Gratitude They Feel.

People cured of lame, weak and aching backs, kidney weaknesses and urinary troubles, never tire of letting others know about the remedy that did it—Doan's Kidney Pills. The cures are permanent cures, as people who were cured years ago now testify. Here is a case of the thorough work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Duluth:

J. H. Tomlin, lather and contractor, of 118 W. Palmetto street, Duluth Heights, says: "What I said in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills six years ago was not only true, but the cure I described at that time has been permanent, and I am pleased to inform other sufferers of this fact. My case was a severe one, and it clung to me persistently for two years. The backache finally got so bad that I was obliged to lay off from work for days at a time, and I suffered such pain that it hurt to bring the slightest strain on the muscles of the back and loins. The kidney secretions were irregular and I was unable to rest well at night. All these irregularities yielded promptly to the treatment, and the result was a permanent cure."

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF NORTH STAR STATE

Permanent School Fund $16,000,000 and Will Reach $75,000,000.

Educational System of Minnesota Is the Best In the Union.

Minnesota offers the widest opportunities in the line of public education. Its permanent school fund is larger than any other Northern state. This now amounts to $16,000,000, and since, by a wise provision of legislation only the interest of it can be used, the state auditor estimates it will eventually approximate $75,000,000. There is no section of the state so remote as not to be reached by the public school. The first concern of the settler, even before he has fully established his own home, is to make provision for a school.

In their organization and government, districts are known as common, independent and special. With respect to the work done, we speak of the schools as common, semi-graded, graded and high. Attendance in the public schools is free to all pupils residing within the district. Until within a few recent years, the plan generally followed was to subdivide the districts in the country as to reduce the distance between the home and the school. During the last six years an opposite policy has been carried out in many communities that of uniting several districts, thus forming a larger school, with a better building, a longer term, more thorough instruction, and free transportation of the pupils.

Free education is afforded every child in Minnesota, and more than two-thirds of the districts also furnish free text books. Last year there were 4,289 libraries in connection with this number of public schools, more than half of them in the rural or common school districts. Half the cost of establishing and maintaining these libraries is met by the state.

The public schools are supported partly through local taxation and partly by indirect state aid through the one mill state tax and the income arising out of the permanent school fund. In addition, special state aid is granted, $1,500 to high schools, $550 to graded schools, $250 to semi-graded, and $125 and $50 respectively to the two classes of rural schools. The high and graded schools are under the supervision of the state high school board, which fixes the standard such schools much reach before they receive the special state aid. There are now 145 graded schools in the smaller towns and villages. These schools maintain from four to six departments, are in session nine months, and give instruction in all the branches leading up to high school work. The 170 high schools of the state offer free instruction to any pupil in Minnesota, this being one of the few states giving entirely free high school tuition. Semi-graded and rural schools are supervised by the county superintendent. He recommends to the superintendent of public instruction such schools as he considers entitled to receive the special state aid. This state encouragement of public education, particularly of schools in the rural districts, has been the means of greatly improving their efficiency. Better buildings are provided, terms are lengthened, higher salaries are paid to teachers, and the schools have altogether reached a more definite and satisfactory standard.

The five state normal schools, at Winona, Mankato, St. Cloud, Moorhead and Duluth, train teachers for public school work. Collectively, they enrol over 1,700 in their normal training departments. Each school also maintains a model training department in which those in attendance are taught and are instructed in the proper methods of teaching. Tuition at the normal schools is free, the obligation being that the student after graduation, shall give at least two years time to public school work in the state; and the schools are represented by their students and graduates in the rural and graded schools of every county in Minnesota.

The public school system finds its higest development in its splendid state university. Not only is the attendance equal to that of any one of the four or five largest universities in the country, but in its variety of courses of study, in its colleges of law, medicine, engineering and agriculture, in the full and thorough equipment of every department, in the efficient service rendered by its instructors, and in the high standard of administration maintained by its venerable president, Cyrus Northrop, it takes rank with the foremost institutions of higher learning in America. The school of agriculture is in many respects the best organized school of this nature in the Union. It offers thorough, practical instruction for the boys and girls from the farm, its main object being to so educate them that they can return to their home and take up scientifically dairying, the care, feeding and breeding of stock, the cultivation of grains and vegetables, tree planting and growing, preservation of the soil, carpentry and blacksmithing.

And it is not alone in its public school system, closely articulated, and beginning with rural school and ending with the state university, that Minnesota excells. It has also numerous private schools academies and colleges, maintained by various churches or founded and kept up through the endowments of private individuals. Moreover the state has established a system of free traveling libraries, designed to furnish reading matter to the small villages and country communities which cannot support public libraries, and to assist small public libraries that cannot make frequent purchases of books. At the beginning of 1905 there were about 12,000 volumes in these libraries. The free public libraries in the state now number sixty-five and are added to yearly.

From this brief statement, it may be seen that no one leaving an old established community with all possible educational advantages need hesitate to come to Minnesota in the fear that he will not find the same or greater opportunities offered himself and family here.

TIMBER IS TO BE SOLD

Mature Timber on Forest Reserves to Be Offered.

Washington, May 27.—The mature timber on the national forest reserves is to be offered for sale. This announcement is in line with the declared purpose of the department of agriculture to develop the national forest reserves by use. Restrictions formerly laid upon the export of timber from the states in which the forest reserves were located has been removed, and the law now places no limitation on the shipment of timber grown on any forest reserve, except those in the state of Idaho and the Black Hills reserve in South Dakota. The effect of this change in the law, and the declared policy of the department of agriculture, is that the timber on the reserves may now be cut and disposed of to the highest bidder. On many of the reserves there are great quantities of mature timber and on some of them the facilities for getting it out at a reasonable cost are excellent. The forest service, which has charge of the administration of the reserves, is anxious to begin the cutting as soon as possible, and it is prepared to consider offers from lumbermen who wish to undertake such operations.

It is, perhaps, well to call attention to the fact that this announcement does not mean that the forest reserves are going to be devastated under the authority of the government. On the contrary, the distinct and definite purpose of the forest service is to improve the reserves by utilizing the material that is now fit for lumber. In doing so, it will also provide for the reproduction of the forest and the restocking of those areas upon which forest conditions are defective. Work of this kind has been successfully carried on for some years in the Black Hills forest reserve, and has been begun with the greatest promise of success on the lands of the Chippewa Indians, in Northern Minnesota, from which it is proposed to create another national reserve.

The public in general, and lumbermen in particular, will be interested to know that in this last case the restrictions imposed by the forester have in no way hampered the lumbering operations. Timber sold at public sale, with full knowledge of these restrictions, brought higher prices than were ever obtained for white and Norway pine in the same region, and the slash has been burned and got out of the way at a cost of about 12 cents per thousand feet board measure.

The supervisor of each forest reserve is authorized to receive applications for the right to cut timber. Intending purchasers should communicate with him, not with the department at Washington.

AWAIT AN ANSWER

Regarding Scope of the Waterways Commission.

Washington, May 27.—Pending the answer of the Washington government to the Canadian government's contention that the law establishing the international waterway commission provided that all international waterways between this country and Canada be included in the scope of the commission, no further meetings will be held. This was decided at a meeting held in the offices of Gen. Ernst yesterday, at which all of the commissioners were present. It was decided that at all meetings on American soil the chairman of the Canadian section should preside and that the chairman of the Canadian section should preside at meetings held in Canada. The next meeting will be held at Toronto after the decision of Secretary Taft regarding the law.

DRUNKENNESS A TERRIBLE AFFLICTION.

The world's greatest physicians agree that drunkenness is a disease and must be treated as such. It is not necessary to incur the publicity and expense of attending a sanitarium, but the disease of drunkenness can be cured right in the home by Orrine. This great remedy is put up by a chemist who, after many years of constant labor and research, combined the necessary ingredients that positively conquer the craving for liquor.

Orrine is put up in two forms. No. 1 (powder) can be given secretly in tea, coffee or food, without the patient's knowledge, as it is tasteless, odorless and colorless. Orrine No. 2 is put up in pill form, for the voluntary treatment of those desiring to free themselves from the grasp of alcoholic stimulants; this is in a convenient form to carry in the vest pocket. Either form costs $1 per package.

Many cases in this city have been completely cured with four boxes of Orrine. Think of this little cost compared with the enormous price of a treatment at a sanitarium. The Orrine Company, Inc., Washington, D. C., guarantees to cure the craving for drink, or refund every cent paid for it. Write to them for a free book on "Drunkenness," mailed in plain envelope.

We are sole agents for this city, and heartily recommend Orrine. F. W. Kugler, 108 West Superior street, Duluth.

SCALY PSORIASIS 20 YEARS

Shed Dustpanful of Scales Every Night. Startling Story of Suffering.

CURED BY CUTICURA

After Doctors and Hospitals Pronounced Case Incurable—Prayed for Death—Body a Mass of Disease, Skin Cracked, Nails Fell Off, Hair Dead and Lifeless—Blessed Relief from First Application of Cuticura—Cured in Six Weeks.

I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. Ds. Psoriasis, and others Leprosy, commencing on my scalp; and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in the form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there would be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost, that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finely got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs; feet bady swollen; toe-nails came off; finger-nails dead and hard as a bone; hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O my God! how I did suffer.

My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said, "We will try Cuticura." Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got Cuticura Resolvent, Ointment, and Soap. I commeneed by taking one tabespoonful of Cuticura Resolvent three times a day after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. Result: returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper.

Henderson, Jefferson Co., N. Y. HIRAM E. CARPENTER.

Sworn to before me this nineteenth day of January, 1880.

A. M. LEFFINGWELL, Justice of the Peace.

We hereby certify that we are acquainted with the aforesaid Hiram E. Carpenter, and know his condition to have been as stated. We believe his statement to be true in every particular. (Signed), L. B. Simmons & Son, Merchants; G. A. Thompson, Merchant; A. A. Davis; Millard E. Joiner, Merchant; John Carpenter; A. M. Leffingwell, Attorney and Counsellor-at-Law, all of Henderson, N. Y.

Cure Permanent, March 20, '05

The above testimonial was given us in 1880, twenty-five years ago, and is published at this time to show that the cure was permanent, as Mr. Carpenter himself states in the following letter, written March 20, 1905: "I have never suffered with the disease since. The Cuticura remedies should come to the knowledge of every one troubled with skin diseases. They have genuine merit. If my own case had been the only one it would be different, but several cases have come to my knowledge just as wonderful as my own. I am now in my seventy-fourth year and in pretty good health.

(Signed), HIRAM E. CARPENTER, Henderson, N. Y., March 20, 1905."

The above is only one of many marvelous cures made by the Cuticura remedies. In this case, the cure not only meant escape from terrible suffering and freedom from disfiguration, but undoubtedly prolonged his life, as it is not probable that he could have lived in the condition he was before cured by Cuticura, after trying all known remedies without any benefit, and after having been pronounced incurable by Doctors and Hospitals.

PURCHASING SUPPLIES

Abroad Is But Small Matter, Says Cannon.

Minneapolis, May 27.—"The question of purchasing supplies abroad for the Panama canal is of little real importance," said Speaker Cannon of the national house of representatives yesterday. "It is little more than a tempest in a teapot. In sixty days nothing will be heard of it. I believe the supplies used on the canal should be, and will be, the product of American labor wherever practicable. There are some things, such as locomotives, dredges and other articles which cannot be purchased outside of America, because other countries cannot furnish them. Perhaps some supplies can be purchased outside of America cheaper than in this country, but I do not believe they will amount to much of anything."

Speaker Cannon, together with the delegation of senators and congressmen designated by act of congress to participate in the opening of the Portland exposition, spent the day in the Twin Cities.

Trades Assembly Turns Down an Easy Money Proposition.

Advertising Fakir Tries to Get Assembly's Endorsement.

The Trades' assembly at its meeting last night turned down another advertising scheme proposed by an outside space-drummer. The assembly did remarkably well, in view of the fact that the proposition looked good and seemed to be a chance to get money for nothing but endorsement.

Henry Perrault of the Cigarmakers' union, and former president of the assembly, one of the most level-headed men in Duluth unionism today, was probably responsible for the same action which the assembly took. His talk on advertising marked him a good business man.

The scheme was this: One H. R. Butz appeared before the assembly and broached the idea of getting up a labor directory. He proposed that the Trades' assembly should get one-fourth of the net proceeds of this directory, in return for its endorsement and a list of names of the members of the different unions. According to the sample contract which Mr. Butz read, the treasurer of the assembly was to make all collections, settle first the printer's bill, and then settle with Butz on the basis named. The scheme seemed so good and easy that a motion was made to accept then and there, but Henry Perrault got into the arena, and after he got through with the subject there was nothing left but "those remains."

Mr. Perrault pointed out, first, that with the Labor day program coming within three months, to endorse this scheme would be to kill the assembly's own program, as the unions could not have the nerve to ask patronage of the advertisers here for a second time within so short a period.

Mr. Perrault also predicted failure of the scheme in Duluth, for the reason that the city has been over-run of late with advertising grafts of all kinds, and the merchants and other advertisers are getting sick of it. At present the Eagles are getting up a souvenir, which is milking the advertising trade dry. Mr. Perrault said last night that while he is a strong believer in advertising, there is a limit, and the advertisers themselves believe that way also. Said he:

"There are natural channels for advertising, and through these all wise advertisers will present their propositions to the people. We have any number of these at home. If we adopted this scheme we would get patronage, not because the proposition would be a good one, but merely out of courtesy to the labor unions. I for one do not want the labor unions to enter into that kind of a grafting game for a few dollars. If we want to get out some advertising scheme, let us do it with home people, not with outsiders. To employ outside solicitors would be inconsistent on our part. We are always urging others to patronize home industry. Then why should not we do the same? I think the assembly would be very foolish to take this up."

Mr. Thoma spoke in favor of the scheme and was replied to by Secretary Tunell. The proposition was turned down.

ERICKSON IS ACQUITTED

Jury Does Not Hold Him Responsible For Gulas' Death.

John Erickson of Eveleth, who was indicted for manslaughter in the second degree, walked out of district court a free man, yesterday afternoon. Erickson was charged with being responsible for the death of Anton Gulas, an aged man who was employed as keeper of the dry house at one of the mines. Erickson was claimed to have pushed Gulas against a staircase with such force that the latter broke several ribs, pneumonia resulting and causing the death of the elder man.

The case was given to the jury shortly after 2 o'clock and the jury returned the verdict for acquittal about an hour later. Considerable sympathy was manifest for Erickson during the trial for the reason that he has had the reputation of being a peaceable and law-abiding citizen and has a wife and young child depending on him for support. His attorney, F. L. Bannon, contended that Gulas' death was "an unfortunate accident," one of those things which could not be foreseen.

CLAIMS HENRY WAS TOO GAY

Van Flattern Alleges He Was Defending His Home.

Henry DeMeyers, a young man who resides in a shack on the bay front between Thirty-first and Thirty-second avenues west, was the principal witness called yesterday afternoon in the criminal action of the state against Frank Van Flattern, who is charged with assault in the first degree.

DeMeyers claimed that he had been in the habit of spending his evenings at the homes of his neighbors and on the evening of the trouble went to the Van Flattern residence. He says Van Flattern met him at the door and told him he had all the visitors he wanted. DeMeyers alleges that he walked away after the chilly reception he got, and that Van Flattern with a carpenter's square in his hand, followed him. DeMeyers further claimed that he had picked up a stick to defend himself and was talking to his cousin when Van Flattern came up and started to make trouble. He says names and invectives were used quite freely by both and that Van Flattern shot him in the shoulder.

Cross-examined, DeMeyers admitted that he had been ordered out of the Van Flattern home several times for creating a disturbance, but denied that he had ever applied any bad language to Van Flattern or his wife.

DeMeyers identified the revolver which he claims was used when he was shot, but denied having thrown a stone which was one of the exhibits in the case.

The case will be continued next Monday.

IN DENVER MINT.

Some Civil Service Places Are Offered.

If you are an engineer, a fireman, an electrician, an adjuster of scales, know anything of a practical nature about making assays of metals, or are a lead burner you will have an opportunity to get into the United States mint at Denver, Col., soon. An examination for these positions is to be held in Duluth—provided there are applicants—on June 21, which is the longest day in the year although the examination hours are not lengthened on account of this.

And, by the way, if you are afflicted with tuberculosis you need not try, for you would be barred.

The United States government wants in its mint at Denver, three engineers, seven firemen, two elctricians, one adjuster of scales, four assistants in the assay department and a lead burner. The position of engineer will pay from $3.50 to $4.25 per day, but to be successful in the examination a scholastic examination must be passed and the following qualifications must be shown:

Practical experience in operating and repairing heavy duty slow-speed Corliss engines, a working or elementary knowledge of electrical apparatus or machines; practical experience of having charge of boilers of the water-tube high-pressure type; practical knowledge of the operation of fuel economizers; engine-driven draft fans; boiler feed, vacuum, centrifugal, and house pumps; of compound compressors with air-lift artesian well outfit; a good working knowledge of rigging heavy machinery.

The firemen's positions will pay $840 a year, the electricians' from $3.50 to $4.25 a day, scale adjusters will get $4.25 a day, assistants in the assay department will get $4.50 to $5 a day and lead burners $4.25 a day. In each case scholastic as well as practical tests will be given.

Another examination which is slated for June 21, is that for assistant in the office of seed and plant introduction, department of agriculture. This will pay $1,800 a year.

Other civil service examinations in June are for engineer and sawyer in the Indian service at San Carlos agency, Arizona, matron in the Indian service and cable foreman on cable ships; all of these to be held on June 7, and the position of scientific assistant in the department of agriculture on June 14.

SCULPTOR SUES MUSEUM OF ART

For Failing to Exhibit His Group as Agreed.

New York, May 27.—Trial of the suit brought by Ernest Biondi, the Italian sculptor, and member of the Legion of Honor, against the directors and trustees and the Metropolitan Museum of Art to compel them to account to him for damages which he claims to have suffered because his group, "Saturnalia," was not exhibited in the museum, as agreed, was begun yesterday, before Justice Leventritt, in the state supreme court. Former Secretary of War Elihu Root appeared as counsel for the museum. Biondi was not in court when the case was opened.

Counsel for Biondi said in court that "Saturnalia" was exhibited by Biondi in Paris in 1900 and was awarded a grand prize, after which the sculptor was made a member of the Legion of Honor. Subsequently a jury of Italian artists ordered a replica of it for the national gallery at Rome. It was exhibited at the Buffalo exposition, and no suggestion of any immodesty in its conception or design was ever made.

Mr. Biondi's counsel said an offer from the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the late director, Gen. Di Cesnola, entered into a contract to exhibit it for a year. It was then to be returned to the owner, and the consideration he was to receive for its exhibition was the publicity resulting. Biondi alleges that this agreement was violated, that the group was relegated to obscurity, and that his loss has been so serious as to be almost irreparable. At first he claimed $200,000, but an action in equity was brought instead.

WILL AID STRIKE

Trades Assembly of Duluth Will Lend Its Support.

Attempt to Prevent Employment of Strike Breakers Here.

Union meetings next week:

Tuesday — Carpenters, Kalamazoo block; Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Labor World hall.

Thursday—Electrical Workers, Labor World hall; Steam Engineers, Lyceum building.

Friday—Leather Workers, Labor World hall.

Saturday—Bakers and Confectioners, 18 West Superior street; Brewery Workers, Kalamazoo block.

* * *

There are not many union meetings during the coming week, for the reason the month of May trails over into a fifth week and ends in the middle. Therefore, those unions which are called to meet on the first Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday are shut out until next week, but those called to meet on the first Thursday, Friday or Saturday will gather.

* * *

The Trades' assembly held its usual semi-monthly meeting last evening in the Manhattan building and transacted a great deal of business of more or less vital importance. Among the first things to come up was a communication from President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, asking financial aid for the teamsters who are striking in Chicago. Delegate John McDonald of the Typographical union asked that the communication be filed, for the reason, as he understands it, that solicitors will be around for the purpose of raising funds, and it will be well enough then to contribute. This was done.

* * *

Later in the evening Vice President Thoma of the assembly notified the meeting that fifty-nine strike-breakers were sent from Duluth by last evening's Omaha train for Chicago. The assembly immediately took action, ordering the secretary to wire President Shea of the teamsters in Chicago to the effect that these strike-breakers were to arrive this morning.

Henry Perrault also moved that the members of the assembly keep a close watch on the employment agencies, who, in case of hiring strike-breakers must display a placard announcing that a strike is on at the place men are wanted to work, according to a city ordinance. If this ordinance is violated, the assembly provided its officers with power to proceed legally against the employment agency so violating the ordinance.

* * *

A communication was received from Mrs. George Gallanar of Keswick, Cal., asking aid to get a new trial for her husband, who during a quarrel over unionism, killed one Adolph Gorman, in self defense, it is said. Gallanar is now under a sentence of ten years' imprisonment, and his wife is making an appeal to the unions of the country for assistance. The assembly last night appointed a committee consisting of Delegates Thoma, Wash and Stewart to look into the matter and report at the next meeting.

* * *

It was announced by President Shartel that Rev. J. K. Shellenberger will give a lecture at the meeting of the assembly, June 9, on "Trades Unionism."

* * *

The committee appointed to see T. R. Hancock, the meat dealer as to his difference with the tugmen, reported that Mr. Hancock refuses to remove the non-union man he has on his tug. The assembly therefore endorsed the boycott placed on Hancock's meat market by the tugmen and the meat-cutters' union was instructed to pull its man out of the market.

* * *

Five dollars for paying the dues of the delegates to the convention of the State Federation of Labor at Brainerd, June 12, and $25 expense money for each delegate, was voted by the assembly.

* * *

Frank Kowsky was elected delegate from the assembly to the Structural Trades' alliance to succeed Paul M. Bolz, resigned.

JUSTIFIES THE POLICY

Taft Talks of Buying Canal Supplies In Open Market.

Cincinnati, May 27.—The celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Cincinnati Commercial club closed last night with a banquet at which the speakers discussed questions of the day. The cities represented at the banquet were Boston, Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Secretary of War Taft made the principal speech of the evening. The other speakers were President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston & Maine railway; Franklin McVeagh of Chicago, Robert Moore of St. Louis, A. E. Unger and Melville Ingalls of Cincinnati, chairman of the board of the Big Four railway. President Voorhis of the local Commercial club was toastmaster.

Secretary of War William H. Taft spoke on "Policy and Practice," saying:

"If the Panama canal were inside the territory of the United States, of course, all material used on the canal could pay duty or be bought in the United States, but as the construction of the canal is a number of days' journey from the tariff wall of the United States, it presents exactly the same case as is presented in the case of the Philippine islands. Now if congress wants to pay more than France was willing to pay, then they are welcome to do so, but in the absence of a rule we feel we must carry out the rule that applies. That law requires that prices and quality being the same, we must buy American goods. In the absence of a rule we feel bound by our trust to build as cheaply as possible. We submitted the question to congress on this line, asking congress to lay down a rule. If there is no rule, we must build as a business man would build. Now there is no question of protection or free trade, it is merely our duty under the law as it stands. If the rule is changed, then we must change."

He spoke of the work of the commissioners on the canal and praised highly the men who have been put at the head of the work. He then spoke of the relation of the government to the railroads.

"I cannot but think," he said, "the discussion which is now going on has had a much wider scope than is necessary. The question is the wisdom of further legislation and it has narrowed down to what we need."

He referred to the statute on interstate commerce, calling attention to its provision on unreasonable rates and spoke of the interstate commerce commission. He believed the changes proposed by the Esch-Townsend bill would result in good.

He held that it would greatly relieve the courts to provide a court to consider railroad rates.

Stirring Resolutions Are Adopted In Philadelphia Against Grafters.

Philadelphia, May 27.—"Resolved, That we, citizens of Philadelphia, without regard to party or politics, do hereby before God and man pledge our life, liberty and sacred honor to the complete overthrow of despotic methods in municipal affairs, and the restoration of the American principles for which our fathers fought, and which shall ever be our glory while we remain worthy to be called their children."

Amid great excitement, cheering and waving of flags, several thousand persons, who were packed in the Academy of Music to hear prominent Philadelphians express their protest against the gas lease adopted the above-quoted resolution. It was a scene that gave the opponents of the lease renewed inspiration and the cheering lasted for several minutes.

The mass meeting was one of the largest held here in a long time. So large was the crowd that two overflowing meetings were held.

The Y. M. C. A. hall was also taxed to its capacity when Mahlon N. Kline, the chairman of the meeting, called the assemblage there to order. Addresses were made by half a dozen prominent citizens, including Charles Emery Smith. There was great enthusiasm when Mr. Smith said the "black flag of piracy was not the flag of Republicanism, or of Lincoln, or of McKinley, or of Roosevelt."

In Broad street there were several thousand persons who could not gain admittance to the big academy building. Word was sent inside and three citizens were sent out to address the crowd. The outdoor meeting closed with the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee," and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Started Out Lower and Had Further Decline.

Flax Trading Was Dull and the Prices Strong.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 27.—Wheat was heavy this morning and a lower opening was followed by a further decline. Northwestern markets lost heaviest and in the July option in Duluth there was a slump of 2c, in Minneapolis 2⅜c, in New York 1½c, in St. Louis ½-⅝c and Kansas City, ⅝-¾c. The September option also declined, the loss being ⅞c in Duluth, 1c in Minneapolis, ½c in Chicago, ⅜c in New York, ⅜-½c in St. Louis and ½c in Kansas City. In Winnipeg July lost ⅜c and October ½c. Crop damage reports continued to come from the Southwest but were not given very much credit. The Liverpool market closed ¼-⅜d higher and Paris unchanged to ⅛c lower. Broomhall estimates world's shipments to be reported Monday at 9,500,000 bus.

Millers are not showing so strong a desire for cash wheat and shippers find the cash demand easier. There seems to be a tendency on the part of buyers to wait the passing of the May option to see what the effect on cash wheat will be.

Car receipts at Duluth were 3 against 35 last year, and at Minneapolis 313 against 161 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 316 against 196 last year. Chicago received 13 against 29 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 428,043 bus, last year 90,010 bus. Shipments 194,693 bus, last year 210,335 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 103,918 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅜-⅝c lower. July oats closed a shade lower. Primary receipts of corn were 329,700 bus, last year 613,800 bus. Shipments 144,251 bus, last year 756,043 bus. Clearances of corn were 36,998 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very quiet. The July option opened ⅜c lower at $1.12¾ and fell off steadily to $1.11½, at which price it closed, a loss of 2c. The September option opened ⅝c lower at 90c and fell to 85½c, at which price it closed, ⅞c lower than yesterday. The May option lost 2c.

Flax was dull and the prices strong. The October option opened unchanged at $1.27¾, advanced to $1.28 and closed there, an advance of ⅜c. The September option closed with the same advance. May was ½c higher and July up 1c.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—To arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.11½; on track, No. 1 northern, $1; No. 2 northern, $1.07. Durum, No. 1, 91c; No. 2, 90c; May, $1.11½; July, $1.11½; September, 85½c. Flax, to arrive, $1.47; on track, $1.47; May, $1.47; July, $1.47; September, $1.29½; October, $1.28. Oats, to arrive, 31¼c; on track, 31¼c. Rye, to arrive, 73c; on track, 73c. Barley, feed, 29½@31c.

Cars inspected—Wheat 3; last year, 35; oats, 1; barley, 1; flax, 1; last year, 8.

Receipts—Oats, 3,310.

Shipments—Wheat, 84,692; corn, 1,135; oats, 25,099; barley, 25,000; rye, 3,214.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

General Profit Taking Causes Weakness In Wheat.

Chicago, May 27.—General profit-taking caused weakness in the wheat market here today. An increased movement in the Northwest was one of the principal bearish influences. Liberal shipments from Australia furnished another motive for selling. July opened ⅛c to ⅜c lower at 91¼c to 91⅜c, and declined to 90¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 229 cars, against 210 cars last week and 432 cars a year ago.

The market increased as trading progressed, July selling off to 90¼c. The close was almost at the lowest point, final quotations on July being down 1¼@1⅜c at ¼@⅛c.

On opening quotations, corn for May delivery sold at 52c, a break of 2c from yesterday's close. The slump was largely due to extraordinarily large receipts, arrivals today being 812 cars, or nearly 200 cars more than generally expected. Out of this number 522 cars met the requirements for contract grade. Another bearish factor was ideal weather conditions prevailing throughout the corn belt. On selling by cash houses the price of May declined still further to 53¼c. July opened ⅛c lower at 49¼c and eased off to 49c.

The trend of prices continued downward throughout the day, the market closing at the lowest point of the day. Final quotations on May were at 49c¾, a net loss for the day of 8¼c. July sold off to 48¾c. The close was off ¾@⅞c at 48⅝@½c.

A moderate demand from shorts held the oats market steady, notwithstanding the weakness of other grains. July opened unchanged at 30½c and later sold at 30¾c. Local receipts were 118 cars.

Provisions were steady in sympathy with the steadiness of hogs. July pork was off 2½c at $12.45. Lard was down 2½c at $7.22½. Ribs were a shade higher at $7.22½.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.01; July, 90¼@⅜c; September, 83½@¾c; December, 82½c. Corn—May, 49¾c; July, 48⅞@½c; old, 48⅞c; September, 47¾c; old, 48⅛@¼c; December, 45c; old, 46c. May (1906), 45½c. Oats—May, 31⅜c; July, 30⅜@½c; September, 28½c. Pork—May, $12.35; July, $12.42½; September, $12.67½. Lard—May, $7.15; July, $7.25@7.27½; September, $7.45; October, $7.46. Ribs—May, $7.07½; July, $7.20@7.22½; September, $7.45. Rye—May, 78c; July and September, 60c. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.46; Southwestern, $1.39; May, $1.39. Timothy—May, $2.90; September, $2.20. Clover—May, $11.75@12.25. Barley—Cash, 42@50c. Cash wheat, No. 2 red, $1.03@1.05; No. 3 red, $1.00@1.03; No. 2 hard, 98½@1.00½; No. 3 hard, 96@99c; No. 1 northern, $1.10@1.11; No. 2 northern, $1.08@1.10; No. 3 spring, $1.05@1.08. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The one strong feature today has been the pronounced strength in September wheat which lost ½ a cent for the day. The price of wheat has been well sustained throughout the week and it was but natural that profit taking by fortunate holders over the holiday would develop at sometime during the session. News has been conflicting today and doubtless had something to do with the taking of profits. The situation still looks strong. The market is just as inviting as ever and from present indications holds out much promise for the futures. On set-backs we still favor purchases of the deferred futures.

Corn—Receipts are extremely large and while postings for Monday do not indicate anything sensational this line, it is fair to assume that these postings are but the advance guard of even larger receipts. The quality is excellent. The small primary shipments tell their own story of slow cash demand. While receipts come as they do at present, stocks are bound to accumulate, and on this theory we feel that the futures will sell off more and on bulges would sell.

Oats—The improvement in the cash market adds greatly to the strength in the futures, and if continued with present force must result in higher prices.

Provisions—Smaler receipts resulted in a stronger tendency. Without feature all day though. It is a slow scalping market, dominated entirely by the packers and on declines we would buy a little stuff for moderate profits.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Lower prices prevailed in all markets today. Conditions are about the same as regards precipitation, but temperatures are rising in the Northwest and there are some indications for more settled weather. The crop killers in the Southwest are now exchanging greetings with the commissioners of President Diaz, who report a large shortage of wheat in Mexico. There seems to be more of a disposition to analyze reports of crop damage, and offerings today were not as well taken as on yesterday. We believe that weather conditions Monday will be more of a factor in the market than the changes in the visible supply, and we expect a broad market with good scalping changes.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: Investigation was made yesterday of the unusual report of smut in hard winter wheat in vicinity of Ellsworth, Kan. It was found that the man who sent the report was an owner of wheat in Chicago and an investigation of his fields by neighbors could find no evidence of smut. In fact, the plant had hardly developed to the point at which the presence of smut could be determined.

TRIP OF THE FERN

Is Awaiting the Approval of British Authorities.

Washington, May 27.—Acting Secretary Darling of the navy department has written to Governor Johnson that the department is willing to lend the Fern, under usual conditions, to the Minnesota naval militia. These conditions are set forth in the blank form of receipt accompanying the letter, in which it is provided that the vessel shall be held in trust for the United States; that no alteration in hull, machinery or equipment shall be made without the permission of the department, and that she will be returned to the United States government on demand in as good condition as when transferred barring the wear and tear of ordinary usage.

Governor Johnson is also instructed to make application to the British ambassador, through the state department, for permission to take the Fern through the Canadian canals. It is said at the state department that no objection has been made by the Canadian government in taking other naval militia vessels through Canada, and that it takes about five days to arrange such matters.

Judge Darling also issued orders to the bureau of construction and repair to make the necessary repairs on the Fern, the vessel to be turned over to the state militia of Minnesota at Norfolk upon completion.

THE STATE CLAIMS

Swamp Lands on the Chippewa Reservation.

Washington, May 27.—An important hearing on behalf the State of Minnesota before Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock will take place next month.

State Auditor Iverson and Attorney General E. T. Young will present the claims of the state for a large area of swamp lands on the Chippewa Indian reservations.

Senator M. E. Clapp will assist in the argument before the secretary.

It was expected that Messrs. Iverson and Young would be in Washington next week, but Senator Clapp was advised by wire today that the attorney general cannot leave just now.

IRREGULAR CLOSE

To Stock Market With Very Little Change From Friday.

Northern Pacific Strong —Bank Statement Better Than Expected.

New York, May 27.—There was a substantial mid-week rally from the prevailing depression in prices on the stock exchange, but it was not maintained. The advance was based upon official intimations that the danger of hostilities in the Northwestern railroad field, as an outcome of the Northern Securities dissolution, had been averted by agreement among the railroad owners concerned. Anxiety over the iron and steel outlook, reports of deterioration of the wheat crop and of unfavorable weather for corn planting, have influenced speculative sentiment. Money has been extremely easy, but the failure of the Merchants' Trust company and some minor financial establishments outside of New York has tended toward inducing a spirit of caution.

New York, May. 27.—The opening tone of stocks was uncertain and the prevailing tendency of prices was lower. United States Steel preferred and Copper fell ¾. The first price of St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred was 1¾ up, and Sugar gained ⅝. Business was exceedingly dull.

Scanty interest was manifested in the stock market and prices moved languidly to a lower level. Northwestern, Steel and Copper lost a point and the other favorites substantial fractions. Some recovery occurred before 11 o'clock, when there was an apparent scarcity of offerings. The Toledo, St. Louis & Western stocks and Wheeling & Lake Erie second preferred advanced 1 to 1¾.

Prices hardened on the bank statement, but the movement scarcely amounted to a retrieval of previous declines. Northern Pacific gained 1½ and Kansas City Southern 1. Ice preferred lost 1. The close was stagnant.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., room A, Torrey building.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market is closing irregular but on the whole shows very little change from pevious close. The bank statement was considered fairly good, but was without effect on the market. The possibility of a naval battle in the Far East between now and the next business day tends to restrict business. The action of the market continues most discouraging. It is intensely nervous and traders take fright at any little unfavorable factor. On the strong spots we would sell stocks.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been at a standstill and was only a nominal affair today. Transactions were light and professional. Prices declined somewhat in the first half hour, rallied slowly later and were irregular at the close. None of the changes were in any way significant. Northern Pacific was strong, and persistent buying was again seen in Burlington joint 4's in the bond department. The bank statement was favorable. The impending holiday and possibility of a naval battle served to keep speculators from making new commitments.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was dull and the trading was light. Prices held well and the bank statement was better than expected. There was little doing until the close, and some short covering caused prices to harden up. We look for a steady market next week and one which would largely be affected by news. Crop and war news will play an important part. We expect to see prices hold firm, however, and eventually advance.

United States deposits $14,053,800, increase $3,146,275.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 27.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 1@7 points and later increased the gain to a matter of about 6@8 points on the active months on fair demand from local shorts, European markets were firmer, continued rains in west and firmness of spot holders. Brokers representing the recent bull leader were supposed to be selling quite liberally at the advance but the tone of the market was good, and offerings were well absorbed.

Cotton futures closed steady; May, 8.20; June, 8.07; July, 8.15; August, 8.12; September, 8.15; October, 8.21; November, 8.25; December, 8.30; January, 8.35; February, 8.38; March, 8.44. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 8.60; middling gulf, 8.85; sales, 100 bales.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed slightly better tone but was very dull. There were practically no copper stocks offered for sale and the result was there were very few quotations. The market seems to be waiting for some further news of the Russian-Japanese war and the Equitable Life difficulty. We repeat our advice to buy Copper Range, Osceola and Mohawk whenever they are weak.

ASSEMBLY ADJOURNS

Presbyterians Conclude Their One Hundred Seventeenth Session.

Winona Lake, Ind., May 27.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church completed its 117th annual session today and adjourned. Routine matters such as the reports of the committees on narrative and judicial affairs occupied the closing session. Many of the committees left for home last night and on early morning trains today. About 300 commissioners will remain here over Sunday as they do not desire to be traveling on the Sabbath. As there will be a very large amount of committee work during the next year, arrangements were made today for the several meetings. There are twenty special committees in addition to the standing committees and some have a membership of over twenty. Moderator Moffatt today named additional members of the committee on Cumberland union. Most of the new members are lawyers. They include Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court; Judge W. L. Lanning of the United States court, district of New Jersey; Henry W. Jessup of New York and Judge John A. McIlvaine of Washington, D. C.

Both sessions of the general assembly yesterday were devoted almost entirely to discussion of the report of the committee on forms of service and the committee on temperance.

For three hours the report on form and service was debated by at least 100 speakers, chief among which were Dr. Henry Van Dyke, chairman of the committee and author of "The Book of Prayers," and Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court.

The debate was about evenly divided, the result that the report together with "The Book of Prayers," which it was suggested should be adopted by the general assembly as a part of a fixed form of service, was referred to an enlarged committee. Resolutions adopted in conjunction with the debate on the report provided: "In case the enlarged committee reach a definite and satisfactory completion of their work during the present year, we authorize the publication of the book of worship by the board of publication and Sunday school work, in order that the churches may have the opportunity to consider and test the book of forms and prayers."

TWICE DIVORCED,

A Baltimore Doctor Elopes With a Divorcee.

Baltimore, May 27.—Mrs. Marie K. Wetherill Apperson of Philadelphia and Dr. William A. Davis of Baltimore eloped from Philadelphia yesterday and were married. Mrs. Anderson is a sister of Samuel Price Wetherill, Sr., and of John Price Wetherill, two of the wealthiest men in Philadelphia. She was divorced from Mr. Apperson seven years ago. While on a visit last summer to relatives at Oxford, Md., Mrs. Apperson met Dr. Davis, who owns several farms near there. At that time Dr. Davis had just freed himself of his second matrimonial venture.

SALE OF CHEAP LOTS FEATURE OF REALTY

Not Much Doing In Way of Large Sales In This Week's Market But Property For Home Building Is Being Readily Taken—Building Affairs Are Active.

W. C. Sargent & Co. report a good business for the past two weeks, including some deals already closed and several that are nearly closed and which the parties concerned desire withheld from publicity for the present. The company is now closing the sale of a large London road residence property to a local professional man and has consummated a number of purchases for James Gundry, a new investor in Duluth real estate, who has bought a home and is coming here to reside permanently. Mr. Sargent reports many applications for farm loans.

Richardson & Day note the continued selling of cheap lots for improvement as one of the principal features of the present market. The firm has closed the sale of the east half of lot 4, block 10, Norton's addition, for $350, to Andrew J. Johnson; the west half of the same lot to Charles J. Gustafson, for $350; lots 22 and 23, block 78, West Duluth, Sixth division, to S. A. Jamieson, for $450; lots 43 and 44, block 2, Norton's addition to Proctor, to Amanda Murphy, for $125 the southerly 45 feet of lots 15 and 16, block 4, Norton's addition, to Paul Blazejewsky, for $550; fractional lots 1, 2 and 3, block 4, Norton's addition, to Mary Plutinski, for $800. All of the sales were made for improvement.

• • •

Among the sales of Lester Park residence property this week was that of Dr. Park's home at the corner of Grand and Sixty-first avenues east. It is understood that Dr. Park contemplates the purchase of another home in the same locality.

• • •

F. J. Mueller has purchased from George H. Ware lot 11, block 3, Lester Park, First division, for $1,350. This lot is adjoining Mr. Mueller's property on London road.

• • •

T. P. Gaskell, represented by Little & Nolte, has sold to Horace E. Stevens several vacant lots on the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue east and Grand avenue, Lester Park, for a consideration of $2,000. The lots are nicely located and are considered excellent building sites.

• • •

Two local transfers of right-of-way property to the Lake Superior & Southeastern road were recorded this week. H. H. d'Autremont sold lot 212, block 22, Duluth proper, Second division, for $2,000, and F. R. Webber sold lot 186, block 24, Duluth proper, Second division, for $3,500.

Selling in the Duluth realty market continues principally in cheap lots for improvement. In this class of property there has been a fairly lively trade during the past two weeks. Larger transactions, or deals in business property, are rather infrequent just now, and the general expectation among the dealers is that conditions in that particular will not show much change before the coming fall.

The sale of cheap lots for home building is the feature of the market that is being worked the hardest, and the aggregate results are very good. It cannot be said that many snaps are being offered. The intervals when "snaps" in Duluth property are paraded before the eyes of investors are fewer and farther between than a few years ago, and the minute a "snap" shows up now it is taken up immediately. Duluth real estate, whether in the business section or the residence section is realized as having good value, and unless some occasion arises where the owner is hard pushed for ready money, the tendency is not toward making any inducement in the way of cut prices.

A strong demand for loans is reported, particularly for farm loans, and some of the local agencies report a very good business. Money is reported easy to get, more money being offered in fact than there are applications for loans, in consequence of which the interest rates are not quite as stiff as they were earlier in the spring.

An item of special interest in Duluth real estate circles was the visit here this week of a party of Providence, R. I., capitalists, who are heavily interested in local business property. The party included G. W. R. Matteson, Frank Matteson, John Matteson and a Mr. Goddard. G. W. R. Matteson is one of the two executors looking after the estate belonging to John Nicholas Brown, the famous $10,000,000 baby, whose Duluth holdings are figured at about $500,000. He is also connected with some big trust and banking concerns of the East, representing many millions of dollars. This visit is what may be termed the annual trip to Duluth to look over the properties in which Mr. Matteson and his associates are interested. They own the Burrows building, the Lonsdale building and the property occupied by the Stone-Ordean-Wells company. They also have about $500,000 invested here in first mortgage loans.

Mr. Matteson and his associates were guests of William M. Prindle yesterday for a carriage ride of several hours about the city. William Prindle & Co. being the local agents of the Eastern capitalists. They expressed great interest over the many building improvements noted since their former visit to Duluth, and are very much pleased over the prospects of Duluth. Mr. Matteson is an investor with a wide experience in city property and real estate, and it is a matter of no little significance to know that he and his associates are pleased with their investments here and believe them to be gilt-edged in every respect.

Things are fairly active along the building line at present, but there are a number of new contracts hanging fire on which the contractors have submitted bids and about which they are anxious to learn the outcome.

Among the bids submitted this week were those for George Kreager's flats at Tenth avenue East and Sixth street; the Wright-Hartley building at First avenue East and First alley; M. A. Fedje residence building at Third street and Twenty-third avenue West; foundation for a residence for B. E. Wellberg, at Twenty-sixth avenue West and Third street; for the remodeling of a double house belonging to T. F. Cole on First street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth avenues East; frame house for H. J. Kolling on Second street, between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues East. Bids will be submitted this afternoon for the buildings that are to be erected on G. G. Hartley's new stock farm near Island station, on the Great Northern line.

• • •

Mrs. A. Roth has secured a permit for a $6,500 flat building on West Third street and J. B. Arnold has taken out a permit for his concrete block house to be erected on McCullough street, to cost $3,500.

• • •

On remodeling designs made by F. L. Young & Company, the contract for the Banning block has been awarded Smith & Vokes; the Klein Jewelry store to George H. Lounsberry and the LeRicheaux drug store on Fourth street to Mr. Lounsberry. A Crane patent front is being put in the jewelry and the drug store.

Duluth Real Estate Is Increasing In Value

A Farm for $10 Down and $4.00 a Month! Think of It!

This will give you 40 acres of good fertile land in the big red clover district of Bayfield, Wis.,—as many acres as you like on the same basis for each 40-acre tract at $5 an acre.

Fine Investment for Young Men and Women

Think of the thousands of young people paying over money to the great life insurance companies every month with the expectation that at the end of twenty years or more they may only get their money back and a very small interest. Then think of the development of the United States in the past twenty years, and look on a map at the location of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin as related to the head of inland navigation and the expanding markets of growing nearby cities. Will any reasonable man say that the land in this region will not be worth from three to ten times its present price within twenty years? Reason it out for yourself.

Worth $200 to $300 an Acre.

J. Sterling Morton, ex-Secretary of Agriculture, recently asserted that all well-located land in the United States would be worth that price within 50 years.

"I believe," he added, "that money invested in farms is the best possible investment one can make; even if purchased at what some may term 'boom prices,' one will soon see his investment doubled."

We Will Build You a Comfortable House

On any sized tract that you want, from forty acres up, upon payment of only one-quarter of the value of the land in cash, and spread the balance over several years. For a man who wants to get on a farm at small initial cost, this is a remarkable opportunity. All this land is surprisingly fertile, and it will pay you to investigate its possibilities. The Omaha railroad alone placed 900 families in Northern Wisconsin last year. We have about 60,000 acres to choose from.

Best Farming Land in Northern Minnesota.

We also have about 40,000 acres of the richest farming land to be found in this section of the state, all lying within a reasonable distance of railroads and midway between Duluth and the Twin Cities. We will give it to you for one-quarter its value in cash and the balance to suit your convenience. Runs from $5 to $15 an acre.

Chance for Investors.

We have some snaps in large tracts that can't be beat. CALL OR WRITE.

MAN HUNT BEGUN

Authorities Hot After Alleged Murderer of Frank Polcar.

Has Been In Hiding Near Eveleth For Months.

Through the swamps of Northern Minnesota, within the bounds of St. Louis county there is being prosecuted at the present time a lively man-hunt. Aided by the police officials at Eveleth, Sheriff Bates has been some days past bending every energy toward effecting the capture of Michael Capen, the alleged murderer of Frank Polcar, who was killed at Eveleth Nov. 21, 1904. Ever since that date Capen has been a fugutive of the law and, until lately the authorities had no idea that he was in this part of the country.

Deputy Sheriff Owen Gately left Duluth this morning to join the searching force that is now watching the swamps in the vicinity of Moose lake and where it is considered pretty certain that Capen is in hiding.

The alleged crime which resulted in this man hunt is a somewhat characteristic story of some of the range locations. Capen and Polcar attended an Austrian wedding and partook very freely of the liquid refreshments, a quarrel resulting between them. Capen is alleged to have drawn a revolver and fired at Polcar, the latter being fatally injured. Polcar died at the hospital five days later. Before dying he made a statement that there was no provocation for the shooting.

Following Polcar's death search was instituted for Capen, but he had disappeared completely and his friends gave out that he had left the country. So jealously have they guarded the secret that it was not until very recently that the county authorities got an inkling that Capen, instead of getting out of the country has been during the several months since the crime, in hiding in the swamps about Eveleth and has even been in Eveleth without being discovered.

The manner in which this clue came to the hearing of the officers is rather interesting.

Following the chase and capture of Frank Lenich, who with Frank Longer was convicted of murdering Peter Krocovitch, some of the Austrian friends of Lenich were very much put out declaring that the authorities had been unrelenting in their efforts to capture Lenich, but that no effort had been made to capture Mike Capen. They declared that Capen had been about Eveleth all winter, but that the authorities had not made any move to capture him.

These protests were made in saloons at Eveleth and they were not long in reaching the ears of the police officials who communicated with the sheriff and a hunt was at once instituted.

Several days ago it was learned that Capen was in the vicinity of Moose Lake, and the authorities believe that they could then have rounded him up had not some of his Austrian friends given him warning.

John Thomasich, a homesteader on Moose lake, and his hired man, Matt Tumish, were taken into custody when it was found that Capen had been warned, and were held on the charge of being accessories to the escape. They were taken before Vivian Prince, judge of the municipal court at Eveleth, where they were examined, afterward being discharged. Thomisch claimed Capen came to his place about a month ago and wanted to work, offering his services for a small consideration. Thomisch said he hired Capen, but that he knew nothing about his having committed a crime. Tumish showed to the satisfaction of the court that he was recently from North Dakota and knew nothing about a crime having been committed. Previous to the day the officers went after Capen he had been seen daily.

There is a strong suspicion that he is still not far from Eveleth, and that his relatives are watching their opportunity of getting him food and money with the idea of assisting him to get out of the country.

Capen has been in the woods most of the time since last November, and though he is not familiar with the country to the north, it is believed that he will attempt to work through the swamps and woods to reach the Canadian boundary line.

Capen has the reputation of being a desperate and dangerous man, and wherever he is located the authorities expect that he will resist arrest and that a bloody battle may be expected unless he be caught napping.

Arrangements have been made to guard every point possible where there is any idea that Capen will attempt to break through, and a determined effort will be made to bring him to justice.

With the warm weather coming on and abundance of game and fish whereby Capen can sustain himself away from the haunts of civilization, there is a grave question as to whether the officers will be able to get in touch with him. Northern Minnesota is full of woods and some almost impenetrable swamps, and with a good start one man, proceeding with caution, could keep a small army of pursuers guessing for a long time.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Mrs. Mary Cuesineau, a Resident of Escanaba, Is Missing.

Escanaba—Mrs. Mary Cuesineau, a resident of Escanaba, is missing from the city, having disappeared Monday afternoon of this week. She left letters to her husband and children declaring that she was tired of life because of the constant abuse that she was compelled to put up with from the man who had posed as her husband, but whom she had never married, William White, a foreman for the I. Stepherson company. Mrs. Cuesineau lived with her first husband several years at Lansing, but trouble arose and she returned to Escanaba, where she has been known as Mrs. White. The Escanaba police have a theory that Mrs. Cuesineau wished to make it appear that she has committed suicide when in reality she has stolen away from the city.

Gladstone—It is estimated that there is carried in the city of Gladstone, excluding railroad property, almost $400,000 of insurance, the largest individual item being the Buckeye mill and yards. This is about half the assessed valuation, and leaving out land values, which are not insured, it is plain that the town is fairly well insured.

Sault Ste. Marie—Some Soo people see in the improvements that are being carried on at the St. Mary's rapids by the Chandler-Dunbar company a spoliation of the fishing grounds that have existed for centuries. There is hardly a question that to a certain extent this will be the case. But once the dam is constructed and the other improvements completed, it is pointed out, the trout and whitefish will again seek their old grounds and perhaps the loss of a year's fishing will tend to increase the supply.

No charges were preferred against Alderman Albert Forest at the meeting of the Soo common council this week, Forest was on hand early in the evening. He said when he left his place of business three bartenders were busy waiting on the crowd and he had all kinds of music to entertain his guests. Before the session came to a close he asked to be excused and the request was granted. He returned home to take charge of the "grand opening" of his new saloon stand.

Menominee—Definite steps were taken this week toward the opening of a state bank at Menominee. Over thirty of the proposed stockholders were present and articles of incorporation were signed and will be forwarded at once to the state bank commissioner. The capital stock will be $50,000 or $65,000, instead of $50,000 as first planned. It has been practically decided to erect a new bank building on the lot between the abstract office and the Spies block. It will be of two stories, with the best vaults and equipment that money can buy, and will cost approximately $10,000. The new bank will be known as the Commercial, and its stockholders include many substantial Menominee business men.

PART OF LAW INVALID.

Days of Grace and Legal Holidays.

St. Paul, May 27.—Attorney General E. H. Young has given out a statement construing the new law relating to days of grace and legal holidays. He holds the first section of the act invalid, owing to a mistake in the enrolled bill, so that, as to days of grace, the 1903 law is still in force.

The act as passed only made the 1903 law clearer, abolishing days of grace, except on sight drafts. The enrolling clerk changed it so as to abolish days of grace absolutely. This mistake invalidates the first section, and an explanation to that effect has been prepared to insert in the session laws just after the chapter.

The second section, relating to legal holidays, is held valid. The attorney general says:

"Under the circumstances the portion of the chapter purporting to amend section 1 of the old law is void; but as the subject of section 2 of the act is distinct from said second section, providing that commercial paper falling due on Sunday, Good Friday, Thanksgiving day (or any legal holiday), shall fall due on the next succeeding business day, is, in m yopinion, valid.

"As section 1 of chapter 261, laws of 1903, remains in force, days of grace are abolished except as to drafts drawn at sight."

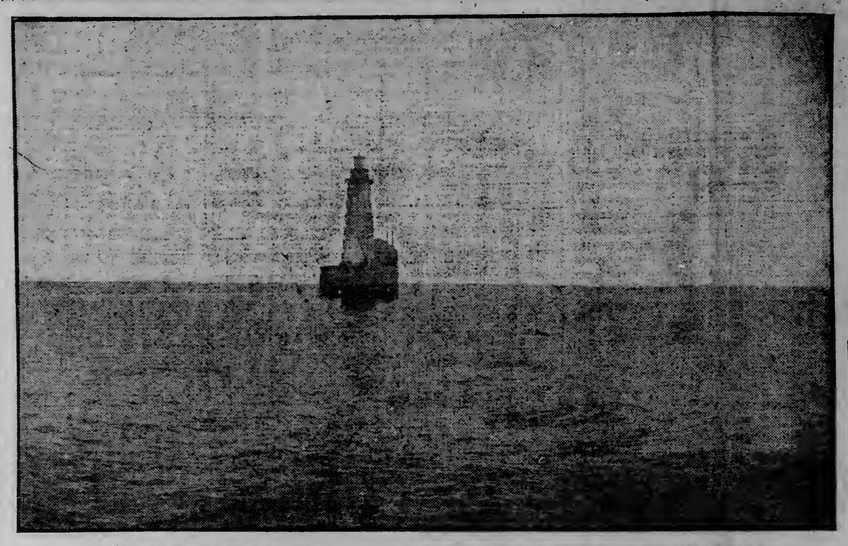
THE MOST LONESOME SPOT ON LAKE SUPERIOR

Majority of Lake Men So Regard Stannard Rock.

Lighthouse Is Fifty-one Miles From the Mainland.

Light Visible For a Distance of Over Eighteen Miles.



STANNARD ROCK LIGHTHOUSE, LONESOMEST SPOT ON LAKE SUPERIOR.

BIG FISH CAUGHT NEAR STANNARD ROCK LIGHTHOUSE.

Where is the lonesomest spot on Lake Superior?

If this question were asked the men who have for years navigated the waters of that great lake which the geographies say is the largest body of fresh water on the earth, there would be a variety of answers, but the majority, it is said, would be Stannard Rock lighthouse.

Far out in Lake Superior, perched on a tall pinnacle of rock, out of sight of land in view of the lake carriers which stop at the south shore points east of Keweenaw Point and those which make no stop until they reach the Sault, is a conical gray stone tower rising 102 feet above the level of the water and from which every night, during the season of navigation, there flashes a white light every 30 seconds, warning navigators of the danger zone.

Written history does not state where Stannard Rock lighthouse, one of the most isolated of Uncle Sam's splendid aids to navigation received its name, but, according to the old time mariners on Lake Superior, it was named after Captain Stannard, who years ago was one of the foremost of the lake navigators and whom, it is surmised, first located the rock and warned his fellow navigators.

So isolated is the lighthouse that the nearest point of the mainland is 51 miles distant, while it is 21 miles to the Manitou light.

In clear weather the light at Stannard rock is visible for a distance of over 18 miles. The lighthouse is also equipped with a 10-inch steam whistle to give warnings in thick weather.

The history of Stannard rock goes way back into the 50's and 60's, when, with the growing navigation on Lake Superior very few navigators knew of the obstacle which was most dreaded by even those who did know something of its location. History says that from 1866 to the time the lighthouse was erected in 1882, the navigators on Lake Superior were in constant dread of running on Stannard rock in the night or in foggy weather.

In 1867 congress made an appropriation of $10,000 for the erection of a day beacon on the rock and in 1877 made an appropriation of $50,000 to begin the erection of a lighthouse. This was completed and the first light flashed forth over the wide expanse of waters, July 4th, 1882, a fitting celebration of this country's independence anniversary.

The accompanying picture of Stannard Rock lighthouse, which was taken by a party of engineering officers from the deck of the government steamer Vidette, not long ago, gives an excellent idea of the awful lonesomeness of the place. Here, during the several months of navigation the keeper looks out on nothing but sky and water, except when he sights a distant passing ship or the lighthouse tender visits him with supplies.

The rock itself rises from two and one-half feet to three feet a bove the level of the lake and is 15 or 20 feet in diameter. The rock marks the site of a dangerous shoal extending north by west and south by east for 290 feet with a width of 1,500 feet. Close around it, however, is some of the deepest water on Lake Superior, soundings having been taken for 660 feet. The locality has attracted some interest of late for it is supposed that the steamer Thomas W. Palmer, which was run down by the steel steamer Harvard, several days ago, sank in the deep water not far from Stannard Rock.

The lighthouse on Stannard Rock is similar to the one built on Spectacle reef in the upper end of Lake Huron, near Mackinac straits. One of the singular facts concerning its history is that the details are mostly found in an old English text book on "Harbours and Docks" by Harcourt.

This writer says: "A cribwork protecting pier was adopted at the Stannard's Rock lighthouse in Lake Superior, where the rock is 12 feet under water at the site selected. In this instance, however, a wrought-iron casing was placed round the site of the foundations, 62½ feet in diameter, and was fitted closely to the bottom, made water-tight by the aid of a canvas pipe filled with oakum under its bottom edge. The water was then pumped out; the rock was cleaned, and concrete was deposited within the casing to form the foundation for the tower, to a height of 35 feet. The projecting pier was built in 1878; the iron casing was sunk in its place in 1879 and a portion of the concrete was deposited daily for ten weeks. The cylindrical concrete base was completed in 1880; and the tower, 78 feet in height, was built in two months in 1881; and the lantern was erected and the light exhibited in 1882. Ice drifts were the chief impediment to the work. They rose 18 feet above the concrete base in 1882 or 41 feet above lake level and were only cleared away near the end of May. This is probably the first instance of a concrete foundation being adopted for a rock lighthouse."

Another item of local interest about the Stannard Rock lighthouse is that Capt. James Prior, who for several years past has been keeper of the lights at the Duluth ship canal, was one of the first lighthouse keepers on Stannard Rock. Capt. Prior is not at all anxious to trade his present location for the old.

In the early days of the lighthouse the keeper had only one or two assistants, and there were periods of months that he never got away from his post. The government soon realized the undesirability of such lonesome service and the difficulty in getting men who would stay for so long a stretch. In later years there has been a lighthouse keeper with three assistants, making in all four men to care for the light and the fog whistle. By an arrangement made among the lighthouse keeper's force, two men are on duty all the time. This gives a service of two weeks on and two weeks vacation off for each man.

During the vacation periods the lighthouse keepers take their sailboat and make for the nearest mainland, where they remain until time for them to relieve their fellows.

The danger attending the trips back and forth in the small sailboat between the lonely lighthouse and the shore, some fifty-one miles away, could be spun out into a story by itself, could all the reminiscences of the former keepers be gathered together.

The lighthouse can only be approached on one side, and then when the water is smooth, for there is an abrupt wall at the top of the platform some thirty-five feet high, and the boat and all the supplies are hauled up by a derrick, the arm of which is just visible in the picture. Many have been the occasions when the returning keepers found a heavy sea running at the lighthouse so that they could not safely approach, and they have had to take chances of laying by for hours in their little sailboat, or of scooting for the nearest shelter miles away.

The lighthouse keepers are visited two or three times during the season by the lighthouse tender from Detroit, which calls at all the lighthouses on the Great Lakes and leaves them supplies of food and other things of necessity or of luxuries. Sometimes the weather is so rough on the up trip that the tender cannot approach Stannard rock with supplies and the keepers have to wait until the return trip. Of course the practice of visiting the mainland every two weeks now gives the keepers an opportunity of getting fresh supplies of their own whenever they so choose.

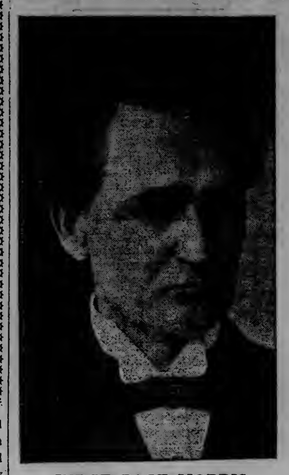
One would scarcely expect that this lonely spot, so far out from land, would be a good fishing ground. Such it has been proven, and one of the accompanying pictures shows the result of an hour's fishing by some of the government engineers just off the lighthouse one morning. The lake trout here shown are strung across the deck of the steamer Vidette.

CELEBRATION OF MEMORIAL DAY ARRANGED BY THE DULUTH G. A. R.

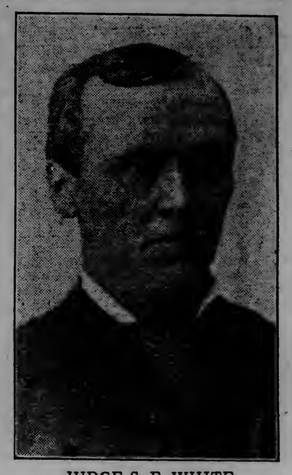
Day When Memory of Nation's Heroes Is Honored.

Flowers to Be Placed On Graves of Veterans.

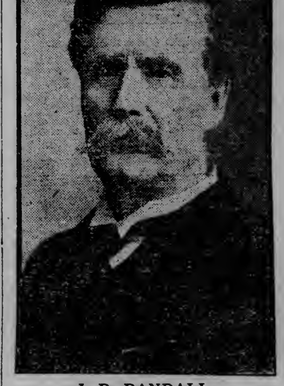
Interesting Program For the Afternoon at the Armory.



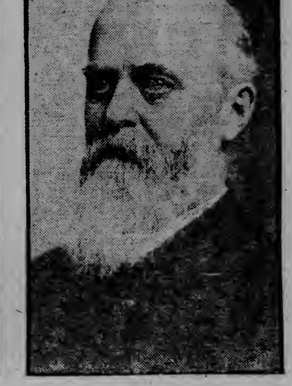
JUDGE PAGE MORRIS,
Who Will Deliver Memorial Day Address.



JUDGE S. F. WHITE,
Chairman G. A. R. Memorial Day Committee.



J. R. RANDALL,
Commander Willis A. Gorman Post, G. A. R.



W. G. TEN BROOK,
Commander J. B. Culver Post, G.A.R.

It is forty years since the great Civil war ended but the feeling of affection and respect for its heroes, living and dead, still remains green in the memory of a grateful country. Memorial day, that day set apart by the congress of the country on which special marks of respect are to be shown for those who fought in that great struggle, will recur next Tuesday and preparations have been made to observe the occasion in Duluth with more than usual ceremony.

Memorial day has come to be observed as more of a national fete day than in former years. The martyred and lamented President McKinley in his tactful way cemented the feeling on this subject. Only a few years ago the North observed Memorial day, while the South paid no attention to it. May 30 was a day of mourning for the North alone; the South stood grimly looking on with hatred in her heart and feeling again the smart of her wounds. During the first famous tour of the country by Major McKinley after he had become chief executive he made a speech in the South in which he, himself a veteran of the Civil war, said that the soldiers of the Confederacy were as much heroes of the nation as the men who opposed them. This statement made the South love him and did much to bring together the men who had fought against each other under Grant and Lee.

Since then Memorial day has come to mean something more than a day for honoring the dead soldiers and sailors of the North; it is the day when the memory of the heroes of the whole nation is honored and in many places the former soldiers of the Union and cavaliers of the Confederacy join in its observance.

Duluth has many veterans of the Civil war within her borders. When Duluth first began to grow in prominency there were many more of them in proportion than there are today. The first G. A. R. post that was formed was the Willis Gorman post which received its charter in the ealy 70's. About ten years afterwards J. B. Culver post was formed and along about 1890 the Hayes post was formed. About 1894, the Hayes post merged with the Gorman post. Duluth also has a circle of Ladies of the G. A. R. and a branch of the Women's Relief corps, the latter being auxiliary to the Culver post.

Arrangements for the celebration of Memorial day have been arranged by a committee of which Judge S. F. White is the head. Asa Dailey, L. O. Huntley and L. C. Ferguson have been detailed to place flags on the graves of veterans and between 10 o'clock and noon on Memorial day delegations from the two posts and others interested will distribute flowers over the graves of the veterans. In the afternoon the veterans and others affiliated with the G. A. R. will go to the canal where the ladies of the G. A. R. will be taken out in launches by the naval reserves to strew flowers on the water in memory of the sailors who gave up their lives in the Civil war. Responses will be made from boat to boat.

Dinner will be served at Temple hall to the members of Culver post and the Sons of Veterans by the W. R. C. and Garfield circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., will serve dinner at Kalamazoo hall to the members of Gorman post.

In the afternoon the following program will be given at the Armory, beginning at 2 o'clock:

CAN A FAMILY LIVE ON FIFTY DOLLARS A MONTH?

If So, Can They Save Money For Old Age?—The Views of a Workingman and His Experiences.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I have read with interest the articles in The Herald about whether a family can live on $50 a month and save money for old age. For my part, I can say that it seems impossible for anyone used to an American living. I have lived in Duluth for nineteen years, and worked during the first years for $1.75 a day. I enjoyed life in a temperate way, and saved a little money, though I could drink my glass of beer or buy me a cigar when I felt like it. When I was 27 years old I thought I should have a home for myself, as I had been trotting singly around Duluth for three years, so I got married. I thought I could be independent.

I had saved in three years $400, with $200 of which I bought furniture and household goods, leaving $200. In 1889 I bought a lot for $300, paying $200 down and the balance I paid in two years. As everyone knows, during the first years of married life there is always something to buy for the home, besides laying by enough to pay for the lot. Then I had my lot free of debt, but about that time came the second child, and from that time on it was not so easy with me.

I was laid up by hurting my hand, and later I had to stop work because I froze my feet, all of which set me back and I ran into debt. Dull times in real estate coming on, I sold my lot for $400, though I could have sold it before for $700. With the first payment of $200 on my lot I paid my debts, and could look at the world squarely again. But in spite of the fact that I worked steadily, the other $200 went nearly as fast as it came.

I work now in a big wholesale house for $2 a day, which does not mean $60 a month, but $52, because there are only twenty-six working days. I find it hard to get along on that, and I do not live half as good now as I did ten years ago. I have three children, all girls, from 10 to 15 years of age, and as everybody with experience knows, girls cost more than boys. I belong to a lodge, in which I had $2,000 life insurance, at $3 a month, but I had to reduce it to $1,000, and my payments to $1.50 a month. With $1 of this saving I am paying for sick benefit insurance, which would pay me $15 a week in case I got sick. So I saved 50 cents a month, which shows how the poor man has to figure nowadays.

What is to become of me when I get old I do not know. I am now 46 years old, and my children cost me more every year. I often thought I would leave Duluth, but that costs money, and when living is so high I could never get enough ahead to move with. If I were in a little town out West or South, where everything is cheaper, I probably would not get $2 a day, but you can get more there for $1 than you can here for $2.50. It would be better for my children, too, as they would not see so many unnecessary things. If anyone would tell me how to save money to move to such a place I would try it. But don't give me any such advice as that I should sit down to the table and have cooked potatoes and one salted herring hanging by a string over the table, and that my family of five persons is to each take a potatoe and rub it in the herring so we can save salt. No, sir! Before I do that I will walk out of Duluth, if I can't get the money for my fare.

I claim Duluth is too expensive to live in. I will give you the cost of my family. Ten years ago I had three rooms for $7 a month. Then I had to pay $9, and since 1897 I have lived in four rooms and have to pay $14. My groceries come to $15, and my meat to $9, or $24 altogether. Divide that among five persons for three meals a day, and each meal per person costs over 5 cents. Is that too much? You can see that for 5 cents a meal there will not be many trimmings. The meat comes to 30 cents a day, and what can you get for 30 cents from our butchers?

For dressing we need $4 a month, and my wife does all of the sewing for herself and the children. For fuel I need $3 a month, carfare $3, doctor or drug store $1, lodge and insurance $2.50, milk $1, and there is the money all gone. Is there anything we could cut down? There is always something needed in the home, for the old things will wear out. These things must be squeezed out of the other necessaries somewhere.

When I was single I had my glass of beer. The last glass of beer I had was four years ago, when I was invited to a wedding. The same with the cigar. So you see a laboring man in Duluth is in a very poor condition. What shall I do when I cannot work any more?

What shall I do with my girls? Can a young man get married when he sees plainly he is running into a poor living? The girls look at it the same way, therefore most of them look for a man who has a better position than their fathers, but to get acquainted with such a man they try to dress themselves stylish, so the young man's eye will catch her. This is where the downfall of the girl come often, instead of getting her a good husband.

I often wonder what will become of Duluth. The common working man needs $2.50 a day, or he cannot live here, but he will not get it. Can Duluth expect to get factories here with such an outlook? Mr. Editor, if you will investigate the matter you will find that this is all true. I often talk with my friends, and they are in the some condition all over the city.

I hope this discussion will bring out some way by which the working man can get a better living, or get more for his wages. Hoping the writing will do son e good, I remain, very respectfully,

A LABORER.

Duluth, May 26.

THE CLERK'S PROBLEM.

Fergus Falls Journal: The Duluth Herald has been urging its readers to start a bank account, and a clerk there, with a wife and child sends in a schedule of his expenses, showing that every penny of his $50 per month salary is spent for "necessities," and it is impossible for him to accumulate a surplus. This is where this clerk, in common with a large percentage of other people, is making a mistake. If his salary were reduced to $40 per month, or even lower, he would continue to live, and if he is an honest man, would continue to pay his bills. If, on the other hand, his salary were raised to $100 per month or more, he would, in all probability, find that his "necessities" likewise increased; he would feel, just as he does now, that he needed every dollar he was earning to live properly, and would spend it. The fact is, any one who is earning living wages can lay by a little money if they will only make up their minds to do so. If a man who is earning $40 per month determines to save $5 of it, he will have $60 laid away at the end of the year. If he determines to save $10, he can do that. Anyone can spend money, plenty of it, and can spend it for things that appear to be necessities, but the wise man is the man who sees that his expenses are a little less and not a little more than his income. The way to begin saving is to begin, and the way to save is to keep at it.

Fergus Falls Free Press: At Duluth a clerk, who receives $50 a month, says he can't lay up a cent and pay his running expenses. The Fergus Falls Journal says he is mistaken. To prove this assertion, Editor Adams better take his place for a month and show how it is to be done. In the meantime the clerk could take Elmer's place and find out how easy it is to make the ends overlap without doing a thing.

THE IRON ORE TRADE.

Movement Is Extraordinary and Will Increase.

Cleveland, May 27.—The Iron Trade Review says: The extraordinary movement of iron ore down the lakes continues with nothing appearing at present to change the previous estimates that shipments during May will equal those of July and August of recent years. But the present pace will no doubt be exceeded as the season advances, as recent storms have prevented the best dispatch. Not all the fleet has been fully occupied as yet. It develops that some contracts made with vessel firms by lake shippers contain a clause that the boats shall run light to the Head of the Lakes to bring down ore. The winter improvements in the dock facilities; the careful conservatism of car supply by the railroads, and the better equipment of yards adjacent to the docks are working, however, for better dispatch to boats while in port. Delays of more than a day are so uncommon so far this year as delays of two to four days were common last year. These conditions have resulted in the swifter movement of contract boats and the reliance of shippers more upon those vessels than those which are chartered at a wild rate. The call for wild boats is consequently somewhat restricted. There is nevertheless some wild chartering, on which the rates are even with the contract figures, namely, 75 cents from the Head of the Lakes to Ohio ports—70 cents from Marquette and 60 cents from Escanaba. There is still some enquiry for ore. Prices have not changed.

GROWTH OF PRIVATE BRANCH EXCHANGES

Sixteen Thousand In New York City Alone—System Only About Six Years Old—Many Residences of Metropolitan Millionaires Have Private Switchboards.

New York, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—In Conan Doyle's story, "The Doings of Raffles Haws," a gifted writer's imagination was taxed to build for his hero a house containing every conceivable mechanical device for the comfort and convenience of the occupants. Concealed elevators, perambulating hallways, disappearing billiard tables, and invisible walls were ordinary fixtures of the construction. By merely pressing a button one could cause a whole floor to contract, carrying, of course, the furniture with it, and forming a small island in the center of the room, so that when the "porch-climber" crawled through a window at 2 a. m., and stepped stealthily forth in search of plunder, he took a sudden dive into a padded cell below. Yet with these and other miraculous devices in his house, the billionaire owner had to tramp or ride half a mile to talk with his fiancee. Raffles Haws had no telephone. The author thought, possibly, that his hero's fabulous wealth talked loudly enough for him; and that a private wire to the house of his betrothed would have been superfluous.

Certainly a residence so palatial would be incomplete in these days without its private branch exchange, with wires to every room, and a portable instrument hanging beside every bed. So necessary, in fact, is constant telephonic communication esteemed that before an important modern building is completed, or, in some cases, is even half built, the telephone exchange is installed.

The star in the directory indicating a private branch exchange is in the ascendant everywhere. No longer is the large business establishment, or the office of the successful professional man, sufficiently supplied with one or two telephones. In order that precious seconds may be saved, it must be equally easy for the man behind the desk to telephone to his associate on the next floor, or to a correspondent in a city 1,000 miles away. It has, therefore, come to pass that the telephone switchboard is as much a part of the furniture of the up-to-date place of business as are the desks and tables. In New York city alone there are more than 16,000 of these private exchanges, and the number of them is rapidly increasing.

The average business and professional man finds his elaborate telephone system profitable; otherwise he would not pay for it. People who want to reach his establishment by telephone are unlikely to hear the words: "The line is busy; please call again," for seldom are all the wires running from "Central" to a private exchange in use at the same time. With instruments in every room of the office suite, at every counter in the store, and in every department of the shop, no time is lost in "going to the telephone." In the hotel, the sharp cry of "Front" is seldom heard, for one telephone operator takes the place of several call boys. Of all improvements made during recent years in American hotels, probably none has proved more popular than the placing of a telephone in every room. The call bell and the speaking tube have been relegated to the past, to say nothing of the elaborate contrivance with the indicator, which, when you pointed it at "ice water," was likely to cause the appearance of a boy with a newspaper. Today the hotel guest is in touch not only with the office but with the whole telephone system, including the long distance lines, reaching to his home city.

The private branch exchange has become so familiar that most people do not realize it is the growth of the past six years. Long ago, in large business enterprises, it was found necessary to have more than one telephone, and the directories issued by the telephone companies often contained, after the name of a firm, two telephone numbers, with the statement, "If one is busy, call the other." This was a cumbersome plan and led to the adoption of a better system. There came a time when large enterprises had, in addition to telephone lines which were numbered in the company's books, others which did not appear there, these lines, of course, being used only for calls from the offices. Finally the present satisfactory scheme was adopted by the Bell companies.

Besides the wires connecting a private branch exchange, with "Central," others may extend from the small switchboard to a number of places in different parts of the city. These wires are included in the cables of the telephone company, but do not enter the company's switchboards. The Pennsylvania railroad, for instance, has a private exchange in its New York offices and within reach of the operators there are not only the different rooms in the building, but wires running to the steamboat wharves and freight sheds. When the general manager's office talks with the superintendent at the ferry slip, the connection is made without the knowledge of "Central," —but when an outsider wants to speak with the Pennsylvania railroad, "Central" puts him in communication with an operator, who can reach any of the departments of the railroad management.

It is even possible to carry on conversation over lines 1,000 miles long without calling on "Central." Thus many telephone lines are leased to brokers with offices in both Chicago and New York. With private switchboards at both ends of the thousand-mile line, "Central" is no factor at all in securing the connection. The work is done by the operators at the office switchboards. In the same way city offices of manufacturing concerns are kept in instant touch with mills and factories many miles distant.

Usually the switchboard of a private exchange is found in the place of business of the lessee, but this is not necessary. In some instances the switchboard is situated at one of the central offices of the telephone company. In such a case, however, the switchboard is as entirely and exclusively at the disposal of those who hire it as if it were actually in their offices. One street railway system uses a private switchboard situated in a building of the telephone company, and from this board wires run not only to the offices of the railway, but to various stations along its lines through the city proper and in the suburbs.

Study of the telephone directory of a large center of population will reveal that many concerns have two or more private branch exchanges. The switchboards may be connected by trunk lines which run from one to another. Thus a firm with wholesale and retail stores will very likely have a private branch exchange in each and these exchanges are connected directly with each other as well as with "Central."

With this general use of the private branch exchange system has come a new field of usefulness for the American woman. The operator at "Central" when she answers a call learns

COLORED INK

"Deadly stupid" is the phrase one hyperbolical girl used in describing the local social work. What are people doing? Immediately after Lent, one could say they were arranging their summer wardrobes, but they can not be doing that all summer. No bridge that any one hears about, few dancing parties, no teas, never a reception, scarcely anybody going, fewer coming back, the wonder is how people are amusing themselves. Of course, during the last week there was a concert Monday evening, but there were few there. Wednesday night a local production of "The Merchant of Venice," but there were few there. There is, of course, golf, which attracts many these beautiful days, but for the hostess who first begins the round of summer galeties, there is a special niche awaiting in the hearts of a number of bored society people.

MISS MILLIE BAKER.

The first of the week Miss Millie Baker returned home to spend the summer months in Duluth and although rumors had reached a number of her friends here that she had begun her professional life, few realized that she had received such a good start in musical work on the stage. Miss Baker left last fall for Chicago to continue her musical studies. She studied for several months and at last desiring stage experience she applied to a musical stock company playing there. She says, "I wasn't foolish enough to think I could get anything to do but chorus work and that's exactly what I did." She did it, however, for but two weeks and was seen by the manager of the Whitney shows and offered a position with "The Isle of Spice" with understudy work. She accepted and finished the season with that company. The season was well advanced when she joined the troup at Terre Haute, Ind., and she had little hope of an opportunity to sing the role. The prima donna became ill, however, and with two days notice she played the part and so charming was her own personality in addition to her voice that she finished the season, closing the first of this month at Sandusky, O.

Her voice which always had rare sweetness has grown wonderfully and retains the individual quality that makes it most pleasing. Miss Baker will be heard at the Lachmund-Tyler recital Monday evening. She will study during the summer with George Tyler and in the fall will go to New York where she will appear in a musical comedy playing the entire season there, at the same time continuing her musical work. She is most earnest in her work and ambitions and is most charmingly modest and reserved about the really splendid start she has made, which has been accomplished entirely through her own efforts.

The End of Dennison's Search

By Casper Peterson.

(Copyright, 1905, by Dally Story Pub. Co.)

Thompson had met his old college mate, Dennison, on the street and carried him home in triumph to enjoy the double pleasure of showing Dennison, whom he had not seeen since college days, his cozy little home and his handsome wife and his thriving brood of little Thompsons, and of showing his wife his old-time and brilliant friend.

Soon after leaving college Dennison had gone to South America to engage in coffee raising and had not been in the states since. Meantime Thompson had drifted out West and built up a fine law practice and had married and was getting on famously.

The meeting had been wholly unexpected and most cordial on both sides. Dennison accepted Thompson's invitation with alacrity, adding that the meeting was most fortunate in that he, Dennison, was on a very important mission in the pursuance of which Thompson might be of great value to him.

"Tomorrow, old chap, tomorrow," replied Thompson. "Tonight shall be given to renewing old acquaintance and learning what has happened since last we met and in showing you the handsomest woman, the finest children and the happiest home on the continent. Tomorrow we will take up your matter and anything I can do for you, rest assured I will do."

"Agreed," replied Dennison heartily.

Nothing could exceed the genuine enthusiasm of Dennison over Thompson's home. Both inside and out it was a model place, and he took as lively an interest in the garden, the roses, the barn, the color of the exterior (newly painted), the inside arrangements (Thompson had drawn the general design himself), the furnishings, the books and pictures—indeed of the home as a whole and in detail.

Mrs. Thompson was busy with the dinner when they arrived, and begged to be excused until that important function had been pushed along to the point at which she could leave it safely with the maid. So Thompson charged about, gathering the little Thompsons in, one at a time, and showing them personally to his old friend.

While the enthusiasm was at its height Mrs. Thompson came in. Thompson was out just at the moment capturing the oldest and most refractory of his brood, who preferred to play ball in the back yard to appearing in the parlor.

When Mrs. Thompson came in she glanced about for her husband, then stepped gracefully forward, saying:

"I am Mrs. Thompson. This is Mr.—I really must confess I did not catch your name. Mr. Thompson seems quite incoherent with joy at meeting——"

At this moment her eyes met those of the visitor, who had started and turned pale at the first sound of her voice, and who now stood regarding her with burning gaze.

The words died on her lips as she encountered that gaze, and she too went pale and grasped for a chair to steady herself.

At this moment Thompson burst into the room.

"Hello, there!" he said briskly. "I didn't expec you in quite so soon. This is my wife, Bert, and the most beautiful woman in the world, physically, mentally and spiritually. My dear, let me introduce Mr. Herbert Dennison, coffee planter of South America, alias Bert Dennison, my old college side-kick. God bless him! Why, you two look as frightened as two bashful youngsters. Aren't you old enough to introduce yourselves if I happen to be absent?"

The two bowed gravely to one another and Thompson led the way to dinner. Somehow an air of constraint had gotten into the atmosphere since the advent of Thompson's wife, and Thompson's enthusiasm did not meet the response it did when he and Dennison first reached home.

"Thompson, I want to tell you and Mrs. Thompson a story," said Dennison gravely when the conversation lagged a little later in the parlor.

"Good!" exclaimed Thompson. "You always were famous for your stories, Bert. My, what laughs we used to have up in 18——"

"This is not a funny one," replied Dennison. "In fact, it is quite pathetic, or tragic—and I want your opinion on it."

"Fire ahead," said Thompson.

"It's about a friend of mine down in South America," said Dennison. "It seems when he was a mere boy he fell very deeply in love with a sweet girl back in York state and she seemed to reciprocate his feelings fully. After he graduated from college he spent a few months at the home town and employed much of his time making ardent love to his sweetheart. They were the happiest days in his life, he tells me. They were very much together, and neither doubted but they were born for one another. One day he received a telegram from a firm with whom he had been negotiating to go on a sudden mission to the Far West. He had to start that evening and the mission required some months' time. He was wild with delight, as the opportunity opened a vast field of possibilities for the employment of his talents. In the rush to prepare for the journey he found time to call on his sweetheart. She was away from home for the afternoon. He sat down at her dainty little cabinet and wrote her a note explaining the sudden call, and telling what a splendid opportunity it opened for his talents and how it undoubtedly would result in making an early marriage possible. He voiced his sorrow at leaving without seeing her, left her ten thousand kisses and besought her to write him at Denver, where he would be on the following Sunday.

"This letter he entrusted to his sweetheart's cousin, who made her home at the same house, telling her his plight. He left, and was greatly surprised at Denver not to receive a letter from his sweetheart. Knowing she was wholly wrapped up in him, as he was in her, he was terribly shocked and disappointed. He wrote her at once, beseeching her to write and giving a future address. Again he was disappointed, as he was also many times more. In the meantime he received an anonymous letter stating that the girl was a heartless flirt and had forgotten him as soon as out of sight. Like a blind fool, he accepted the circumstantial evidence and, throwing up his position and prospects, buried himself in South America. There he tried to stifle his memory in hard work and prospered, although he was a broken-hearted man."

Mrs. Thompson had dropped her needlework and was leaning forward breathlessly. Thompson was smoking complacently.

"Blamed fool!" remarked Thompson, judiciously, "to believe an anonymous letter."

"Yes, but he was well punished," went on Dennison. "Well, after many years had passed this man received a letter from the cousin to whom he had entrusted the letter to his sweetheart. This cousin was dying, and made a confession that she had not delivered his letter and had watched for and destroyed all his other letters. So the poor girl had only to believe that he had deserted her and this idea was constantly fostered by this mischief-making cousin, who, it seems, was in love with the man herself and was moved by jealousy to do these things. Now, on her dying bed she wished to make what retribution she could and so wrote the facts and said his old sweetheart had always remained true to him and had gone west as a schoolteacher.

"Wild with joy, the man was for boarding the first boat and start to hunt his lost bride. But circumstances prevented him doing so, and he asked me to do it for him, as I was coming to the states."

"Bet you found her married," interrupted Thompson. "They all do it."

"Yes," said Dennison. "I did find her married and surrounded by her children and, what is more tragic, married to one of her old fiance's closest college friends who knew or knows nothing of the old affair. I wrote my friend about it and he now charges me to tell the woman of his fidelity and to say to her that time will not be long enough to erase his love and that through its bitter disappointment his heart hopes that nothing but happiness will be hers. What message do you suppose she will send back, Mrs. Thompson?" There was a slight break in his voice.

Mrs. Thompson spoke low, but steadily. "I think she will tell you that she never expects to find the passionate joy she had hoped for, but that she has found content in the love and tenderness of her husband and in devotion to her children. And probably she will tell you to tell him that her love has never faded any more than his and that her nightly prayer is for his welfare and happiness—and then she will probably tell you to tell him that she prays she never will see him again, for I am sure she is a good woman."

"Come, come," sung out Thompson, flinging his cigar into the grate, "don't get so blamed serious. This is supposed to be a joyful reunion."

But Dennison pleaded a headache and departed presently.

"Don't it beat all," remarked Thompson, "how a fellow will change? Dennison used to be the lightest-hearted fellow and the best entertainer going. Now he acts like a sentimental school girl."

To which Mrs. Thompson said nothing.

"Deadly stupid" is the phrase one hyperbolical girl used in describing the local social work. What are people doing? Immediately after Lent, one could say they were arranging their summer wardrobes, but they can not be doing that all summer. No bridge that any one hears about, few dancing parties, no teas, never a reception, scarcely anybody going, fewer coming back, the wonder is how people are amusing themselves. Of course, during the last week there was a concert Monday evening, but there were few there. Wednesday night a local production of "The Merchant of Venice," but there were few there. There is, of course, golf, which attracts many these beautiful days, but for the hostess who first begins the round of summer galeties, there is a special niche awaiting in the hearts of a number of bored society people.

MISS MILLIE BAKER.

The first of the week Miss Millie Baker returned home to spend the summer months in Duluth and although rumors had reached a number of her friends here that she had begun her professional life, few realized that she had received such a good start in musical work on the stage. Miss Baker left last fall for Chicago to continue her musical studies. She studied for several months and at last desiring stage experience she applied to a musical stock company playing there. She says, "I wasn't foolish enough to think I could get anything to do but chorus work and that's exactly what I did." She did it, however, for but two weeks and was seen by the manager of the Whitney shows and offered a position with "The Isle of Spice" with understudy work. She accepted and finished the season with that company. The season was well advanced when she joined the troup at Terre Haute, Ind., and she had little hope of an opportunity to sing the role. The prima donna became ill, however, and with two days notice she played the part and so charming was her own personality in addition to her voice that she finished the season, closing the first of this month at Sandusky, O.

Her voice which always had rare sweetness has grown wonderfully and retains the individual quality that makes it most pleasing. Miss Baker will be heard at the Lachmund-Tyler recital Monday evening. She will study during the summer with George Tyler and in the fall will go to New York where she will appear in a musical comedy playing the entire season there, at the same time continuing her musical work. She is most earnest in her work and ambitions and is most charmingly modest and reserved about the really splendid start she has made, which has been accomplished entirely through her own efforts.

The End of Dennison's Search

By Casper Peterson.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Thompson had met his old college mate, Dennison, on the street and carried him home in triumph to enjoy the double pleasure of showing Dennison, whom he had not seen since college days, his cozy little home and his handsome wife and his thriving brood of little Thompsons, and of showing his wife his old-time and brilliant friend.

Soon after leaving college Dennison had gone to South America to engage in coffee raising and had not been in the states since. Meantime Thompson had drifted out West and built up a fine law practice and had married and was getting on famously.

The meeting had been wholly unexpected and most cordial on both sides. Dennison accepted Thompson's invitation with alacrity, adding that the meeting was most fortunate in that he, Dennison, was on a very important mission in the pursuance of which Thompson might be of great value to him.

"Tomorrow, old chap, tomorrow," replied Thompson. "Tonight shall be given to renewing old acquaintance and learning what has happened since last we met and in showing you the handsomest woman, the finest children and the happiest home on the continent. Tomorrow we will take up your matter and anything I can do for you, rest assured I will do."

"Agreed," replied Dennison heartily.

Nothing could exceed the genuine enthusiasm of Dennison over Thompson's home. Both inside and out it was a model place, and he took as lively an interest in the garden, the roses, the barn, the color of the exterior (newly painted), the inside arrangements (Thompson had drawn the general design himself), the furnishings, the books and pictures—indeed of the home as a whole and in detail.

Mrs. Thompson was busy with the dinner when they arrived, and begged to be excused until that important function had been pushed along to the point at which she could leave it safely with the maid. So Thompson charged about, gathering the little Thompsons in, one at a time, and showing them personally to his old friend.

While the enthusiasm was at its height Mrs. Thompson came in. Thompson was out just at the moment capturing the oldest and most refractory of his brood, who preferred to play ball in the back yard to appearing in the parlor.

When Mrs. Thompson came in she glanced about for her husband, then stepped gracefully forward, saying:

"I am Mrs. Thompson. This is Mr.—I really must confess I did not catch your name. Mr. Thompson seems quite incoherent with joy at meeting——"

At this moment her eyes met those of the visitor, who had started and turned pale at the first sound of her voice, and who now stood regarding her with burning gaze.

The words died on her lips as she encountered that gaze, and she too went pale and grasped for a chair to steady herself.

At this moment Thompson burst into the room.

"Hello, there!" he said briskly. "I didn't expec you in quite so soon. This is my wife, Bert, and the most beautiful woman in the world, physically, mentally and spiritually. My dear, let me introduce Mr. Herbert Dennison, coffee planter of South America, alias Bert Dennison, my old college side-kick. God bless him! Why, you two look as frightened as two bashful youngsters. Aren't you old enough to introduce yourselves if I happen to be absent?"

The two bowed gravely to one another and Thompson led the way to dinner. Somehow an air of constraint had gotten into the atmosphere since the advent of Thompson's wife, and Thompson's enthusiasm did not meet the response it did when he and Dennison first reached home.

"Thompson, I want to tell you and Mrs. Thompson a story," said Dennison gravely when the conversation lagged a little later in the parlor.

"Good!" exclaimed Thompson. "You always were famous for your stories, Bert. My, what laughs we used to have up in '78."

"This is not a funny one,' replied Dennison. "In fact, it is quite pathetic, or tragic—and I want your opinion on it."

"Fire ahead," said Thompson.

"It's about a friend of mine down in South America," said Dennison. "It seems when he was a mere boy he fell very deeply in love with a sweet girl back in York state and she seemed to reciprocate his feelings wholly. After he graduated from college he spent a few months at the home town and employed much of his time making ardent love to his sweetheart. They were the happiest days in his life, he tells me. They were very much together, and neither doubted but they were born for one another. One day he received a telegram from a firm with whom he had been negotiating to go on a sudden mission to the Far West. He had to start that evening and the mission required some months' time. He was wild with delight, as the opportunity opened a vast field of possibilities for the employment of his talents. In the rush to prepare for the journey he found time to call on his sweetheart. She was away from home for the afternoon. He sat down at her dainty little cabinet and wrote her a note explaining the sudden call, and telling what a splendid opportunity it opened for his talents and how it undoubtedly would result in making an early marriage possible. He voiced his sorrow at leaving without seeing her, left her ten thousand kisses and besought her to write him at Denver, where he would be on the following Sunday.

"This letter he entrusted to his sweetheart's cousin, who made her home at the same house, telling her his plight. He left, and was greatly surprised at Denver not to receive a letter from his sweetheart. Knowing she was wholly wrapped up in him, as he was in her, he was terribly shocked and disappointed. He wrote her at once, beseeching her to write and giving a future address. Again he was disappointed, as he was also many times more. In the meantime he received an anonymous letter stating that the girl was a heartless flirt and had forgotten him as soon as out of sight. Like a blind fool, he accepted the circumstantial evidence and, throwing up his position and prospects, buried himself in South America. There he tried to stifle his memory in hard work and prospered, although he was a broken-hearted man."

Mrs. Thompson had dropped her needlework and was leaning forward breathlessly. Thompson was smoking complacently.

"Blamed fool!" remarked Thompson, judiciously, "to believe an anonymous letter."

"Yes, but he was well punished," went on Dennison. "Well, after many years had passed this man received a letter from the cousin to whom he had entrusted the letter to his sweetheart. This cousin was dying, and made a confession that she had not delivered his letter and had watched for and destroyed all his other letters. So the poor girl had only to believe that he had deserted her and this idea was constantly fostered by this mischief-making cousin, who, it seems, was in love with the man herself and was moved by jealousy to do these things. Now, on her dying bed she wished to make what retribution she could and so wrote the facts and said his old sweetheart had always remained true to him and had gone west as a schoolteacher.

"Wild with joy, the man was for boarding the first boat and start to hunt his lost bride. But circumstances prevented him doing so, and he asked me to do it for him, as I was coming to the states."

"Bet you found her married," interrupted Thompson. "They all do it."

"Yes," said Dennison. "I did find her married and surrounded by her children and, what is more tragic, married to one of her old fiance's closest college friends who knew or knows nothing of the old affair. I wrote my friend about it and he now charges me to tell the woman of his fidelity and to say to her that time will not be long enough to erase his love and that through its bitter disappointment his heart hopes that nothing but happiness will be hers. What message do you suppose she will send back, Mrs. Thompson?" There was a slight break in his voice.

Mrs. Thompson spoke low, but steadily. "I think she will tell you that she never expects to find the passionate joy she had hoped for, but that she has found content in the love and tenderness of her husband and in devotion to her children. And probably she will tell you to tell him that her love has never faded any more than his and that her nightly prayer is for his welfare and happiness—and then she will probably tell you to tell him that she prays she never will see him again, for I am sure she is a good woman."

"Come, come," sung out Thompson, flinging his cigar into the grate, "don't get so blamed serious. This is supposed to be a joyful reunion."

But Dennison pleaded a headache and departed presently.

"Don't it beat all," remarked Thompson, "how a fellow will change? Dennison used to be the lightest-hearted fellow and the best entertainer going. Now he acts like a sentimental school girl."

To which Mrs. Thompson said nothing.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

Modes for the SUMMER VERANDA

COAT IN BRODERIE ANGLAISE

PARISIAN MODEL IN CREPE DE CHINE

CHARMING STYLE FOR SUMMER FROCK.

THE EMBROIDERED LINEN GOWN.

Thoroughly imbued with the idea that her every appearance is to be a picture, and a perfect one at that, the summer belle counts upon her mornings upon the veranda, the afternoon promenade and the stroll through foyer and corridors of the big hotels after dinner as merely opportunities wherein to display her perfect taste in dress, her understanding of her own good points and the fact that she has the talent to dress up to her own individuality.

Be the gown of the simplest or the most elaborate, this is the one idea that permeates all of the summer styles. Not that it is expected to lead to monotony—not at all. Herein lies the cleverness of the clever dresser. To vary her styles and still have each and every one of them peculiarly her own.

The models that Paris is sending over for the late summer wear are distinctively different from those which the springtime brought us. Doubtless it is with the picturesque in view that the new skirts are wider and longer. Indeed, the one mode simply carried the other in its train as a logical conclusion, for what with the skirts growing wider with each new model that is produced, it simply had to come that this fulness, if it is to be made equally becoming to each and every one of us, has to be stretched out somewhat. A very full skirt that is of the shorter length has such an effect of bunchiness upon any but that daughter of the gods who is divinely tall, that the average woman will welcome the short train that now marks the latest productions from Paris.

And who was it whispered crinoline in conjunction with those newer and fuller skirts? Assuredly if we are to keep "strictly within the picture of history's page," as our artist friends on the other side of the Atlantic put it, the present modes not only hint strongly at the crinoline, but they announce in no uncertain terms that it is simply bound to come. Already its effects are plainly to be seen, although they are accomplished by pleasanter and more artistic methods than ever the crinoline itself afforded. The inimitable Paquin is using a flounce of a princess haircloth—a linen weave that is just as light as a feather—in the petticoat or drop skirt for the summer gowns; and covering this with a multitude of silken or chiffon or lace ruffles, according to the character and design of the gown it sets off so well.

And it is just this same crinoline effect that is the hallmark of the newer fashions destined to decorate the halls and walks of the summer resorts. And, with an eye to carrying out their picturesque points in all of their accompanying accessories, the clever dresser is ordering chapeaux that will accord with large sleeves and wide trailing skirts. Not the close-fitting toques and turbans of the late spring time—those that go so well with the tailor-mades, whether of severe or dressy design—but large hats that will round out the silhouette and be in artistic accordance with her height, her build and the contour of her features.

There are several new materials that have come into the great white light of fashionable favor with the summer models. Of these the linen poplins are among the best, although by reason of their weave and texture they are better adapted to the manipulations of the tailor's goose rather than to the frills and flounces of the dressmaker's art. The sheer lisse fabrics, too, are highly favored, and anything and everything upon which embroideries, hand or machine, can be effectively posed is fashionable for the moment. Some charmingly old-fashioned chintzes, too, are to be seen, and although the material in itself is far from being expensive, it is so loaded down with trimmings of the flimsiest and laciest character that it really belies its own apparent inexpensiveness.

There is simply no escape from trimming schemes this summer, and, no matter what the gown may be constructed of, there must be a liberal allowance made for the trimming. Lace and embroidery are the favored combination, and even the simplest of machine embroidery appliques has to have its double or triple edge of Valenciennes set all around. One might almost plan to purchase the trimming laces by the mile rather than the yard, if any effect of summery daintiness at all is to be produced.

Those abbreviated sleeves, too, run off with a tremendous amount of trimming; for if they are finished at all scantily the effect is simply ruinous to the frock. There is quite a fad for black silk or lace gloves to be worn with all sorts and colorings of frocks, and with these the shiny black leather shoe takes its place.

The parasols are all of them of goodly dimensions, and the clever Parisienne is ordering all hers lined with rose-colored silk, well knowing the flattering effect of the rosy reflection upon her contour and coloring.

Chic and Modish Gowns for the Warm Days.

The summer cont is one that is rather intended to be worn as a finishing touch to the toilette than for any real protection that it may afford; in other words, it is for what it is rather than for what it appears that it owes its summertime popularity. The charming model of the picture is fashioned from an allover embroidery, one of those eyelet patterns which the French term broderie Anglaise, or English embroidery. Somewhat after the redingote model, it is constructed in two pieces, the smart belt in crushed white peau de cygne cleverly concealing the joining. The body portion is fitted at back and sides, blousing just the least little bit in front over the pointed ceinture. The full skirts are of circular cut and open in the back the same as in the front, deep pleats either side of the opening adding to the fulness. The sleeve is a double puff that comes well to the wrist, and there is an overlaid collar and upturning cuff of the openwork in a faded rose-red velvet, which gives an indescribably smart appearance to the whole. Velvet-covered buttons are used to center rosette of Valenciennes all down either side of the front, and a belt fastening is simulated in the use of one either side of the ceinture.

Parisian Model in Crepe de Chine.

Crepe de chine is enjoying a huge vogue abroad, not only for dressy dinner and reception gowns, but even for the plainer morning frocks as well. The imported model illustrated shows a design that will answer for many purposes. Fashioned from the double-width, one-seam crepe de chine in one of the dull rose red shades, a little bebe Irish crochet is used for yoke and for sleeve trimming, and offers the sole color relief. An intricate adjustment of the Greek key pattern is worked out in velvet on both waist and skirt, the velvet being of the panne variety and edged all around with a tiny quilled gauze ribbon of the same tint. The bodice follows blouse lines, the blouse part being slit into straps that simulate bretelles over the shoulders, displaying the Irish crochet beneath. The blouse and sleeve top have the velvet appliques for trimming; and the pointed ceinture is of peau de cygne that exactly matches the crepe in tint. The skirt is one of those extremely full affairs, shirred to the band and falling in full folds straight to the hem. The handsome velvet appliques are lined with a princess haircloth instead of the usual buckram, the former being far more flexible, while possessing all the body of the latter; and the haircloth is further used in the shape of a Paquin flounce in the drop skirt, so that the sheer crepe skirt—which measures just a little short of a dozen yards around the hem—maintains just the correct soft outward flare all around.

Charming Style for Summer Frock.

For the sheer organdies, cotton mousselines and like summery fabrics, the illustration, a photograph of an imported gown, will afford many practicable hints. The material is an organdie lisse, a white ground with large sprays of pink roses and foliage in the natural tints. There is a little blouse of a very sheer hand-embroidered batiste, this in plain white, and the flowered organdie fashions broad bretelles and a deep swathed ceinture, the latter stayed with featherbones front, back and sides. The sleeve shows to advantage the abbreviated lines to which the summer time arm coverings have been relegated, being merely a very full tucked puff with a triple ruffle of pleated white lisse edged with Valenciennes of a yellowish tint. This same white lisse is used to edge the bretelle straps with very dainty effect. The skirt is somewhat intricate of construction. The front runs in an unbroken line from band to hem. The top is laid in lengthwise tucks, and halfway to the knee a flounce is applied with tuckings, these released after some inches, and the edge so scalloped and finished with lace. The same treatment is used with the lower flounce, and the whole frock is quite a little longer than the earlier models which came to us with the springtime.

The Embroidered Linen Gown.

The vogue of the embroidered robe gown is one that increases daily; and some charming examples in hand-wrought needlework are imported from France. Such is the one pictured, a round thread linen etamine, worked after an Irish point design that is most effective. The little coat is one of the best of the summer designs, being constructed somewhat after the loose eton pattern, with a sleeve that follows cape lines rather than those of the usual arm covering. The little jacket is short and loose in the back, cleverly fitted to define the lines of the figure at the side, and with the fronts continued in scarf lines below the waist. Lace edged batiste is closely pleated and used lavishly for edging purposes all around the coat and down both sides of the front. The skirt is of circular pattern, small pinch tucks making the fitting over the hips; and two deep tucks—one somewhat deeper than the other—make a smart heading for the hem, and lend some stability to the fabric around the foot.

The Elaboration of Simplicity.

The sheerest of linen batiste is posed over a colored silk slip to fashion this delightful frock in which the elaboration of simplicity is excellently set forth. The waist shows the latest fichu draping, a mode that is wonderfully becoming to slender figures, and the sleeves, which are full throughout, have the excess of fulness cleverly manipulated below the elbow. In the model the silk slip is in pale blue and the turnover quillings and ceinture are of the same tint in satin. Quaint little butterfly bows appear on the girdle, and these, with the quillings, are repeated on the sleeve below the elbow. The skirt is circular in cut, with that distinctively Parisian bias seam in the center front, and appliques of embroidery are posed fancifully, each one ruffled with Valenciennes lace, and the little ruffles that start from the center front and rise slightly to the back are similarly trimmed.

Somewhat After the Tailor-Made Mode.

Linen poplin is one of the latest aspirants for fashionable favor, and, with the generous reception accorded to all materials and trimmings of Irish origin, this has made a place for itself among the leading summer fabrics. In the picture it is shown in a faint shade of almond green, with touches of the new bronze velvet—a shade that it is difficult to tell whether it belongs to the green or the brown family—and a black satin-striped white silk is sparingly used in bias strips with delightfully chic effect. The short cont follows the Eton order, with a puffy gigot sleeve and a fancy vest of an all-over eyelet embroidery. The bands of velvet and of silk are used in conjunction, and the embroidery is posed immediately with them on the collar and cuffs. The skirt is of the extreme circular cut. The front is laid in fan pleats that are stitched in a V fashion for a short space below the waistband, and the back is adjusted with some tuck-stitched pleats. Fancy sections of machine stitching at intervals above the hem is the only attempt at trimming displayed on the skirt.

THE ELABORATION OF SIMPLICITY.

Return of the Lace Mitts.

The real lace mitts that have been slumbering for sometime among the other family possessions in real laces are being brought forth and made use of with the filmy frocks that are fashioned with the shortest of short sleeves. Where the old-time lappets and undersleeves have been saved, too, now is the time for their resurrection. One sees all sorts of undersleeves in the smart shops. Some are merely full puffs intended to be caught to the dress sleeve with fancy pins that are supposed to be so fanciful that they can be worn en evidence; while others are carefully shaped and fitted to the contour of the arm and require a firm stitch to hold them in place.

Fashion Frills for the Fastidious.

Some new effects are seen among the latest productions in ribbons. Velvet edges, principally of the chiffon panne variety, are highly favored for the flowered weaves; and in many instances this velvet edge is shaded, the lighter tone on the inner side, and deepening towards the outer edge.

A beautiful ribbon in a white ground is printed with bunches of cherries in all of the natural tints; and the border is of velvet shaded from a faint yellowish pink to the richest cerise tone. This is in a sash width, the ribbon being some 12 inches wide, and the velvet border extending for about two inches on either edge.

Picot-edged ribbons are coming into use again, and their employment is marked by many fanciful conceits. In the narrower widths they are pleated into somewhat stiff quillings, and these are made to stands up to edge cuffs, revers, tucks, folds and other trimming devices. Flounces, too, are often edged with them, and about as often as not the picot-edged ribbon is shirred on as a foundation to some of the sheer blonde laces that are used so lavishly to trim the summer frocks.

Lace coats are in the extreme of the fashion, and the dyed laces are experiencing a renewal of favor in this direction. Those coats are mounted over a brilliant satin or taffetas lining and are intended to be worn with either a silk or henrietta skirt of the color of the lining, or else with a lace skirt which may or may not correspond in color. There is evident a very marked penchant for flounced skirts in either white or black lace, these going equally well with almost any kind of dinner jacket.

For those fluffy little frocks of muslin, embroidered batiste, organdie, lisse, printed nets and French tulles the half length sleeve, or even a shorter one, is cut in a perfect ombrelle circle and then covered with row upon row of shirred lace or ribbon or embroidery, or whatever may be the trimming scheme of the frock. With this goes the low square or heart-shaped neck, and for the demoiselle of some 16 or 18 summers the guimpe or transparent yoke that usually accompanies this style is omitted.

Parasols are growing larger and more elaborate as the season goes on. The plain parasols are now relegated to shirt-waist and morning wear. Those for the afternoon are befrilled and bepuffed and beruffled to an extravagant degree. The liking for color combinations extends to the parasols now; and a favorite mode employs a flowered silk in delicate coloring for the parasol, and then almost conceals it under a mass of chiffon puffings and ruches and ruffles. The chiffon, be it said en passant, is oftener of white than any other tone.

Charming Fantasies in Summer Wraps.

Dainty Little Garments that Belie their Purpose.

The summer wrap is a trifle that will be used rather as the finishing touch to the outdoor costume than for any protection that it can or may afford from the balmy breezes that are more welcome than otherwise when once the dog days have begun to dawn.

And the variety as to size and style, texture and material is simply but delightfully bewildering. There are abbreviated little garments that are thrown over the shoulders and which have capes for sleeves, smart little affairs whose short career ends ere the waistline is reached and which make not the slightest pretense of touching the figure at any point.

There are long coats fashioned from lace, from linen, from allover embroidery, all of which follow the redingote order with more or less fidelity, and which, it must be confessed, grow more attractive the farther they depart from the rather rigid lines of the original model.

And betwixt and between these two extremes there are garments which may as well be described as frivolous little combinations and conglomerations of several styles, each one of which is a law unto itself so far as line and shape are concerned, and which affords just that delightful touch of chic and daring which only the true Parisienne seems able to produce and which the clever American girl wears so well.

For the travels of the summer time there are wonderfully full and voluminous coats of full or three-quarter length made from the coarse Russian linen crash. The coarse and effective laces are combined with this to excellent effect, and one of the latest schemes shows an Empire coat with the short body entirely overlaid with lace, the sleeves altogether of the same and the skirts pleated to the shortwaisted body in an ever-widening circle, the sun pleating being the mode followed.

There are some charmingly dainty little wraps on the cape or dolman order fashioned from the chiffon mohairs in the very delicate pastel tints, and these are made up entirely without linings, lace, passementerie, fanciful chenille fringe and flat bands of ostrich or marabout being used for trimmings.

Perhaps the most charming of them all, because the most youthful in effect, are the short loose coats that are fashioned after the covert box pattern. The godet seam over which Paris is raving appears down the center back, and the short garment is intended to stand well out from the figure all around. Just to the curve of the hips is the correct length for these, and when made from the allover embroideries with a band of plain linen edging it all around—sometimes this band is in color—the effect, while it must be confessed to approach the negligee line, is at once smart and girlish.

For the little wraps that one slips on over a dinner gown there are models in voile, in henrietta and in crepe de chine. The first two are made up after the godet coat design, and the latest idea in these shows the "bat" sleeves, those which approach the dolman form, these oftentimes made of a series of ruffles, the one overlapping the other all the way from shoulder to wrist.

For the longer evening wraps crepe de chine, of the double one-seam width, is in high esteem. The sun-plaited wrap is simply exquisite in these; and in place of the usual hook-and-eye or button and buttonhole fastening, long scarfs of lace are tied around the throat, the ends tasseled and hanging somethings to the feet. There is usually a hood to these sun-plaited affairs, this made or chiffon and lace; and when edged with swansdown or with a white marabout the effect is really charming. This hood is intended to be just thrown loosely over the head and not tied under the chin or confined in any way, the latest designs in evening coiffures not permitting of any flat effects, even when the coiffure hair net is securely pinned on all over.

There are some extremely fetching designs shown in wraps intended for the matron this season. These are usually fitted in the back, have dolman sleeves or something approaching this style, and with long, straight fronts that dip quite a little bit, this idea of having the front quite a little longer than the back being a recent innovation. All of the delicate colorings in cashmere and in henrietta are shown in these; and one of the newest mandates of Dame Fashion sanctions the wearing of a colored coat or wrap over a white gown.

DRAMATICAL

SUCCESS LARGELY DUE TO THEIR OUTDOOR LIFE

How Great Singers Will Dispose of Last Winter's Earnings—The Flight of the "Song Birds."

New York, May 27.—The world is beginning to learn that outdoor air is practically worth its weight in gold. Singers as well as sick people profit by breathing plenty of oxygen. For it not only cures many diseases, like consumption, but also prevents illness, and actually makes you a new person. The best examples of this are the singers who appear in public each winter. A large amount of their success is due to their out-door life. Their voices become fresh and beautiful, and their general health perfect. One can hardly name a successful singer today who has not a splendid physique. This applies equally to Nordica, Eames, Gadski, Melba, Homer, Caruso, Knote or Jean de Reszke.

The majority of the great singers who were heard at the Metropolitan Opera house and other places of music the past winter have already taken their departure to Europe. All of them have made plans for a season of rest and recreation.

The interesting thing about the flight of these "song birds" is the way in which they spend their vacations. When you hear them at the opera in the winter their voices seem fresh, resonant and beautiful, and they sing without any apparent effort. In order to obtain this richness and resiliency, they have to devote a good deal of time to outdoor exercises. This outdoor life tends to develop the body, and consequently makes a sound voice in a sound body.

Madame Sembrich, one of the most beautiful of lyric sopranos, is a typical example. She has a pretty home in Dresden, and has just bought a beautiful residence in Berlin. She makes it a point to walk every day, regardless of the weather, and thus keeps her voice as fresh as a daisy. She is very fond of pedestrian trips through the Black Forest and the Tyrol, and much of her charm in singing is due to her regular outdoor life. She left these shores with quite a bag of gold from her winter engagements, and can afford to give herself up to recreation. She refuses all engagements in Europe, and devotes her time wholly to physical and vocal development during the summer.

Caruso, the great tenor, will spend his summer in Florence, where he is now building a beautiful home on one of the pretty foothills about that city. He will give himself up to rest and outdoor pleasure. Anyone who has visited the city of Savonarola knows that it is the home of literary artists, actors and musicians, and hence an ideal spot.

Caruso has a pretty large bank account from his winter's work in this country. His earnings in New York alone are said to be in the neighborhood of $70,000, and he has probably received a similar sum from his singing outside the metropolis; so he can live like a prince in Florence. His new home, it is said, will resemble some of the castles one sees in Europe.

Emma Eames is the proud possessor of a castle on the slopes of the Apennines, in the beautiful vale of Vallombrosa. It nestles in the very heart of nature in Northern Italy, and from its windows can be seen the towers and domes of Florence in the distance. Below, the valley of the Arno stretches away, winding along between hills olive-covered and vine-clad, and seeming like a silver band of light in the sunshine. It is an ideal spot for an artist. The very name conjures up in one's memory Milton's famous metaphor of the legions of angelic forms:

"Who lay entranced,
Thick as autumn leaves that strew the brooks
In Vallombrosa, where the Etrurian shades
High overarched embower."

The unwritten law of the stage at present seems to be that an artist must have some kind of a schloss for purposes of rest and recreation. In the past it has frequently happened that singers who fairly reveled in diamonds and ducats during their lives died in straitened circumstances. Now they build "bird cages" before evil days come. Patti started the movement for something more substantial than "castles in Spain" by buying the beautiful Craig-y-nos in the heart of Wales. Jean de Reszke retreated to the heart of Poland and bought several big chateaus for a country residence adjoining the property of Paderewski, the well-known pianist. Calve has a picturesque place in the south of France, just in the shadow of the Pyrenees, which she calls Chateau Cabrieres, and which stands at an altitude of over 2,000 feet. And every one knows of Bernhardt's isle in the Mediterranean. Small wonder then that our American nightingale, Mme. Eames, has built her nest in a "land of sunshine and song." Her father-in-law, W. W. Story, the sculptor-poet, thus describes the scene in Vallombrosa:

"Magnificent chestnuts throng the autumn slopes, their yellow leaves glowing in the autumn sun. Somber groves of firs, marshalled along the hillsides for miles, stand solemn and black. Beach trees rear at intervals their smooth trunks, or gather together in close and numerous conclave. In every direction are wild and enchanting walks, alluring us on for miles. Little brooks come trickling down at intervals, finding their devious way among the rocks and leaves, and singing to themselves a low and silvery song. Now and then a partridge whirs up beneath your feet, or a whistling woodcock suddenly takes flight, or a startled hare, with up-cocked tail, may be seen tilting through the underbrush, or a shy fox steals cautiously away."

"You ought to see me run about in my hob-nailed shoes," said Mme. Eames to me. "I spend nearly all my time in the open air with the dogs and horses. The only company that Mr. Story and I have are the farm hands. We are cut off from civilization and we get rest enough here in the summer to last us through the rest of the season."

Alfred Hertz, the conductor of the Metropolitan Opera house orchestra, who made his reputation principally as the director of the initial porduction of "Parsifal" in this country, will spend his summer at Frankfort-am-Main—his old home. Herr Hertz is comparatively a young man, 35 years old, and a bachelor.

Paderewski, the great pianist, goes to Lake Geneva, where he has a pretty summer home at Mordes. Here he spends a good part of his time in outdoor recreation, such as driving and boating.

NEW YORK THEATERS

The Chinese Playhouse In Narrow, Crooked Doyer Street — Quarter of An Hour a Sufficiency For White Folks—The Lambs' Show.

New York, May 27.—A dozen coaching parties trundle from the theatrical center of the town every evening down Broadway, across to the Bowery and so on through what was long ago notorious as the Five Points of depravity to the Chinese theater in narrow, crooked Doyer street. The parties number 20 to 60, and the coaches are auto-cars so wide that the superintendent of police has asked for an ordinance prohibiting them as obstacles to traffic. "Seeing New York" from the tops of such carry-alls has become a subject of jest and ditty on the stage, and is to provide a title for one of the summer extravanganzas; and this mode of showing the city to strangers is now pursued by four rival companies. Do you know that New York has more visitors for recreation in summer time than any watering place in America? The daylight trips by these electric vehicles, each with a conductor facing the passengers and talking through a megaphone, are hardly ever taken by residents, but are left to the strangers within our gates, who don't care if, away from home, they become sights themselves while seeing those of New York.

* * *

But the evening trips to the Chinese theater are a transitory fad with the same people who make up our first-night audiences for new plays during the dramatic season. Within a fortnight they will discover Coney Island again, and find seasonable diversion in the shows there, which will be bigger, odder and plentier than the Pike had at St. Louis. But their May quest of theatrical novelty is in Chinatown, the very existence of which they have ignored hitherto. The Chinese playhouse is a shabby makeshift from a dance hall, where Bowery bhoys an' gurrels used to be led in their spieling by Chuch Conners, who has since gone on the stage as an impersonator of himself in the language of slummery of that quarter. The stage is a platform without so much as footlights to fit it for dramatic use, the auditorium has backless benches for seats, and the whole sheebang would shame any Oklahoma town more than one year old. Yet I saw hundreds of clean-bodied and good-clothed men and women there, last night, crowded in with as many yellow fellows, while public and private automobiles, broughams, coupes and hansoms lined the adjacent streets.

* * *

Chinamen devote the evenings of a week, sometimes of a fortnight, to a single one of their historical plays, but a quarter of an hour of the squeaky-weak gibberish, with ding-dong accompaniment, is a sufficiency for the white folks, and half an hour is a surfeit. So those fashions are very transient visitors, and their noisy coming and going annoy the regular patrons of the Chinese drama very much. I earned the high esteem of a Chinaman next me by remaining quietly an entire hour. He must have been a bad Chinaman in the eyes of his countrymen, for he had become Americanized to the disgraceful extreme of cutting his queue off and not shaving the front half of his disloyal head. But he was a pleasant chap, and he tried to pronounce R in the English when he spoke. He told me that the play had been nine evenings working its historic way down to the illustrous reign of Sli Quong; that the individual with red clothes, green face and purple hands was that august emperor as embodied by the tallest and, therefore, the best actor in the company; that the one with a thin figure was the most falsetto and for that reason the most famous male impersonator of queens that ever came out of Fanland; and that the four men in hideous masks, who carried swords shaped like snakes, and banners pictured with dragons, were Sli Quong's dare-devil army scaring his enemies to death. The racket of gongs, drums and horns was as horrible as the sights. I surmised that the assaults on the foe's eyes and ears might be followed with an onslaught on their noses with Chinese stinkpots, and I withdrew to the Temple of Confucius across the street, where there was a bearable odor of burning joss sticks and religious sanctity.

* * *

The joss house was a show house, too, for a priest was sending up a blazing stream of prayer paper before an idol for the slummers to see, while a doortender sold souvenir packets of the printed worship, instead of tickets, at 10 cents apiece. The business manager of this temple of slant-eye and pigtail devotion is Jim Flaherty, successor to Chuck Conners as "Mayor of Chinatown" and he lectured explanatorily, like the barker for a dime museum, going from idol to prayer wheel, from confession box to marriage bell, and not neglecting the sacred alcove where souvenir trinkets are on sale. But Jim has none of Chuck's racy humor.

* * *

Just around a corner from Chinatown is the Bowery theater, the oldest playhouse in America now in use. On its stage Forrest, Davenport and the elder Booth were tragedians. Chanfrau, Jefferson and Owens were comedians, and their days were palmy days—at $25 to $99 per week. Now the hallowed house is given over to performances in Yiddish and the audiences are drawn from the Polish Jews, whose crowded quarter is separated from the Chinese by the Bowery only. Thus have the historic glories of the neighborhood faded away. Three old theaters and a new one are Yiddisher, while only the Windsor—on the site of the Thalia, where German grand opera once had a home—remains English and there the plays are the roughest melodramas at the lowest prices, but dear at that.

People who went Bowerywards in the "rubber neck" coaches, or any other way, have been coming back for years and telling us of a great actor hidden down there in the lower East side. Jacob Adler played in Yiddish, and some of us were inclined to think that the unexpectedness of discovering ability in an out of the way place gave to competency the color of genius to enthusiasts. This week Adler makes a bold test of his talent by bringing it from the Bowery to Broadway, and playing Shylock to the Portia of Percy Haswell. More than one manager has ventured into the ghetto to see for himself this proclaimed genius, came back conquered, and willing to present Adler before a wider public if he would learn English. But though he converses in our language with little accent, he says to use it in playing a part would require an attention to mere accuracy in pronunciation that would detract from his acting. So it is in Yiddish that the voices Shakespeare's thoughts while his associates use the poet's own words. Yet it does not seem far amiss to hear the Jew speak in a language of the Jews, even though he talks with characters who speak English. And an interest arises from a Hebrew's embodiment of this famous Hebrew role.

* * *

First, though, it must be noted that, unlike many "geniuses" of odd localities, Adler loses nothing in coming into the searchingly critical light of Broadway. "Great" is an elastic and often misplaced term, but he certainly is among the best actors of the poetic drama resident in this country. He has the depth of tragedy, the majesty of great emotion and the largeness of method of those "palmy days" which some of us deride. These he uses in "The Merchant of Venice" to depict a proud, austere Jew, affectionate with his daughter, domineering amongst his people, bold and open, not crouching nor meanly vindictive, with his enemies. His performance reaches its height of excellence in the scene of his midnight return home, to discover himself robbed of his daughter and his ducats. He comes to the house a proud, erect, almost defiant man; when he comes from it a moment later he is bent and crushed. But in the cry at his discovery he strikes the note of tragic anguish, of pain, surprise and rage in a great nature.

* * *

His trial scene suffers from over elaboration, a suggestion of what player folk call "grandstanding for points." That is, he sacrifices the embodiment as a whole to accentuate certain incidental traits and arouse indiscreet admiration for the reading of some special line. But in the climax, that exit from the court room and from the play with which Edwin Booth ended the comedy, Adler draws the diverse strands together in a tremendous and lasting impressive picture of the downfall of a big being. He is vanquished, but not humbled. At first, when the blow of failure strikes this Shylock, he seems about to sink under it. But that is momentary. He draws himself together, flings the knife and the scales which he had so confidently brought for the pound of Christian flesh at the feet of the "most upright judge," and, still haughty and defiant, he straightens himself to his full height and walks boldly from the room. A "king of finance" we would call this Shylock today, and, as throughout, so in the last picture, Adler presents such a man as we see about us in this land of money-makers; gentle, loving and generous to his daughter; hard, relentless and uncompromising in his business.

The Lambs gambol in a kind of private publicity once a year. That is to say, they perform in a big theater every spring some of the sketches that have been given during the winter in their clubhouse. The tickets are sold by auction to members only, and the buyers may sell or give them to acquaintances, but the show is not advertised by even so much as a placard at the doorway while it is going on. The house is filled almost wholly by women and girls, who are rapturously delighted with the entertainment, yet resentfully suspicious that it has been censored for them. The writing of the material is done by lambs exclusively, and the acting, too, heretofore, but last week's matinee had a little girl and a big dog in the cast of "As a Man Sows." That wasn't a play for fun, but a tragedy to be tearful, yet a majority laughed at points of especial pathos, because the heroine was personated by a young man, and they wouldn't be hushed by the hisses of a respectful minority. Robert Hilliard and Earl Ryder engrossed the entire audience in an encounter of the husband of a reformed woman and the rake who had been her paramour, and the death of the latter from fright when the other was ready to kill him with a bullet made a thrilling climax; but Morgan Coman excited hilarity as the distracted wife, notwithstanding that he looked like a graceful lady and behaved like a clever, emotional actress. Shakespeare may have got along very well with boys to act his heroines, but even if the bard himself were reincarnated to direct the performance, we would make merry with a Lady Macbeth who walked in her sleep, or a Desdemona who was choked in bed, wearing nighties that we knew might more appropriately be pajamas. Just so the hysterics of Morgy Coman's agonized bride in skirts struck some of us as funny because we knew he had taken off his trousers for the role.

* * *

George Ade's "Marse Covington" was performed for the first time outside the Lambs' clubhouse by Wilton Lackaye and four hardly less known actors. Lackaye was an Uncle Tom sort of Southern old negro, who 'tended de do' fo' a New York gambling house, and was ordered to kick out the poor but still proud old Vahginia gentleman, suh, who had been his master befo' the wah, by gad. The black man did turn the white man away, not by kicking him, however, but by tricking him with a false confession of having in childhood stolen a gold coin from, and insisting that he accept repayment in money with which he might buy food and lodging. The homely sentiment was very effectual.

I fear me that commercialism now affects the contributors of matter for Lambs' gambols, formerly the entertainments were made up largely of burlesques and travesties of current stage affairs, entirely occasional and ephemeral, but latterly most of the sketches have been written with an eye to the vaudeville market. That seemed true of even "Jim Hickey," in which Fritz Williams was the leading man of a stranded dramatic company, with only enough money in his pocket to buy a breakfast at the rural railway station and a ticket to Chicago; but when he learned that the leading woman had been left behind by the manager, penniless, he fooled her to believe the cash had been intrusted to him for her, so she ate heartily, boarded a train comfortably, and he remained, strapped and hungry. The appearance of Alfred Hickman in the womans' gown, but without a woman's grace, amused the audience. Very likely we shall get the sketch in vaudeville, with the song and dance, comedian and soubrette team of top liners, Kaper and Kute, in the leading roles, with their justly admired specialties incorporated.

* * *

Victor Herbert played a nocturne of his own on a 'cello very soulfully, but it seemed to me that the keenest satisfaction of the whole matinee to the women and girls came from a song and dance, with jingling rhymes, by Clay M. Greene and a ragtime tune by Arthur Wold. Six pairs of "coons and wenches," under whose burnt cork were faces of favorite actors, made a comic "Florodora" double sextette, and they followed that with a burlesque of the French man who shoots the clothes off his wife. New York was fooled by that fellow. We all believed he endangered the woman's life, but when the police stopped him he had to confess, before he was permitted to resume, that his cartridges were made of a mere pinch of powder and a thin capsule of a wax ball, so that if she were hit she wouldn't be hurt. The Lambs' joke was to have six husbands fire with squirt guns that washed the blackening off the noses of six wives.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Beatrice Cameron, Wife of Richard Mansfield, Has More Than One Claim To Distinction — Some of America's Greatest Actors Began Their Careers On the Minstrel Stage.

New York, May 27.—There is not anywhere, perhaps, a more beautiful family attachment than exists between Richard Mansfield, his wife, Beatrice, and their little son, George Gibbs Mansfield.

Beatrice Cameron Mansfield is a direct descendant of Priscilla Millin of the Mayflower. She was born in Troy, N. Y., and was a young girl when she went on the stage. Her apprenticeship in minor parts was brief. In the spring of 1888 Richard Mansfield was about to begin his career as an independent actor and manager. Already he had astonished the English and American public by his marked versatility as Baron Chevrial in "A Parisian Romance," as Nick Vedder in Planquette's "Rip Van Winkle," as a monocled, English-accented Ko-Ko in "The Mikado," and as Mrs. Fiske's leading man. He had a play called "Prince Karl" which he determined to make his own investment. Among those who were introduced to him for roles was Beatrice Cameron. Mr. Mansfield made her his leading lady at once.

Miss Cameron held this position twelve consecutive years—a record duplicated perhaps in one other instance only, that of Ellen Terry and Henry Irving. During this period she played the leading female roles in "Prince Karl," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Monsieur," "King Richard III.," "Don Juan," "Nero," "Ten Thousand a Year," "The Scarlet Letter," "The Merchant of Venice," Arms and the Man," "The Emperor Napoleon," "The King of Peru," "Rodion, the Student," "Castle Sombras" and "The Devil's Disciple."

Mr. Mansfield often proclaims that he has never known and does not believe there ever was a better Portia or Lady Anne than Beatrice Cameron's. He has repeatedly acknowledged his indebtedness to her for her assistance and inspiration given him by her performance of Raina in George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man," her Mrs. Anderson in the same author's "The Devil's Disciple," and her Hester Prynne in "The Scarlet Letter."

Miss Cameron was one of the first American actresses to appreciate and indeed to act Ibsen in this country. It was one winter in the early '90s that she first acted Nora in "The Doll's House." Mr. Mansfield placed his company and scenery at her disposal. The criticisms of the time gave her praise that must have gratified her as much as they justified her pioneer excursion into the realms of a then not understood, unclassed and considerably ridiculed type of drama.

After an extended courtship, many hours of which were spent in the saddle, for both are devoted to horses, Mr. Mansfield and Miss Cameron were married about ten years ago. She retired from the stage early in 1893 and since then has appeared only in a revival of "Arms and the Man," presented for one night in New York by Mr. Mansfield as a compliment to his wife, whose friends had expressed a desire to see her play once more.

One child, a son, has blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield. He was born in 1897 and was named George Gibbs Mansfield, after a friend of his parents. Many are the stories of Gibb's precosity. He has never been taken to a theater to see his father act. Mrs. Mansfield divides the year between the town home on Riverside drive, New York city, and a country place, "The Grange," on the western heights of New London, Conn. In town she indulges herself in as active a social life as her larger interests in her domestic ministrations permit. In the country she devotes her leisure to gardening. She has several specialties. Among them are a wonderful rose garden which she has cultivated from a couple of hundred varieties sent her by Mr. Mansfield from California when he was last there, a charming collection of old-fashioned flowering shrubs, and her beds of salad greens.

I. S. Potts of Columbus, general agent of John W. Vogel's Big City minstrels, who has been making a deep research into the history of minstrelsy, finds that some of America's greatest actors began their careers as blackface comedians. He presents the noble array of names given herewith: Edwin Booth did his first acting in blackface; Edwin Forrest was a minstrel long before he thought of playing "Virginius" and "Othello." Burnt corn played a large part in the early life of Joseph Jefferson. John T. Raymond blacked his face and sang negro songs with a small minstrel show in the South many years ago. Joseph Murphy, for thirty years famous in "Kerry Gow," was an end man long before he became an Irish actor. William J. Florence sat in the first part for one night at the old Pike opera house in Cincinnati. Sol Smith Russell sat in the middle and on the end with a permanent minstrel company located in St. Louis. Barney Williams got his start with the aid of burnt cork. Stuart Robson blacked his face long before he turned to comedy. Of the noted actors now before the public who started in this branch of the profession are Nat C. Goodwin, Francis Wilson, Edward Harrigan, Jefferson de Angelis, Chauncey Olcott, Charles Young, Otis Skinner, Andrew Mack and others may be named. Even Williams and William Rieger, the foremost church and oratorio singers in New York, were given their first engagements in a minstrel troupe about sixteen years ago. Among the prominent managers who have received their first lessons in minstrelsy are Charles and Daniel Frohman, Frank McKee, H. C. Wyett and William Harris of the firm of Rich & Harris, who was also a prominent blackface song and dance man.

It was in 1857 that minstrelsy became a popular form of amusement. Then the first part consisted of two end men, four singers, interlocutor and an orchestra composed of violin, trombone, clarinet, bass fiddle, guitar, banjo and one of the singers played on the jawbone of an ox and the olio consisted of negro acts. The present generation of theatergoers do not remember them by names, but have seen them nevertheless in various forms as the funniest part in many of Hoyt's farces, and the present-day musical comedies are easily recognized by old minstrel men as adaptations and evolutions from those old negro acts.

For a time it seemed as though this once popular form of amusement was about to become utterly extinct. From a sentimental standpoint this probability was deeply regretted. Suddenly, however, it has burst into new life and it is now well in the fore among the many forms of amusement.

"It is a tremendous undertaking to get a new play accepted and produced," said Clyde Fitch. "So many are written and so few ever see the light of day. An English playwright with a gift of humorous exaggeration illustrated this fact once. He told me he submitted a play to a celebrated actor, and how in the course of the conversation the actor remarked:

"'Don't you think this room is rather cold?'

"'It is rather cold,' the young playwright admitted.

"Then the actor rang and a servant appeared.

"'James,' he said, 'put three more manuscripts on the fire.'"

Will A. McConnell writes from London: Flo Ziegfeld has been a busy man since coming abroad. He has arranged for an appearance in London for three months of Anna Held in a revival of her American successes; is now negotiating with the management of the Moulin Rouge, Paris, which he will run on American lines. On May 20 he will sign papers for a tour of England, France and Germany for the season of 1906-1907 of Grace Van Studdford and her American company. She will present "The Red Feather" and at least one new opera. Ziegfeld has had nothing but prosperity on this side. His winnings at Monte Carlo were over $120,000, not stage money, but real coin, which was deposited in the Bank of England. This did not break the bank at Monte Carlo, but it put a dent in it.

Charles Frohman has only got four great big knock-out successes playing in London at this writing. These are "The Catch of the Season," with Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss, at the Vaudeville theater; "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," with Ellen Terry, at the Duke of York's theater; "Leah Kleschna," with Charles Warner and Lena Ashwell, at the New theater, and William Collier in "The Dictator" at the Comedy. It is a case of sell-out nightly at all four of these houses and will be until August. Charles Frohman, by the way, has not had one faildown in London this past year, and not likely to have as long as he controls the services of real authors.

Ben Greet and his "Everyman" players received a shock one day—in literary Boston at that—of which he tells as follows:

"'Everyman' was playing in Boston. The house was full and the play just begun. Everyman in his somberness and Death in his ghostliness were on the stage when a lady sitting in the stage box suddenly remarked to her companion in a voice perfectly audible to the actors: 'And which do you suppose is Foxy?'

"'Needless to say, we were mystified until we remembered that 'Foxy Grandpa' was playing in the theater next door. The lady on her way to see it had mistaken the house and entered the wrong one."

"The Heir to the Hoorah," Paul Armstrong's new comedy, now in its sixth week at the Hudson Theater, broke all records of receipts at that handsome playhouse last Saturday night when the box-office statement showed the receipts to be $1,746.50. The best previous house known at the regular Hudson prices was registered by Mr. Harris' own star, Mr. Robert Edeson, in "Strongheart." Mr. Edeson played to $1,704—the full capacity of the house at that time.

Tommy Ross's wish is coming true at last—he is to play "Checkers" in Pittsburg. For years before he ever dared dream of being a star, he was one of the bright lights and odds-on favorites of the best stock company in the smoky city. When he went away there was weeping and wailing and all that sort of thing among the discerning matinee maidens, and Tommy himself was so homesick that for many weeks after he smoked nothing but "tobies" and clung lovingly to his habit of changing his collar three times a day just as if he needed to.

Then his hit in "Checkers" made a star of him and Tommy's cup of joy was running over. Before long, however, he realized that one more thing was needed to make his happiness complete and that was to play "Checkers" in Pittsburg. But here was where the kindly fates fell down. One date after another was booked only to be switched and ever since the play's first time, more than two seasons ago, Ross has been impatiently waiting for the elusive Pittsburg engagment.

It has come at last, and not for the customary one week that the big shows devote to Pittsburg, but for two weeks and at the handsome and pre-eminently first-class Nixon theater at that.

It is notable that most of the real successes of the season have been of plays produced by managers who are not members of the theatrical trust, which organization's component parts have been hit hard now for two seasons, while they are at the moment the targets for legitimate criticism of the press from one end of the country to the other for their mismanagement of the great institution they have seized, says the Dramatic Mirror. Their hold on the theater may as a result of press demands be officially inquired into, if it is not loosened by interests which they have abused and which must act at last for self-preservation. The outlook is serious not only for the ring, but for all concerned in the theater, for it is plain that the trust's operations have inspired a distrust of the theater on the part of the public that it would take honest and equitable administration, with a natural variety of enterprise, a long time to remove.

Frank Campeau, who plays the part of Trampas, the cattle rustler, in "The Virginian," says that he contemplates writing a book called "Deaths I Have Died," as during his career as a stage villain he has been killed in at least forty different plays, though in not quite so many different manners.

Rose Coghlan tells a story of a beggar who was certainly ready with an answer: "I was on my way to the theater," said Miss Coghlan, "when I was stopped by a street beggar, who told me that he had just lost his family in a railroad wreck and asked me for help.

"'But aren't you the same man who told me the other day that you had lost your family in a fire?' I asked.

"'I know it, mum,' he replied. 'I am one of the most unfortunate gintlemen on the face of the earth.'"

William H. Turner, who appeared here in the title role of "David Harum," is now playing with the Albee Stock company of Providence, R. I. He will star next season in his old success, "David Harum."

Mexico City is to have an English theater. Miss Beryl Hope is to take a company there this fall and will open the Renamiciento theater. She intends to have a repertoire that will please both Americans and Mexicans alike.

Robert B. Mantell is to revive Shakespeare's "King Lear" next season and will continue in "Othello," "Hamlet" and "Richard III."

"THE ACCOMPLICE," a Novel of Mystery,
By Frederick Trevor Hill.

"The Religion of Duty," By Felix Adler.

"An Embarrassing Orphan," By W. E. Norris.

"The Motormaniacs," By Lloyd Osbourne.

"The Ultimate Passion," By Philip Verrill Mighels.

"The Breath of the Gods," By Sidney McCall.

The author who places the scene of his narrative in a court room has at his command a very thrilling situation; one in which every important event is placed in a strong light; in which there is great opportunity for surprising disclosures; in which even an audience is present to intensify the reader's excitement by the feeling that his suspense is shared by an invisible company. By giving this setting to a novel the prized dramatic element is at once secured, and the action of the story may then proceed in as orderly and as striking a manner as if on the stage without straining the reader's imagination or being in the least unnatural or melodramatic. It takes, however, marked ability to conceive a plot sufficiently well knit and complex to stand the strong light which from first to last is turned upon it during the unveiling process with which such a story is concerned. It is for the skilful way in which Frederick Trevor Hill has interwoven every thread of evidence, so that each bit contributes to the effect of the final disclosure without giving even a hint as to its nature, that makes "The Accomplice" noteworthy among recent publications.

Of Mr. Hill's ability to handle a legal story there can be no question, since the author has been for sixteen years an active and influential member of the New York bar, and in the course of his practice has dealt with some of the most important civil and criminal cases. In writing this novel, however, Mr. Hill purposely omitted all technicalities which might vex the ordinary reader. If he is accused of ignorance of the law and of technical sins of omission and commission, he pleads an alibi, for it is the foreman of the jury and not the author who describes the Shaw murder trial. The whole story is told from the point of view of the layman in the jury box, unskilled in the refinements of the law. Mr. Hill had to rely on his observation and imagination, however, in depicting the feelings and sensations of a juror, for lawyers in active practice are not allowed to act as jurors, and Mr. Hill has, therefore, never had the opportunity of occupying a juror's seat, though he has had very good opportunity for observing and studying them. He has been engaged in several important litigations, and has witnessed many famous or infamous criminals tried, and knows the technique of the law, even if the jury foreman, through whom he tells the story of the Shaw murder trial, may not.

In his new novel, "The Ultimate Passion," recently issued by the Harpers, Philip Verrill Mighels has used fact and genuine incident with amazing frequency. There are ten telegrams quoted in the novel, all of which were taken directly from the originals. They were sent and signed by two of the most powerful and notorious characters ever developed by American politics. One of these great bosses is now dead. The other still lives, and will recognize his telegrams should the book be brought to his attention. That his interference with legislative affairs at Albany should thus have "leaked," not only from the Western Union office, but now to the public, through the medium of a novel, abounding with incidents founded quite as directly on fact, will cause him no little surprise, and doubtless many stronger emotions. The telegrams are quoted verbatim, the only omissions being those of a few names and the names of the senders.

McClure-Phillips this week brought out Felix Adler's new volume, "The Religion of Duty." This latest book by the founder and leader of the Ethical Culture society gives to the ideals and principles of the ethical culture movement the most complete and rounded expression they have yet had. The book is composed of selections from the written and spoken addresses of Prof. Adler, and the excerpts have been edited by Leslie W. Sprague, who has grouped them under the following headings: "First Steps Toward Religion," "Changes in the Conception of God," "The Teachings of Jesus in the Modern World," "The Religion of Duty," "Standards of Conduct Based on Ethical Religion," "The Ethical Attitude Toward Pleasure," "The Ethical Attitude Toward Suffering," "The Consolation of the Religion of Duty," "The Essential Differences Between Ethical Societies and the Churches." Mr. Sprague has acquitted himself well in the work of eliminating those features of the spoken address that would be out of place in print, and of arranging addresses delivered in various years in such a manner as to give continuity and organic sequence to the thought implied in the title of the volume.

There is a vivid Japanese coloring in "The Breath of the Gods," the new novel by Sidney McCall, author of "Truth Dexter," published by Little, Brown & Co. The heroine is Yuki, a Japanese girl, and many of the strong scenes are laid in Japan. But there is no sacrificing of the dramatic story to an attempt at exposition; Japan is not an aim, but an incident. The local Asiatic color is used as spontaneously as was the Southern color in "Truth Dexter." And yet it is in the sidelights which the author throws upon the manners and customs of the Asiatic islanders, their tenacity of their social and religious ideals that a great service has been rendered. It has been remarked of many books on Japan, even recent ones, that they give little to explain the extraordinary phenomenon, recently disclosed, of Japanese endurance, resourcefulness and heroism. In "The Breath of the Gods" these traits are the very terms in which the story is told. In brief, it may be said of the book that it brings together adequately, in natural, dramatic unity, vital elements from that East and that West which, in the shrinking of the world, are so fast becoming one.

A clever girl who has had an unconventional bringing up is always certain to be interesting. In "An Embarrassing Orphan," from the pen of W. E. Norris, a well-known English writer, the orphaned daughter of an erratic African mine owner causes her staid English guardian no end of anxiety. The warp and woof of this story manifests in its life-like design a familiarity with what is most interesting in English life and in English character and shows the master touch of "an artist in words. Elsie Britton is placed in charge of her British uncle, Sir Edward Denne, who is bound by a promise to her dying father not to reveal to Elsie or to any one else that she is an heiress until after her marriage. Major Denne, Sir Edward's nephew, the manly, handsome officer so dear to the British imagination, is clearly intended by Providence to fall in love with Elsie, but he hesitates because he is poor, and Elsie, who with the true British feeling that he ought to marry money in order to rehabilitate his estate, encourages him in his hesitation, thinking it noble self sacrifice to thrust him into the arms of a wealthy and designing widow. The plot thickens when a French uncle of Elsie's turns up and begins to play the villian. Learning of Elsie's fortune he succeeds in arranging a marriage between her and his son. He intercepts letters, sends false telegrams, holds Sir Edward prisoner on an island, and does everything a French villian might be supposed to do. But the gallant Major comes to the rescue just at the right moment, the honest Britisher gives the scheming Frenchman a bit of his mind, explanations are made and all ends happily. "An Embarrassing Orphan" is published by the John C. Winston company, Philadelphia.

In all the volumes of religious comment which have been issued there has never been a satisfactory work on "Revelation." One of great promise is now announced by the Baker & Taylor Co., under the title of "The Unfolding of the Ages." This is by Dr. Ford C. Ottman. Not strictly a commentary, this volume nevertheless interprets sanely this difficult book of the Bible. Dr. Ottman has spent twenty years in the study of Revelation.

Five volumes have been issued by the Bobbs-Merrill Company in their series of novelettes and short stories, known as the Pocket Books. They are "The Amethyst Box" and "The House in the Mist," by Anna Katharine Green; "The Princess Elopes" and Enchantment," by Harold MacGrath; and "The Motormaniacs," by Lloyd Osbourne. It will be interesting to see which of these little 75-cent books turns out to be the most popular, for they all seem to start with equally fine chances of success. "The Motormaniacs," which has just been issued, is a collection of automobile yarns, and it is hard to tell which moves the more rapidly, the Manton car, which is Mr. Osbourne's protagonist, or the speed of the narrative.

In reviewing A. Cahan's "The White Terror and the Red" recently published by A. S. Barnes & Co., the London Athenaeum is led by the truthfulness of the story to class it as "Russian fiction written from the inside." Mr. Cahan has been a resident of New York for many years, but it is evident that he has kept his knowledge of Russia, although he is an American citizen, since the Athenaeum "recommends this engrossing story to those who wish to study the Russian history which is being made today."

How the report of a fire in Milan is sent in double-quick time to the 700 Associated Press papers throughout this country; how the story of an important fire in Chicago or New York reaches news agencies at every important point in Europe; how in the home offices automatic sending machines and a curious system of abbreviations expedite the work of news-gathering and dissemination—these are some of the interesting points covered by Melville E. Stone in his article in the June Century on "The Associated Press." The thousands of daily readers of Associated Press dispatches cannot fail to follow with interest this authoritative recital of how the Associated Press is able to comb the earth for everything happening of interest, and to present it to the newspaper reader with almost incredible speed.

Judging from the names in its table of contents, the first issue of the new magazine, Tales, goes far to justify the claim of its sub-title—"A magazine of the world's best fiction." Sixteen out of the seventeen stories in the number are translated from various European languages. Of the nations represented France leads, with seven stories; then comes Germany with four, and Russia, Sweden, Italy, Spain, Hungary and America, with one each. The authors that appear in this number are "Gyp," Anatole France, Maurice Donnay, Alfred Capus, Georges Maurevert, Jean Reibrach, Max Fischer (French), Arthur Schnitzler, Rudolf Stratz, Ernst von Wolzogen, Baroness von Heyking (German), Maxim Gorky (Russian), Mathilde Serao (Italian), Daniel Fallstrom (Swedish), Emilia Pardo Bazan (Spanish), Stephan Tomerkeny (Hungarian), and James Huneker (American). Of these writers at least a dozen are widely known outside of their own country, and many of them would appear in any list of the greatest living authors of fiction. Fourteen of the contributions are short stories. In appearance and make-up the new magazine is creditable. The cover is a striking design in yellow and black, on a gray background, while the typography and paper are excellent. With 160 pages of reading matter—equivalent in length to about two average novels—Tales gives the largest quantity of high-class fiction of any magazine in the world. Published at 2 West Fortieth street, New York.

In "Deserts, Dynasties, Dust," Jerome Hart furnishes an interesting article for the Argonaut of May 22. His description of travel on the desert is entertaining, and his satirical lament over the large amount of advertising space going to waste is very amusing. That part of the article devoted to recent discoveries in Egypt by antiquarians is of particular interest.

"The Gambler," the new novel by the author of "The Masquerader," which is runing serially in Harper's Weekly, is continued in an interesting instalment in the current (May 27) issue of the Weekly. Another feature of this issue is an authoritative article on "Health Conditions in the Canal Zone," by Col. W. C. Gorgas, United States army, chief sanitary officer on the isthmus, in which it is shown that the yearly death rate in Panama is lower than in New York, Philadelphia and Washington. W. G. Fitz-Gerald writes of the remarkable Alpine maneuvers of the Swiss army. The story of the career of Sir Charles Dilke, which forms a tragic chapter in English politics, is sympathetically told by Sydney Brooks. Nelson Lloyd's entertaining serial, "The Memoirs of J. Madison Mudison," is continued, and, in addition to the regular editorial "Comment," the usual news, literary, scientific, theatrical and humorous features are presented in picture and text.

GILBERT H. GROSVENOR.

Mr. Grosvenor is best known, perhaps, as editor of the National Geographic Magazine,—the membership of the National Geographic society having increased, since his association with the magazine, from 1,000 to 5,000. He is still a young man, less than 30; but his articles have attracted such attention that the secretary of agriculture has recognized their value in the work of the department. Mr. Grosvenor's articles on "Our Heralds of Storm and Flood" in the June Century will be the first of a series upon the scientific work of the department of agriculture.

St. Paul, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The St. Paul municipal court was reversed by the supreme court yesterday in the case of J. M. Leitsch vs. the Northern Pacific Railway company. Leitsch sued the railway company and got a judgment. The supreme court today held that an assignment cannot be enforced against a debtor after his discharge from bankruptcy as to wages thereatfer earned by him.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians Addressed to Charles H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. Wm. L. Bosserman, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I am pleased to speak a good word for your Castoria. I think so highly of it that I not only recommend it to others, but have used it in my own family."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. I. McCann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. Channing H. Cook, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used your Castoria for several years past in my own family and have always found it thoroughly efficient and never objected to by children, which is a great consideration in view of the fact that most medicines of this character are obnoxious and therefore difficult of administration. As a laxative, I consider it the peer of anything that I ever prescribed."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

FAIRBANKS WILL SPEAK AT FAIR

Vice-President Will Represent President Roosevelt At Opening Exercises of Lewis and Clark Exposition Next Thursday — The Fair Is Now Completed — It Has Many New Features.

Portland, Or., May 27.—Vice President C. W. Fairbanks, as the personal representative of President Roosevelt, will make the principal address at the opening exercises of the Lewis and Clark exposition next Thursday morning, June 1. President Roosevelt himself will participate in the opening by pressing a golden key at Washington, which will set in motion the wheels in the Machinery, Electricity and Transportation buildings, and start the chimes in one of the twin towers of the Government building, which will peal forth the mellow strains of "America" as a signal to the world that the Western World's fair is opened.

The fair has been ready for nearly two weeks, and not a detail will remain unfinished when the president presses the button next Thursday. The preparedness of the exposition is characteristic of Western spirit, which dominated the movement to hold a great exposition in a city of 140,000 inhabitants, and a state whose inhabitants totaled less than half a million.

The Lewis and Clark Centennial and American Pacific Exposition and Oriental fair commemorates the exploring expedition of Capts. Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, who, with a band of hardy followers, discovered an overland route to the Pacific ocean, just 100 years ago, and by so doing gave Uncle Sam a claim on the Oregon country, a territory of 307,000 square miles' extent, which at present includes the states of Washington, Oregon and Idaho, and generous slices of Wyoming and Montana. The fair is to be the exponent of the progress and resources of this vast territory, which is one of the richest agricultural, mineral and timber regions in the world. The population of the Oregon country has been growing very rapidly for the past fifty years, but there is still room for hundreds of thousands of people who, it is claimed, will find life easier and more pleasant in this new country, where there is neither frostbite nor sunstroke, where a man may make a living without a struggle. The men who have promoted the fair expect a great many people from the East, and think that many of these, when once they have seen the Oregon country, will decide to spend the rest of their days in the West.

All trains entering Portland leave their passengers at the Union street station. From there, a short street car ride, on Fifth street, leads to Washington street, one of the principal business thoroughfares, and by transferring, one may go direct to the exposition grounds, which are situated in the western part of the city, distant about twenty minutes' ride from the Union station.

A short street, once devoted to residences, but now occupied entirely by booths and stands, which, in many cases have been made by tunneling under houses, leads from the car line to the main entrance to the exposition. On either side of the entrance gates are the Administration and Fire Department buildings, with big projecting wings, which extend inward like pointing fingers, and inside the gates, perhaps 100 yards back, is a beautiful colonnade of Ionic pillars. It was intended originally that the entrance gates should be between the pillars of this colonnade, but the fair outgrew the plans.

Of the nine large exhibit palaces, five—forestry, oriental exhibits, foreign exhibits, agriculture and manufactures, liberal arts and varied industries—stand on a plateau overlooking Guild's Lake, the exposition's surpassing water feature, with their short ends facing the lake. Columbia court, the central feature of the fair, occupies the space between the foreign exhibits and agricultural buildings, and from it the grand stairway leads to the music shell on the shore of the lake. The music shell will be used as a speaker's stand on opening day, and there will be room for thousands upon thousands on the terraced slope.

The view from Lakeview terrace, at the top of the grand stairway, is one of the most attractive features of the fair. Below lies Guild's lake, a beautiful body of water of 220 acres. The Lake Shore esplanade, a broad walk over the water, which extends a distance of nearly a mile from a group of state buildings in the eastern part of the grounds to the American Inn on the extreme west, crosses the Bridge of Nations, an ornate structure of wood and staff built in imitation of solid masonry, which spans the lake and connects the mainland with the government peninsula, on which the six magnificent government buildings are located. The near end of the bridge, which is called the Trail, is the amusement street of the fair.

The government peninsula appears to the eye to be a verdure-covered island, on which the gleaming white government buildings stand like moated castles. Beyond the peninsula and the lake lies the Willamette river, and in the distance four snow peaks, Hood, St. Helens, Adams and Rainier, pierce the sky line. To the west of the grounds, the green foothills of the Cascades reach down to the exposition fence.

The fair site is a natural park, and everywhere, except, of course, where the buildings stand or the walks and roads occupy the space, there is green grass, with a great deal of shrubbery, especially in Centennial Park, a natural woodland in the western part of the grounds, where there are delightful winding paths, with rustic benches on which one may rest, and steps of logs at every slight ascent. Over the whole grounds, in plats and singly, there are thousands of rose bushes—a total of 15,000—and these are all in blossom, making the place gay with their vivid colors. The exhibit buildings and the state and maunfacturers pavilions and other structures stand close together so that there are no long walks to weary the visitor.

While in a general way like earlier Fairs, the Lewis and Clark Exposition is in many ways quite different. This is natural, for the fair is held for the purpose of advertising a section which is different from any other part of the country. The Forestry building is a structure unique in exposition history. The mountains which may be seen from the grounds are as far superior to the papier mache imitations at St. Louis as the orange you eat for breakfast is to the wax orange that used to grace every mantel shelf. On the Trail there is a great structure, which looks in some ways like a roller skating rink. It is perhaps larger than your city hall at home. This building holds the Klondike mining exhibit, and in it mining methods in the Far North will be shown; $10,000 worth of gold will be cleaned up in the wash every hour. More than twenty other buildings contain attractions on the Trail.

On Guild's lake there will be realistic life-saving drills by actual lifesavers in the employ of Uncle Sam. There is plenty of room in Guild's lake for a real rescue. In the Agricultural building there are, besides the canned tomatoes and the "fifty-seven varieties" and the baby food displays, prunes as big as peaches, that give the lie to the boardinghouse joke which classes them with hash. Then there are apples which are far bigger than those that grow in the back yards at home, and much redder and more luscious than those in the barrel in the cellar at your house. Oregon apples are packed in boxes, and bring as good prices as oranges.

In the Mines and Metallurgy building there are exhibits of Oregon gold ore. Since 1861, when a party of emigrants left a blue bucket to mark a place in Eastern Oregon where they found a soft yellow metal, there has been $200,000,000 worth of gold taken from Oregon mines. In some parts of Oregon the residents raise crops in the summer and dig gold in the winter. For the purpose of investigating a black sand which is quite common on the Pacific coast, the United States government has built an annex to the Mines and Metallurgy building, and the experiments which will be carried on there are likely to prove that this black sand is the world's greatest mineral source.

But the Forestry building is the most wonderful of all. The building is in the form of an immense log palace, which covers half a city block. The logs that compose it, which were cut in the nearby forests, are as thick as a man is tall. Any one of them contains enough lumber to build a cottage. The building is constructed after no particular architectural style, but is nevertheless an architectural triumph, since in its sturdy simplicity, its solid strength, it is typical of the mighty forests of the Oregon country, which are estimated to contain 300,000,000,000 feet of timber. The building adjoins a beautiful little canyon, with the foothills of the Cascades as a background. Its location is characteristic of the good taste which characterizes the Western World's fair and makes it different from other fairs.

Crookston, Minn., May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Duluth lost the first game to Crookston yesterday and the exhibition while not devoid of errors, was one of the most sensational ever played in this city. It was anybody's game till the finish. Dorn pitched shutout ball, but there were eight errors made behind him, and every run made by Duluth was scored on errors. Harris also pitched good ball, allowing but eight hits, but the locals managed to bunch them.

Olson did the banner stick work, making three hits in four times up. He also carried off the honors in the error column, making two costly ones, two runs being scored on a fly he dropped in deep left field.

Long's work with the indicator was rank, but his wretched decisions were equally divided. His balls and strikes were fierce, and both teams were robbed of bases. The Duluth infield was much faster than Crookston's, though O'Dea and Weiler did some clever booting.

TIGERS WIN AGAIN.

Fierce Exhibition of National Game at Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Even the one-sided score does not adequately express the rottenness of the game at the ball park yesterday afternoon, when Grand Forks pounded "Lefty" Hanson for nineteen safe hits for fifteen scores, while the elongated, $40-per-month twirler from Hamline held Fargo's alleged heavy swatters down to ten hits and an octet of scores.

The slaughter began early and remained till late in the game. In the first, with two men down, Anderson attempted to steal second and Alberts had him by the usual mile, but Mehl dropped the ball. Three runs resulted before the side was retired. In the second Grand Forks went it one better. There was a cessation of hostilities till the sixth, when the visitors made another pair. In the "lucky" seventh they got busy and added a quartet of unnecessary scores, and in the ninth two more were posted up for good measure.

Fargo got one in the first, two more in the second and skipped to the seventh, where one more was secured. In the eighth Saunders thought things were so easy that he let up and four runs came over.

It was a fearful exhibition of what the national game should not be. Hanson got disgusted with his support and the alleged fact that the umpire would not give him the corners and quit dead cold. He lobbed the balls over and assisted the visitors in fattening their batting averages.

Caldwell failed to secure a safe hit, but the others got from one to four each.

BLOOD

On account of its frightful hideousness, Blood Poisoning is commonly called the King of All Diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it the disease may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, Rheumatic Pains, Stiff or Swollen Joints, Eruptions or Copper Colored Spots on the Face or Body, little Ulcers in the Mouth or on the tongue, Sore Throat, Swollen Tonsils, Falling out of the Hair or Eyebrows, and finally a Leprous-like Decay of the Flesh and Bones. If you have any of these or similar symptoms, get BROWN'S BLOOD CURE immediately. This treatment is practically the result of life work. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicines of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity. Soon every sign and symptom disappears, completely and forever. The blood, the tissues, the flesh, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health, and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life. BROWN'S BLOOD CURE, $2.00 a bottle lasts a month. Made by DR. BROWN, 935 Arch St., Philadelphia. For sale in Duluth only by Max Wirth, 13 West Superior Street.

POISON

The first three-sackers of the season were made, Rose and Smith each securing one, Rose also doubled and Hanrahan registered for an extra base in the first.

Out of all the swatfest only one of Grand Forks' runs was earned. The score:

NEW BOATS COMING

Four New Eighteen-Foot Sloops Are Due to Arrive.

Will Form Class By Themselves In Yacht Club.

Four new boats of the eighteen foot sloop type will arrive in Duluth today consigned to members of the Duluth Yacht club.

The boats will be owned by Commodore H. Johnson, Fred Smith, John McAlpine and F. C. Marshall.

Two others are due to arrive later. They have been purchased by Commodore Johnson for other members of the club.

The new boats will form a new class by themselves. Feather, Scud, North Wind and the other boats of the one design class of last year, are twenty-eight feet in length, while the new boats are only eighteen feet. The new ones are very shallow, light craft, designed for speed, and they should furnish plenty of genuine sport without danger in the winds that are met with in the harbor.

The boats were built at White Bear lake by the same builder who constructed the St. Paul boat that came to Duluth last year and cleaned up everything in the local harbor.

This addition to the club's fleet should double the interest in the racing game in Duluth, and the opening of the regular weekly club races, is looked forward to with increased interest.

The work on the new club house is coming along nicely and it will be ready for occupancy within a very short time. It is going to prove a handsome and cosy structure. There is one large room which can be used for dancing, should occasion arise, and the lounging room for the club members will be fitted up in a very attractive manner for the "piazza" sportsmen.

TO GO AFTER CANADA'S CUP

Chicago Yacht Club to Try For International Trophy.

Chicago, May 27.—A determined effort to bring the Canada's cup back to Chicago will probably be made by the Chicago Yacht club in 1906. The members of the organization have indorsed the plan and yesterday Commodore Wilber announced that he has received assurances that at least one challenger will be built to fly the club's pennant.

The decision to try for the cup is conditioned upon a victory this year by the Royal Canadian Yacht club of Toronto. The trophy is now in the possession of the Rochester Yacht club, and the Canadians are to make an attempt to take it across Lake Ontario in August. It is now certain that a delegation from the local club will witness this series and challenge promptly if the Northerns win.

The subject was brought up at the meeting of the club this week. The attention of the members was called to the fact that the cup race has become practically an annual duel between Rochester and Toronto, and is in danger of losing its international and intersectional characteristics. The two organizations have had the cup between them since 1901, and the result has been that interest in it has materially lessened. It is the purpose of the club to revive, if possible, some of the old-time enthusiasm.

The trophy was originally given by the City of Toledo for a match between the Canada of the Royal Canadian Yacht club and the Vencedor of the Lincoln Park Yacht club of Chicago. The series was sailed at Toledo, Lake Erie, in 1896, and was won by the Canada.

Afterward the owners of the successful boat deeded the cup to the Toronto organization, to be held by it as a perpetual challenge trophy for yacht clubs of the Great Lakes.

The Royal Canadian Yacht club was not called upon to defend the Canada's cup until August, 1899, when the Chicago Yacht club was the challenger. Both sides threw the preliminary competitions open to other clubs, the result being that theGenesse of Rochester defeated the Beaver of Toronto in the final struggles.

The Rochester boat sailed in the name of the Chicago Yacht club, and the trophy came here. It remained until 1901, when the Invader took it across the line again by defeating the Cadillac in a notable series. Since then none of the races has been in this vicinity and local yachtsmen have lost interest in the cup.

BASEBALL MANAGER

How He Earns His Salary And Aids the Team.

Earns Every Cent of the Thousands Paid To Him.

If ever a man who has an income of some $10,000 or $15,000 a year earns it, that man is the baseball manager. For, let it be known right here, he is the really big man of the national game.

Cut him out of it and the magnate would simply be a manufacturer or a wholesaler, unknown to fame. Without the manager, the most famous of pitchers would be compelled to give up the box for the corner billiard room, perhaps. Have none of him, and there would positively be no opportunity for the small office boy to plead a few hours' leave of absence of an afternoon that he might pay fitting respect to the memory of an uncle who died day before yesterday. In short, no manager, no national game.

Therefore, every right-minded fan in the land who knows the circumstances will vote that the manager earns every cent of the thousands of good hard dollars that are paid over to him by his respective magnate for some six months of work with a team each year.

The manager earns his money in a thousand and one different ways; but a good part of his hire is unquestionably his because he is filled with the spirit of aggressiveness; and has the knack of imparting much of it to the various members of the team under his thumb; for that is where the manager who knows his business has his aggregation from the opening of the training season until the last game in the race for the championship is over.

Catcher Roger Bresnahan imagines that, to play up to his usual standard, he must have an end berth on the sleeping car when his team is making a jump; and as "Scrappy" McGraw is held to be one of the most famous of present day managers, Breshahan invariably gets his end berth. There is a Western player who would undoubtedly sulk for a week if his manager denied him the privilege of walking first out of the clubhouse to the players' bench. Still another nurses the delusion that the presence of his blooded bull pup materially helps him to swat the ball over the fence into the wilderness. Every player has his own pet humor, fad, fancy or superstition, and the manager, because it costs nothing to humor it, and keeps the man in fighting trim, always has a ready and sympathetic ear in this matter.

While on the diamond the manager, of course, takes advantage of every opportunity which is presented to him of stimulating team aggression. His keen eye observes that one of his players has a tendency to listlessness; straightaway that man is told in simulated anger and in the most picturesque and expressive language at his manager's command that he is fit only for the stable; with the result that all listlessness is swallowed up in anger—just what the manager desired to a rouse—and the player goes to the bat determined to swat the sphere so hard and far that the umpire will have to toss the pitcher a new one.

Or the manager knows that another player is somewhat of a hypochondriac. Just before it is his turn to go to the bat the manager walks up to him and gives him a resounding whack on the back.

"Lord!" he exclaims, "but you're looking in fine fettle today. You go out there, now, and make at least a two-bagger."

And the player forgets all about his imaginary ills and does as his manager commands.

The sporting pages of the newspapers are daily used by the manager to further the aggressive spirit.

"Going to win the pennant? Bah, what a silly question to ask me," a manager is reported as saying. "Of course we are going to win the pennant. No sane man can figure it out any other way. What if we are only fourth now? That doesn't argue anything except that we are just beginning to strike our gait. You just wait a few days and see where we will be—mighty close to the top, I can tell you. And then it will be us for the first place in blinkety short order."

"Guff—hot air—rag chewing—stiff jolly," the fans may describe the interview on reading it; but not so the players. No matter how dark their chances for the championship honors, they one and all catch some of the public enthusiasm and confidence of their manager, and instantly respond on the diamond, because two of the factors of aggressiveness, as everybody knows, are confidence to do a thing and enthusiasm to go at doing it.

In his formal and informal talks with the team and its various members, the manager generally unflinchingly declares that victory is surely going to be theirs. "Only, boys," he cautions, gravely, "you must not let me make you over-confident, and so cause you to slacken up. To win we've got to keep at it, you know—everlastingly at it. Boys, it would break my heart if I thought what I've said would cause you to lose the championship, which is already yours for the asking."

He coaches the youngsters and puts them with the stars for months, that they may unconsciously absorb baseball knowledge. He releases and secures new players and is alone responsible for the team's organization. He arranges the Southern trip, and he gets the men together. He sees that the team has an ample supply of spheres; he furnishes the players their bats; he keeps posted on the needs of his men; he decides what players shall be taken on a trip and those to be left behind.

He selects the ground keepers. He gives instructions where the base line path is to be built up and how the pitching box is to be altered. He makes it a point to provide a solid back-ground for the batsman. He raises a mighty howl about cigar and whisky and other advertisements in the grounds, which are so placed that their glaring colors, confuse the eyes of the players as they are chasing the ball or trying to swat it for a home run. And he is not an Al manager unless he is an adept at taking advantage instantly of his opponents' weaknesses.

All the while that he is doing all these things and humoring the oddities of the men he is giving heed to a pet superstition or two of his own. Perhaps he believes, as did "Buck" Ewing, that, if his team is to do its best, he must keep walking all the time that the game is in progress. Or, he feels certain that all chances of winning a game would disappear if once he removed his cap from his head after leaving the clubhouse. Or, he feels squeamish every time he spies a white horse driven by a mulatto, while on his way to the grounds. His superstitions are many, and that manager who has not one or more is a very rare manager, indeed.

ASSASSIN ARRESTED.

Baku, Caucasia, May 27.—The man who assassinated Prince Nakachidze, governor of Baku, Wednesday afternoon by throwing a bomb at his carriage, was arrested yesterday at the Hartisoff factory.

DUMMY IS USED

Stationary Rowing Being Tried By Boat Club Members.

Strenuous Efforts Are Necessary to Get Crew Into Shape.

If pulling vigorously at an oar on the dummy shell fastened to the float in front of the Duluth boat house, while being coached in no uncertain manner as to how the work should be done, will turn out a winning crew, the Duluth oarsmen will walk away from their competitors in the regatta to be held in Duluth in July.

The dummy was rigged up this week and the members of the awkward squad will be put through the goose step in it, under the direct supervision of the coaches, before being turned loose in the shells. Every man will learn the stroke thoroughly in this way and will prove his ability to the satisfaction of the coach before being graduated.

It is the best possible way to learn the rudiments of the game and the coaches are anxious that it be used as much as possible by the club members.

If the Duluth club is to make any showing against the St. Paul and Winnipeg crews, nothing but constant training between now and the date of the regatta will do it. The visitors will be experienced oarsmen, and nothing but a well trained crew will stand any show against them.

There is plenty of material in the Duluth club, if the members will turn out regularly. There are a dozen or more of the members who have taken up the practice with energy, and are allowing nothing to stand in the way of the nightly work in the shells. Next week the coaches will endeavor to get as many more likely candidates to settle down to work, and this will give all the material needful.

The members of the boat club are indebted to the Commercial club for the handsome prizes which have been presented for the regatta races. A silver cup has been donated for the winning eight, and twelve medals which will go to the best junior and senior four and the junior and senior doubles.

It is up to the club members now to keep as many of the medals as possible from crossing the border to Canada, or even going as far as St. Paul, and the cup would also look exceedingly well adorning the mantel in the club house.

ARE HOLDING TRACK MEET

Interclass Field Day Being Held at Driving Park.

This afternoon the interclass field meet of the Duluth high school is being held at the Driving park.

The meet is for the purpose of selecting the track team that will be sent to Ironwood to take part in the five-cornered meet between the high schools of Ironwood, Ashland, Superior and Duluth.

The interest in track sport is keen this spring, and the students expect to see some of their records broken this afternoon.

The complete list of entries was published in The Herald Thursday evening.

INSPECTING GOLF LINKS

Committee From State Golf Association Is In Duluth.

The committee from the State Association of Golf Clubs will be in Duluth this afternoon and tomorrow and will inspect the grounds of the Northland Country club with a view to deciding upon what changes are necessary before the state tournament is held here.

The committee consists of one member from each club in the association. There are nine clubs in all, and the committee, therefore, is composed of nine members.

It is not likely that more than five of these members will be here tomorrow, including the Duluth member, C. D. Thompson.

They will go over the links of the club and will suggest whatever changes they deem necessary before the grounds are in proper shape for the tournament. When these changes are made the association will then name the Duluth grounds as the place for the tournament to be held, and the Duluth club will fix the exact date, which will be some time during July.

It is not thought likely that many changes will be deemed necessary, as the grounds are now in excellent condition and will compare favorably with those of any club in the state.

THE DIAMOND—PUGILISM THE TURF—ATHLETICS

WOMEN AND BASEBALL

Their Mighty Influence Over the National Game—A Romance In Which a Pitcher and a Bank Clerk Played Leading Parts.

So you think that woman doesn't take a very lively interest in the national game? Well, she doesn't jam the bleachers to the breaking point, that's a fact, and she doesn't throw aside her work to see a game, and she doesn't talk the slang of the fan for half the year, to the entire exclusion of plain, every-day English. But because she does none of these things pray don't make the mistake of holding that she has no heart in the good old sport of baseball.

For the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that exercises over the game an influence far more potent than that which the thousands of fans imagine they have on the professional ball tossers of the land.

Scoff at the female baseball nines that rise up from time to time if you will, but do not forget that the players have sweethearts and wives, lest thereby you show great ignorance of your favorite game. In them lies the influence that woman has over the diamond—an influence that ere now has decided not only single games, but series of games and championship contests as well.

Naturally, wherever woman is concerned there is also romance. One of the most interesting bits of romance connected with the national game has a certain National league pitcher whom we shall call Jack Smith for its hero. It is vouched for by Charles W. Murphy, assistant secretary of the New York National league club, who knew the pitcher concerned intimately, and saw the game played that had such an important bearing on the lives of three persons.

Smith was one of two ardent suitors for the hand of a pretty and vivacious young lady of the town whose team he served. His rival was a bank clerk, a decent sort of chap, and as often as Smith pleaded with the object of his affections to make him happy forevermore by saying just one little word the clerk would put in a similar supplication. But the girl could not choose between them, and the more they pressed to hear their fate the more undecided she became.

* * *

"STRIKE," YELLED THE UMPIRE.

Now this young lady, although she was the daughter of a Methodist minister, was an enthusiastic baseball fan and never missed a game when she could help it. She was so skilled in the ways of baseball that she even knew the hieroglyphics of scoring and could give many a man points on keeping a score card running. Therefore, it was but natural that when the time came around for the championship series in which Smith's team was competing she was aglow with excitement. And when it came to the two deciding games and she learned that Smith was to pitch her ardor was so great that she told him then and there she would marry him if he won the games.

Smith fairly outdid himself in the first game, and though the other side put up a grand contest, he won for his team by a score of 3 to 2. But sad to relate, the following afternoon, when it came time for his team to take the last turn at the bat in the ninth inning, the score was in the other side's favor, standing 2 to 1.

As Smith's mates took their places one after another at the bat his chances of getting that girl grew slimmer and slimmer. Finally, when it came his turn to go to the bat this was the situation: Two men out, a man on first, and a man on second. It was decidedly up to Smith.

Smith was a fair hitter for a pitcher—average 270—and he took hold of the stick with a confident air.

The star pitcher of the opposing team let fly the sphere.

"Strike!" yelled the umpire.

Once more the ball curved Smith's way and dropped gracefully as it reached the plate.

"Strike two!" yelled the umpire.

Then the man in the box went wild.

"Ball one!" sang out the umpire, and twice thereafter his refrain was the same.

The bleachers were delirious, when crack! and a line ball went sailing out in the direction of the centerfield—and not until Smith had smilingly crossed the home plate did he learn that Harry Blake had caught the sphere in his left hand after a heart-breaking sprint after it up a steep embankment.

In the meantime a little tragedy had taken place in the grand stand. No sooner had it suddenly dawned on the thousands of spectators that their team was beaten than a certain pretty and vivacious young lady, who had been a close observer of the game from the start, toppled over in her seat in a dead faint, and a certain young man, who was known to his friends as a bank clerk, rushed gallantly to her assistance.

For two weeks thereafter this young lady was in a quandary. At last she sought out her father and told him the story. When she had finished the good man said:

"Choose the one you love, daughter."

"Then it is Jack!" she cried; and that night she said for once and for all the one little word that has made him happy ever since.

A year after they were married the bank clerk heard how Smith had won his bride. His only comment was, as he set his jaws:

"I wish I had known that the day of the game."

THE CASE OF BILL LANGE.

Not infrequently a sweetheart's or a wife's objections to the game cause a star to forsake the diamond for work for which he is not fitted in the least degree, and at which he makes only a living at best.

Bill Lange is a case in point. Up to five years ago he was one of the best ground coverers in the profession, and as a batsman had a high average. From the day of his wedding his wife kept at him to leave the game, urging him to take the step on the ground of personal safety. Bill reasoned with her, and told her time and again that he knew of no other job for which he was fitted and at which he could make $4,500 in six months. But Mrs. Lange was obdurate, and so, when his last season closed Bill ruefully announced to his manager that the diamond would never know him again. And it has not, though he has annually been tempted by numerous flattering offers. "I have given my word to my wife," he says, simply, "and so long as she feels as she does about the game, I shall not take up the bat."

Sometimes, after she has kept her husband off the players' bench for a while, a wife will relent, release her spouse from his promise and gleefully applaud him as he once more scampers on to the diamond and is given a rousing welcome by the fans.

Such a lucky man is Howard, who plays with the Pittsburgs this season, Dreyfuss having traded three players for him with the Omaha club of the Western league.

Howard, McGinnity and Taylor of the champion Giants, and Bob Wicker of the Chicago Nationals, were formerly team mates on the Mattoon, Ill., team. Howard, at the time, was only 19 years of age, but even then he had great prowess as a batsman, which McGinnity fully realized later on, after they had separated, when in one game Howard got two home runs and a three-bagger off the Iron Man, who leads the pitching record.

Shortly after this feat Howard took as his wife the daughter of a prominent citizen of a central Western town. They had scarcely settled down after their honeymoon when Mrs. Howard began pleading with her husband to give up the game, naming as a reason that she had a strong dislike for it and did not want her husband associating with professional ball players. She was so insistent that finally Howard reluctantly severed connections with the game, and secured employment selling agricultural implements.

But he did not give up all hope of returning to the diamond. During the months that he was engaged in telling farmers of the merits of his particular make of wheat drills and mowers he spent his spare time endeavoring to get his wife interested in baseball. At first it was hard and slow work and had to be accomplished diplomatically, but little by little he progressed to the point where Mrs. Howard would accompany him to the games. Then Howard explained every play made, told her about the players, introduced them to her, and made her acquainted with the women folk of the players who were in the grand stand.

* * *

THE INFLUENCE OF MOTHER.

At the end of four tedious years his work of education bore fruit. Mrs. Howard came to him one day, confessed that she had changed her mind about baseball, declared that she would rather have him on the diamond than an agent for farm implements, and further caused him great joy by appending that he couldn't get there quick enough to suit her. So it came about that in the season of 1904 Howard led the Western league in batting, his batting eye not having been dimmed in the slightest by four years of disuse.

Every possessor of inside information of professional baseball can tell of some player he knows who really owes his baseball reputation to his mother. Such a one is John ("King Bid") McPhee, who for years was the famous second baseman of the Cincinnati Reds.

Prior to his entry into the ranks of the professionals McPhee was a bookkeeper for a lumber concern of Akron, O. He was not enamored of the work; he was of baseball, and when he got a chance to take it up seriously he went to his mother for advice. Sensible woman that she was, she told her son to accept the offer by all means, if he felt sure that his career was on the diamond; and to emphasize her attitude she and some of her intimate friends accompanied McPhee to the grounds the day he was to make his debut.

There is no need to dwell on the miserable exhibition that the mother saw her boy, unnerved by his new surroundings, put up. Suffice it to state that as second baseman he made four errors, his fingers were as butter, and their owner the particular mark of the disgusted fans. Small wonder, then, that when McPhee boarded a car to return to his hotel he was sick at heart.

The car was crowded and everybody except the new player was engaged in discussing the game. Pretty soon a man of florid complexion and a rotundity that was amazing to behold shouted, so that all the car heard:

"Well, of all the rottenest stiffs I ever saw that new second baseman is the worst!"

That settled it in McPhee's mind—he would never appear again on the diamond.

Once at his hotel he burst into his mother's room and told her of his decision. She smiled on him, got him quieted in a way known only to mothers, then by degrees cheered him up and finally extracted from him a promise that he would try again.

He did try the following afternoon, and he played such a magnificent game that the bleachers rose up en masse and called him blessed, to the quiet satisfaction of the mother, who was in her seat of the day before.

* * *

WOMEN IN THE BUSINESS.

That night, on his way to the hotel, McPhee chanced on the car that was carrying the florid man with the ample paunch to his dinner. But this time his song was different.

"Did you ever see such a wonder?" he asked enthusiastically of everybody, and before he had got off at his street he had praised the new second baseman to the fullest extent of his powers.

A quarter of an hour later McPhee walked into his mother's room.

"Mother, I am going to stick to baseball," he said joyfully, and leaned over and kissed her.

He stuck to it for seventeen years, and in all that time whenever her boy's team played in the Queen City, she sat in the same seat which she had occupied on the day when he made his heartbreaking debut.

Perhaps the two women who have been identified with baseball more than any other member of their sex are Miss Caylor of New York and Miss Mary Sullivan of Cincinnati.

Miss Caylor is the confidential clerk of President Harry C. Pulliam of the National league, and is living evidence of the falsity of the statement that a woman cannot keep a secret. Miss Caylor knows all the baseball secrets of her employer and, since he is head of one of the major leagues, they are by no means few. There is no one living who can say that he ever obtained an inkling of treasured information from Miss Caylor.

Besides being conversant with all the daily transactions of the National league's business, Miss Caylor is thoroughly posted on the legislation of baseball and knows the details of organization to the minutest degree. When President Pulliman is absent she runs the headquarters without a hitch.

Miss Sullivan was for twelve years the assistant business manager of the Cincinnati Reds, keeping the books and handing out the checks. During these years she displayed wonderful business sagacity, and was the idol of the Queen City ball tossers.

TOPPLED OVER IN A DEAD FAINT.

A POSSIBLE COMPLETION OF THE VENUS STATUE.

FRANCE TO SEND MORE SHIPS TO INDO-CHINA.

Paris, May 27.—Marine Minister Thomson announced at a cabinet council here yesterday that he had arranged to send the Second division, consisting of twelve small warships, to Indo-China. The departure of this division will take place in August. It will consist of two submarine boats, four dispatch boats, having torpedo tubes and six first-class torpedo boats of light draught, chosen for the shallow waters of the coast of Indo-China. The division will reach Saigon in November, where it will join a similar divison sent last year, thus largely augmenting the naval strength of France in the Far East.

SLUMP OF BOSTON

Is Good Thing For American League, Says Murnane.

Tail-Enders of Last Year Are Making Great Strides.

Boston, Mass., May 27.—In my opinion it will be many years before one will again see such a complete revolution in baseball after one month's play as that which overtook the American league this season, and if continued for another month would mean large profits for the weaker clubs.

Those clubs slated to the lead are no doubt very much disappointed at not getting a better start, while the clubs marked for the tail end are delighted to be considered as the real thing and in the hunt. To be in the lead of the champions of the world is no mean stunt, and seven clubs of the American league were delighted with this sensation this season.

Looking the field over calmly I cannot see why the champions have not the stuff to once more carry off the honors. I have been accused by one man from Ohio of sticking to the has-beens too long, and he advises me as a friend to hang my wagers on Jake Stahl's Senators. Advice is cheap, and I find that the fans are fickle and never reason out the conditions that a club is laboring under.

While Boston, Cleveland and New York look just as good as ever, and I may add Chicago, I must say that the New York Giants have already spoiled the fun in the National league race.

Pittsburg is the only club with anything like a chance to hold the Giants, and the Dreyfuss boys are continually being put out of action, which shows the team is breaking up and is badly in need of strong timber. It will be a wise man indeed who can dope out the leading performers with the stick this season, with Lajoie, Wagner and other good ones falling off, while rather medium hitters are to the front. The sluggers are tied up, while the bunt and all-round hitter has all the best of it.

With the assistance of Manager Frank G. Selee, the Chicago National league club has given Frank Leonard, manager of a Lynn independent club, a weak opportunity to fight the National agreement, and, having a lawyer conected with the Leonard outfit, a lawsuit has been entered against three people, viz.: T. H. Murnane, J. C. Morse and T. F. McDermott. The ground for the suit is that after the Chicago club had agreed to go to that city and play a game with the independents on Tuesday, May 9, they were prevented from fulfilling their engagement on account of the interference of the above named individuals. The facts of the case are these: Fall River was scheduled to play a game with the Lynn club of the New England league at home on that date, and was surprised to find that Chicago was coming to that city to conflict with a National agreement club.

The attention of the Chicago club was called to the facts, and learning that it was about to injure the property rights of the New England league gagement was immediately called off. Mr. Selee claimed to have the consent of the Lynn club although all he had to show was furnished by Frank Leonard, and this he accepted without properly notifying the president of the New Englan league. Manager Selee claimed that he sent a telegram to this person several days before, but could furnish no trace of same, and then said perhaps his boy at the Chicago grounds failed to send the message. When Manager Selee arrived in Boston he was shown the schedule made out months before, and observing the Fall River was booked for Lynn, declared: "I have been deceived and will call the game off at once. Outside the president of the New England league no other party was familiar or had anything to do with notifying the Chicago club of their position.

For the benefit of minor league clubs who may be placed in like position hereafter I will give just enough reasons to cover the point, without furnishing the more solid reasons from national agreement. The second object of the preamble to the national agreement says:

"Protection of the property rights of those engaged in baseball as a business without sacrificing the spirit of competition in the conduct of the clubs."

Article 3 says: "Each party to this agreement retains the right to conduct its affairs and govern its players according to its constitution and by-laws."

The national agreement in another clause covers the point more fully, and no one was more familiar with the meaning of the agreement than President James A. Hart of the Chicago club, or President Harry Pulliman, who promptly wired Manager Selee not to play the games until after receiving full consent of all parties interested.

I have gone into this matter for the benefit of the minor league clubs of the country, who should know their rights under the national agreement, a document built for the protection of the game, and to hold in check unscrupulous managers who are forever being chased from one city to another. I have been agreeably surprised at the hold organized ball has gained in this Massachusetts shoe town. Lynn is only ten miles from Boston, with a 10-cent fare, so that the American league games are well attended by the lovers of baseball from that city. Naturally these people welcome the New England league, with regularly scheduled games, thereby receiving liberal advertising for their city, for what advertises a town any more than a club in a regular league? The national agreement is to baseball what the sun is to man's health.

Secretary Farrell of the National association has forwarded me a copy of the charges preferred against Howard C. Griffiths by President Ban B. Johnson, with a request that I forward my views on the matter. All other presidents of minor leagues, about twenty-five in number, no doubt have received copies, and the combined views should make interesting reading, as the evidence contains some strong situations and has names of two National league magnates.

I cannot quite understand the idea of asking for the views of the different minor league presidents unless it is for the purpose of getting a line on the board of strategy. It's only too plain to see that there was a well-laid plot to disturb the combination in control of the national agreement. It is plain that failure crowned the spasmodic efforts of the prime movers in the scheme. With the crack of the bat the game on the field overshadowed the politics, and at least on the surface all is serene at present. The Class A leagues are not a unit on the policy mapped out last winter, so that a change of attack must be made to be effective, and little can be done in this line at the present time.

President Johnson comes out on this communication and says that his offer made to the minors at the last New York meeting is the very best the American league will ever consent to, and he is ready and willing to take up arms and fight all comers to a finish on that issue. President Harry Pulliam is on record as saying the National league will stick to the pledge to fulfill every letter of the national agreement. Therefore, those who have figured on breaking away must be willing to fight the two able executives of the National and American leagues, while P. T. Powers, president of the Eastern league, comes out boldly and says his league will stick to the agreement come what may.

HANDICAP WON BY PRETENSION

Winners of Other Races In Friday's Turf Events.

Louisville, May 27.—The free handicap at Churchill Downs yesterday was won by Pretension, which beat Stroller, the favorite, after a hard drive through the stretch. Copperfield was the only favorite to win.

Kansas City, May 27.—The fourth race at a mile and seventy yards, the feature at Elm Ridge, was only a gallop for Lelia, the prohibitive favorite, which took the lead shortly after the start and won easily from Darah Maxim and Helgerson. Dr. Roberts was much the best in the first race and won with ease. Gleeman came with a burst of speed in the stretch and got the place from February Blue. Agnola, at liberal odds, took the second race. Jurist was second and Reuben, the favorite, poorly ridden, was third. Dr. Roberts and Lelia were the winning favorites.

St. Louis, May 27.—The fair grounds' track plainly showed the effects of Thursday's rain, but despite adverse conditions, form was in evidence in all the races. The feature of the card was the fourth race, a six furlong handicap, which was won by J. P. Mayberry at 10 to 1.

In the steeplechase of the American Jockey club yesterday, Weird fell just after the last jump, pinning her jockey, Gormley, under her and breaking his leg. At the time of the accident Weird was in a commanding position. After the race and while being led to the stable, Browday dropped dead upon the track. The steeplechase was the ftature of the card and was won by Buck O'Dowd.

New York, May 27.—Long-priced horses had an inning at Gravesend yesterday, winning five of the races. Last Cherry, backed from 5 to 1 to 9 to 5, was the only winning favorite. Right and True played down from 10 to 1 to 6 to 1, scored an easy victory in the Patchoge selling stakes, the feature of the card. Right and True went to the front at the start and making the pace won by three lengths.

HISTORIC SAYING

Of John L. Sullivan When Defeated By Jim Corbett.

National Pride Strong In Big Man of the Ring.

San Francisco, May 27.—"I'm glad that the championship remains in America," said John L. Sullivan as he stood at the ringside after being defeated by Jim Corbett.

"I'd get back into the game in a minute if some foreigner defeated our best man and tried to walk off with the title," said big James J. Jeffries a few days ago.

The same old sentiment seeking utterance after a lapse of thirteen years shows plainly that national pride is strong in these big men of the fighting game.

But Jeff does not dream that a bruiser from lands across the sea will ever establish a right to laurels which go with supremacy at the sport of the glove. Of course, he does not list Bob Fitsimmons as a foreigner. He considers that the freckled farrier has cut loose from everything in the line of early associations except his strawberry hair and his sunspots and is now part and parcel of this great commonwealth.

They had been telling Jeff about "Gunner Moir of England and Bill Squires of Australia just before he spoke of the remote contingency that might bring him forth once more from the privacy which enshrouds the life of a country gentleman.

"I don't know anything about Australian Squires, but judging from the heavyweights they have turned out there within the past ten years, I should imagine that he does not amount to a great deal," said Jeffries. "I think I have a pretty good line on the Englishmen, though. When I was over there a few years ago I filled an Englishman at the Royal Aquarium and I boxed with a fresh heavyweight every night. There wasn't one among them who amounted to a hill of beans. If I happened to jab one of them a little harder than usual the master of ceremonies would say for my benefit: 'Remember, gents, this is h'only h'a h'exhibition,' and of course, I would apologize and play lighter. I don't think they have a good man of any size in that country, and I doubt if they have had one since Charlie Mitchell ruled the roost."

The jig is up; the die is cast; the fiat has gone forth; the inevitable has happened.

John L. Sullivan and Charlie Mitchell have signed to box 15 rounds up in Tacoma in September. As the articles do not contain the reservation "if we are both alive," it is to be inferred that the two venerable plies are feeling quite coltish and are looking forward to smiting each other full score.

And how they are working it up. Every once in a while word comes from the North that it is only by the exercise of vigilance that Charlie and John are kept from falling upon each other tooth and nail. The promoters are just swearing themselves out trying to delay the day of reckoning until the old-timers meet in the ring. One night someone shouted "Chantilly" when Sully and Mitch were within a few yards of each other, and it looked for a few seconds as if the rotund rivals would bump together and explode.

How innocently John L. tells of the way he is rounding to form. He is taking off 40 pounds of weight at a clip, according to his telling. At this rate of going he wil be able not only to toe the scratch, but see it.

Well, by their wallops ye shall know them. If the two patriarchs of pugilism are simply embarking in a little commercial venture for mutual gain, they had better sidetrack all that bogus bitterness and make a clean breast of it. Their meeting would then attract attention on account of its historical significance, whereas it would simply invite derision if exploited as an athletic event.

But if by any chance one or the other or both of the men should be in earnest, what is likely to happen? Sullivan a few months ago weighed close to 300 pounds. He says he will weigh about 215 when he faces the Britisher. The removal of so much bloat would mean that Sullivan's vitality would be at a low ebb when he stood forth to box.

If allowed to sit on a raised platform and to sell pictures he might pass muster as a boost for some get-thin-quick mixture, but to fight! Ridiculous. A little excitement and a very little exertion would reduce him to a condition when a punch from that well preserved Englishman might be fatal.

Won't somebody please stop it or else make them confess that they are merely going to indulge in a little sketch entitled "Back From the Boneyard?"

An attempt to corner amateur boxing has failed, apparently. The Hawthorne club, which, with other clubs, was put out of business when the grand jurors called a halt on the four-round contests for which this city had become infamous, tried to have a new ordinance recommended for passage by the police committee of the board of supervisors. It differed from the old ordinance mainly in that it withheld from the local branch of the Amateur Athletic union the right to pass upon the amateur standing of the fighters who figured in the contests. The substitute ordinance was so worded that the Hawthorne club was about the only one of the local organizations privileged to handle these "amateur" shows.

The committee postponed consideration and the scheme has failed. Now it is said that the "amateurs" will crowd to the Colma club, down in the meadows, a few miles over the county line. The influence of the city fathers does not extend to this point, and it is believed that the A. A. U. officials will be powerless to cope with the civil.

The purpose, as I understand it, is to give Saturday night shows. These short bouts are very popular, and if the promoters will not insist upon calling them "amateur contests" it is probable that a thriving industry can be worked up in the green fields of San Mateo.

AGILE'S FOUR WINS

This Season Make His Total Earnings $29,652.

Lexington, Ky., May 27.—The noted 3-year-old colt Agile, winner of the Tennessee and Kentucky derbies and the Phoenix Hotel stakes, is one of a bunch of yearlings Capt. S. S. Brown purchased of Col. E. F. Clay, Runnymede stud, in the summer of 1903 at a private sale for $25,000, an average of $3,125 each. Counting Agile's four wins this season, including the above three stakes, the son of Sir Dixon has earned in 1905 a total of $16,045, and added to this his earningc as a 2-year-old last year of $13,607, he has won on the turf the sum of $29,652, or $4,652 more than he and his seven companions cost Capt. Brown as yearlings. Four of the other youngsters Capt. Brown secured in that sale have also won brackets in his colors, they being Thirty-third, Wayward Lass, Lord Dixon and Druid, and the Pittsburg turfman considers that one of the best paying investments he has made in horseflesh in years.

Agile comes from the No. 24 family of the Bruce-Lowe figure system and is considered the best horse that has come through the Penola branch of that family since the days of Harry Bassett. Alpena, the dam of Agile, is a half sister to Penn P., a colt well remembered by old-time turfmen, as in 1898 he won the Turf Exchange, Quick Step and Alexander Stakes, and was considered the best 2-year-old in the West until the motel El Rio Rey crossed his path. Agile's great-grandam, Penelope was a half sister to Canary Bird, the dam of Harry Bassett. Alpena now stands well up in the ranks of broodmares, as in Alpen, winner of the National Stallion stakes, and thirteen other races and $29,781, she produced another good horse. Alpena is also the dam of five other race winners in Tradition, Hackmeister, Alva, Albis and Izeyl, and she is therefore destined to become one of the best producers of recent years. Another mare which now looks like a bargain and which was purchased by Dr. J. C. Carrick of this city at the dispersal sale of the Melbourne stud in the fall of 1903, is Josephine, a full sister to Alpena. She is two years younger than the dam of Agile, and has to her credit a good winner in Janowood, which won both as a 2 and 3-year-old. Josephine cost Dr. Carrick $275.

FIGHTING HAS ENDED.

Cetinje, Montenegro, May 27.—The fighting between Mussulmans and Christians in the villages of Baritze and Krupitsze and Kossova, Alabania, has ended, and there is no probability of further trouble.

The Neglect of Private Diseases
Dangerous!

MANY MEN afflicted with ailments peculiar to their sex, too often go on unmindful of their condition, ignoring every calling symptom, until finally their disease becomes chronic and they collapse, physical, nervous and mental wrecks. Others, knowing, or having a vague idea of their immediate case, but ignorant of attendant and resultant complications dabble and experiment with this and that "patent cure," until their condition becomes menacing to their future well-being. Some succeed in temporarily allaying and sometimes apparently curing their case only to have it break out again in later periods in chronic forms they do not understand, and many times to their embarrassment and remorse. Many Gonorrhoeal cases have resulted in malignant cases of rheumatism simply through neglect and ignorance of the cause, which otherwise would have promptly disappeared had the case been treated properly by one who understands such cases. The Progressive Medical Association is the most reliable place in the Northwest to treat the Private Diseases of Men. Our practice is very extensive. We have the confidence of the entire community and abundant resources to back up our claims of an absolute and lasting cure. We do no experimenting. Our treatment is thorough. If you are troubled in any manner with private diseases, do not delay seeing us. You are welcome and invited to free consultation and examination, and if we take your case we will guarantee to treat you till you are cured for the one fee.

The visit of the Norwegian students to Duluth next week will be the greatest event in Norwegian circles in many months. They are among the finest chorus singers of the world, and everywhere they have appeared have won instantaneous success. In Paris the people fairly went wild over them and in America their trip has been a triumphal one. In the chorus will be found a number of men who are known to Duluth Norwegians who have come within recent years from the old country. These will rejoice at the opportunity of renewing their acquaintance.

The concert will be given at the Lyceum theater Tuesday evening. The program includes some of the most cherished gems of Scandinavian song literature. The Scandinavian people of the whole country are alive with enthusiasm and the telegraph tells of the presenting of silk flags and embroidered banners to the students, and of Chicago crowning the director with a laurel wreath of solid gold. WHAT IS A "PORT?"

Inland States Have Ports As Well As Coast States—Ports Where a Birch Bark Canoe Could Not Float—A Constitutional Question That Effects Government Making of Railway Rates.

Washington, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ask the first man you meet what a "port" is, and he will almost certainly answer, "Why, a port is a harbor," and he many add, "I mean, of course, a harbor used for business."

But he would not be right; that is, not legally right. There are ports which are miles from sea, lake and river. The United States treasury department publishes an official list of ports, containing nearly 250 towns and cities representing every state in the union except Nevada, and including such completely inland localities as Pembina, North Dakota; Atlanta, Georgia; Denver, Colorado; Dayton, Ohio; Peoria, Illinois, and scores of others. Thus there are ports in corngrowing Western states where it would be difficult to find water enough to float a birch bark canoe; ports which receive no craft but prairie schooners; ports in regions where people have been born and brought up who never saw a ship, never heard the ocean waves breaking upon the beach, and never ate an oyster, except in the pickled state.

Just now, the question of what constitutes a port is one of great importance. Upon the exact meaning of the word depends a constitutional question, involving the whole subject of government-made railway rates; and every man ought to know what a "port" actually is.

The treasury department calls a port any place at which a customs officer is located, or to, from or at which goods may be exported or stored in bond. Thus the Western farmer, driving his white covered wagon, the schooner of the prairie, to the market town where there is a customs officer and a bonded warehouse, is bound to a port in the eye of the law, as is the captain of the coastwise schooner dodging from harbor to harbor alongshore. James B. Dill, a lawyer of high standing, evidently considers this interpretation correct beyond question. "The word port in the constitution," says Mr. Dill, "of course means now what we would call markets or commercial centers."

The connection between this definition and the matter of railroad rates is this; A clause of the constitution of the United States reads: "No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to ports of one state over those of another."

If the interstate commerce commission or some other official federal body is to determine the rates charged for railway transportation, the exercise of this function is, in the opinion of many men learned in the law a regulation of commerce governed by this clause of the constitution. This is not the view of Attorney General Moody, who has rendered his opinion that any regulation of land transportation, exercised, would seem to be so indirect in its effect upon the ports that it could not constitute a preference between the ports in different states. It is a case where the lawyers disagree and the result would be, should any general rate legislation be enacted, that the doubt and uncertainty as to its effect would be increased until this matter caould be settled in the courts. Mr. Dill points out the numerous independent factors in the transportation of wheat, most of which are beyond the reach of government control and concludes:

"Until the federal government shall effectively control all ocean freight charges and all prices in foreign markets it must of necessity by fixing rates of freight by rule among the states prefer the "ports" (markets) of one over those of another."

Mr. Dill, in other words, assumes that governmental rate fixing would prove unconstitutional because of the impossible task of adjusting rates to all these hundreds of ports without preference. The magnitude of the task which would thus be imposed upon any tribunal was appreciated by the members of the first interstate commerce commission, whose successors are now demanding that the rate-making power be entrusted to them.

"It (the commission) would, in effect, be required to act as rate-makers for all the roads. This, in any considerable state, would be an enormous task. In a country so large as ours, and with so vast a mileage of roads, it would be superhuman. A construction of the statute which should require its performance would render the due administration of the law altogether impracticable."

If the courts held that a rate-making commission could operate only in a way to avoid preference to the ports of one state over those of another, it is difficult to see how any system of rates could be devised other than the adoption in all parts of the country of a flat mileage rate on all freight transported, so much for every mile for every ton of freight hauled, whether up grade or down grade, by direct or circuitous routes, when there are ample return freights or when there are none. Even without the provision of the constitutional restriction this would be the ultimate tendency, as the advocates of governmental rate-making have admitted, but they have claimed that the change would be brought about gradually and without and violent shock to the welfare of the country's industries.

Congressman Sibley, who represents an agricultural district in the agricultural state of Pennsylvania which yearly grows more corn than Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota or several other Western states lying in the corn belt, and more wheat than Indiana, Illinois, Iowa or any but six Western states, served notice of what may be expected when the government begins to fix the rates.

"When you establish the principle that the government shall make a rate," said Mr. Sibley to his colleagues of the house, "we living in the East will not permit you, through government operation, to charge us 50 cents a hundred and at the same time allow a rate of 40 cents a hundred from the Mississippi valley in order that you may export your corn."

Here is the issue brought to bear on the commodity just as it would be raised on every commodity in every part of the country as soon as the government rate-makers began their work. It has long been the policy and practice of the railroads to aid in the movement of the great grain crops to Eastern anl European markets by granting very low rates on through freight of this character. Recently the roads have been carrying corn from Kansas City to New York for 13 cents a hundred pounds, almost exactly the same rate that is charged from Congressman Sibley's own town of Franklin, Pa., or from New York's wheat-growing district in the Genessee Valley, although the latter points are only one-fifth as far distant from New York as is the former. The Kansas City rate is an exceptional one and is not remunerative to the railroads, but they hold that there are business reasons which justify it.

The advocate of government rate-fixing points the way out of the difficulty by saying: "Lower the local rates." Here again the constitution interposes with its prohibition against the confiscation of private property, a provision about which there is no difference in the minds of the lawyers. The rate must be reasonable to the railroads, that is, it must be high enough to afford a fair profit. Though the local rate were lowered a cent or two it would not remove the inequality. The only way in which it could be removed would be by increasing the through rates and making them all proportional on the basis of distance.

what number is wanted and connects the two lines. She has not knowledge of the nature of the conversation; her business is confined to enabling one subscriber to talk with another. The operator at the private branch exchange, on the other hand, is often able to assist persons whose calls she answers. The girl at a switchboard in a department store might, perhaps, be described as a telephone floor walker, for when a would-be customer, speaking over the telephone, is found to be ignorant of the department to which he should apply the operator promptly sets him right.

The well-trained, intelligent and tactful operator at the office switchboard is becoming, no less than the stenographer, indispensable to the 20th century business man. She is almost a graduate of a special school for operators, and has usually served an apprenticeship of two of three years at the central office. As work at the private exchanges is generally less arduous, and hours shorter it is preferred by the vast majority of operators.

The convenience, one might truthfully say necessity, of the private exchange is so generally recognized that there are few large residences in New York where one is not installed or at least a system which is a very good substitute for it. When, for instance, the butler or some other servant answers a telephone call he can by merely turning a switch summon the master of the house in his study or the mistress in the drawing room. More than that, it is now possible to take the telephone to bed with you. Houses are equipped with portable sets of instruments which may be connected with the lines leading to anyone of a number of rooms. Such systems are especially popular with physicians. When the doctor retires at night he disconnects the wires attached to the transmitter and receiver and carries the apparatus upstairs with him, places it on a stand beside his bed and inserts the plugs at the ends of the wires into sockets in the wall nearby. The physician may have a transmitter and receiver combined in one piece which he holds in his hand in such a way that the receiver is pressed against his ear while the transmitter is close to his lips. This device is very light and is fitted with a small ring by means of which it may be hung to a hook on the side of the bed.

A CREAMY FOOD

Scott's Emulsion is cod liver oil prepared as a food—not a food like bread or meat, but more like cream; in fact, it is the cream of cod liver oil. At the same time it is a blood-maker, a nerve tonic and a flesh-builder. But principally it is food for tired and weak digestions, for all who are fat-starved and thin. It is pleasant to take; children like it and ask for more.

A CREAMY FOOD

Scott's Emulsion is cod liver oil prepared as a food—not a food like bread or meat, but more like cream; in fact, it is the cream of cod liver oil. At the same time it is a blood-maker, a nerve tonic and a flesh-builder. But principally it is food for tired and weak digestions, for all who are fat-starved and thin. It is pleasant to take; children like it and ask for more.

THE DUTIES AND SALARIES

Of Forest Reserve Employes and Mode of Appointment.

Washington, May 27.—The bureau of forestry nas published a circular giving information regarding employment on the national forest reserves. This circular explains how appointments to the forest service on the reserves are made, states the salaries of its members, and indicates the knowledge and experience required of rangers and supervisors at $1,800 to $2,500 a year, deputy forest supervisors at $1,000 to $1,700, forest rangers at $1,200 to $1,400, deputy forest rangers at $1,000 to $1,100, and assistant forest rangers at $900 to $900.

The law requires that every applicant for a position in the forest service pass a civil service examination. Legal residence in the state or territory in which employment is desired is generally necessary, since only where examinations fail to secure thoroughly satisfactory men are vacancies filled by the examination of applicants from other states. Appointments of supervisors are made, so far as practicable, by promotion of competent rangers or forest assistants.

To be eligible as forest ranger the applicant must be physically sound, accustomed to outdoor work, and know how to take care of himself and his horse in regions remote from settlement and supplies. He must know something of surveying, estimating and scaling timber, lumbering, and the livestock business. Some of the reserves require a specialist in one or more of these lines of work. The applicant must be thoroughly familiar with the region in which he seeks employment. The entire time of rangers is to be given to the service. Rangers, under the direction of the forest supervisor, patrol to prevent fire and trespass; estimate, survey, and mark timber, and supervise its cutting; issue mining permits, build cabins and trails, enforce grazing restrictions, investigate claims, and make arrests for violation of reserve laws.

Forest supervisors must have all the qualifications of rangers, combined with superior business and administrative ability. They deal with the public in all matters connected with the sale of timber, the control of grazing, the issuing of permits, and the application of all regulations for the use and occupancy of forest reserves. Knowledge of technical forestry is desirable, but not essential.

Work upon the forest reserves offers good and increasing opportunity for men of the right sort. Requests for information about the times and places when and where examinations will be held should be addressed to the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Improvement Reported In Retail Trade, Though Weather Is Bad.

New York, May 27.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Improvement is reported in retail trade, although weather conditions are still far from ideal and excessive rain retards agricultural progress sufficiently to cause conservatism among dealers; yet confidence in the future is the prevailing sentiment, and leading dry goods jobbers are unanimous in anticipating a large fall trade. Manufacturing plants are busy, especially in heavy steel lines, except where usual repairs are being made or seasonable closing is necessitated. Shoe factories find difficulty in starting work on fall footwear owing to numerous supplementary spring orders, and there is little idle machinery in textile lines, which feel the impetus of advancing raw materials. Building operations make favorable comparisons with recent years, and there is little controversy regarding wages or hours of labor. Foreign commerce at this port for the last week shows little change in comparison with the same period a year ago, exports decreasing $221,775, while imports gained $300,956. Railway earnings thus far reported for May exceed those of a year ago by 8 per cent and after falling to the lowest point of the year prices of securities recovered materially. Money is abundant and easy and commercial payments are more prompt in most sections of the country.

In the iron and steel industry there is great activity on old orders, and general confidence in a vigorous demand during the second half of the year, but current buying is extremely light, except in a few departments. Hence the mills and furnaces are more active than the markets just now, which explains the apparent contradiction of reports. In steel rails and all other railway supplies and heavy lines for buildings and bridges it is often impossible to secure shipment with sufficient promptness, while pipe and tube mills have orders well ahead, but in some other divisions the situation is less satisfactory and more effort is being made to secure foreign trade. Coke follows the quiet tendency of pig iron, ovens closing as stocks accumulate. No diminution of strength is noted in raw wool, and the mills are also correspondingly firm in their views. Worsteds continue in greatest favor, but woolens are not far behind.

Tanners have exhibited no interest in the Chicago hide market during the past week and as a natural result quotations show a downward tendency. The depression extends to imported dry hides. Western country hides are relatively firmer than other divisions of the market. Leather continues quiet.

Failures this week numbered 211 in the United States, against 226 last year, and nineteen in Canada, compared with seventeen a year ago.

CHRISTIAN STUDENT

Conference In Belgium Was Well Attended.

The conference for Christian students at Zeist, Holland, just closed, was attended by delegates from thirty countries, some men coming from as far as Japan, China and Australia. They represented associations and unions in 1,800 colleges and universities, and a membership of 103,000 college students and professors, united together as the World's Student Christian Federation, with more than half of this membership from the college Young Men's Christian Associations. This was a council in many ways like the council assembled in the time of William the Silent, but its scope embraced the entire world of educated men and women. The expansion in ten years since the first meeting, when six men represented a few movements, to the present date, when the eleven movements with 125 representatives met, has been tremendous. This is especially shown in the influence on the characters of the members of the colleges and universities. It has been instrumental in leading fully 3,000 of its members to become foreign missionaries, who are now on the field, and hundreds more are to follow. This conference, like the Paris conference, reaffirmed its purpose "to lead students to become disciples of Jesus Christ as their only Saviour and their God."

In the general committee meeting there was the frankest kind of criticism of one movement by another, and differences were talked out without irritation. Misapprehensions were removed, and the conference got together on the definition of such questions as conversion, about which there were naturally differing views in different countries, which were more in statement than in fact. University associations of Holland and Scandinavia are conducting popular camps for high school boys, such as were undertaken in America several years ago. The college association at Assiut, Egypt, has a missionary volunteer band of seventy-nine men.

The reviews of the conditions of student life in Russia and Latin countries were appalling, and the appeal for the advancement of associations in these countries came with fully as great force as those for the so-called "heathen countries" which have always been regarded as objects of missionary attention. The 47,000 students of Russia were said to possess no moral foundation, and Christianity had no hold upon them. America was urged to send them a secretary.

In South America, outside of the missionary colleges, there are not forty Christian students out of nearly 70,000 enrolled, and not more than three in any one college. The older students living in clubs in the vicinity of theaters and the lowest sections of the cities are noted for their immoral lives, while gambling and daily lottery ticket buying are universal. These are without vital religion or even a pretense of religion.

The best discussion on Bible study—its value and methods—was presented by a Japanese. The Bible classes of the Japanese universities and schools are of the largest value in teaching the Christian religion.

Perhaps the most striking appeal was made by the delegates from Macedonia and Bulgaria, who said the students were swept away by socialism, atheism, materialism and indifference, and the only religious instruction was given by men who openly scoffed at it.

This Christian student movement was started by the Young Men's Christian Association, and John W. Mott, secretary of the American associations and the foreign movement, is its secretary. He was the leading figure in this conference.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Chicago Record-Herald: An Ohio bishop advises preachers to wear red coats in their pulpits, if by so doing they can get people to go to church. Why red coats? Wouldn't green or blue of yellow do? Fashion decrees that red coats should be worn only on golf courses.

Baltimore American: Mr. Rockefeller predicts a church trust governed by the methods of the Oil trust. With a corner in religion, there can be no further talk of tainted money, but a Standard Oil church is rather above the range of magnificent audacity of imagination even for the advanced business progress of the times.

Chicago Tribune: "Let everybody either come inside or go home," said the Rev. Sam Jones in beginning a recent sermon. "Don't sit out there and yawp like a lot of buzzards. Those that have any sense will come in and find seats. The idiots will please get off the grounds." If this gentle admonition didn't bring the yawpers inside, nothing could have done it.

Chicago Chronicle: Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth. Here is the Gladden-Rockefeller blaze becoming a roaring conflagration, the flames of which are fed by most of the Congregational preachers in the country. If half the ecclesiastical energy wasted in this matter were devoted to the saving of souls, the devil would have the liveliest time he has had for many a day.

UNWELCOME GUEST.

Col. Greene's Joke on Landlord of Hotel.

New York, May 27.—The Ansonia hotel here is sheltering a distinguished guest from New Mexico. He arrived there last night, and attracted no end of attention in the hotel. He is a protege of Col. William C. Greene, the copper king, and has large, airy quarters on the roof of the hotel.

The new arrival is a 3-months-old bear of the silver tip variety. Col. Greene has been hunting. On his arrival yesterday he called W. E. D. Stokes up on the telephone.

"Say, Stokes, I've got a present for you," he said. "It's a fine bear cub. He'll make a bully pet for you at the Ansonia."

"Pet, eh?" came back over the wire. "No, sir; you just give that bear to some other enemy. Don't bring him near me or there will be some shooting. Give him to Tom Lawson."

"Too late now to stop his coming," said Col. Greene. "But don't get scared. He's only about as big as a yearling calf. Why, he's so tame and nice he'll come right up and eat off your hand—or even your leg."

If anybody wants to see the unwelcome bear he is to be found on the roof of the Ansonia. Col. Greene is the only person in the hotel who has the courage to feed him.

BURGLAR,

Released, Calls to Apologize to His Victim.

New York, May 27.—The "gentleman burglars" who took Mrs. George W. Wright's baby from the cradle and soothed it with a lullaby when they visited her house four years ago are furnishing fresh proof of their acquaintance with the etiquette of their profession. The three of them, Louis and Thomas Croughan and James Cody, were sent to prison. Louis was pardoned a year ago. His brother was released only a few days ago.

Tuesday afternoon a neatly dressed young man asked for Mrs. Wright, and gave his card to Mrs. Wright's brother, who did not recognize "Thomas Croughan."

"I'm one of the 'gentleman burglars,' he said. "I have come to pay my respects to Mrs. Wright and to apologize to her for waking the kid the night me and my partner called uninvited. I should a been so delighted to see her, but I can't wait. Please assure her that I've gone out of the business.

The burglar bowed and retired.

"He is the second of the three," said Mrs. Wright, "to pay me a visit to apologize. I'm glad I was not at home."

THIRTEEN MURDERS

In One Year Is Record In Iowa.

Webster City, Iowa, May 27.—There were thirteen murders in Iowa last year, according to the annual report of criminal convictions made by Secretary of State Martin for the past year, and which has just been compiled. Two of these murderers were sentenced to hang, but have not yet been hung. Six persons were convicted of manslaughter, which makes a total of nineteen murderers who were convicted in Iowa last year. This does not take into account the murders and suicides, two of which recently occurred in Des Moines. Nor does it take into account the murders which were committed for which no guilty person was found. In addition to this showing, seventeen persons were convicted of assault with intent to commit murder and six for assault with intent to commit manslaughter.

There were twenty-two convictions for the fracture of the seventh commandment during the year. There were seven convictions for bigamy. Eleven persons were convicted of criminal assault and eleven for attempted assault and seven for seduction. Conviction was secured in twenty cases involving obscene literature, incest, keeping houses of ill-fame, ewdness, prostitution and sodomy. This does not include misdemeanors of this class.

There were 111 convictions for breaking and entering, eighty-nine for burglary, two for embezzlement, twenty for false pretense, seventeen for forgery, one hundred and one for felonious larceny and 108 for petty larceny. Of all the convictions in the state, there were a total of 559 which are classed under the head of felonies and 711 misdemeanors and thirty-one miscellaneous convictions, making a grand total of 1,301 convictions in the state in a year.

"JACK THE SNIPPER"

Is In Pittsburg Cutting Off Girls' Hair.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 27.—"Jack the Snipper" has made his appearance in the Penn avenue district, and to date three young girls have been shorn of their tresses. For the first time since he began operating in the two cities the vandal was in danger of capture. Pursued by an angry mob, a member of which carried a rope, the "clipper" was chased from Penn avenue and Thirteenth street through the Adams market and out Liberty avenue to the Twenty-eighth street yards of the Pennsylvania railroad. During the chase cries of "lynch him!" were frequently heard.

The police of both cities have been seeking the villain, who during the past months has cut off the hair of women and girls in the East end, Bloomfield, Southside and Woods Run districts. He always managed to elude capture.

As Henrietta Schwartz, aged 11, 1220 Penn avenue, was crossing Thirteenth street, "Jack the Snipper" cut off two braids of hair and striking her in the face, ran away. A short time later he attacked Nettie Silverman of 1235 Penn avenue, and Sarah Spolsky of 2145 Penn avenue, near the same place. He clipped the hair from the heads of both.

The screams of the children attracted a crowd of men and boys, who gave chase to the miscreant, and had he been captured summary punishment would no doubt have been meted out to him. He is described as being a tall, well-built man of dark complexion, and the police of both cities are on the lookout for him.

Cousin Jimmie's Adventures in the Woods.

And the Strange Things He Saw There.

By Maud Walker.

Oh, children, the funniest—I mean the awfulest—thing happened the other evening! Do you want to hear about it? Well, gather round and don't ask a single question, for if you interrupt me a single time I'll get right up and make tracks for home. By the way, that's what I did the other evening after the awful thing I am going to tell you about happened. Now—ready? Well, every mouth shut and all eyes and ears open. One, two, three—go!

I had been fishing and was returning with a fine string of finnies when, getting a bit tired, I invited myself to take a rest beneath a tree on the roadside. I sat down and leaned back against the tree, thinking of the good supper I would have of fried fish. Just as I was on the edge of Sleepyland and trying to make up my mind whether or not I would better take a nap or hustle on home with my catch, a little old red ant came out of his hill near by and gave me a nip on the ear. Then up came another and another till I was fairly surrounded by the little pests. Ants are beastly things for their size; anyway, these ants were. "Let's eat him, clothes and all!" cried out one little glutton, making a lunge at the tip of my nose. Then they fell to trying to devour me. I jumped up and began trying to tramp them out, but they were in such numbers and so voracious that they got the upper hand of me. "Eat him alive and be rid of him!" screamed another, fierce in the attack. "He doesn't have any mercy on us, nor any caution about our bills. He steps on us wilfully and lays to waste our homes by one vicious kick of his great toe. Eat him!"

Just then I saw the fish on the string coming to life. In another minute they charged upon me like an army, their fins and tails being as sharp and long as swords. They looked as big as sharks and whales, and I tell you I was pretty badly scared. They began thrusting the points of their swordlike fins and tails into my flesh, which made me yell with pain. "Just let us at him, dear little ants," said one great fish with bulging eyes and snapping teeth.

At that I charged on him in self-defense and raised my foot to kick him soundly, but another huge finner threw a line over my head to which was fastened a terrible fish hook. Why, it was as big as a ship's anchor. "Swallow that!" one screamed in my ear, stabbing me with a fin. "Yes, bait it with chicken and ice-cream," cried another. "He likes those things and will swallow the hook if it is hidden with goodies. That's his trick with us. He baits with a nice fat angle worm and coaxes us to the bait, then when he has us he pulls us out of the water, all suffering with that terrible, hard, sharp hook in our stomachs, and throws us on the dry earth in the hot sun to suffocate. After we are dead and he is through with the sport he cooks us and eats us."

"I'll tell you what let's do," called out a huge catfish, wiggling forward, "let's souse him—duck him head downward in the water. Let's hold him there till he strangles. Water has the same effect on his kind as dry air does on us fish. Leastwise, so I've been told by one of Neptune's children."

Then they wiggled close round, making faces at me and grabbing me in their fins to drag me to the river.

Well, boys and girls, excuse me if I pause long enough to wipe my forehead; it makes me sweat to just think of the way I felt about that time. I was so scared that each individual hair raised upright and pulled as though it were trying to unroot itself to run away. I was about to scream for help—just like a silly girl—(excuse me, girls)—when of a sudden I heard a horrible roar overhead, and, glancing up, saw great flocks of birds circling about us. Everything in the shape of a bird that I ever saw was there—sparrows, pigeons, larks—every kind, I tell you. Down dropped a jaybird, lighting on my shoulder. Think of it, kids—I mean, boys and, girls a jaybird!

"Whew-w-w!" he whistled. "Say, my fishy friends, what are you going to do with this monster?" And, to emphasize his words, that jay pecked away on my ear. Then, without waiting for an answer, the smarty whistled again. "Come, fellows of the air and clouds, come, let's get even with this fellow who torments the life out of us."

"Yes, yes," answered a lovely little meadow lark, to my surprise. "He tried his best to trap me the other day. He wanted to put me in a cage—a prison. And I had a nest full of the loveliest eggs ready to go to sitting on that I might hatch out a nest of baby larks. Oh, the villain." Then she, the vicious thing, set to work to pecking my hands and face in a most spiteful manner.

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" I cried out, trying to slap her away. "You are cruel!"

"Cruel?" she answered. "Well, you're not the one to say that to a bird. What consideration do the poor feathered things receive at your hands, I'd like to know? You shoot at us and often kill us for no purpose except to show off. Ah, you brute!"

"Yes, you ought to hide your head in shame," piped out a little wren. "But we have it in for you—we have. You shall have no mercy. You killed my mother the other day and threw her poor body in the hedge. How would you like someone to treat your mother so?"

Well, sir—I mean kids—(I should say, children)—I was that scared and ashamed that I dropped down in the weeds to hide myself from sight. Just as the whole roost of these feathered tormenters were circling over me to light in a body on me a great angleworm crawled out of the ground and stood up on end before me. It shook one end towards those birds, and—well, children, what do you s'pose that angleworm did, anyway? The thing spoke! It said to the birds: "Be off wid yez! I'll attend to this young worm-killer, and don't you forget it."

To my relief the birds raised as one and soared away, crying hilariously: "The worm will turn when tread upon." The reason I felt so relieved at the worm's conduct was that I supposed he was alone and I could easily cope with one poor creeper. But what will you think when I tell you there were hundreds of his kind swarming about? The grass was alive with them and they grew to monstrous size.

"Ho-he-hi-ha," they squealed in long, narrow voices that matched their shapes, as they circled round me, standing upright. Then one stepped forward—the one who had sent the birds away—and said, making an awful face at me as he spoke: "So you left a lot of us down on the river bank to perish in on old tin can, didn't you? Well, a few of us still live to avenge our wrongs. Some of our comrades you have used most atrociously—you have run fish hooks through their live, quivering bodies. Oh, the torture of it! Now we intend to get a long, sharp stick and run it clean through your body, from the top of your head to the end of your great toe-nail. Clean through. Do you understand? This is to let you feel what it is like when you take one of our poor, helpless kind and thrust a sharp fish hook through his flesh. So—make ready—for a sharp stick is being prepared for you."

My goodness, gracious! A sharp stick to be run clear through my body? I thought sure I'd fall in a fit I was so frightened. But, say, children, the word frightened can't express my feelings. There isn't a word in Mr. Webster's big, unabridged book that does express the feeling that agitated yours truly at that information. I was almost paralyzed. In the distance I could see a new instalment of angles coming with a huge, long, sharpened stick to run through my trembling body. I rose like a flash of lightning and started off for my life. I ran as I never ran before. At last, tired out and breathless, I stopped to gather strength for another sprint. Gee, children, it was worse than playing baseball in the sun on a day when the thermometer stands at 100 in the shade. I guess the ants, birds, fish and worms had been too much for my nerves. Anyway, I was burning up. Just as I was expanding my lungs to get wind I heard a rustle in the grass behind me, and then an exclamation: "Whoop-e! So here you are! Oh, you wicked creature—you monster on two legs! You'll shoot rabbits, will you? Well, just you sit down there, we'll attend to your needs shortly. We are going to have a little rifle practice tonight and your head will serve as a target for us very nicely."

Horrors! Scarcely away from the worms with the threatening sharp stick, when here looms up something a thousand times more hair-raising! Serve as a target for their rifle practice? Uh-h-h! It makes spots come in front of my eyes as I recall it. I looked about me and saw a whole army of rabbits—little, big, huge, immense, old, young, hilarious, cross and sarcastic. They were all armed with rifles, which were aimed at my head. Of course, it was out of the question to try to escape. I squatted down in the weeds and tried to protect my head. Well, I wasn't comfortable, I can tell you, as I sat there looking in the business ends of those rifles. S'pose one or a dozen of them might go off of a sudden, where'd Jimmie be?

A great jack came toward me menacingly, cocking his gun.

"Wait a minute, Mr. Jack," I ventured. "I isn't—good and—and—ready—yet, if you please, sir."

"Is that so?" grinned the jack. "Well, well, you don't suppose I care anything about your readiness, do you? If I remember rightly you are not in the habit of waiting till us poor rabbits betake ourselves behind some sheltering corn shock or friendly tree before you shoot at us, are you? No; my memory of your good manners tells me you hide about with gun ready to slay one of us whenever we venture in your way. In fact, you go far out of your way to kill us."

I was afraid to say anything more, and sat there with my eyes shut, my heart beating so loudly that it might have been heard a mile away. My ribs hit against one another, and my knees knocked together so hard that I think they must have dislocated each other. Anyway, they are lame yet from the trembling.

"Just let us at him," said one great fish with bulging eyes.

Pretty soon the old jack spoke again; this time to his followers: "Well, rabs, what you say to beginning the practice?"

"We are ," whenever you give the signal, Lead Jack," was the answer from a dozen bloodthirsties. Then I heard the guns cock. I expected to look like a porus plaster in another minute. Although my eyes were tight shut, I could see sparks of fire flailing all about me. My ears roared and a big choke stuck in my throat. Then I felt what it meant to be at the mercy of anything with a gun.

There I crouched, waiting the order from leader Jack. It seemed I could smell fumes of sulphur and something cold struck my forehead. A minute I waited; a half hour; then it seemed a day passed by. If these heartless things meant to kill me, why didn't they hurry up about it and not keep me waiting?

Suddenly I opened my eyes and looked about me in very terror. Well, it was as dark as a man's pocket. No rabbits were in sight or hearing. They had slipped away while I had my eyes closed, the cowards! I put my hands out about me and felt the grass was cool and damp with dew. The sun had been shining when I sat down there to rest. Now it was night.

Slowly I got up, for I was most afraid to move for fear some other sort of horror might sieze upon me. My foot struck something damp and slick—I was barefooted—and, stooping down, I felt those abominable fish I had caught that afternoon. I kicked them as far as I could into the weeds and put out down the road for home as fast as my lame legs would allow. You know I told you I had been trembling so with fear that I had about dislocated my knee joints.

When I dashed into the kitchen at home, where mother was busy putting away the supper things, she turned round and stared at me. "My goodness, son, what on earth ails you? Is there a spook after you?"

"I'm not hungry and don't want any supper," I said, sort of ashamed.

"Where's your fish that you were going to bring home for supper?" mother asked, smiling. She didn't think I had caught any.

"Left 'em down the road apiece," I answered.

"I guess you mean in the river," said father, who had been listening from the dining-room. "That's a good place to keep them."

Well, I didn't sleep very good that night. I didn't have nightmare, but I had night-ant, night-fish, night-bird and, worst of all, armed night-rabbit.

And that has ended my hunting and fishing excursions. I'll eat 'em if somebody else catches them, but, for me—no, thank you.

JUST THE WAY ONE THINKS.

Three animals held a picnic
Beneath a huge oak tree;
A dog was there, and an elephant,
And a longlimbed chimpanzee.
"I've heard it said," quoth elephant,
That a trunk is on each tree,
But where it is on this one
I'm sure you may search me."

Then out aloud the dog spake,
Saying, "Friends, you please will bark,
And tell me if you ever hear
This silent oak tree bark.
For I have heard that all trees
Have barks just like us dogs,
Though I have failed to hear it
In saplings, trees or logs."

"And let me ask this question,"
Broke in old chimpanzee:
"I've heard it said that legs and arms
Grow forth on every tree.
The people speak of them as limbs
Instead of legs, you know;
But I can't find on this oak tree
Such limbs as on me grow."

"Nor have I ever felt a heart
Beat throbbing in its shell,"
Spoke up again the elephant,
"Tho' you will hear folks tell
That trees have hearts as well as men,
But to that I don't agree,
For no one ever found a heart
Inside a wooden tree."

The dog sat down and sadly smiled,
"'Tis a fairy tale," he said;
"Aye, aye," agreed the elephant,
As he wisely shook his head.
"'Tis all a fake," spoke chimpanzee,
"And folks should not so blunder,
And will they ever know the truth
About a tree, I wonder?"

The Running Away of Bad Bud.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Bud was very bad that morning, the morning he ran away. He was so naughty that his mamma had to punish him by means of a keen little switch laid lively about his legs, so lively that it made Bud dance. But Bud did not cry—he was too angry and too stubborn for that.

Now, Bud did not like obeying his parents. Some sort of evil spirit seemed to possess him as he loitered along toward school an hour after his mammon's chastisement, although that good, much-enduring woman had kissed the Bad Bud and called him her dear little son, loving him none the less because he had given her a lot of trouble and impudence that morning.

As he crept along the road, kicking the dust up for want of something else to do, he became resentful and declared that he would never go back home again. "I'll run away, that's what I'll do," he said, giving a clod an emphatic kick. "And I won't go to school, either, so I won't. The lessons are too long and hard. What's the use?"

Having reached this conclusion, he turned his face about and left the road that led to the frame schoolhouse over the hill. He chose a shady lane that ran down to a pretty creek half a mile distant. Reaching its banks, he sat down to fully arrange in his mind a plan of action. Bud was 10 years old and did not know as much as he did later on, but he thought he was very wise, indeed, so wise that going to school was no longer necessary for him. In fact, he thought he knew all that was needed to be known about books, but he wished to know something more about the big world that stretched all around him. Just five miles distant was the bustling town of Dash Centre. Bud had been there a few times in company with his parents. Now he decided to go there alone and begin life, independent of others.

Immediately he rose, took up his dinner pail—for he would want something to eat, even in town—and started off at a rapid pace. By quick walking he felt sure he could cover the distance in an hour. He crossed the little wagon bridge and was soon a long way from home.

After a long, long time—during which Bud's legs became very tired and he very warm—he climbed a steep hill and saw beyond it the busy town. With renewed energy he quickened his steps and soon found himself in the principal business street, where the pavements were thronged with people and children of all ages and conditions.

For a while Bud enjoyed himself gazing in the great show windows, but soon he became too tired to walk longer and he began to feel very lonely among all these strange people, who did not give him a glance. And how hungry he felt, too; but that was easily overcome, for he carried a fine luncheon of butter-bread, cold boiled eggs and, oh, joy of anticipation! a half-moon pumpkin pie. Then came the question of a place where he might go to rest and eat.

He looked about him and saw a street running up a gently sloping hill, on whose grassy slope were pretty cottages resting in green yards fenced about with white. Following this street he came to a huge tree that grew beside a gate which led into one of the yards holding a homelike cottage. As no one was in sight and he felt he could not drag his weary limbs a foot further, Bud dropped on the ground near Bud and looked at him wonderingly. Bud returned their gaze, but did not venture to speak. The boys entered the gate beside which he rested, and in another minute Bud heard their mother speaking to them at the door.

Bud knew it was the boys' mother from the conversation. "Well, here are my two starvelings," a woman's voice said, cheerily.

"Yes, mamma, is dinner ready?" asked one of the boys.

"Ready and waiting," answered the mother's voice. "And what do you suppose we've got for dinner?" she went on. "Chicken pie!"

"Chicken pie!" exclaimed one, happy anticipation in his boyish voice.

"Goody!" cried the other, and Bud heard the front door close behind them as they entered the house.

Poor Bud! His heart gave a thump in his side. Just that way his own mother talked to him when he came in at evening after school. A great, choking lump grew in his throat and something moist gathered in his eyes. He put the luncheon back in the pail. What was it that took his appetite?

Bud sat there till the two boys came out and ran off down the hill, going to afternoon session of school, of course. How he wished he were in his own seat at school beside his chum, Fatty Thomson. He and Fatty always had such fun at recess and noon. They sometimes had great fun during "hours," too, when the teacher was not watching. And, since he come to think of it, the lessons were not so very difficult when he made the effort to learn them. And his mother! Bud gave a gulp. And his father! Another gulp, or he must have choked.

Slowly he got up and wandered back to the busy center of town. Now the question presented itself to him: "What should he do for a living?" It was broad day, now, but after a few hours the darkness would fall and Bud had no place in view where he might get shelter for the night. Bud shuddered; he was always afraid of the dark—even if he would not admit it to Fatty Thompson. Was there in that strange town another woman who would care for his comforts as his mother did? Was there another man who would be as kind and indulgent as his own father was to him?

For another hour Bud, footsore and weary, walked about the streets. On coming there that morning he had determined to never, never go back home again, but now the thought of not going back choked him and brought tears to his blue eyes. As the hands of the clock in the courthouse tower pointed to 2 o'clock Bud turned his face toward the great hill that lay between town and his home—home, oh, sweet word!

But the way was long—very much longer returning than it had been coming. When about halfway there Bud was obliged to sit by the roadside to rest a bit. His appetite returning, with assurance that there in the distance awaited his mother for him, he took out of the little pail the remaining lunch. That pumpkin pie! How well he remembered watching his mother make it the night before. Was it just the night before? Really, it seemed ages since he had stood by the kitchen table and watched the dear hands roll the crust to fit the little pan. And his mother had said: "A little half-moon pie for my boy's lunch tomorrow." What if she had switched him that morning? He knew he deserved the punishment. And to be once more with her, who he knew loved him dearly, he would willingly submit to another switching without complaint.

Just as he had finished his luncheon and was about to rise to pursue his walk homeward he saw coming from the direction of town a covered vehicle. He decided to wait and ask the driver for a "lift," if there happened to be room in the vehicle for one more.

In a few minutes a pair of fine farm horses, drawing a top buggy, came close to Bud, and to his amazement he recognized the horses to be old friends—they were from his own home. As Bud rose to ask the driver for a ride he looked up into—why, his own father's face. Then he saw his mother on the seat beside his father.

It did not take him long to be on the seat between them, his mother's arm around his shoulders, as she gave him a hearty kiss. "Why, dear child," she said, "how did you happen to be here—so far off your road from school?"

Bud hung his head in shame, but the better side of him prompted the plain truth, and, snuggling closer to his mother, he confessed: "I run away, but—but—please whip me good and hard and let me stay at home again. I don't want to run off any more, s-o-o I d-o-n-'t." And the poor fellow ended with a sob, while the tears of repentance fell fast.

"I won't miss a day at school, and I'll move my seat away from Fat Thompson so I can't be bad any more and forget to study my lessons."

"Dear, dear little son," was all his mother said, but she acted a great deal more, and his father smiled behind his mustache as he clucked to Zim and Vim, the dear old horses, and then said to Bud: "Lots of places worse than home, isn't there, Buddy? And lots of things harder to do than obey your parents, who love you and do everything for your own good, isn't there?"

"I'll run away—that's what I'll do."

The subject of this sketch, Giovanni Bellini, was born in Italy in the year 1428, and was the son of the artist Jacop Bellini, who won much fame in art and bore the proud distinction of being the father of two sons—Giovanni and Gentile—who possessed striking genius with pencil and brush.

Jacop Bellini, no doubt thinking that true genius craved certain freedom from domestic influences and paternal restraint (that it might the better work out its own individuality and salvation), parted company with his sons, bidding each to follow his own conceptions in his art, while he sought privacy to pursue his own well-loved art for art's sake.

As the sons became so much greater in the world of art than did their father, Jacop will live in the lines of history as the father and painstaking teacher of Giovanni and Gentile, rather than as an artist of great merit. But soon after Jacop separated from his sons he died, loved and revered by family, friends and the city which he loved, for he was a true Venetian.

Giovanni and Gentile also parted company, but ever remained true as brothers, and felt the deepest interest in each other. Their object, doubtless, in separating was to carry out their father's idea that genius must of necessity be free from all family restraints and give its wings room to soar. Thus it was that the two talented brothers—loving each other and true to each other's interests—pursued their studies and worked alone.

Giovanni's first great work consisted of certain portraits from life, which won highest praise and gave great encouragement to the young artist. Then followed a commission to Giovanni and Gentile to decorate the Hall of the Grand Council in the form of historical paintings, depicting the greatness of their adorable Venice in important undertakings and affairs of state and deeds in war. Giovanni also painted many powerful religious pictures running in series of stories, and through their great merit he was granted the commission to paint all the remaining portions of the Hall of the Grand Council. But death came too soon for him to accomplish this last assigned task. A life full of noble work and crowned with honors and the love of the world's greatest, he passed away in his ninetieth year.

John Ruskin says of him (from "Stones of Venice"):

Giovanni Bellini is the only artist who appears to me to have united, in equal and magnificent measures, justness of drawing, nobleness of coloring and perfect manliness of treatment, with the purest religious feeling. He did, as far as it is possible to do it, instinctively and unaffectedly, what the Caracci only pretended to do. Titian colors better, but has not his piety. Leonardo draws better, but has not his color. Angelico is more heavenly, but has not his manliness, far less his powers of art.

CRANIUM CRACKERS.

LETTER ENIGMA.

My first is in sapling, but not in tree;
My second is in cup, but not in tea;
My third is in rich, but not in poor;
My fourth is in iron, but not in ore;
My fifth is in new, but not in old;
My sixth is in give, but not in sold.
My whole spells a word whose meaning is clear,
And one we all love at this time of year.

CHARADES.

No. 1. My first is to inform, my second is a vowel, my third is in writing, my fourth is near the end of the alphabet. My whole is an important profession.

No. 2. My first is a sound, my second an exclamation, my third writing, and my whole is a musical instrument.

CONUNDRUM.

What struts around
With his head so red,
Raises his voice when night is dead,
Yells like mad,
Calls to his flock,
And is always on time
Like the cuckoo clock?

Answer: A rooster.
